AMERICANS CRACK GERMAN DEFENSES OUTSIDE OF ROME

NORGARD

Troops 'Sneak' into Heights Behind Main Line in Night Advance.

TAKE MANY PRISONERS

Nazis Frantically Trying to Fight Their Way Out of Trap.

JUN 2 1944

ALLIED HEADQUARTERS, Naples, June 1. — (AP) American troops in a spectacular, danger-fraught night time advance have pierced the Germans' powerful defense line before Rome, encircling the enemy stronghold of Velletri and capturing a towering ridge of the Alban hills from which they could see the dome of St. Peter's.

Without specific detail, a field dispatch filed at 8:35 p. m. said "American troops fighting in the Velletri sector of the Alban hills made new gains tonight."

Kenneth Dixon, Associated Press field correspondent who accompanied the Yanks in a moonlit "sneak" onto 3,000-foot heights behind the Nazis' main defenses, said in a delayed dispatch:

Enemy Positions Cleaned Up

"All day long soldiers have been delousing these heights, cleaning out snipers, machine-gunners and fluid enemy patrols which already are frantically trying to fight their way out of the trap. Already hundreds of prisoners have been taken and it looks from here like encircled Velletri is soon due to fall to Fifth army troops."

NIGHT

The German radio indicated today that Velletri already had been abandoned, but there was no official Allied confirmation.

The bitterly-resisting garrison of Velletri was caught between the doughboy raiders holding Monte Artemisio, two miles north and northwest of the town, and the main Allied striking force fighting its way into the tottering bastion from the south and east.

Between Velletri and Valmontone, another principal bulwark of the enemy's defense wall before the Eternal City, American troops had plunged almost two miles up the volcanic slopes and seized a point on Mount Peschio ridge, highest feature of the Alban hills. Both Yank spearheads were within 15 miles of Rome's ancient city hall.

Doughboys See Rome

"From these heights," wrote Associated Press correspondent Edward Kennedy from the front, "the doughboys got their first glimpse of Rome—a hazy mass of buildings in the distance from the midst of which rose the dome of St. Peter's, just barely visible.

The nocturnal stab through the Nazis' elaborate defenses—possibly the decisive "break" in what had threatened to become a protracted struggle for the Alban hills—was accomplished without a shot being fired. Several hundred American infantrymen crawled and scrambled in ghostlike stealth up almost perpendicular slopes through the German lines, and at dawn they were dug in commanding positions.

Allied troops tonight were reported moving steadily through the breach in the Nazi wall, consolidating their positions despite violent opposition from enemy flamethrowers, artillery and tanks. Allied headquarters described the gains as "limited but important."

The Germans continued to hurl fierce counter-attacks at the advancing Americans and British, and 15 Nazi fighter planes made a rare appearance over the raging battle. One was blown out of the air by ground fire.

British forces pushing up from the coastal sector due south of Rome reached an undisclosed point on the road north of Ardea, and Allied armored units slashing west of the fortified town of Lanuvio crossed the Fosso di Campoleone, a drainage canal.

Enemy Strongly Entrenched

An Allied spokesman said the enemy was strongly entrenched in the entire Lanuvio sector, taking full advantage of difficult terrain and employing concrete pillboxes, anti-tank gun emplacements and self-propelled artillery. The battlefield was overhung by clouds of dust, through which large fleets of American medium bombers rained death on enemy troop concentrations and gun emplacements.

While the western arm of the great Allied offensive slashed into the Alban hills and brought the flash of gun fire within sight of Rome's inhabitants, the Eighth army driving up from the east captured the key road junctions of Frosinone and Sora, further constricting the movements of the retreating Nazi 10th army.

A special announcement late today said the British were pursuing Nazi troops up the Via Casilina from Frosinone. These Nazis were within about 23 airline miles of Valmontone, through which the enemy by furious counterattacks has kept the Via Casilina open.

Sora Captured

New Zealanders captured Sora, northeast of Frosinone and 13 miles up a lateral highway from Arce. San Giovanni also fell to the Anzacs. British troops overran Ripi, four miles southeast of Frosinone, and Torrice, two miles to the east.

French forces, blasting their way forward four miles in two days, captured Patrica, six miles south of the Via Casilina, and Monte Piscarella, seven miles from the highway. The Germans had been cleared out of the whole of the Lepini mountain range.

"French troops are maintaining contact with German rearguard detachments falling back toward Valmontone and Avezzano, where it is deemed almost certain that a defensive stand will be made," an official Allied announcement said.

gates of St. John Lateran.

Nazis Are Trapped.

"Between these Alban Hills and Velletri, an unknown number of Germans are caught in a slowly closing trap, completely surprised because the G. I.'s came all the way without firing a single shot," said Associated Press Correspondent Kenneth Dixon, who accompanied the column crawling on a circuitous fifteen-mile route to penetrate the enemy line.

Headquarters tonight declared the Germans are falling back along the Via Casilinia beyond captured Frosinone—southeast of the Germans' Alban Hill stand—while hard fighting rages between Velletri and Valmontone to the northeast.

Seizure of the Alban Hill heights dug deep into the German line below Rome.

DAY

"From these heights," wrote Associated Press Correspondent Edward Kennedy from the front, "the doughboys got their first glimpses of Rome—a hazy mass of buildings in the distance from the midst of which rose the dome of St. Peter's, its lines just barely visible."

The bitterly resisting garrison of Velletri was caught between the Americans holding Monte Artemisio, two miles north and northwest of the town, and the main Allied striking force fighting its way into the tottering bastion from the south and east.

Advance Is Limited.

The action below Rome brought "limited but important gains, Allied headquarters declared.

British troops in a hill-flanking drive on the coast advanced behind a pummeling of Nazi defenses by United States destroyers standing off the shore.

[A CBS broadcast from Berne said Rome residents could see the smoke and flashes of battle through binoculars and telescopes, with the fighting so near 'that cannons, firing with the frequency of machine-guns, caused the houses of Rome to tremble and the windows to rattle continuously throughout the day and night."]

The Allied command was silent on Velletri itself, but German radio reports indicated the shell and bomb-battered town had been left to the Americans after hot street fighting.

The Eighth Army, meanwhile, advancing steadily up Highway 6, the Via Casilina, captured Frosinone, which with a population of well over 20,000, is the most important town and communications center yet seized in the drive along Highway 6. It fell to British infantry and armor after a sharp battle.

How Velletri Was Flanked.

A dispatch from Kennedy said the Americans broke through the German defenses east of Velletri and fought their way ahead 3,000 yards and occupied a point on Mount Peschio ridge in the Alban Hills to the northeast. Other American elements plunging forward in the vicinity of the Appian Way captured dominant high ground near the Lake of Nemi, northwest of Velletri.

Three miles west of the fortified town of Lanuvio armored units crossed the Fossa Di Campoleone, a drainage ditch, and maintained steady pressure on the enemy in that area interlaced with canals and ditches. An official spokesman said all the gains in the Lanuvio sector were made in difficult terrain against such enemy strongholds as dugouts, concrete pillboxes and anti-tank gun emplacements. The enemy had concentrated self-propelled artillery east of shattered Lanuvio.

Nazis Defenses Grow.

British troops nearer the coast advanced astride a road north of Ardea, but the extent of their gains was not disclosed. They encountered strong machine gun and artillery fire.

Nazi Field Marshal Albert Kesselring continued to increase his defensive forces in the Valmontone area to keep Highway 6 open for German remnants fleeing from the lower battle sectors. It was officially announced that the Allies made some gains in that area despite the stubborn resistance.

The enemy stepped up the pace of his retreat out of the mountain area where the Fifth Army's French troops have been moving northward from the Pontine Marsh area.

New Defense Line Seen.

"French troops are maintaining contact with German rearguard detachments falling back toward Valmontone and Avezzano, where it is deemed almost certain that a defensive stand will be made," an official announcement said.

Eighth Army troops occupied the town of Sora, northeast of Frosinone and thirteen miles up Highway 82 from its junction with Highway 6 at Arce. Sora fell to a column of New Zealanders driving toward Avezzano, thirty-four miles beyond.

The British also overran the towns of Ripi, four miles southeast of Frosinone, and Torrice, two miles to the east—both above Highway 6.

San Giovanni, four miles northwest of Arce, was taken as the Eighth Army mopped up the last enemy positions near the junction of the Liri and Sacco rivers.

By night German aircraft made attacks on Allied supply lines, but the largest of these involved only six planes.

In what was described as the largest close-operation job since the large-scale attack on Cassino, Allied medium bombers yesterday supported the battle for Rome by raiding heavy troop concentrations in the Lake Albano area, near Frascati and between Lanuvio and Velletri. Other Allied aircraft bombed an enemy concentration near Subi-

Yanks Capture Vital Peaks in Long Crawl Through Nazi Defenses—Large Enemy Force Is Trapped.

Allied Headquarters, Naples, June 1 (A. P.).—United States infantrymen snaking three miles behind German lines in a spectacular coup captured the highest peaks of the Alban Hills, encircling Velletri, and fought today within sight of Rome and the dome of St. Peter's.

Crawling silently through Nazi lines the Americans seized Monte Artemisio, overlooking Velletri from the north, and 3,000-foot Mount Peschio near by, taking hundreds of astonished prisoners and wiping out enemy patrols.

DAY

A trap was thrown about Velletri by this infiltration in force, and another plunge by American troops winning high ground near the Lake of Nemi northwest of the menaced town—a push carrying within fifteen miles of Rome's aco, on the German northern withdrawal route east of Rome.

The Allied air forces lost fourteen heavy bombers and nine other craft in yesterday's attacks, including raids against the Romanian oil field at Ploesti and objectives in Yugoslavia. Forty-three enemy planes were destroyed.

FALL OF FERENTINO TO BRITISH TROOPS SEEN IMMINENT

WITH THE EIGHTH ARMY AT FROSINONE, Italy, June 1—(AP) Battered but still bristling with fight, the German army pulled up highway six northwest of Frosinone today, sowing the countryside with mines and booby traps to delay British troops of the Eighth army who tonight were looking down on Ferentino from adjacent high ground.

The front in this sector moved forward steadily the past 24 hours and it appeared tonight that Ferentino, cross roads town with little to recommend it as a defensive battle site, would fall without much bloodshed

NIGHT

JUN 2 1944

Bridges Blown Up

The most troublesome obstacles were gaping bridges and culverts blown up by the Germans. All detours and side routes were heavily mined and there was some delay in moving tanks forward.

The whole Eighth army front was in movement. Mountain troops toiling under the hot sun over rugged hills west of Sora were meeting many Germans and stubborn resistance in a thrust which seemed directed toward Veroli and the Frosinone-Subico road.

The Germans were clinging grimly to this escape route which winds around the Simbruini mountains to Avezzano. Just above Frosinone the road still is under German mortar and machine gun fire.

In the fighting between Sora and Veroli Allied troops are encountering heavy fire from anti-tank guns and one of the most troublesome nests of resistance was in a stately Italian cemetery with its elaborate crypts and shade trees. There were no reports of enemy tanks, although they were present in some strength at Frosinone and three were reported knocked out.

Frosinone Evacuated

Frosinone was just another empty Italian town today with a few civilians returning furtively. Like most German-held towns it had been evacuated and cleaned of all furnishings and fixtures. It was perhaps a little less scarred than others recaptured.

The desert air force roamed up and down highway six—Via Casilina—between Frosinone and Valmontone, strafing and bombing German motorized transports. Pilots reported they set afire a large number.

The German first parachute division was withdrawn so sure-footedly from the dusty ruins of Cassino that now it appears unlikely any large number of them will be cornered and captured although the division already has suffered heavy losses.

The German plan, as it appears from this front, seems to be to fall back to a line running roughly from Valmontone to Palestrina, Subiaco and Avezzano.

Writer Tells How Yanks Sprang Velletri Trap

JUN 2 1944

By Kenneth L. Dixon

Behind German Lines South of Rome, May 31 (AP—Delayed)—A bunch of American fighting men staged one of the most spectacular infantry coups of the war last night and early this morning by establishing themselves on a high razorback ridge on Monte Artemision, overlooking Velletri.

They moved in ghostlike stealth by the hundreds through bright moonlight and infiltrated German lines and reserve positions.

At dawn today they were in positions overlooking Velletri.

DAY

Germans In Trap

Between these Alban Hills and Velletri, an unknown number of Germans are caught in a slowly closing trap, completely surprised because the GI's came all the way without firing a single shot.

Our position overlooks Rome to the north and Velletri to the south.

I accompanied the troops in their circuitous 15-mile crawling, scrambling and hiding hike.

Outposts "Eliminated"

They accomplished their feat by slipping past German machine-gun positions so close that bright tracers fired toward our side of the front flashed over our heads as we crawled along.

They "eliminated without noise" the few German outposts and sentries which they could not by-pass. By crawling and crouching along a snake-like course through vineyards and forests and up almost perpendicular slopes, they took advantage of every possible cover.

Flares Light Area

The closest calls came when the Germans staged a front-line air raid while we still were in no-man's land. Flares were dropped, illuminating the whole countryside and their deadly brilliance forced us to lie motionless for minutes which seemed like hours. Barking dogs and braying jackasses also threatened to betray our progress.

The whole venture was like the Hollywood conception of war. It had never been done by so many before on this front.

Tonight after 24 hours and at a point three miles behind the German lines, I still can hardly believe the venture was successful.

Two Hours To Prepare

The highest officers of this unit learned of the project only two hours before they left. But the men of this mission are wise in ways of war and were ready at a moment's notice.

"This is the kind of job you know best how to do," their commander told them. "You learned mountain fighting the hard way. This is the biggest infiltration job of this war and I want it done right.

"There will be no rifle firing, regardless. Have your rifle magazines filled but I don't want a single cartridge in a gun chamber. We are going through a town like——, understand?"

Smoking Banned

The men understood. A couple of hours later as they plodded nearer the front, the word went down the column: "No smoking, pass it along."

At the final assembly area where the men split up into companies, the word was repeated down our column which was spearheading the advance:

"No more talking, pass it along."

Snake Way 15 Miles

That was shortly before midnight. From then on, only the faintest whispers were heard while we walked and crawled 15 twisting miles in order to gain three, as the crow flies, behind the German lines.

It was a nightmarish evening of constant chatter of vicious German machine pistols on all sides; of slipping past a German sentry who slept permanently propped against a tree; of occasional heart-rending cries of the wounded of foe and friend. We literally crawled through the combat sector.

Dig Into Foxholes

Muscles ached, nerves were tense, feet burned, exhaustion was comlete.

Behind us other units eliminated dozens of Germans who were within a few feet of where we passed.

But dawn found us dug in foxholes, high in the Alban Hills. Some of the Americans soon were atop Mount Peschio's 3,000-foot height.

Hundreds Captured

All day long soldiers have been delousing these heights, cleaning out snipers, machine-gunners and fluid enemy patrols which already are trying frantically to fight their way out of the trap.

Already hundreds of prisoners have been taken.

It looks from up here as if encircled Velletri is soon due to fall to Fifth Army troops.

Behind us German machine-pistols are rattling along the still hard-fought front.

Destroyers Aid British

ALLIED HEADQUARTERS, Naples, Italy, June 1 (AP).—Two American destroyers supported the British operations on the 5th Army's left flank yesterday, bombarding enemy positions in the beach area and north of Ardea.

In what was described as the largest close cooperation job since the attack on Cassino, Allied medium bombers yesterday supported the battle for Rome by raiding troop concentrations in the Lake Albano area, near Frascati and between Lanuvio and Velletri.

Yanks Begin Strafing Of Italian Mosquitoes

Allied Headquarters, Naples, May 30 (AP—Delayed)—With the malaria season coming up in Italy, the air force and the surgeon general's office are conducting a spirited offensive against the Anopheles mosquito.

DAY

Using equipment similar to that used for "crop dusting," Havoc and Caydet planes of the Mediterranean Air Transport command have begun strafing operations against the mosquito breeding grounds of southern Italy.

The operations are directed by Lieut. Robert H. Dyer, of Corpus Christi, Texas, who, like his assistants, Lieut. Norman G. Bedgood, Tyler, Texas, and Arthur R. Montgomery, Fayetteville, Ark., flew dusting planes in crop protection work before the war.

All-Negro Fighter Chief Promoted

Allied Headquarters, Naples, June 1 (A. P.).—Lieut.-Col. Benjamin O. Davis Jr., of 527 West 157th street, New York city, commander of an all-Negro fighter group in Italy, has been promoted to colonel, it was announced today.

DAY

Col. Davis, son of Brig.-Gen. Davis of the Inspector-General Department in Washington, D. C., formerly commanded the 99th Fighter Squadron, the first all-Negro unit placed in combat.

Pistol Packin' Mama Beaten to Draw

On the Anzio Beachhead, May 31 (Delayed) (A. P.).—Pistol Packin' Mama was beaten to the draw in an encounter in the Italian theater.

DAY

A P-40 fighter bearing that name, piloted by Lieut. George G. Potts of the First Tactical Air Force, landed here with its right wing almost torn off. An enemy fighter had got in a twenty millimeter shell before Lieut. Potts could open his six guns on it.

Lieut. Potts, who is 23 years old, is from Dallas, Tex.

PARACHUTISTS DROPPED

NEW YORK, June 1—(AP) Allied parachutists have been dropped behind certain parts of the front in Italy to help Italian patriots, the free Italian radio station at Bari said tonight.

The report, rebroadcast by British stations and recorded here by CBS, added that "the patriots were told to act in agreement with the parachutists and to delay the German retreat as much as possible by cutting all available roads."

Miss Chapin, Red Cross Writer, Killed In Italy

Washington June 1 (AP) — The American Red Cross announced today that Miss Carolyn Chapin, 39, Red Cross reporter on its staff in Italy, was killed May 10 in an airplane crash there while on active service.

Miss Chapin was the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. George F. Chapin, of Woodbury, Conn. Her brother, Farnsworth Chapin, of Stamford, Conn., was informed today by the Red Cross of his sister's death.

Miss Chapin went overseas for the Red Cross in April, 1943, as a linguistic secretary. She was assigned to the public relations staff in Algiers, North Africa, where she remained until two months ago, when she was transferred to Italy.

Fleets of Medium Bombers Hit French Invasion Coast

HILL

RAF Night Raiders Strike at Three Nazi Supply Depots

JUN 2 1944

LONDON, June 1.—(AP) Strong formations of medium bombers and fighters struck out across the English channel toward the French invasion coast late this afternoon after a heavy R.A.F. night assault on three strategic French transportation centers.

The daylight raiders roared out in the direction of Boulogne and Dieppe, but the Ninth Tactical Air force announced only that Marauders, escorted by Thunderbolts, attacked military objectives "in northern France."

Numerous Patrols

Operations of the British Second Tactical Air force were on a reduced scale, but a number of offensive patrols were flown by fighters and in one a German plane was shot down by long-range Mustangs off the German island of Borkum.

NIGHT

R.A.F. night raiders apparently maintained the offensive. Long after dusk the Berlin radio warned that "nuisance raiders are approaching western Germany."

Murky weather over the channel held the Allied daylight forces landbound during the early part of the day but cleared in time for a series of flights against the Nazis' already well-battered tactical targets.

The R.A.F. opened the month of June with an attack which made it clear that the "battle of the railroads" had not ended. A strong force of about 500 night bombers dropped probably more than 2,200 tons of bombs on freight yards in Trappes, Tergnier and Saumur, French centers vital to the Germans for routing supplies to their coastal armies.

Unspecified military objectives along the French coast also were hit in the night's operations, during which the R.A.F. lost eight planes. The noise of the bombardment got Englishmen up out of their beds. Virtually the entire blow was delivered in 15 minutes.

Hit Rail Centers

The British airmen spread out over a 200-mile front of interior France to hit the rail centers, rated as three of the biggest being used for supplying the German invasion front.

Tergnier is 75 miles northeast of Paris and is one of the leading junctions for traffic between Germany and France. Trappes lies 16 miles southwest of Paris, and Saumur is 150 miles southwest of Paris and 70 miles east of Nantes and a leading junction between the capital and the port.

In another night operation the Allied Mediterranean Air forces sent out Liberators which bombed the railroad tow tracks alongside the Danube river's iron gate canal on the Romanian-Yugoslav border.

The month of June may see a complete dislocation of the Nazis' military transportation system in occupied France, Belgium and Holland if the Allied Air forces maintain their overwhelming assault on the railroad targets behind the Atlantic wall.

148,000 Sorties Flown

Railroad facilities, and with them highway bridges, arterial roads and canal installations, were the main targets of Britain-based bombers during May, when with the Mediterranean Air forces they flew more than 148,000 sorties against the enemy.

Since the all-out campaign to disrupt communications in western Europe began early in March, American and British planes have carried out 346 attacks on 94 railroad targets, some in great strength. Most of these raids were concentrated in France, Belgium and Holland, but some were made on points as deep as Brunswick, Germany, 400 miles from the channel coast.

RAF Hammers 3 Rail Yards Near Paris

London, June 1 (AP)—In simultaneous night assaults, powerful forces of RAF bombers hammered Nazi defense installations along the French Channel coast and fanned out over a 200-mile front in France to blast three of the largest rail centers through which the Germans are shuttling their forces to meet the impending invasion.

Murky weather prevailed over the Channel early today, however, and there were no signs of daylight operations from Britain—the first lull in the aerial offensive in two weeks, although heavy bombers did not go out last Friday.

New Forays Indicated

At 9 A. M. the German radio reported that the Reich was free of enemy planes and one hour later broadcast that "single enemy planes were approaching"—apparently on reconnaisance missions.

The whole Vichy radio network, composed of the Lyon, Marseille, Limoges and Vichy stations, went off the air at 12.31 P. M. (6.31 A. M., E. W. T.) today, indicating that an Allied air attack may be in progress in southern France.

Strong formations of medium bombers and fighters were observed crossing the Channel late today in the direction of Boulogne and Dieppe on the French invasion coast.

Trappes Was One Target

Some 500 RAF bombers last night smashed the Trappers yards 16 miles outside Paris; Tergnier, 75 miles northeast of Paris, and Saumur, 150 miles southwest of Paris. Eight planes failed to return from the operations, which included mine laying, the Air Ministry announced.

Halifaxes and Wellingtons of the Mediterranean Allied Air Force bombed railroad tow tracks by the Danube river's Iron Gate canal on the Romania-Yugoslavia border last night.

After a one-night absence, German planes were again over England. A few bombs fell on East Anglia, but most of the planes appeared to be mainly "on the snoop." It was officially reported that no one was hurt and only slight damage was caused.

15-Minute Attack

The Air Ministry's report on the French coast bombardment said simply that a "number of military objectives were attacked." This operation began just before midnight and was crammed into 15 minutes, with relays of bombers passing each other going and coming.

The bombers en route to the Paris area passed through heavy thunder storms and erratic weather. Ice formed on their wings.

The attack on Trappes was so accurate that the first bombs knocked out the ground flare indicators and the Pathfinders had to drop another set.

All three rail yards had been attacked before. Trappes was one of the first targets when the campaign against railroads started.

Previous Damage

With the damage done to the Creil yards on the other side of Paris, rail facilities around the former French capital undoubtedly are at a low ebb.

Tergnier is one of the most important rail points between Germany and France and the focal point for traffic to the industrial Cologne area from the previously bombed yards at Liege and Charleroi in Belgium. Saumur is one of the principal junctions on the line from Paris to Nantes.

In daylight raids yesterday possibly 3,500 Allied planes struck from the west and south against the German rail centers of Hamm, Osnabruck, Schwerte and Soest and the Nazi oil source at Ploesti, Romania.

Only Five Planes Lost

From 750 to 1,000 American heavy British-based bombers, escorted for the fourth consecutive day by more than 1,200 fighters, carried out their missions at a cost of one bomber and four fighters

Later in the day Thunderbolt and Lightning fighter-bombers raided two western German airdromes and shot down 5 of 30 German fighters without a loss to themselves. Battering Seine river bridges for the sixth straight day American Marauders struck at three important highway spans between Paris and Rouen. One plane was lost in this operation.

About 750 Fortresses and Liberators from Italy battered Ploesti and hits were scored on at least one major refinery. The Mediterranean raiders met enemy fighters and heavy flak.

148,000 Sorties In May

Yesterday's operations provided a thunderous finale for May, which saw Allied planes fly a record-breaking 148,000 sorties (individual plane flights).

Heavy Air Blows Restrict Nazi Military Movements

HERE HER

LONDON, June 1 — (AP) The Allied Air forces in the "Battle of Communications" behind the cross-channel invasion front have severely restricted certain German military movements in France and have swamped the enemy's capacity to repair blasted rail lines, the British Air ministry declared tonight.

Since the communications campaign opened the British Bomber command has attacked 38 key railway points, many with such devastating effect that a second visit has been unnecessary, and coupled with this daylight crews, including Americans, have undertaken a special "bridge-busting" assault which has put hundreds of bridges out of commission in the last three months.

NIGHT

The Air Ministry said in a statement that most transport lines between northern and southern France have been severed at bridge points and added:

"Military movements which involve the crossing of the seine within 100 miles of the coast now have been severely restricted because the remaining bridge facilities are inadequate."

Dislocation of the railroad system in the occupied countries has driven the Germans to roads where additional bridges are out and in some places traffic is jammed up for miles, giving the fighters great opportunities for strafing attacks.

Highway transport involves another problem which is a headache to the Nazis: production of motor vehicles. Earlier strategic bombing doubtless wiped out many factories which would be useful now in turning out trucks and trailers.

The British heavy assaults on French rail centers seem to have forced the Germans to abandon their plan of trying to get all yards in full working order again, the Air Ministry said, adding that the enemy now was concentrating instead on repairing only the through lines.

"In general," the Air Ministry said, "it can be said that the enemy's capacity to repair appears to have been swamped both by the number of attacks and by the accuracy of the bombing.

"At the beginning of the war it was a comparatively easy matter to repair a railway because the bombing was far less severe. The experience in this country showed that if the enemy's transport system was too be effectively disrupted, something on a far greater scale would have to be attempted.

"The method of the precision attack therefore was perfected, whereby a great weight of bombs could be dropped within the small space of a railway yard. The success of this method was shown particularly vividly at Juvisy, where the whole yard was devastated."

The result has been that although the enemy still can bring munitions and weapons straight from Germany to France, it is increasingly difficult for him to switch goods from one point to another.

Destruction of so many French and Belgian repair shops for both locomotives and railroad cars has hit the enemy particularly hard in the last 12 months alone.

Riddled Marauder Paced to Field by Another B-26 in England

A MARAUDER BASE, England, June 1 (AP).—A flak-riddled Marauder, with its airspeed indicator knocked out, was paced into a safe landing here yesterday by another B-26, flying parallel and at wingtip.

The pilot of the crippled ship, Flying Officer Gus Fuson, Nashville, Tenn., knew that without the airspeed indicator he might make the landign approach too slow and stall, or too fast and overshoot the runway.

Remembering a stunt he had seen at training school, he radioed Lieutenant Frederick Peters, 154-37 Eighteenth Road, Beechhurst, Queens, N. Y., pilot of the other Marauder, to guide his landing by radioing the correct airspeed.

Peters flew a course parallel to the runway, constantly calling off his speed to Fuson, who let the flaps down and landed.

Flak Bait's 100th Mission

London, June 1 (AP) — The Marauder bomber Flak Bait completed its 100th mission in the European theater today when a fleet of medium bombers attacked military targets in northern France. The plane, piloted by Lieut. Horace Rodgers, of Marshall, Texas, is the third medium bomber to pass the century mark in operations.

3 NAZI ATTACKS HALTED BY REDS

LANDSTROM

Russian Counter-Attacks Take Big Toll of Men and Tanks.

LONDON, Friday, June 2—(AP) The Red army, launching successful counter-attacks yesterday against the German drive north of Iasi in the Moldavian province of Romania, killed 800 Nazi soldiers and knocked out 18 tanks, Moscow announced early today as the battle went into its fourth day.

The Germans made three separate thrusts, one after another, throwing in large forces of tanks and infantry, but were stopped completely by Soviet artillery, mortar and machine-gun fire by the counter blows of Red troops, Moscow said in the midnight supplement to the regular communique.

Romanians Repulsed

In another sector a Romanian infantry regiment attacked advanced Soviet positions but suffered heavy casualties and took flight under a Russian counter-attack, the supplement stated.

One hundred Germans were killed, some in hand to hand clashes, during a two-hour skirmish southeast of Stanislawow, Moscow added.

NIGHT

There seemed a possibility that the main battle in the vicinity of Iasi was subsiding.

The broadcast Russian communique, recorded by the Soviet monitor, indicated that the action was on a smaller scale than in the two previous days, saying that 18 German tanks and 15 planes were destroyed during the day.

This contrasted with what the communique called "precise data" of the fighting May 30 and 31, in which 148 German tanks were declared disabled or destroyed and 197 planes shot down.

Nazis Face Tough Resistance

Berlin itself told in the German High command communique of "tough enemy resistance and fierce counter thrusts." A German propaganda broadcast also acknowledged that Soviet resistance had "stiffened considerably and said the Red army was counter-attacking at some points to regain lost territory."

Russian dispatches from the front emphasized the ferocity of the Nazi attempts to throw back the Red army from positions which might be used for the expected offensive toward the Danube and Ploesti oil fields.

Red Star, the army newspaper, said that the entire battle sector was reddened like a slaughter house with German blood.

However, Russian military commentators said that even though the fighting was violent, it was difficult to fit the action into any large strategic pattern, one adding that, in view of the enemy's losses, "the object of the attacks is difficult to surmise."

Numerous Nazi tank units were reported to have been encircled and systematically wiped out.

The Moscow communique stated that there were no essential changes on other sectors of the front.

Red Radio Hits Bulgar Aid To Nazis

Moscow, June 1 (AP) — Eric Johnston, president of the United States Chamber of Commerce, arrived today from the United States with W. Averell Harriman, United States Ambassador.

London, June 1 (AP)—The Moscow radio said today it was becoming "obvious that Bulgarian rulers have resolved to throw caution to the winds and plunge neck and crop into ventures dictated by Hitler."

"It remains to be seen whether the Bulgarian people will find the strength to upset this criminal venture. One thing though is clear, and that is that the Bulgarian rulers are playing with fire. Well, he who sows the wind reaps the whirlwind."

DAY

Burgaria is at war with the United States and Britain but not with Russia. There have been repeated indications in the last few days that Bulgaria has been faced with the choice of stopping aid to Hitler or sacrificing here long-strained friendship with Russia.

Nazi Attacks Repelled

Meanwhile, large scale German attacks on Russian lines north of Iasi in Romania cost the Nazis "thousands of dead" yesterday without advancing their lines "a single step," Moscow said today.

A broadcast Soviet communique declared the Nazis, using tanks and infantry, made incessant assaults on the Soviet lines, but counter-blows by Red infantry, artillery and tanks stalled all efforts to push beyond the "insignificant wedge" achieved the day before.

The Russians said they had knocked out 122 German tanks and shot down 164 enemy planes in the first two days of the battle—the first sizable break in a six-week lull on the long eastern land front.

Defense Of Oil Fields

Berlin reports said the aim of the attacks was to improve German-Romanian positions in the area, from which the Nazis have predicted the Russians would attempt a drive into the rich Ploesti and Danubian oil fields.

Only minor action was reported on other sectors of the front by the Russians.

The Berlin radio said action in the Iasi sector was accompanied by a great air battle in which 87 Soviet planes were downed.

Whether battle presaged any immediate grand offensive on the eastern land front was not known. Berlin and Moscow have predicted a resumption of fighting on the eastern front in connection with the western invasion of Europe.

KING PETER STAKES CROWN

Urges Yugoslav Unity Pending Post-War Plebiscite

SIMILETON

London, June 1 (AP)—King Peter of Yugoslavia staked his crown on a post-war plebiscite in appealing to his people today for unity while within the country Marshal Tito ordered his independent Partisan forces to strike at the enemy on the eve of the big Allied blow at Germany.

In a last-minute effort to heal the factional cleavage inside Yugoslavia, the young monarch is sending Dr. Ivan Subasic, whom he commissioned to form a new government, to Bari, Italy, to meet representatives of Tito and Gen. Draja Mihailovic, commander of Yugoslav armies in the government headed by Dr. Bozidar Puric.

Tito was reported slated to succeed Mihailovic in the new Cabinet. He has denounced Mihailovic as a traitor.

Mentions Neither Rival Leader

Peter's appeal today mentioned neither Tito nor Mihailovic. Nominally, the latter still is commander of the Yugoslav army, but Britain and Russia have flatly announced they recognized Tito as the chief military leader.

The 20-year-old Peter said Subasic would not name his new government until he had met all resistance elements.

[In Washington, the Yugoslav Embassy said it has received a message from London stating that the government of Puric had not yet submitted its resignation nor been relieved of its functions and that Yugoslav political leaders were conferring on the present situation.]

Tito Spurs Partisans On

In spurring his Partisans to immediate intensified action, Tito told his followers that Germany desperately was attempting to smash the Yugoslav Army of Liberation at a time "when the last blow of the Red army and the Anglo-American troops is approaching."

With battles now raging along the Adriatic coast to the Austrian border, he ordered his forces to launch "most decisive actions" against Nazi military bases, communications lines and other vital objectives.

King Peter's Appeal

Announcing he had asked Subasic to form a coalition government, King Peter appealed to the Serbs, Croats and Slovenes in his country to lay aside their differences until after the war "when they will be free to express their will." He pledged himself and his Government to "our first duty"—deliverance of the country from the invader.

Subasic is regarded as friendly to Tito and a compromise choice between leaders of the Slavs and Serbs. He is a former Governor of Croatia.

Nazi Puppet Government Takes Reins In Bulgaria

London, June 1 (AP)—Bulgaria apparently has been taken over by the Germans through a puppet regime in the same manner that they assumed control of Hungary, another lukewarm ally, last March.

A Transocean dispatch, broadcast tonight by the Berlin radio, announced the formation of a new Sofia Government headed by Ivan Bagrianov, 53-year-old former Minister of Agriculture and one-time adjutant of the late King Boris, as Premier and Foreign Minister.

One Of Most Pro-Axis

Bagrianov, one of the most pro-Axis of Bulgaria's politicians, is a graduate of the Bulgarian Military Academy. He visited both Germany and Italy as Minister of Agriculture in 1941 and returned with a proposal that the Bulgar farm economy be placed completely under state control, as in Germany.

Rejection by Bogdan Philov's cabinet of his ideas of reform along Fascist lines led to his resignation February 4, 1941, and he had since been out of the Government.

The Transocean announcement lifted a silence which had cloaked Bulgaria since the resignation of Premier Dobri Bojilov's cabinet under pressure from Berlin to increase its war contribution and from Moscow to get out of the conflict or suffer the consequences.

Nazi Troops Poured In

Since Bojilov's fall last week neutral reports have said the Germans poured troops into the country and took over command of the Bulgarian army to integrate it into defense against the anticipated new Russian offensive. Dissident army leaders were reported to have fled.

The lineup of other ministers as announced from Berlin:

PROF. ALEXANDER STANISCHEV, Interior.

LIEUT. GEN. RUSSI RUSSEV, War. (A holdover, which indicates he yielded to German military demands.)

DIMITAR SAVOV, Finance.

PROF. DONCHE KOSTOV, Agriculture.

CHRISTO VASSILEV, Trade.

PROF. MICHAEL ARNAUDOV, Education.

BORIS KOLCHEV, Transport and Public Works.

[A Hungarian news agency broadcast recorded by United States Government monitors said that various decrees "concerning the organization of industrial production" were prepared and "shopping hours were fixed for Jews" by Premier Doeme Sztojay's Hungarian cabinet Thursday.]

Subasic Will Form Slav Regime

London, June 1 (AP)—King Peter of Yugoslavia today formally commissioned Dr. Ivan Subasic to form a new coalition government and appealed to the Serbs, Croats and Slovenes of his polyglot kingdom to lay aside their differences until peace, "when they will be free to express their will."

Marshal Tito, who is reported slated to supplant Gen. Draja Mihailovic as commander of the Yugoslav armies fighting the German occupants, meanwhile ordered his Partisans to strike immediately against Nazi objectives, because "the last blow of the Red army and the Anglo-American Allied troops is approaching."

Neither General In Statement

Peter's statement made no mention of either general, but it was considered highly probable that Tito would be offered a Cabinet post.

Subasic is former governor of Croatia and is regarded as friendly to Tito. After taking the oath of allegiance to the 20-year-old monarch, Subasic said his new government could be successful only if it had the collaboration, help and support of all resistance movements in the Balkan kingdom.

Subasic is regarded as a compromise choice between leaders of the Croats and Serbs. He succeeds Bozidar Puric, whom Peter dismissed as Premier.

In a special order of the day, broadcast by the Free Yugoslav Radio, Tito said:

"All over Yugoslavia the Germans are making an effort to smash up the Yugoslav National Army of Liberation, in order to raise the morale of their soldiers and the German people, because of defeats they are suffering.

Cites Nazi Need

"Particularly now, when the last blow of the Red army and the Anglo-American troops is approaching, they need to do this.

"I order all units of the National Army of Liberation and Partisan detachments of Yugoslavia, on all sectors where the Germans have garrisons, to launch immediately most decisive actions against important bases and military lines communications and other vital objectives."

A Tito communique told of fresh blows against the Germans, including the capture of the enemy base of Arzano in Dalmatia.

Partisan units are advancing in the direction of Sinj, 17 miles northeast of Split, leading seaport in Dalmatia, the communique added.

In another action in Slovenia, Partisan forces penetrated into Sostanj, near the Austrian frontier, and blockaded a German garrison of 500 officers and men, the communique said. An enemy sally was repulsed.

GREAT ALLIED ARMY MASSED IN AFRICA

LONDON, June 1—(AP) A German military commentator declared today that 15 Allied divisions—150,000 to 200,000 men were massed in North Africa, ready to strike at the French or Italian riviera when the signal for the invasion from the west is given in Britain.

The Germans were aware of plans for potentially powerful offensives from all sides.

From Britain, the great amphibious movement is not far off, said Admiral Sir William M. James, chief of naval information.

From the southeast, Marshal Tito, in an order of the day, called upon the Yugoslavs for an all-out decisive attack, "particularly now when the last blow of the Red army and the Anglo-American Allied troops is approaching."

To the east, the Red army was poised and waiting.

To the South, Americans were in sight of Rome's towers, and the Nazi commander begged for reserves from the ranks of those already guarding the invasion front.

In the near East, Turkey was reported likely to move into the war when the Allies give the signal.

The Nazi military commentator for DNB, German News agency, pictured the island of Corsica transformed to a great springboard for a blow at Europe's south flank by the North Africa force, coordinated with an attack from Britain.

This force, he said, is composed of ten infantry divisions and five tank divisions, which will "obviously be employed in the forthcoming large-scale attack on the Western European coasts." He spoke of concentrations of landing vessels in North African ports and referred to the campaign in Italy as an Allied attempt merely to tie down as many German reserves as possible.

Berlin's 'Dope' On Invasion

London, June 1 (AP)—The Berlin radio asserted today that 15 Allied divisions, five of them tank, were concentrated in French North Africa for an attack on southern France.

The official DNB dispatch said the ten infantry and five tank divisions will enter the battle scene in conjunction with General Eisenhower's invasion of the west coast of Europe. The troops were said to include Moroccan and Algerian units.

The report said it was possible that the Allied command would turn the liberated French island of Corsica, which lies within 103 miles of continental France, into a grand-style invasion springboard. The Germans speculated that the Italian Riviera might also be an invasion objective.

NEW HOSPITAL UNIT READY IN ENGLAND

A UNITED STATES NAVAL BASE HOSPITAL IN ENGLAND, June 1 — (AP) Bluejackets wounded in the invasion of Europe will be returned here to the most modern medical facilities and some of the best surgical skill of the United States.

Staff members of this 1,000 bed hospital have spent tedious hours rehearsing the necessities of speedy and effective treatment of patients. The staff consists of 45 doctors, 12 hospital corps officers, 100 navy nurses and 400 hospital corpsmen, beside 185 maintenance men.

The hospital contains more than 100 wards and laboratories. The operating rooms can accommodate six patients at once. There is a splinter-proof surgery room deep in the building, as well as two others in outside structures. This practically guarantees that at least one or more of the rooms can be used even if bombs destroy the others.

The capacity of the institution can be expanded quickly to 1,500 beds.

This hospital, taken over from the British, has been completely re-equipped under the direction of Capt. J. C. Brown, Philadelphia. A graduate of Washington University School of Medicine, St. Louis, Mo., he entered the Navy in 1917 and served aboard the hospital ships Mercy and Solace.

It took only 45 minutes recently to treat a sailor with eight major fragmentation wounds and 25 minor wounds. It was said that normally this would have taken three hours with four surgeons operating at once.

RAILROADS READY TO MOVE WOUNDED

Priority Will Be Given Transport of Men Brought Home as Invasion Casualties

WASHINGTON, June 1 (AP)—The country's railroads have been marshaled for the grimmest task of the invasion—transportation of the wounded.

The program is described as unequaled in size or detail. The keystone is the War Department's estimate of the number of wounded who must be returned from the invasion front in Europe to hospitals at home. The figure is secret but presumably is generous in the hope of avoiding the suffering which would result from underplanning.

A spokesman for the traffic control division of the Army transportation corps says the railroads have given assurance that equipment would be available for battle victims whenever needed and would move "without regard to any other traffic."

He outlines the program in this way:

The wounded will be taken from field stations on the invasion coast to hospitals in England, and then will be assigned to Army hospital ships, special hospital accommodations on troop transports or hospital planes. The major debarkation ports will be New York, Charleston, S. C., Boston, and Hampton Roads, Va.

At the ports, the patient either will be transferred directly to a hospital train or will go to a nearby debarkation hospital for about 72 hours. If held at a debarkation hospital, his condition will be determined there and he will be assigned to another hospital, with consideration given first to the kind of treatment necessary and second, to a location as near his home as available beds permit.

In many instances it will not be possible to hospitalize casualties close to their homes, because so many Army hospitals were located originally in the South and West, where the larger number of troops were in training. However, the Army will avoid placing some patients near home at the expense of placing others at a great distance from home.

Movement of hospital trains will not necessarily be secret, but they will not be publicized by the Army. The average train will be comprised of specially designed hospital and kitchen cars, supplemented by sleeping cars, and will have an average capacity of 220 patients, cared for by specially trained attendants.

Because litters must be handled through windows when standard sleepers are employed, crews have been trained to do the job with a minimum of jostling.

Movement of trains for large groups may disturb normal traffic operations, but the chief likelihood of interference with civilian travel lies in handling individuals or small groups not moving on special trains. Passengers may be asked to give up berths or compartments, and some railroads already are selling tickets with such a condition printed on the back. Army officials hope that travel on trains, particularly in the East, will be held to essentials after the invasion has been started.

MIST BLANKETS DOVER STRAIT

Dover, June 1 (A. P.).—Dover Strait was blanketed in mist early today, with a ceiling of very low clouds and extremely poor visibility.

Light, variable southwesterly winds ruffled the sea and kept the temperature down. The 9 A. M. reading was 55 degrees Fahrenheit.

The barometer was still falling and the outlook generally was less settled. High tides at Dover and Calais will be at 9:37 P. M. and 9:43 P. M., respectively, tonight (3:37 and 3:43 P. M., Eastern wartime), and 10:12 and 10:18 A. M. tomorrow.

Nazis Claim Sinking 47 Allied Ships In May

London, June 1 (AP)—The German communique asserted today that Nazi naval and air force units in May destroyed 24 American and British transports totaling 131,700 tons and 23 supply ships of 169,000 tons.

The wholly unconfirmed broadcast said 17 destroyers and escort vessels, two submarines and eight speedboats were damaged.

Turk Entry In War Held Even Surer

London, June 1 (AP)—Turkey's entrance into the war on the side of the Allies soon after they launch their invasion of western Europe is regarded as a strong possibility by some quarters in London, not only because of the Turks' improved military position but because of the voice such a move would give them in post-war settlements.

The possibility is given added weight by the continuation of Allied-Turkish negotiations in Ankara, which are generally viewed here as having considerable significance over and above the question of shutting off the flow of supplies from Turkey to Germany.

Time Ripe Now

If the Turks do decide to enter the war, it was pointed out, they could not pick a better time than when the Germans are heavily committed on both the Western and Russian fronts, and, therefore, are not in a position to pour reserves into the Balkans.

In connection with speculation on Turkey's course it was recalled here that Prime Minister Churchill in his May 24 address to Parliament warned the Turks that their present position would not win them "a strong position" at the peace table.

May Goad Turks

It was believed that the warning might have carried considerable weight in Ankara, coupled as it was with a confident assertion that the Allies could win the war without Turkey's help, but that her aid would accelerate the process.

(The Berlin radio in a broadcast recorded by United States monitors said President Ismet Inonu of Turkey continued an inspection of Turkish defenses yesterday, going through the Dardanelles on a destroyer escorted by other fleet units).

CATHEDRAL AT ROUEN DESTROYED BY FIRE

LONDON, June 1. — (AP) Fire swept the historic cathedral at Rouen, France, tonight after an explosion nearby, the Berlin radio reported.

The broadcast said the blast was from either a delayed action bomb or a land mine. An hour after the explosion, flames were seen rising from the roof and soon enveloped the whole cathedral as well as the adjoining palace of the archbishop, the report added.

The cathedral bells, including the famous Joan D'Arc bell weighing 20 tons, were said to have melted in the fire.

Dates From 13th Century

The Cathedral of Rouen ranks with Notre Dame de Paris, Chartres and Mont St. Michel among the best known and most beautiful examples of French ecclesiastical architecture. One of the grandest Gothic buildings in Normandy, the Rouen cathedral dates principally from the latter part of the thirteenth century, when it was built on the site of an older cathedral that was destroyed by fire.

The sixteenth century facade is profusely decorated in a florid style, but the statues have become dilapidated with age. The two towers of the facade were never finished, one rising 252 feet and the other 245 feet; while over the transept rises the central tower with an enormous iron spire, reaching a height of 465 feet, which was added after a fire in 1822.

Inside the cathedral were many religious relics and artistic treasures, among them the monument to Cardinal George d'Amboise and his nephew, one of the best examples of French Renaissance sculpture.

Rouen was first bombed by the Allies in August, 1942. The city is an important communications center, and serves as the deep-water port for Paris, eighty-seven miles further up the Seine River.

Nazis Ban Racing in France

LONDON, June 1 (AP).—The Vichy radio announced today that all horse-racing in France had been banned by the Germans in another move to break up gatherings of Frenchmen.

Nazis Sentence Belgian

Also Punish German Woman Who "Ran Faster Than Rommel"

LONDON, June 1 (AP).—The Belgian government News Agency here announced today that a Belgian was sentenced to death by a German military court on a charge of aiding the escape of an Allied airman who made a forced landing.

The agency also reported a German woman in Aachen was sentenced to three months for commenting as she jumped on a train which had started from the station: "I had to run faster than Rommel in Africa."

Faster Than Rommel: 3 Months

London, June 1 (AP)—A German woman who commented "I had to run faster than Rommel in Africa" was sentenced to three months imprisonment in Aachen, the Belgian news agency reported today.

Aids of Petain Reported Seized

London, June 1 (A. P.).—A Reuters dispatch from Zurich today said that the Swiss newspaper La Suisse had published an unconfirmed report from Annecy that Major Tradou, Marshal Petain's ordnance officer, and other members of Petain's inner circle had been arrested by the Germans in Vichy.

Joe Spends Only 26% Of His Pay In Britain

London, June 1 (AP)—United States soldiers in Britain spent only 26 per cent. of their pay in this country during April, a new low, the United States Army fiscal director announced today.

This was a decline of seven per cent. in the last nine months, during which a campaign has been under way to encourage the GI Joes to save their money. Family allotments, insurance premiums, war bonds, bank deposits and contributions are among the methods of keeping the money out of general circulation.

22 Britons Die in Grenade Test

LONDON, June 1 (AP)—Twenty-two British infantrymen were killed and several were wounded by the explosion of three boxes of anti-tank grenades at a recent instruction session. A survivor testified at an inquest today that the instructor had struck a match to explain how the grenades could be ignited when the blast occurred.

DEVALERA'S PARTY HAS CLEAR MAJORITY IN DIAL

DUBLIN, June 1 — (AP) Prime Minister Eamon De Valera's Fianna Fail party will have a clear majority in the new dial which meets June 9, having won at least 72 of the 138 seats in Eire's general election Tuesday.

In addition, the party is expected to pick up six more seats in 12 districts unreported.

The fine Gael patry won 26 seats, the latest returns showed, the labor party seven, national labor four, farmers six and independents 11.

De Valera called the election after defeat of a government-sponsored transport bill last month.

DE VALERA WINS IN EIRE ELECTION

Dublin, June 1 (A. P.).—Prime Minister Eamon De Valera won a clear cut victory in Eire's general election Tuesday with the incomplete count of returns today showing his Fianna Fail Party with sixty-eight seats in the Dail (parliament), only three short of an overall majority.

Returns from seventeen districts still were outstanding. The Fine Gael (opposition) party won twenty-five seats, the Farmers, nine; Independents, eight; Labor, seven, and National Labor, four.

All of the Brooklyn-born Prime Minister's Cabinet had retained their seats in the Dail. De Valera called the election last month after defeat of a Government-sponsored transport bill. The question of Eire's neutrality did not figure in the campaign.

Opposition leader Richard Mulcahy won his seat in Tipperary.

Johnston Studies Russian Market

Moscow, June 1 (AP)—Eric Johnston, president of the United States Chamber of Commerce, arrived here today on his search for extended post-war markets, declared himself interested in "everything from electrical equipment to aviation" and prepared to explore all possible avenues of trade.

At a press conference Johnston expressed optimism concerning prospects for post-war trade. He asserted that controlled prices, accumulated demands and the presence of Soviet Russia as a market created "a different set of conditions" from those which obtained after the last war.

Suggests Long Loans

"Longer term loans to Russia certainly should be considered favorably," Johnston said. "I believe the Russians are realists who do not want to buy anything they cannot pay for or find means of paying for within a reasonable length of time."

Johnston said that while here he expects to talk to various experts in Moscow and to visit battle areas, devastated regions and production centers.

Looks For Development

Speaking of his travels in the Middle East, Johnston said:

"My foremost impression, the same as in South America, was that people were very desirous of industrializing themselves after the war, particularly in Egypt.

"We in the United States welcome that type of development because of the expansion of trade and the higher purchasing power."

The chamber president arrived here in company with W. Averell Harriman, United States Ambassador.

JOHNSTON IN MOSCOW

Moscow, June 1 (A. P.).—Eric Johnston, president of the United States Chamber of Commerce, arrived today from the United States with W. Averell Harriman, United States Ambassador.

A large delegation of Soviet officials representing the Commissariat of Foreign Trade, the Soviet Chamber of Commerce, the Machine Import organization and the petroleum industry met Mr. Johnston. It was headed by Vice-Commissar of Foreign Trade Sergiev, who was a delegate to the United Nations Relief and Rehabilitation Conference in the United States.

The size of the reception committee and the turnout of newsreel and cameramen indicated widespread local publicity would be given Mr. Johnston's visit.

Mr. Johnston had joined Mr. Harriman at Teheran and flew to Moscow in the Ambassador's plane. Mr. Johnston said he expects to stay about a month and confer with Premier Stalin, Commissar of Foreign Trade Anastas I. Mikoyan and other trade officials.

Reign Of Terror In Hungary Reported

Lisbon, Portugal, June 1 (AP)—News trickling through from inside Hungary these days suggests that a majority of the population is torn between terror, despair and apathy as Premier Doeme Sztojay's puppet regime tries to rush through a so-called "social revolution," repair the damage of Allied bombings and mobilize more men for the German defense of the Carpathians.

Today is the deadline for removal of all Jews from the Budapest area into designated ghettos. What personal effects any of them may still possess in the new locations, however, is problematical. Recent weeks have been filled with accounts of systematic raids on Jewish homes with the avowed purpose of seizing hidden valuables.

Confiscations Described

The ruthlessness of this confiscation was indicated recently by Minister of Interior Andor Jaross when he said:

"I emphasize that everything which Jewish greed managed to pile up during the era of liberalism in the shape of properties, treasures and other valuables has ceased to be Jewish property. It is henceforth the property of the Hungarian nation."

Hungarian newspapers are filled with numerous items reporting the seizure of jewels and gold and the arrest of Jews who failed to declare such properties.

Youth Problem

The confusion and terror accompanying this nation-wide harvesting of loot is disclosed in another type of news item which also is strikingly widespread. These stories disclose that hundreds of young toughs have been arrested for "impersonating detectives," threatening to arrest Jews for hiding wealth and either seizing what they can find or taking large bribes.

Suicides apparently have been numerous. These are typical items in the Budapest newspaper Pester Lloyd:

"The 81-year-old widow of a former state official, Karl Fanda, has hanged herself."

"Seventy-four-year-old Mrs. Karl Kolos and 70-year-old Mrs. Johann Mihalyffy committed suicide.

"Former state official Emmerich Elias, 64, shot his wife and killed himself."

CAUGHT SWIMMING, 250 NAZIS SLAIN

Cairo, June 1 (A. P.).—Greek Patriots wiped out some 250 German troops with guns and knives after surprising them as they were swimming and sunbathing at a stream in Thessaly, an official report said today.

Officials declared that the Germans were resting on May 10 after a drive against villages in the mountainous Olympus area in the course of which a number of defenseless villagers had been shot and other atrocities had been committed. Seven Greek Patriots were killed, and eight wounded, in the counter-attack, they added.

3 JAP DRIVES IN CHINA GAIN

Changteh By-Passed By Enemy Moving On Changsha

Chungking, June 1 (AP) — The Japanese, in fierce fighting along a broad 120-mile front, have advanced in three major drives against the Hunan province city of Changsha, by-passing the Chinese stronghold of Changteh, 100 miles to the northwest, the high command announced tonight.

The enemy gained in heavy fighting southeast of Changteh and both east and west of the Canton-Hankow railway along the Milo river front, about 40 miles north of Changsha.

Seek To Cut Off Aid

Apparently intent upon cutting off reinforcements from the west, Japanese amphibious troops crossed from the north shore of Tungting Lake, below Nanhsien stabbing into the rice bowl area and by-passing east of Changteh. This column reached Yukafg, 22 miles southeast of Changteh and north of the Yuan river.

The Japanese crossed the Milo river east of the railway route, and fighting now is in progress in the vicinity of Kweiyi, only 42 miles north of Changsha, which, evacuated of all civilians except volunteers, braced itself for its fourth battle. Every shop in the city was closed and newspapers had suspended publication, press dispatches said.

Drive Protects Flanks

As the enemy crossed the Milo, second line of Chinese defense, in its first breach of the river east of the railway, another Japanese column still farther east drove south from Tungcheng to protect the main body from flank attacks, and reached a point 18 miles north of Pingkiang, the eastern Japanese anchor on the Hunan battle front. At the same time another southward-striking enemy column reached a point 18 miles east of Pingkiang.

After the first Japanese crossing of Tungting Lake the Chinese claimed to have repulsed new enemy attempts. A communique said five Japanese gunboats and more than 100 steam launches and junks attempted to force a landing at Yingtien and other points immediately north of Siangyin and west of the railway route, but that all such attempts were defeated.

The bitterest fighting was along a twisting 70-mile stretch from Pingkiang, 50 miles northeast of Changsha, to the southern Tungting shore. That front fringes the northern shore of the Milo river except at points west of the Canton-Hankow railway where the Japanese established bridgeheads on the southern bank earlier in the week. In some sectors there was bitter, hand-to-hand combat, press dispatches said, adding that Chinese-American planes were giving Chinese troops valuable support.

Report No Change In Hupeh

To the north, in another Japanese drive in Hupeh province coordinated with the Hunan offensize, no change was reported since the Japanese drove west of Kungan, lying east of the Sungtze river and about 25 miles below the Yangtze river.

In Honan province, 400 miles north of the new Hunan battlefield, the Chinese high command said Chinese troops had recaptured Sunghsien, 45 miles south-southwest of Loyang. At the same time, press dispatches said, the Japanese along the Lunghai railway in northern Honan broke a long lull in the battle by striking westward, and fighting was said to be raging at Lingpao, 35 miles east of the important Shensi province city of Tungkwan.

Sunghsien was recaptured yesterday afternoon, a communique said, under cover of the air force, after enemy troops west and south of the city were mopped up. More than 200 Japanese were killed in the area, the communique said.

American-Chinese Forces Take Malakawng In Burma

JUN 21944

GRUMICH

Southeast Asia Command Headquarters, Ceylon, June 1 (AP)—Chinese and American troops in Burma have captured Malakawng, "center of Japanese resistance" in the Mogaung Valley, wiping out an enemy force which opposed them, Allied headquarters announced today.

Pressure was being applied from two sides against the Japanese 18th (Singapore) Division in the valley.

Allied units had advanced on Malakawng, lying just to the west of the besieged Japanese main north Burma base of Myitkyina, from south of the road. The point had been held for a considerable time by the enemy.

NIGHT

In Line For Frontal Assaults

The Americans and Chinese now have established a Mogaung Valley line for powerhouse frontal assaults, and are cleaning up enemy units caught between them and the Chinese-American column which has by-passed Kamaing to the northwest, cutting the main Kamaing-Mogaung road.

To the northwest of Myitkyina, other American and Chinese forces threw a line south of Warong and Sharaw in the valley, and were said to be making progress against pillboxes and entrenchments guarding the way toward Myitkyina.

The Allied assaults against the city were described in Admiral Lord Louis Mountbatten's communique as "making satisfactory progress" from the north, south and west.

Air Units Blast Railway

American air units at the same time were blasting enemy positions, installations and rail communications along the line south of Mogaung, indicating the Japanese still were making at least some use of the north Burma railway from Mandalay to Myitkyina. Bridges, rolling stock, stations and towns were bombed and strafed.

The American planes also struck supply dumps in the battle zone between Myitkyina and Mogaung on Tuesday, "causing large fires and damaging approaches to the Mogaung railroad bridge," the communique said.

Capture Kamliangkung

[To the northeast of this battle area on the Yunnan front, a Chinese communique said, "Our forces, driving on in continued good weather, captured Kamliangkung, only eight air-line miles from the important objective of Watien, which is 20 air-line miles from Tengchung." The bulletin added that "cornered Japanese at Anchaikungfang in a desperate attempt to break our attack again were severely mauled and driven back."

[Paving the way for major land sweeps now being developed by Chinese armies, the American 14th Air Force heavily bombed and strafed the Japanese strongholds at Lungling, Tengchung, Mangshih, Peichaikungfang and Chiangtso," the communique said.]

Gurkhas Occupy Village

On the India side of the Burma operations, Allied attempts to clear the enemy from the Indian jungles north and northeast of the Imphal plain were "making good progress" east of Kanglatongbi, headquarters reported.

Gurkhas captured a village in the Bishenpur area north of the Silchar track, seizing three guns, and from Indian jungles north and northeast of the Imphal plain were reported "making good progress" east of Kanglatongbi. Gurkhas captured a village in the Bishenpur area north of the Silchar track, seizing three guns.

Indicating that the Japanese were making at least some use of the North Burma Railroad from Mandalay to besieged Myitkyina, the communique told of United States sweeps along the line south of Mogaung in which three bridges, rolling stock, stations and towns were bombed and strafed. A Chindit railroad block south of Mogaung was cleared earlier in the week by the Japanese. Now that the monsoon rains have started, the rail line is the chief enemy hope of salvaging his position in the north.

Japs Ambushed

Levies ambushed a group of Japanese moving west in the area north of Myitkyina and inflicted casualties, the communique said.

American planes bombed and strafed Japanese positions and supply dumps in the battle zone between Myitkyina and Mogaung Tuesday and yesterday fighters, fighter-bombers and dive bombers attacked enemy positions in the Kanglatongbi and Moirang areas on the Tiddim road, at Labawa in upper Kaladan, and also in the lower Kaladan area. Long-range RAF fighters yesterday damaged a number of river craft in central Burma, the communique said.

The bulletin reported no major activity in the Kohima sector, "where the enemy is digging in and preparing defensive positions."

Yanks, Chinese Take Jap Burma Strongpoint

JUN 21944

Southeast Asia Headquarters, Kandy, Ceylon, June 1 (AP)—American and Chinese troops have captured the Japanese strongpoint of Malakawng on the main Mogaung Valley road in north Burma, wiping out resistance, headquarters announced today.

Other American and Chinese forces established a line south of Warong and Sharaw in the valley and were declared making progress against pillboxes and entrenchments guarding the beleaguered enemy base of Myitkyina.

Lord Louis Mountbatten's communique said "our troops are continuing their assault from the north, south and west and making satisfactory progress at Myitkyina, a major Japanese base in north Burma.

DAY

He described Malakawng as "the center of Japanese resistance" in the Mogaung Valley, which lies just to the west of the Myitkyina area. The Allies advanced on the strongpoint from south of the main road.

Japs "Digging In"

Japanese forces invading northeast India were reported "digging in and preparing defensive positions" in the Kohima area, le than 100 miles of the railroad fee ing the Ledo road and the air tran port supply line to China.

Operations to clear the enem Tuesday "causing large fires and damaging approaches to the Mogaung railroad bridge," the bulletin said. Other aerial blows were struck in central and western Burma and in the north by British and Indian flyers. No Allied plane was lost.

U. S. China Flyers Hit 22 Jap Locomotives

Chungking, June 1 (AP)—American planes have swept 550 miles of railroad from Peiping to Pukow, across the Yangtze river from Hankow, destroying or damaging 22 locomotives, Lieutenant General Stilwell's headquarters announced today.

The sweep was one of a series in a widespread aerial offensive which included an assault upon the Burma Road terminal of Lashio, attacks on two cargo boats in the South China Sea and the bombing of important targets in Thailand and China. One of the patrol boats sank; the other was badly damaged.

All of the operations were executed without loss.

Chinese Smashing Nearer Watien

Chungking, June 1 (AP)—A Chinese communique announced today the capture of Kamliangkung, only eight airline miles from the important objective of Watien, in the Mamien Pass sector in western Yunnan province, north of the Burma road.

Chinese troops, advancing over rough terrain, inflicted heavy losses on the enemy in men and supplies, the communique said.

Paving the way for major land sweeps now being developed by the Chinese armies the 14th United States Air Force heavily bombed and strafed the Japanese strongholds of Lungling, Tengchung, Mangshih, Peichaikung-fang and Chiangtso, the communique added.

Chinese field dispatches declared, meanwhile, that authorities had completed the evacuation of civilians from Changsha, ancient capital of Hunan province, toward which the Japanese now are driving for the fourth time.

All shops in the city have been closed and all newspapers have suspended publication, the dispatches said.

YANKS REINFORCE BIAK ISLE FORCES FOR NEW ASSAULT

AIRFIELDS BOMBED

Planes Blast Snipers on Ridges Dominating Coastal Road.

ADVANCED ALLIED HEADQUARTERS, NEW GUINEA, Friday, June 2—(AP) Under the guns of the Seventh Fleet, American reinforcements have landed "without air or naval interference from the enemy" for a massed assault on invaded Biak, headquarters reported today.

While the Yanks were strengthened for resumption of sniper-halted attacks on three airfields at that main island in the Schoutens, Allied planes roamed Geelvink bay to pound enemy points which might interfere. They blasted Japen island, south of Biak, and hit enemy airfields on the adjacent Dutch New Guinea mainland near Manokwari and Babo.

Planes Clear Out Snipers

Low-flying Mitchells and Bostons went after the nests of snipers on ridges dominating a coastal road on Biak. The snipers have halted the Americans two miles short of Mokmer airfield.

Other far-ranging southwest Pacific planes flew to the Carolines, dropping 33 tons of explosives on Alet island airfield, 190 miles west of Truk, Woleai, 525 miles west of Truk and Truk itself were struck by patrols.

On Biak, headquarters said that sniper fire and mortar exchanges were the only ground activity.

Two hundred miles down the Dutch New Guinea coast to the southwest, American invaders of Maffin bay killed 75 more Nipponese in patrol actions to raise the total enemy casualties there since the May 17 landing to 1,453.

Action on Bougainville

On Bougainville, the North Solomons sector sprang into offensive action for the first time in months as American amphibious forces moved seven miles to the southeast of Torokina river in the Empress Augusta bay area on the West-Central coast.

This was the first American move beyond the bay beachhead since it was established last Nov. 1.

On the British New Guinea mainland far southeast of the Dutch New Guinea operations, Australians slowly moving northwest beyond Madang have reached Guru. That is 40 miles southeast of Hansa bay. In the Wewak-Hansa bay sector, which has been bypassed, thousands of Japanese have been reported concentrating.

Headquarters said Japanese planes weakly attacked Biak and Wakde island, in the Maffin bay area, Wednesday.

On Biak, which was invaded last Saturday, Japanese on ridges overlooking a coastal road approach to Mokmer airfield have held off the Yank invaders two miles from their objective. The offensive has been held up while these sniper nests were cleared out.

Bitter Fight to Continue

The bitter fight for this airdrome and two others about two miles farther west is expected to continue after enemy snipers, machinegun nests and artillery have been cleared from the Americans' right flank. The Yank advance was halted when the enemy brought up tanks.

MacArthur reported that 679 dead Japanese had been counted. He disclosed there were "some casualties" among American tanks which stopped the Nipponese armored attack Monday.

Air operations over Biak were slowed by adverse weather but continued in other sectors. Allied bombers and attack planes pounded enemy supply areas, defenses and communications along the Wewak-Hansa coast of New Guinea, at Rabaul on New Britain and on Bougainville island.

Weather Stalls Biak Drive, 679 Japs Killed

DAY

New Guinea Headquarters, June 1 (AP)—Deprived by bad weather of vital air support Yank invaders of Biak broke off momentarily their violent bid for three airfields, but headquarters disclosed today they already have killed 679 Japanese and control the eastern part of that Schouten island.

The lull was expected to continue until such time as snipers and small scattered forces hiding in ridges along a road to the Mokmer airdrome are cleaned out. That will permit the Americans to advance without fear of attacks on the right flank, which have stopped the main force short of their first objective.

Invasion Began Saturday

The invasion of Biak, in north Dutch New Guinea's Geelvink Bay, opened Saturday at Bosnek, near the island's southeastern tip, and headquarters said today that all enemy opposition there has collapsed.

Many of the enemy dead were counted after the Yanks repulsed bitter counterattacks Monday before Mokmer Field. Two of these were reported belatedly today. It also was made known that "there were some casualties among our tanks" in Monday's fighting. Previously the destruction of eight enemy tanks and the disabling of three others had been reported.

Two hundred miles down the Dutch New Guinea coast at Maffin Bay, Japanese were thwarted in an attempt to cut communication lines of another American invasion force.

Bombings Reported

Today's communique list of limited air actions included bombings of Wewak, British New Guinea; Rabaul, New Britain and on the Satawan approaches to Truk, and "patrol stabs at Truk and Woleai, all in the Carolines.

Admiral Chester W. Nimitz yesterday announced new air strikes into the Kuriles north of Japan and for the first time listed attacks on four of those islands in one day. The planes hit Shimushiri, Matsuwa, Paramushiro and Shumushu.

Pacific Forces Reports Raids On Four Islands

Washington, June 1 (AP)—Guam, Wake, Truk and Ponape islands, now in Japanese hands, have been bombed by United States planes, the navy reported tonight.

"Guam island was bombed by Liberators of the Seventh Army Air Force during daylight on May 28.

Battle Ten Interceptors

"Approximately ten enemy fighters attempted to intercept our formation. One fighter was probably shot down. Anti-aircraft fire ranged from moderate to intense.

"Truk atoll was attacked by Seventh Army Air Force Liberators at night on May 30. The air strips were hit and a fire started which was visible 150 miles. One enemy plane was in the air over the target. Anti-aircraft fire was meager.

"Wake Island was bombed on May 30 by Seventh Army Air Force Liberators, which obtained hits on Peacock and Wilkes islands and heel point. Moderate anti-aircraft fire was encountered.

Mitchells Bomb Ponape

"Ponape Island was raided by Seventh Army Air Force Mitchells during daylight on May 30. Gun positions, runways and defence installations were hit. Anti-aircraft fire was meager and no interception was attempted.

"Enemy positions in the Marshall Islands were bombed May 30 and severely strafed by Ventura search planes of Fleet Air Wing Two, Dauntless divebombers and Corsair fighters of the Fourth Marine Aircraft Wing, and navy Hellcat fighters. Blockhouses, barracks and coastal guns were hit. Anti-aircraft fire was meager."

ARMY IS READY, STIMSON SAYS

3,657,000 Soldiers Overseas For "Decisive Action"

Washington, June 1 (AP)—The "period of decisive action" against the Axis powers is at hand, Secretary of War Stimson asserted today, with nearly half the army's total strength in action against the enemy or poised in combat zones for new offensives.

Disclosing that 3,657,000 soldiers are now deployed outside continental United States, Stimson told a news conference the overseas strength of air and service forces is virtually at its peak, while the movement of ground troops—more than half of which already are overseas—is increasing at a rate which will lift the overseas deployment total to more than 5,000,000 men by the year's end.

Navy Lists 1,566,000

The navy disclosed it had 1,566,000 men afloat or on foreign duty as of April 1. These included Coast Guard and marines as well as naval personnel. In addition 900,000 navy men were in transit or in training for sea or foreign duty.

Total naval strength, including all three branches, was 3,277,000 at the beginning of April.

Indicating that the greater part of the huge army force is concentrated against Germany, Stimson said developments will make it necessary to shift portions of the overseas strength from one part of the world to another as the Allied grand strategy unfolds.

Shifts In Force Foreseen

Indicating that the greater part of this huge force is concentrated against Germany, Stimson said developments will make it necessary to shift portions of the overseas strength from one part of the world to another as the Allied grand strategy unfolds.

Minutely detailed plans of the United States joint chiefs of staff have governed the troop movements, he said, beginning with the decision on the size of the army—7,700,000 men—and the order of its use to implement the strategic decisions of the Allies.

"It was essential," the Secretary explained, "that army service forces and army air forces should be given priority on shipping in the early stages of the war, when the problems were stabilizing our lines and striking outer defenses of the enemy."

"Shipping Is Available"

It was essential also, he said, to establish the bases from which the ground troops would launch the culminating campaigns—"these bases have now been established, and shipping is available to transport the ground forces."

The size of the troop deployment task "baffles the imagination," Stimson said. The present overseas strength of the army exceeds the peak World War overseas force by 1,571,000 men, and is only 400,000 short of the entire strength of the army in November, 1918.

17,000 Combat Planes Overseas

The air forces, he said, have nearly half their total of 2,357,000 men and more than half of their 34,000 combat planes already overseas, forming "the world's most formidable aerial striking force in point of size and fire power."

Stimson also disclosed that American army casualties in Italy through May 27 were 9,686 killed, 36,910 wounded and 8,554 missing. The total of 55,150 was an increase of 16,092 since the Secretary last reported on March 23, when his figures were 5,749 killed, 23,035 wounded and 10,274 missing.

3,657,000 U. S. Soldiers Are Overseas

Washington, June 1 (AP)—Secretary of War Stimson said today that with 3,657,000 army troops already overseas, the deployment of air and service forces is practically completed "and the period of decisive action is at hand."

The bulk of forces now moving out of the United States to combat areas is composed of ground troops prepared to use the bases and take advantage of the preliminary air assaults for the final blows against the enemy, the Secretary told a news conference, adding:

"The United States Army today has 3,657,000 soldiers deployed outside the Continental United States in theaters of operation throughout the world, striking and preparing to strike victory-winning blows by land, from the sea and in the air against Germany and Japan.

47 P. C. Of Total

"This force, at the end of protected supply lines stretching more than 56,000 miles and reaching into every continent, represents approximately 47 per cent. of the total strength of the army.

"By the end of 1944, the number of troops overseas will be increased to more than 5,000,000 men, approximately two thirds of total strength."

Overseas deployment of necessity came first for the supply and air forces, Stimson noted, since it was necessary to build up the bases for the eventual main drives against the enemy. Those bases are now established, he said, and shipping is available for the movement of ground forces to the overseas theaters. This movement "rapidly is nearing the peak."

Far Over World War I Figure

Stimson said that the overseas strength of the army exceeds the peak overseas strength in the first World War by 1,571,000 men, and is only 400,000 men short of the total strength of the army at the close of the World War.

In speaking of the overseas deployment, Stimson explained that his refefence was to total strength, not to overseas location of the forces, which will have to be shifted, at least in part, as the campaigns develop. The movement has been made according to a minutely defined pattern set by the United States joint chiefs of staff to fit the overall strategy of the war.

Stimson said the air forces, with a total strength of approximately 2,357,000, has slightly less than half of that personnel already overseas. The AAF has more than 75,000 airplanes, including 34,000 combat planes, he said, and more than one half of the combat plane strength is overseas, "making the AAF the world's most formidable aerial striking force in point of size and fire power."

Reaching A Peak

The movement of ground troops to overseas theaters is just reaching a peak, Stimson said, but already more than half of the ground forces are deployed for action overseas. Shipping is available to take the outfits remaining in this country to the combat zones as the developing campaigns require them.

Outside of continental United States and United States territories, the AAF has approximately 925 bases, of which 750 are air fields, including many used by the Air Transport Command, and the others include radio and weather stations, hospitals, depots and storage bases.

"The tremendous growth of the AAF's overseas combat strength," said Stimson, "with an adequate and increasing reserve, just now is bringing United States army aerial striking force to the planned size and power which assures a relentless offensive against the Axis in all theaters."

Big Supply Job

Stimson said the service forces are executing the "greatest logistics job in the history of the world," supplying forces on every continent with equipment for use in all climates and over all types of terrain.

In May alone, the service forces moved almost 4,000,000 measurement tons of army cargo overseas, almost twice the tonnage of May, 1943, and compared with the peak month in the World War—829,000 measurement tons in November, 1918.

The Secretary said that substantial progress had been made in the Italian fighting and "our position today is satisfactory."

Stimson said that "these Germans have been stubborn, bitter fighters," who had to be driven back from one vantage point to another, often in hand-to-hand fighting, but that the successes in the Mediterranean theater to date should be encouraging.

Casualties In Italy

The Italian campaign, since the landing last September through May 27, has cost 55,150 American casualties, Stimson reported. Of these, 9,686 were killed, 36,910 wounded and 8,554 missing.

The air attack from England, he said, "continues in even greater force, with synthetic oil plants, airfields and transportation in general blasted every day."

Discussing the fighting in the Southwest Pacific, Stimson spoke of the latest landing on Biak Island off the New Guinea coast, and said that the Japanese evidently did not expect the Allied forces to land at precisely the point where they did, since the principal shore fortifications were nearer to three airfields than to the landing point.

800-Mile Advance

In a single month, Stimson said, we have advanced 800 miles in the Southwest Pacific and the East Indies, and the Philippines are now "within striking distance."

The enemy has reinforced himself in north Burma and the resulting pressure has forced British units to make temporary withdrawals, in some areas, the Secretary said.

Stimson Calls Situation In Italy 'Satisfactory'

Casualties Since Landing in September Total 55,150

WASHINGTON, June 1 (AP).—Secretary of War Henry L. Stimson said today that substantial progress has been made in the Italian fighting and "our position today is satisfactory."

Mr. Stimson said that "these Germans have been stubborn, bitter fighters," who had to be driven back from one vantage point to another, often in hand-to-hand fighting, but that the successes in the Mediterranean theater to date should be encouraging.

The Italian campaign, since the landing last September through May 27, has cost 55,150 American casualties, Mr. Stimson reported. Of these 9,686 were killed, 36,910 wounded and 8,554 missing.

The air attack from England, he said, "continues in even greater force," with synthetic oil plants, air fields and transportation in general blasted every day."

The enemy has reinforced himself in north Burma and the resulting pressure has forced British units to make temporary withdrawals in some areas, the Secretary said.

Of the Japanese offensive in China, Mr. Stimson said "the scope of the Japanese effort is yet to be proven."

Hull Backs Equality For All Small Nations

Secretary Also Says U. S. Policy Is To Champion Liberty For People Of Every Land

Washington, June 1 (AP)—Citing what he termed America's consistent record of "championship of liberty for everybody," Secretary of State Cordell Hull today declared it is this Government's policy to encourage "all nations to aspire to liberty."

Although Hull did not mention any of the existing colonial empires by name, the possible future significance of his statement to those empires was apparent. He made no exceptions to his remark that the American people desire "freedom for aspiring people everywhere" and he recalled that when South American countries "threw off the Spanish yoke," the United States "proceeded to recognize them right and left."

Hull said that American support for liberty for "all peoples who might aspire to liberty" dated from the earliest days of the republic and he recalled that "as soon as our American neighbors threw off the Spanish yoke, we proceeded to recognize them, right and left."

Assurance To Small Nations

At the same time, he expanded his recent declarations on creation of a post-war world organization to give assurance to small nations, such as the Dutch, the Belgians and the Poles, that the United States intends they should be treated equally with the great powers on matters of common concern in the organization.

It was a question about the rights of small nations which touched off the Secretary's statement about liberty at a news conference shortly after noon. The Secretary replied in a statement which was made extemporaneously was given out after his aides had edited it to make it read smoothly.

The statement follows:

"At his press and radio news conference today, the Secretary of State made the following reply in answer to a question whether there was anything he could say that might be of reassurance to the small nations. The correspondent who asked the question pointed out that some of the small nations seemed to think that they would not be properly represented in the proposed international organization:

"That is a matter in which the small nations and the large nations as well should be at all times especially interested. It is a mutual affair. The future welfare of each nation depends upon the welfare of all.

Thinks Cooperation Is Assured

"In view of that common interest and that self-interest in every mutual sense, I doubt whether there would be many nations, large or small, which would have any other purpose than to cooperate in all legitimate and practicable international relationships that would be mutually advantageous and mutually profitable.

"As far as this Government is concerned, whenever I have said anything on this subject, it has always emphasized the all-inclusive nature of the world situation and our disposition and purpose to see that all nations, especially the small nations, are kept on a position of equality with all others and that, in every practicable way, there will be cooperation.

"Now, it is not possible at this stage for this Government or any Government to give anybody a blueprint as to all of the details of how these relationships between all of the different nations will be gradually developed and perfected. There is no occasion to be especially concerned about the attitude of this Government in view of the declarations that the President, and I, and others have made.

Cites Nation's History

"The truth is that even those declarations are not necessarily called for in the light of our entire history and our traditions. We have for 150 years preached liberty to all the nations of the earth, to all the peoples of the earth, and we have practiced it. We have encouraged all nations to aspire to liberty, and to enjoy it. Our attitude toward the Philippines is a striking example. Nobody had to put us on the witness stand to know what we were doing for them.

"Even back in our earlier days, we preached the same spirit of liberty with which we, ourselves, were inspired in acquiring our own liberty, to all the nations, especially those that were in chains of despotism, as the South American countries were for centuries under Spanish rule. Nobody asked us to do it. That was our philosophy. That was our spirit, both at home and toward all peoples who might aspire to liberty.

Latin America As Example

As soon as our American neighbors threw off the Spanish yoke, we proceeded to recognize them, right and left. We had the same spirit toward Greece and other countries desiring liberty as we demonstrated in the Philippines. That has been our consistent record, a record of championship of liberty for everybody, encouraging them at all times and in all places.

"I see no reason why this country, this great free people who through generations have dedicated themselves to this wonderful human cause and preserved it—I see no reason why they should be catechized every morning before breakfast as to their loyalty to liberty, or their consistent desire of liberty for everybody and freedom for aspiring peoples everywhere.

"I have spoken of this often in speeches and at other times before, during and after my trip to Europe. Here is an example from my address to the congress: 'The principle of sovereign equality of all peace-loving states, irrespective of size and strength, as partners in a future system of general security will be the foundation stone upon which the future international organization will be constructed.' That is our objective.

"I think I have indicated sufficiently to you the policy of this nation and this Government representing it."

HULL GETTING DATA ON U-BOAT ATTACK

Washington, June 1 (A. P.).—Secretary of State Hull said today that this Government was awaiting official statements on the case of the Portuguese steamer Serpa Pinto before it will be in a position to act as perhaps it would want to act.

The Serpa Pinto was stopped by a Nazi submarine which took two Americans on board as prisoners and threatened for a time to sink the ship.

In the past the United States has protested through its protecting Power, Swizerland, when incidents involving international law have taken place.

The ship was sailing under a safe conduct from the belligerents. If the two Americans taken prisoner were specifically included in the safe conduct, generally given to each passenger as well as to the ship, then the Nazi action probably was in violation of international law, and an American protest to Berlin would be probable.

The Portuguese embassy here said the matter presumably was being taken up in Lisbon. In view of the fact that two Portuguese citizens lost their lives, a Portuguese protest to Germany was considered likely.

The United States and Britain currently are negotiating with Portugal for an embargo on wolfram shipments to the Nazis. Some quarters expressed the opinion the Serpa Pinto incident may have some effect on the talks.

Hull Plans Week's Rest

WASHINGTON, June 1 (AP).—Recalling that he has had hardly any vacations in several years, Cordell Hull, Secretary of State, said today at his news conference that he plans to go to Hershey, Pa., for a week's rest at the beginning of the summer, and that early in the fall he will drop out for another week. Speculation that his Hershey visit migth be the occasio nfor the announced conference with representatives of Britain, Russia and China on post-war peace plans was brushed aside by Mr. Hull.

Black List Faced By Finnish Firms

JUN 21944

Washington, June 1 (AP)—The United States is expected to take another step tomorrow showing displeasure over Finland's cooperation with the Nazis. It will be the inclusion for the first time of Finnish firms on the blacklist.

Although companies in all the neutral and some nations associated with the Allies have been put on the list already, no Finnish firms have previously been proscribed. Americans are forbidden to trade with firms on the list.

Post-War Implication Only

Because wartime barriers have cut off trade between this country and Finland, blacklisting of Finnish concerns would have mainly post-war implications.

Both the United States and Britain have made it clear that companies on their blacklists during the war cannot expect, once the shooting stops, to be put back on equal footing with those which did not aid the enemy.

Finland and the United States are not at war although Britain and Russia are at war with Finland.

Break In Relations Possible

Finland's main economic contribution to the Nazis has been in strategic metals and in forest products.

The next blacklist supplement is to be published Saturday. It has already been announced that 38 additional Swedish firms are to be included.

Meanwhile, Finnish-American relations continue on what is described here as a day-to-day basis with the possibility of a break in relations always remaining.

Roosevelt May See De Gaulle In London

Washington, June 1 (AP)—Unless President Roosevelt decides to go to London in the very near future there is little prospect that Gen. Charles de Gaulle will get his wish for a ranking American official to sit in on his promised conference with Prime Minister Churchill.

There is still conviction in some quarters, however, that the President may make the trip, not especially to see the French leader, but primarily to get a closer look at the war and to thrash out some tough political problems with the British Prime Minister.

From the British and American points of view, some affairs are going well in Europe and some are not.

Italian King Due To Retire

Diplomatic officials at present are most pleased perhaps with the state of politics in Italy.

As soon as Rome is liberated, King Vittorio Emanuele's promise to retire and name Crown Prince Umberto as his "lieutenant" or regent will become effective. It can be reported on excellent authority that there is no tendency in official quarters here to let the King enter Rome as head of the state.

Policies as to Spain and Turkey are considered in official quarters to be much more troublesome. The constant question is how far to press these neutrals, and also Sweden, to cut their trade with the Axis. The British forced a compromise in negotiations with Spain over war-vital wolfram so that token shipments still go through to Germany.

In respect to Turkey, the British are understood to be willing to apply considerable pressure to get further concessions in reduction of trade with the Axis.

TRIAL OF ADMIRALS MAY BE DELAYED UNTIL AFTER WAR

WASHINGTON, June 1. — (AP) Democratic senators predicted today that trial of the men who were in command at Pearl Harbor on Japan's D-Day will be delayed until after the war.

This conclusion was voiced after the Senate Judiciary committee voted a full year's extension of the time for filing charges.

Not only could Congress vote a further extension, said Senator Chandler (D-Ky), but even the institution of charges would not mean that the courts martial or prosecutions in civil court would have to be started immediately.

The Navy opposes immediate trials on the ground they would interfere with the war effort, taking officers away from battle duties to testify.

The committee, however, amended the resolution extending the time limit to direct the secretaries of War and Navy "to proceed forthwith with an investigation into the facts surrounding the catastrophe" and "thereafter in their discretion to commence such proceedings against such persons as the facts may justify."

Acting Chairman Hatch (D-NM), agreed with Chandler that the practical effect of today's action, if ratified by Congress, would be to delay until after the war any proceedings against Rear Admiral Husband E. Kimmel and Maj. Gen. Walter C. Short, entrusted with Hawaiian defense on Dec. 7, 1941, and possibly other military, naval or civilian personnel who might have been involved.

Maj. Gen. J. P. Lucas Given New Assignment

Washington, June 1 (AP)—Maj. Gen. John P. Lucas has been given a "new and important" assignment, Secretary Stimpson said today, adding that details would be announced later.

General Lucas, whose home is in Charleston, W. Va., commanded the forces on the Anzio beachhead originally, Stimson said, later returning to this country. He went overseas at the time of the North African operations and in September, 1943, assumed command of a corps immediately after the establishment of the Allied beachhead at Salerno, Italy.

He was awarded the Distinguished Service Medal for his leadership of that corps in the advance northward through rugged mountain terrain and across formidable river areas.

Negro Air Squadron Chief Reports Score

Washington, June 1 (AP)—Major George S. Roberts, of Fairwood, W. Va., 25-year-old commander of the all-Negro 99th Fighter Squadron, said today his outfit has flown all types of combat missions—bomber, escort, dive bombing, patrol for beachheads and strafing—since it went into action in North Africa a year ago.

The squadron, now doing close support of Allied ground forces in Italy, has shot down 17 enemy planes, scored three probables and damaged six other planes in more than 3,000 combat sorties.

Capt. Charles B. Hall, of Brizal, Ind., is the present high scorer for the squadron, Roberts said, with three enemy planes to his credit.

WOMEN FACING DRAFT

Washington, June 1 (A. P.).—Drafting of single, unemployed women between 20 and 35 into the armed forces was proposed in legislation introduced today by Representative Celler (D.-N. Y.).

"With 590,000 single women in the country between 20 and 35 who are neither employed nor seeking work," Mr. Celler said in an accompanying statement, "No reason whatsoever exists why the women's branches of the armed services must go begging for recruits.

"If no argument or plea of our Secretary of War, of the commanding officers in and out of combat areas can convince the women of America of such need, then let the law do so."

U. S. To Get Honduras Labor

Washington, June 1 (AP)—The War Manpower Commission said today that it has arranged to bring 1,000 workers to the United States from British Honduras to combat the manpower shortage in the lumber industry.

Says Only Low-cost Garments Go Abroad

Washington, June 1 (A. P.).—Foreign Economic Administrator Leo T. Crowley said today that clothing the Government is supplying for distribution in Europe is of a moderate-cost type only and designed to provide needed garments "with a minimum impact against the civilian supply of this country."

Mr. Crowley's statement was presented to Congress by Chairman Bloom (D.-N. Y.) of the House Foreign Relations Committee in reply to contentions by Representative Hartley (R.-N. J.) that so many high-quality seersucker dresses and other garments were being sent abroad that woman in this country were unable to buy them.

States 'Want to Be Left Alone' On Jobless Problems, Senate Told

WASHINGTON, June 1.—(AP) Representatives of eight states today told a Senate Finance subcommittee that the states "want to be left alone" on unemployment compensation problems during the reconversion period.

Their testimony on post-war planning was uniform in declaring that state reserves are adequate to meet anticipated needs, and there is no sense of "wasting Federal funds where they are neither desired nor needed."

The eight states represented were Connecticut, Rhode Island, Kansas, North Carolina, Tennessee, New Hampshire, Alabama, and Massachusetts.

In presenting a united front against "federalization," the spokesmen contended that "wherever there is Federal money, there is Federal control," and agreed on these points:

Federal employes not now covered by unemployment compensation provisions should be made eligible, with the Federal government reimbursing states for whatever payments are made.

Returning soldiers should be provided for separately as in the "GI" bill.

Firms employing under eight workers should be brought into unemployment compensation.

Federal extension of compensation on a long-term basis would interfere with a "return to productive occupations."

The employment service, "loaned to the government" during the war, should be returned to the states.

Migratory workers earning benefits in one state should be entitled to those benefits if they "go home" to other states.

SECRETARY PERKINS URGES INDUSTRIAL PEACE

BOSTON, June 1. — (AP) Secretary of Labor Frances Perkins tonight called for industrial peace "while the nation is at war" and asserted that "there have been altogether too many wildcat stoppages of work."

Mrs. Perkins told the delegates at the International Ladies Garment Workers union convention that despite the recent number of "wild-cat" walkouts the no-strike pledge of labor and the no-lockout pledge of management has been maintained at a rate of better than 99 per cent.

"These strikes have been called without the knowledge or sanction of responsible leadership," she said, "and have not lasted because leaders of labor have cooperated with the conciliation service of the Department of Labor and National War Labor board in adjusting their differences."

"When American boys are fighting and dying that we may have peace and well being and when there exists fair and proper machinery for the settlement of disputes, no strike is justified," Mrs. Perkins told the union representatives.

Also Will Award D. S. M. to Ford and General Arnold

MANCHESTER, N. H., June 1 (AP).—The Distinguished Service Medal of the American Legion will be awarded posthumously to Secretary of the Navy Frank Knox in recognition of his service to the nation, Legion officials disclosed today.

General H. H. Arnold, chief of the Army Air Forces, and Henry Ford also will receive the medal.

WASHINGTON, June 1 (AP).—Award of letters of commendation to the naval and marine aides of Secretary Knox was announced by the Navy today. They are Captain Lyman Spencer Perry, naval aide, and Major John Herman Dillon, confidential assistant and marine aide.

Nazis Laughed as Boats Capsized Says Passenger on Refugee Ship

JUN 21944

PHILADELPHIA, June 1—(AP) A brown-haired baby girl, born in the Pyrenees mountains when her Polish parents were fleeing from Nazi-occupied France, will never know what life means in a free land.

When a German submarine ordered the refugee ship Serpa Pinto emptied of all passengers, 16-month-old Beatrice Trapunski was wrapped in a blanket as her mother, Ava, climbed with her into a lifeboat. The small craft bobbled on the surface. Then came a strong backwash from the ship and the lifeboat overturned.

Child Disappears

When the mother reappeared on the surface, her arms were empty. The child was never found. She was one of the three persons who lost their lives in the incident.

The story of Beatrice was told today by Murray Levine, executive director of the Jewish Immigrant Aid society, who talked with the mother and father before they and 72 other refugees were put on a sealed train for Canada.

The refugees, leaving the ship in little groups, told through interpreters of the months they had spent in Lisbon waiting for the papers that would get them passage to North America.

They told how one day the papers came. Then they said good bye to Lisbon and boarded the Serpa Pinto, thinking they were making a safe voyage to freedom.

Panic Grips Ship

"Then this happened," said one of the refugees. He described the panic when the U-boat halted the refugee ship 600 miles northeast of Bermuda last Friday midnight.

"We were frightened. The Germans sent an officer on board. He lined us up in the salon; some tried to hide; they were found. Then the Nazis said they would torpedo the ship in 20 minutes." They let the ship proceed, however, after consulting Berlin by radio.

The U-boat's crew seemed to consider the whole episode a joke, laughing when the lifeboats capsized, the refugees said, and making no attempt to help those thrown into the water.

First off the ship today was the Rev. Luiz Gonzaga Mendoza, 24, an American citizen, who said he was going to Fall River, Mass., to be ordained Saturday in the Roman Catholic Diocese there.

Separated From Children

Two years ago, in the wartime confusion in Austria, Eugene and Maria Lowy became separated from their children, who were brought later to America. The family was reunited last night.

Mrs. Mary Botelho, who expects a baby this month, was born in this country 21 years ago. Her husband, Juan, is still in Portugal. "I am glad my baby is going to be born here," she said.

Train, a Power Plant, Turned Over to Russia

BERWICK, Pa., June 1 (AP).—A mobile steam power plant which can be run into war-devastated towns to meet emergency needs was turned over to the Soviet government today at the American Car and Foundry Company.

The plant is in the form of a ten-car train, and is the first of a large number to be built. It was accepted by Lieutenant General L. C. Rudenke, chairman of the Soviet Government Purchasing Commission in the United States.

Within eight hours of its arrival at a designated point, the plant can be ready to provide 3,000 kilowatts of electric power.

ST. LOUIS TIED UP BY BUS, CAR STRIKE

Operators Shout Down WLB Director, Other Speakers at Mass Meeting.

ST. LOUIS, June 1 — (AP) A mass meeting of striking bus and street car operators broke up in confusion tonight after Paul Nachtman, regional director of the War Labor board, and other speakers were shouted down when they called on the men to end their tieup of the city's transportation system.

"You have me hamstrung and tied until you go back to work," Nachtman told the strikers. Although union officials had hoped to take a vote on ending the walkout, the only definite action was an agreement to meet again tomorrow morning.

Previously a conference in Mayor Aloys P. Kaufmann's office had failed to settle the unauthorized strike as thousands of St. Louisans, tired and perspiring on the hottest day of the year, managed to get home from work on foot or in automobiles and trucks.

Spontaneous sharing-the-ride carried workers to their jobs in war plants, factories and offices this morning and the same cooperative spirit was displayed by motorists in the closing-hour rush.

Employes in the downtown district waited patiently at the curbs for empty seats in passing trucks and automobiles. Virtually every private car was in operation and police said the traffic congestion was "worse than before the war."

The gasoline rationing board announced that emergency certificates would be issued through business firms, but an official of the Office of Defense Transportation warned a continuation of the strike for three or four days would exhaust the city's gasoline supply.

The department stores equipped their fleets of delivery trucks with folding chairs to take their employes home, and a number of other firms hired trucks or closed early to ease the rush-hour crush and give their workers ample opportunity to find means of transportation.

Rickenbacker Critical

NEW ORLEANS, June 1 (AP).—Captain Eddie Rickenbacker, president of Eastern Air Lines, criticized today what he termed indecision of American leaders in formulating a policy of international aviation.

"While American leaders are making no headway on the issues of monopoly versus competition, other countries are shaping up their programs for post-war international air transportation," he said said in an interview.

Skipper Tells How Ship Grounded Off California

The Henry Bergh Hit Farr Allon Shoal in Dense Fog

SAN FRANCISCO, June 1 (AP).—The Liberty ship Henry Bergh, loaded with more than 1,000 Pacific war veterans, grated aground twenty seconds after a Farallon Islands shoal loomed ahead in a dense Golden Gate fog, Captain Joseph C. Chambers said today.

The ship struck a submerged rock amidships yesterday and "started to break up immediately," the ship's skipper said in an interview. "With the greatest calm," the crew of forty and the returning troops poured over the side into rafts and lifeboats.

Captain Chambers, who lives in San Gabriel, Calif., said the first warning he had that the 10,500-ton vessel was headed aground was three bells from the bow lookout. The ship had been moving slowly through the fog for three hours.

The Navy said two men were injured and thirty-five others needed hospital treatment after immersion in the cold waters. All aboard were rescued.

Nine hundred were landed on the main southeast Farallon Island, on which is a lighthouse, Captain Chambers said. He paid "the highest compliment" to the merchant crew and troops for their cool conduct in the emergency.

AIDE OF STASSEN HITS 'SILENCE' OF G.O.P. OPPONENTS

By JACK BELL
Associated Press Staff Writer

Protesting against what he called "hush-a-bye" politics, a supporter of Lieut. Comdr. Harold E. Stassen declared last night it is "lamentable" that many people are better informed on the activities of comic strip characters than they are on "the qualifications and opinions of all possible presidential candidates."

The complaint was voiced by John B. Quinn, who managed the campaign in which Stassen won the Nebraska preferential primary. A substantial write-in vote was recorded for Gov. Thomas E. Dewey in that contest.

30. 24 — 15859

Quinn said that either because of political expediency or of necessity, the majority of the principal presidential contenders do not talk about political subjects.

"This creates an unusual situation wherein the public, generally speaking, is inadequately informed," he said in a statement issued in Washington.

Bricker to Press On

Gov. John W. Bricker of Ohio, an announced presidential aspirant, declared at the Hershey, Pa., Governors Conference this week that all candidates ought to make their position known and speak out on the issues, a statement generally looked upon as a direct challenge to Governor Dewey. Most Republican governors left the conference expressing the conviction that Dewey will win top place on their party's ticket, with Gov. Earl Warren of California as his running mate.

This belief was by no means shared by Bricker, however, as he carried his campaign into New Jersey. The Ohioan declared at a press conference in Trenton that he would continue his quest for the presidential nomination "right on down to the convention deliberations."

The New York governor seemed likely to collect some more convention strength in Indiana, where Bricker supporters also hope to share in the 29-member delegation. Twenty-two of the delegates were selected at district caucuses last night. Seven at-large delegates are being chosen today.

The Indiana Republicans also were to select nominees today for senator and governor, with Homer E. Capehart, Indianapolis manufacturer, and James M. Tucker, former Secretary of State, seeking the Senate seat vacated by the death of the late Frederick Van Nuys, Democrat. Ralph Gates, lawyer and G.O.P. state chairman, was unopposed for the governorship nomination.

There were rumblings of discontent among Maryland Democrats as they convened to pick an 18-vote delegate slate which some leaders want uninstructed to give the state a free hand in the selection of a vice presidential candidate if President Roosevelt is a fourth term nominee.

F.D.R. May Back Wallace

While some Maryland leaders were reported believing the state should back a "conservative" vice presidential candidate, reports spread in congressional circles that President Roosevelt already has given a green light to Vice President Wallace as second place running mate.

Friends said Wallace took with him on his trip to Siberia and China what he believed to be tacit assurances from the President that he will be on the ticket again.

In Washington, John U. Barr of New Orleans, national chairman of the Draft-Byrd-for-President campaign, described the Virginia senator as the "outstanding choice" of Texas and South Carolina Democrats. Barr said he had talked with Senator Byrd and found him "keenly interested" in southern political developments, "but without any desire to become an aspirant for the presidency."

LONDON, FRIDAY, JUNE 2-(AP)-THE UNITED STATES WILL NOT PARTICIPATE IN COMING CONFERENCES BETWEEN GENERAL CHARLES DE GAULLE AND THE BRITISH GOVERNMENT UNDER PRESENT PLANS, IT IS LEARNED, AND THIS DISCLOSURE STIRRED FRESH COMMENT ON THE FRENCH SITUATION IN LONDON NEWSPAPERS TODAY.

ALGIERS DISPATCHES HAVE REPORTED THE LEADER OF THE FRENCH COMMITTEE OF NATIONAL LIBERATION INSISTED THAT WASHINGTON MUST BE REPRESENTED IF HE IS TO MAKE THE TRIP FROM ALGIERS TO LONDON.

THE AMERICAN DECISION WAS LEARNED AMID INDICATIONS THAT GENERAL DWIGHT D.EISENHOWER WILL HAVE THE FINAL WORD ON PROBLEMS OF ADMINISTRATING THE LIBERATED AREAS OF FRANCE AND WITH WHOM THE ALLIES ARE TO DEAL. THIS SUGGESTED THERE WOULD BE NO CLEARCUT DIRECTIVE FROM ALLIED POLITICAL CHIEFS BEYOND THE MANDATE AGAINST DOING BUSINESS WITH VICHYITES.

A DEMAND THAT THE UNITED STATES CLEAR UP HER "AMBIGUOUS" ATTITUDE TOWARD DE GAULLE WAS VOICED BY THE DAILY MAIL, WHICH SAID THAT "THE TIME HAS COME WHEN WE FEEL ENTITLED TO ASK FOR A CLEAR UNDERSTANDING."

CONCERN ALSO WAS EXPRESSED BY THE NEWS-CHRONICLE IN WARNING THAT "UNLESS SOME SORT OF AN AGREEMENT IS REACHED WITH DE GAULLE ABOUT THE PART THE NATIONAL COMMITTEE IS TO PLAY IN THE LIBERATION OF FRANCE THERE WILL ALMOST CERTAINLY BE CONFUSION WORSE CONFOUNDED IN LIBERATED AREAS."

STOCKHOLM, JUNE 1-(AP)-TWO RESPONSIBLE SWEDISH BUSINESS MEN WHO HAVE RETURNED FROM AN EXTENDED TRIP IN GERMANY SAID TODAY GERMANS WERE GROWING WORRIED ABOUT THE POSSIBILITY THAT NAZI FORCES WOULD RUN AMOK AFTER THE ALLIED INVASION, EXPECTED IN BERLIN TO OPEN THIS MONTH.

ALLIED SILENCE ON POST-WAR PLANS FOR THE REICH ALSO WAS REPORTED BY THESE MEN, WHO CANNOT BE IDENTIFIED BY NAME, TO BE CAUSING CONCERN WITHIN HITLER'S ROOFLESS "EUROPEAN FORTRESS."

"FOR THE FIRST TIME, BERLINERS ARE ANXIOUSLY DISCUSSING WHAT WILL HAPPEN TO GERMANY AFTER THE WAR," THEY SAID IN A STATEMENT.

(THE ALLIED TERMS FOR GERMANY ARE UNCONDITIONAL SURRENDER. ONE OF THE OLDEST OF NAZI TRICKS IS PLANTING "FEELERS" IN NEUTRAL NATIONS AND IT MAY BE THAT THE SWEDISH BUSINESSMEN, IN REPORTING ON GERMANY AS THEY SAW IT, UNCONSCIOUSLY RELAY AN IDEA WHICH PROPAGANDA MINISTER PAUL JOSEPH GOEBBELS WOULD LIKE TO GET ACROSS--A BID FOR SPECIFIC CONDITIONS.)

JUN 21944

THE SWEDES SAID IT WAS NO EXAGGERATION TO SAY BERLIN RESIDENTS HOPED THAT THE WESTERN INVASION WOULD END THE WAR; THAT MANY WERE PREDICTING AN ARMISTICE WITHIN THREE OR FOUR MONTHS AFTER THE LANDINGS.

(THIS STATEMENT ALSO IS NOT OUT OF LINE WITH NAZI PROPAGANDA POLICY. THE AIM IS CREATION OF OVER-CONFIDENCE AMONG THE ALLIES.)

"MANY FEAR THAT, WITH THE END OF THE WAR IN SIGHT, THE NAZIS WILL RUN AMOK BEFORE THE ALLIES CAN TAKE A HAND," THE STATEMENT SAID.

"HEINRICH HIMMLER IS FORMING MORE AND MORE SS REGIMENTS AND RECRUITING MORE MEN FOR THE GESTAPO ON THE HOME FRONT. PEOPLE BELIEVE THE SS WILL BE GIVEN A FREE REIN WHEN THE DECISIVE BATTLE BEGINS TO GO AGAINST THE NAZIS.

"THEY EXPECT FIRST THE WIPING OUT (OF INMATES) OF JEWISH GHETTOS, CONCENTRATION CAMPS AND POLITICAL PRISONS.

"PARTIAL CONFIRMATION OF THEIR FEARS IS SEEN IN GOEBBELS' RECENT SIGNAL TO GERMANS TO LYNCH AMERICAN AIRMEN WITH THE PROMISE THAT THE GOVERNMENT WOULD CLOSE ITS EYES TO THESE 'SPONTANEOUS MANIFESTATIONS.'"

OF GERMANY GENERALLY THE TRAVELERS SAID RAILWAY TRAFFIC WAS ALWAYS DELAYED; TRAINS ARE OVERCROWDED; DISTRIBUTION BREAKDOWNS HAVE RESULTED IN DETERIORATION OF THE FOOD SUPPLY; THE BLACK MARKETS ARE FLOURISHING; CIVILIAN CLOTHING IS POOR AND RAGGED UNIFORMS ARE NOTED ON SOLDIERS ON LEAVE.

IF THESE BOYS SAY THEY ARE GOING TO ROME I FEEL PERFECTLY SAFE IN GIVING THEM ANY MESSAGES I MIGHT HAVE FOR THE POPE. THEY DO WHAT THEY SAY THEY WILL DO.

LAST NIGHT THEY OBVIOUSLY WERE RELIEVED WHEN TOLD WHAT THEIR MISSION WOULD BE. THEY PREVIOUSLY HAD UNDERSTOOD IT PROBABLY WOULD BE FLATLAND FIGHTING, WHICH MOST OUTFITS PREFER. BUT NOT THIS CRACK GANG OF HILL SCRAMBLING DOUGHBOYS WHO WRYLY NICKNAMED THEMSELVES "THE MOUNTAINEERS," BECAUSE MOST OF THEIR TOUGHEST FIGHTING IN ITALY HAS BEEN DONE IN THE RARIFIED ATMOSPHERE OF THE TOPMOST CRAGS.

"WE KNOW THE MOUNTAINS," SAID CAPT.CADER C.TERRELL, AMARILLO, TEX., AS WE NEARED THE JUMPING OFF POINT, AND THE 25-YEAR-OLD COMMUNICATIONS OFFICER THUS SIMPLY STATED SENTIMENTS OF THE ENTIRE OUTFIT.

BEHIND GERMAN LINES SOUTH OF ROME, MAY 31-(DELAYED)-(AP)-HUNDRED OF UNITED STATES INFANTRYMEN, LED BY A RAWBONED, BEMOUSTACHED COLONEL, INFILTRATED GERMAN LINES AND RESERVE POSITIONS ABOVE VELLETRI BY MOONLIGHT LAST NIGHT WITHOUT FIRING A SHOT.

A CIRCUITOUS 15-MILE HIKE, BROKEN BY CRAWLING, SCRAMBLING AND HIDING FROM ENEMY PATROLS, ESTABLISHED THEM AT DAWN TODAY IN POSITIONS ON A HIGH RAZORBACK RIDGE OF MONTE ARTEMISION. BETWEEN THEM AND NAZI-HELD VELLETRI, AN UNDETERMINED NUMBER OF GERMANS ARE TRAPPED.

TO THE NORTH IS ROME.

I MADE THE HIKE WITH THE TROOPS BUT TONIGHT, 24 HOURS SINCE THE START AND THREE MILES BEHIND THE GERMAN LINES, I STILL CAN HARDLY BELIEVE IT.

THE FEW GERMAN OUTPOSTS AND SENTRIES THE DOUGHBOYS COULD NOT BYPASS THEY "ELIMINATED WITHOUT NOISE," FOLLOWING THEIR ORDERS.

VETERANS OF SOME OF THE TOUGHEST FIGHTING AMONG THE CRAGS OF SOUTHERN ITALY, THEY CALL THEMSELVES "THE MOUNTAINEERS."

CAPT.CADER C.TERRELL OF AMARILLO, TEX., 25-YEAR-OLD COMMUNICATIONS OFFICER, SAID: "WE KNOW MOUNTAINS."

JUN 21944

"WHY, CAPTAIN, YOU DON'T CALL THESE LITTLE HILLS MOUNTAINS, DO YOU?" WHISPERED M/SGT.CONRAD C.SNYDER, 26, OF MARLINGTON, WEST VA., TERRELL'S COMMUNICATIONS CHIEF.

SNYDER HAS BEEN THROUGH TOO MUCH WITH THE DARK-EYED TEXAS OFFICER TO WORRY MUCH ABOUT MILITARY FORMALITIES. THE CAPTAIN JUST GRINNED.

"SHUCKS, COMPARED TO MONTE LUNGO OR MAGGIORE THESE BABIES ARE JUST A COUPLE OF PIMPLES," SAID CORP.JEAN L.SULLIVAN, 25, RADIO CODE EXPERT.

PFC.VOLLEY R.GRADER, 26, OF AMARILLO SAID: "YOU GUYS BETTER SAVE YOUR BREATH FOR CLIMBING."

IT WAS TOUGH GOING EVEN BEFORE WE REACHED THE JUMPING OFF POINT JUST AT THE EDGE OF THE COMBAT LINE.

AT AN OLD ITALIAN FARMHOUSE WHEN WE PAUSED FOR AN OFFICERS' CONFERENCE ONE YOUNG SOLDIER ASKED THE COMMANDER'S PERMISSION TO DROP OUT.

THE COLONEL TERSELY TOLD HIM: "OKAY."

THEN HE LIGHTED A CIGARETTE, THE LAST HE WAS TO SMOKE FOR MANY HOURS, LOOKED OVER THE GRIM GROUP IN THE HOUSE WITH SLITTED EYES AND SAID HARSHLY: "ANYBODY ELSE WHO WANTS TO GET OUT OF THIS WAR BETTER SOUND OFF NOW. THIS IS YOUR LAST CHANCE."

NO ONE REPLIED.

THE COLONEL GROUND OUT HIS CIGARETTE, BLEW OUT THE CONFERENCE CANDLE AND STUCK IT IN A POCKET AND LED THE WAY OUT TO WHERE THE HUNDREDS OF SOLDIERS WERE RESTING.

SMALL ARMS FIRE RATTLED AHEAD. THERE WAS A STEADY RUMBLE OF ARTILLERY.

THAT WAS THE START OF THE MOST FANTASTIC MARCH I EVER HOPE TO MAKE.

THE LEADER OF OUR COMPANY WAS SANDY-HAIRED LT.JAMES R.CROCKER, 27, OF PETALUMA, CALIF., A RECONNAISSANCE EXPERT.

THE SHUFFLE OF SOLDIERS' FOOTSTEPS WAS BARELY AUDIBLE. THE NIGHT SMELLED RICHLY OF SPRING.

PFC.DICK KENNEDY, 19, OF 3611 GRAND BOULEVARD, EAST CHICAGO, IND., GESTURED IN THE DIRECTION OF MACHINE-GUN TRACER BULLETS FLASHING A FEW YARDS AWAY AND WHISPERED: "THEY'RE KEEPING THEM BUSY WHILE WE SLIP THROUGH."

SINGLEFILE, THE COMPANY OF MORE THAN 100 MEN MOVED ACROSS A SHELL-PITTED NO-MAN'S-LAND. ABOUT 20 WERE AHEAD OF ME, THE REST BEHIND.

WE WERE JUST SLIPPING DOWN THE SOFT DIRT ROW OF A VINEYARD WHEN AN AMERICAN ANTI-AIRCRAFT GUN CUT LOOSE BEHIND US. GERMAN PARACHUTE FLARES LIT THE SKY. OUR COLUMN DROPPED FLAT. GERMAN PLANES DRONED OVER AND BOMBED AND STRAFED THE AMERICAN LINE BEHIND US. WE COULD HEAR THE CRIES OF THE WOUNDED, BUT COULD NOT TURN BACK TO HELP THEM.

THE FLARES DIED OUT. WE CRAWLED A WHILE. I KEPT THINKING ABOUT MINES AND FLINCHED EVERYTIME MY HAND TOUCHED SOMETHING METALLIC. THEN WE WALKED AGAIN.

LT.COL.SAMUEL S.GRAHAM, STOCKY, 48-YEAR-OLD FORMER COLLEGE PROFESSOR OF HUNTSVILLE, TEX., WHO HAS TWICE TURNED DOWN CHANCES OF GOING HOME ON ROTATION, KEPT MOVING UP AND DOWN THE COLUMN TO SEE THAT EVERYBODY WAS ALLRIGHT.
GRAHAM SAID: "IT'S THE FIRST TIME IN HISTORY THIS MANY MEN EVER INFILTRATED ENEMY LINES."
JUST AHEAD OF ME, WITH WALKIE-TALKIE RADIOS STRAPPED TO THEIR BACKS, WERE CORP.VERNE DOUGLAS, 23, OF LONG BEACH, CALIF., AND PFC. EUGENE T.OMER, 19, OF MILWAUKEE, WIS.
THE SIGHT OF AN ENTIRE COLUMN OF SILENT SOLDIERS RISING OUT OF SMALL DRAWS AND CRAWLING OVER RIDGES OUTLINED BY THE MOON WAS EERIE. WARILY THEY SLIPPED THROUGH THE NIGHT AND SWARMED OVER THE WHOLE RIDGE OF THE MAIN RANGE THIS SIDE OF ROME.
THE ADVANCE WAS STOPPED AND THE MEN DUG IN FOR A COUPLE OF HOURS TO CHECK POSITIONS OF COMPANIES AROUND US BEFORE DAWN.
THREE PRISONERS WERE CAPTURED SILENTLY AT A MOUNTAINTOP OBSERVATION POST.
SUDDENLY THE SOUND OF AN AMERICAN AUTOMATIC RIFLE RIPPED THROUGH THE MORNING MISTS AS THE SUN ROSE.
THAT MEANT TWO THINGS: THAT THE INFILTRATION WAS COMPLETE AND THAT THE NEED FOR SILENCE NOW WAS ENDED. CARTRIDGES CLICKED INTO THE CHAMBERS OF COUNTLESS CARBINES. DELOUSING OF THE ALBAN HILLS WAS UNDER WAY.

WITH THE FIFTH ARMY ATTACKING HIGHWAY SIX, ITALY, JUNE 1-(AP)-AMERICAN INFANTRY AND ARMOR ADVANCED SLOWLY TOWARD HIGHWAY SIX--THE VIA CASILINA--TODAY AGAINST THE MOST DESPERATE RESISTANCE YET PUT UP BY THE HERMANN GOERING DIVISION, PERHAPS THE STRONGEST AND MOST FANATICAL GERMAN FORCE FIGHTING IN ITALY.
THE ROAD IS UNDER SUCH CONSTANT SHELLFIRE IT VIRTUALLY IS CLOSED TO THE GERMANS BUT THE GOERING DIVISION, WHICH NOW STYLES ITSELF A "PANZER PARACHUTE" UNIT, IS ASTRIDE IT AND HOLDING TENACIOUSLY, APPARENTLY IN FEAR THAT ONCE THE AMERICANS REACH THE ROAD THEY MAY BREAK THROUGH TO ROME BY THIS ROUTE. HIGHWAY SIX ENTERS ROME A MILE WEST OF THE LATERAN GATE, WHERE THE APPIAN WAY RUNS INTO IT.
THE ATTACK STARTED WITH AN ARTILLERY BARRAGE IN WHICH ALMOST 10,000 SHELLS WERE HURLED AT THE GERMANS IN THE SECTOR. THEY REPLIED WITH ARTILLERY AND MORTAR FIRE, INCLUDING SOME SCREAMING MEEMIES, ONLY A FRACTION AS INTENSE AS THE AMERICAN BARRAGE BUT NEVERTHELESS FEARSOME.
NEAR HIGH GROUND KNOWN AS LIPER'S HILL SOME GERMAN MARK VI TANKS HIDDEN IN THE WOODS PERMITTED AMERICAN INFANTRY TO PASS THEM AND THEN ASSAULTED THEM FROM THE REAR. COMING FROM THE WOODS THE TANKS MILLED ABOUT IN A NECK HIGH CORNFIELD, TAKING CONSIDERABLE TOLL OF THE AMERICANS UNTIL A TANK DESTROYER UNIT WENT TO WORK ON THEM WITH ANTI-TANK GUNS AND KNOCKED OUT THREE.
PLATOONS COMMANDED BY LTS.THOMAS P.WELCH, GENEVA, N.Y., AND WILLIAM BOWMAN, BOSTON, MASS., WERE CREDITED WITH THESE VICTORIES.
AMERICAN TANKS COVERING THE INFANTRY FLANK ALSO KNOCKED OUT A MARK VI AS A SHERMAN COMMANDED BY LT.ALTON E.JOHNSON, PROVIDENCE, R.I., SENT A SHELL SQUARELY INTO IT. THIS FORMATION WAS COMMANDED BY CAPT. FREDERICK MINER, YONKERS, N.Y.
FOUR AMERICAN TANKS WERE KNOCKED OUT JUST BEFORE DUSK LAST NIGHT BUT THEIR CREWS SUFFERED NO SERIOUS CASUALTIES. THEY WERE PART OF THE FORMATION WHICH MOVED FORWARD TO OCCUPY CERTAIN GROUND IN PREPARATION FOR TODAY'S ATTACK AND THEY RAN INTO A SUPERIOR FORCE OF CONCEALED GERMAN TANKS.
AMONG THE SOLDIERS IN THE KNOCKED-OUT TANKS WHO TODAY WERE NONE THE WORSE FOR THEIR EXPERIENCE WERE PFC.JOHN GUARDALABENE, 241 CARVER ST., PITTSBURGH, PA., PFC.HERMAN J.SEMON, 1712 NORTH ARTESIAN AVE., CHICAGO, ILL., PVT.JUNIOR CHAN, BAXTER SPRINGS, KAS., AND PVT. FRANK CHEBINIAK, 6 JONES ST., BINGHAMTON, N.Y.
AS ONE DETACHMENT OF INFANTRY WAS BEING CUT UP BY MORTAR FIRE CAPT. EDWIN A.FRONK, SALEM, ORE., ORDERED A SMOKE SCREEN LAID TO CONCEAL IT FROM THE ENEMY.
HE TOLD LT.DAVID J.SALASIN, ATLANTIC CITY, N.J., SMOKE SCREEN SPECIALIST, JUST WHAT HE WANTED AS ONE MIGHT DESCRIBE TO A TAILOR THE KIND OF SUIT DESIRED. THE TWO STUDIED THE TERRAIN AND TESTED THE WINDS. THEN SALASIN SET OUT TO FIRE JUST THE RIGHT AMOUNT OF SMOKE SHELLS AT THE RIGHT PLACES TO AFFORD THE DOUGHBOYS COVER AS THEY ADVANCED.

WITH THE FIFTH ARMY SOUTH OF ROME JUNE 1-(AP)-AMERICAN INFANTRY HAS BROKEN INTO THE GERMANS' VELLETRI-VALMONTONE LINE AND OCCUPIED STRATEGIC HIGH POINTS IN THE ALBAN HILLS NORTHEAST AND NORTHWEST OF VELLETRI.
THE INFANTRYMEN OPENED A GAP IN THE LINE EAST OF VELLETRI AND FOUGHT THEIR WAY 3,000 YARDS AHEAD AND OCCUPIED A POINT ON MOUNT PESCHIO RIDGE, ONE OF THE HIGHEST POINTS IN THE ALBAN HILLS.
ADDITIONAL ELEMENTS MOVED UP AND CONSOLIDATED POSITIONS ON THESE DOMINATING HEIGHTS WHILE OTHER U.S.TROOPS OCCUPIED HIGH GROUND NEAR THE LAKE OF NEMI, NORTHWEST OF VELLETRI.

THIS LATTER GAIN BROUGHT THE FIFTH ARMY TO 15 AIRLINE MILES FROM ROME'S GATE OF ST.JOHN LATERAN, THROUGH WHICH THE APPIAN WAY ENTERS THE CAPITAL.
FROM THE NEWLY WON HEIGHTS THE DOUGHBOYS GOT THEIR FIRST GLIMPSES OF ROME--A HAZY MASS OF BUILDINGS IN THE DISTANCE FROM THE MIDST OF WHICH ROSE THE DOME OF ST.PETER'S, ITS LINES JUST BARELY VISIBLE.
NINE MILES WEST OF VELLETRI AN AMERICAN ARMORED FORCE CROSSED FOSSO DI CAMPOLEONE, ONE OF THE PONTINE PLAINS MAIN DRAINAGE CANALS, BUT ENCOUNTERED STIFF GERMAN OPPOSITION.
FARTHER WEST TOWARD THE COAST, BRITISH TROOPS OF THE FIFTH ARMY ARE WELL ACROSS THE MOLETTA RIVER AND ARE ADVANCING NORTH TOWARD AGAINST STRONG ENEMY MACHINE GUN AND MORTAR FIRE.
IN THE LANUVIO SECTOR ADVANCING TROOPS ENCOUNTERED THE ENEMY INSTALLED IN DUGOUTS AND CONCRETE PILLBOXES, EQUIPPED WITH ANTI-TANK GUNS AND LIGHT ARTILLERY.
OTHER ELEMENTS OF THE FIFTH ARMY PUSHED OUT FARTHER TOWARD THE VALMONTONE AREA ON THE ARMY'S RIGHT FLANK. THOUGH HIGHWAY SIX HAS BEEN UNDER ALMOST INCESSANT ARTILLERY FIRE IN THE VALMONTONE AREA FOR THE PAST TWO DAYS, THE GERMANS ARE DOING THEIR UTMOST TO HOLD THE ROAD AND HAVE BEEN ABLE TO SLIP SOME TRAFFIC THROUGH AT NIGHT.
THEIR MAIN ESCAPE ROUTE FROM THE SACCO VALLEY, WHERE THE EIGHTH ARMY IS PRESSING ON THEM FROM THE SOUTHEAST, HAS BEEN BY A ROAD RUNNING NORTHWARD THROUGH SUBIACO, WHICH JOINS WITH THE VALLERIAN WAY RUNNING INTO ROME THROUGH TIVOLI.
ALLIED BOMBERS HAVE CAUGHT LONG DOUBLE LINES OF VEHICLES IN THE NARROW PASSES OF THIS ROAD AND HAVE ATTACKED THEM MERCILESSLY, LEAVING SCORES OF TRUCKS IN FLAMES AND BLOCKING THE ROAD FOR A TIME.

WITH THE CINESE-AMERICAN COMPOSITE WING ON THE HONAN FRONTTN
MAY 30-(DELAYED)-(AP)-THIS UNIQUE AIR FIGHTING ORGANIZATION FATHERED BY MAJ.GEN.CLAIRE L.CHENNAULT HAS THROWN A WRENCH INTO THE JAPANESE MILITARY MACHINE.

FLYING SIDE BY SIDE, SHARK-FACED P-40'S AND DEATH-LADEN B-25'S WITH CHINESE AND AMERICAN PILOTS KNOCKED OUT A GREAT PART OF THE ENEMY'S MOTORIZED TRANSPORT FOR THE HONAN PROVINCE DRIVE IN THE EARLY STAGES OF THE MONTH-OLD BATTLE. THEY MAY HAVE FORCED A CONSIDERABLE CHANGE IN THE ENEMY'S BATTLE PLAN.

JUN 21944

SUPPORTING CHINESE ARMIES BADLY EQUIPPED TO OPPOSE THE MECHANIZED AND MOTORIZED FOE, THE CACW SMASHED INTO TRUCKS AND TANKS ALIKE, AND MAY WELL HAVE BEEN A FACTOR IN FORCING THE JAPANESE INTO MAKING UNPLANNED NEW REINFORCEMENTS OF THEIR HONAN EXPEDITIONARY FORCE.

THE CACW IS CLEARLY MAINTAINING AERIAL SUPERIORITY IN CHINA'S FAVOR BETWEEN THE YELLOW AND YANGTZE RIVERS, ADDING WEIGHT TO THE QUESTION IN BURMA AND CHINA OF "WHAT'S BECOME OF THE JAPANESE AIR FORCE?"

JUN 21944

THE INTELLIGENCE BEHIND THE CACW SEES THE JAPANESE DRIVE AS AN ATTEMPT TO SEAL COMMUNICATIONS IN NORTH CENTRAL CHINA, OBVIATING RELIANCE ON THE INCREASIFGLY DANGEROUS YANGTZE RIVER FOR CENTRAL CHINA. THIS IS ALL A MEANS TO A GREATER END, A CAMPAIGN TO CLOSE THE HANKOW-CANTON RAILWAY GAP AND LOP OFF AMERICAN BASES IN EASTERN CHINA.

EASTERN CHINA BASES FROM WHICH THE 14TH AIR FORCE AND ITS TACTICAL APPENDAGE, THE CACW, HAS BEEN VIRTUALLY CONTROLLING THE ENEMY'S COASTWISE SHIPPING, WILL BE OF PRIME IMPORTANCE IN THE FULFILLMENT OF ADMIRAL CHESTER NIMITZ' PLEDGE OF DRIVING THROUGH TO CHINA.

FOR THE PAST FEW DAYS I HAVE BEEN LIVING WITH CHINESE AND AMERICAN AIRMEN ASSIGNED TO THE HONAN BATTLE AND WITNESSING THE TEAMWORK ACHIEVED BY THE TWO NATIONALITIES. THESE MEN, A COMPARATIVE HANDFUL, HAD ALREADY INFLICTED THOUSANDS OF CASUALTIES ON THE JAPANESE WHEN I REACHED THIS HEADQUARTERS BASE.

HERE I SAW A DIVIDEND BEING DECLARED ON HUNDREDS OF THOUSANDS OF DOLLARS INVESTED IN THE LONG TRAINING IN AMERICA AND INDIA FOR CHINESE FLIGHT PERSONNEL. I SAW AND VISITED WITH EAGER YOUNG CHINESE WHO STUDIED AIR WAR OVER THE DESERTS OF ARIZONA AND NEW MEXICO. I HEARD THEIR AMERICAN FLYING MATES AND SUPERIORS PRAISE THEM AS FIGHTERS WHOSE CARDINAL FAILING IS A DISREGARD OF THEIR OWN LIVES.

CHINESE PERSONNEL IN THE CACW IS NOW IN THE MAJORITY. THE CHINESE ARE STEADILY FILLING IN A PARALLEL STAFF SETUP, AND ALREADY HAVE CHINESE OFFICERS ALONGSIDE AMERICANS FOR THE MOST IMPORTANT COMMAND FUNCTIONS.

COL.WINSLOW CARROLL MORSE, 40, LOS ANGELES, CALIF., A NATIVE OF OVID, MICH., AND A MEMBER OF THE UNITED STATES AIR FORCE FOR 15 YEARS, COMMANDS THE CACW. THE VICE COMMANDER IS LT.COL.Y.F.WHANG, A VETERAN OF THE CHINESE AIR FORCE.

ADVANCED ALLIED HEADQUARTERS,NEW GUINEA,JUNE 1-(AP)-JAPANESE AMBUSH STRATEGY ON BIAK ISLAND IN THE SCHOUTENS FAILED, AN AUSTRALIAN CORRESPONDENT REPORTED TODAY FROM THE ISLAND.

"IT IS CLEAR," SAID FRED ALDRIDGE IN A DISPATCH TO AUSTRALIAN NEWSPAPERS, "THAT THE JAPANESE COUNTED ON THE AMERICANS DRIVING RAPIDLY ALONG THE COAST ROAD TO MOKMER AIRSTRIP AND LEAVING THEIR LINES OF COMMUNICATION VULNERABLE TO FLANK ATTACKS AND INFILTRATION FROM LIMESTONE RIDGES RISING 250 FEET.

"IT SEEMS NOW THAT THE JAPANESE FLED FROM BOSNEK (VILLAGE) TO STRENGTHEN THE SUBTERFUGE OF ANOTHER PUSHOVER LANDING. THEY WITHDREW TO LONG-PLANNED AND HEAVILY-DEFENDED POSITIONS NEAR THE AIRSTRIP, LEAVING A TRAIL OF STRONGPOINTS AND SNIPERS DOTTING THE RIDGE."

(THE AIRSTRIP IS A SHORT DISTANCE WEST OF BOSNEK, WHERE AMERICANS LANDED SATURDAY. TWO BATTALIONS PROCEEDED ALMOST WITHOUT OPPOSITION TOWARD THE AIRDROME, UNTIL A SUNDAY JAPANESE COUNTERATTACK PRECIPITATED TWO DAYS OF VICIOUS FIGHTING -- WITH WEAPONS RANGING FROM THE DEFENDERS' HEAVY ARTILLERY TO KNIVES.)

"THE AMERICANS HAVE THEIR BACKS UP," REPORTED ALDRIDGE. "THEY ARE FIGHTING MAGNIFICENTLY AND AS FEROCIOUSLY AS THE JAPANESE."

AUCKLAND, NEW ZEALAND, JUNE 1-(AP)-THE BACKBONE OF JAPANESE RESISTANCE IN THE PACIFIC HAS BEEN "SEVERELY BENT," AND IN THE SOUTH PACIFIC THEY HAVE LOST 150,000 MEN, 4,800 PLANES AND TOO MANY SHIPS TO COUNT, ADMIRAL WILLIAM F. HALSEY JR. TOLD A PRESS CONFERENCE YESTERDAY.

HALSEY WHO IS RETIRING AS ALLIED COMMANDER OF NAVAL FORCES IN THE SOUTH PACIFIC SAID IN THAT THEATER, INCLUDING BOUGAINVILLE, THE JAPANESE NOW HAVE ONLY ABOUT 15,000 MEN WITH NO MORE THAN 2,000 OF THEM EFFECTIVE.

"WE CAN SAY OF THE PACIFIC GENERALLY THAT IF THE JAP'S BACK IS NOT BROKEN, HIS SPINE IS SEVERELY BENT," THE ADMIRAL ASSERTED.

HALSEY SAID THAT 19 MONTHS AGO HE HIMSELF HAD "ONLY A SHOESTRING, BUT NOW THIS HAS GROWN TO A LARGE-SIZED BOOT," AND RECALLED THAT AFTER THE BATTLE OF THE SOLOMONS NOV. 13, 1942, HE HAD AVAILABLE JUST ONE DAMAGED CARRIER, ONE BATTLESHIP, ONE CRUISER AND A VERY FEW DESTROYERS.

"THE JAP IS REALLY A SMALL MAN AND CAN EASILY BE DISLODGED WITH OUR BIG BOOT," HE SAID.

U.S. PACIFIC FLEET HEADQUARTERS, PEARL HARBOR, JUNE 2-(AP)-AN UNPRECEDENTED SERIES OF LONG RANGE AIR BLOWS--A 2,400 MILE ROUNDTRIP STRIKE AT GUAM IN THE MARIANAS; BLASTS AT THE TRUK NAVAL BASE AND PONAPE IN THE CAROLINES; A NEW SMASH AT WAKE AND ANOTHER STAB INTO THE FAR NORTHERN KURILES--WERE ANNOUNCED TODAY BY ADM. CHESTER W. NIMITZ.

FROM ALL THESE HAZARDOUS UNDERTAKINGS, ALL PLANES RETURNED, A SPOKESMAN SAID.

(SUCH A WIDESPREAD SET OF BLOWS MIGHT HERALD THE IMPENDING OUTBREAK OF ANOTHER OFFENSIVE IN THE CENTRAL PACIFIC, TENDING AS THEY DO TO IMMOBILIZE JAPANESE DEFENSES AND POINTS OF RECONNAISSANCE OVER A VAST AREA).

THESE WERE THE REPORTS, COVERING A THREE-DAY PERIOD:

GUAM--BOMBED FOR THE THIRD TIME IN THE WAR BY LAND-BASED PLANES SUNDAY. ARMY LIBERATORS, RANGING 1,200 MILES WEST OF ENIWETOK IN THE MARSHALLS, BEAT OFF 10 JAPANESE INTERCEPTORS, PROBABLY BAGGING ONE. THE RAID OCCURRED THE SAME DAY THAT BOMBERS ALSO HIT SAIPAN IN THE MARIANAS, AN ATTACK PREVIOUSLY ANNOUNCED.

TRUK--HIT FOR THE FIRST TIME IN FORCE SINCE MAY 12 BY ARMY LIBERATORS TUESDAY. THEY STARTED A FIRE VISIBLE FOR 150 MILES.

PONAPE--RAIDED MORE THAN 20 TIMES IN MAY AND THE MOST BOMBED TARGET IN THE CENTRAL PACIFIC, IT WAS HIT TUESDAY BY ARMY MITCHELLS WHICH WENT AFTER GUN POSITIONS, RUNWAYS AND OTHER INSTALLATIONS.

WAKE--HIT BY RAIDING PLANES MORE THAN 20 TIMES SINCE JAPAN WRESTED IT FROM THE AMERICANS, IT WAS ATTACKED TUESDAY BY ARMY LIBERATORS WHICH ENCOUNTERED ONLY MODERATE ANTI-AIRCRAFT FIRE. IT WAS THE FIRST ATTACK ON WAKE SINCE A CARRIER TASK FORCE RIPPED ITS INSTALLATIONS MAY 23 WITH 150 TONS OF EXPLOSIVES.

SEVENTH ARMY AIR FORCE HEADQUARTERS, CENTRAL PACIFIC, JUNE 4-(AP)-ARMY BOMBERS FROM THE MARSHALL ISLANDS, STRIKING EVERY IMPORTANT CENTRAL PACIFIC JAPANESE BASE WITHIN THEIR RANGE, DUMPED 1,630 TONS OF EXPLOSIVES ON THE ENEMY DURING MAY.

BRIG. GEN. ROBERT W. DOUGLAS JR., COMMANDING THE SEVENTH AIR FORCE, SAID IT WAS THE SECOND BIGGEST BOMBING MONTH IN THIS AREA, TOPPED ONLY BY APRIL'S TOTAL, WHICH EXCEEDED 2,000 TONS.

LIBERATORS AND MITCHELLS FLEW 84 MISSIONS AND ATTACKED AT ALTITUDES RANGING FROM 50 FEET--PURSUING THE ENEMY WITH MACHINE-GUNS AND 75 MM. CANNON--TO 20,000 FEET, FROM WHICH THEY EMPLOYED 2,000-POUND BOMBS.

THE CENTRAL PACIFIC BOMBERS ATTACKED PONAPE 23 TIMES AND TRUK SIX TIMES. THEIR MOST CONCENTRATED BOMBARDMENT WAS THE ATTRITION BLASTING OF JALUIT AND WOTJE IN THE MARSHALLS AND PONAPE WITH 620 TONS IN THIS THEATER'S HEAVIEST LAND-BASED RAIDS.

DOUGLAS SAID JAPANESE IN THE MARSHALL ISLANDS "HAVE TRIED TO PROTECT THEMSELVES FROM BOMBING BY DISPERSING THEIR DIMINISHING STORES AND DEFENSE INSTALLATIONS. OUR BOMBING HAS DESTROYED WHAT WERE ONCE THEIR MAIN BASES. CONTINUOUS AND HEAVY ATTACKS HAVE DESTROYED MANY OF THEIR DISPERSAL AREAS."

ALTHOUGH THE MAY TONNAGE WAS BELOW THAT OF APRIL, DOUGLAS SAID IT WAS DROPPED IN "HIGHLY EFFECTIVE DOSES."

FIVE ENEMY INTERCEPTORS WERE SHOT DOWN BY 7TH AAF BOMBERS IN MAY AND PROBABLY ONE MORE. TWO AMERICAN BOMBERS WERE LOST.

AN ALEUTIAN ISLAND BASE, JUNE 1-(AP)-THE JAPANESE TURNED OUT TO BE A BAD BET IN THE NORTH PACIFIC WAR THIS SPRING -- AT LEAST, UP THROUGH APRIL AND MAY, MONTHS OF COMPARATIVELY GOOD FLYING WEATHER.

SOME OF OUR MEN LOST MONEY ON THEM. THE BETS VARIED WIDELY AS TO EXACT DATES, BUT GENERALLY THOSE RISKING THEIR MONEY ON THE MIKADO'S MINIONS GAMBLED THEY WOULD ATTACK SOME PART OF THE ALEUTIANS AT LEAST BY THE MIDDLE OF MAY.

THE WEATHER WAS INCLUDED IN THE FIGURING BECAUSE THE LAST TIME THE JAPANESE STRUCK -- AT ATTU WITH EIGHT LONG-RANGE BOMBERS -- WAS IN OCTOBER OF LST YEAR. THAT WAS IN THE FAVORABLE FALL WEATHER PERIOD, CORRESPONDING TO THE APRL-MAY TRANSITION BETWEEN STORMS AND FOGS.

THE BETTING MEN ALSO BELIEVED THAT THE ENEMY WOULD BE SUFFICIENTLY IRRITATED BY REPEATED ARMY AND NAVY AIR MISSIONS AGAINST THE KURILES (THERE HAVE BEEN MORE THAN 50 SINCE THE FIRST OF THE YEAR) TO STRIKE BACK.

BUT THE ATTACK FAILED TO COME BY AIR OR SEA -- AND THOSE WHO HAD WAGERED ON IT LOST.

NEW YORK, JUNE 1-(AP)-MRS.FRANKLIN D.ROOSEVELT SAID TODAY AMERICANS ARE NOT SAFE SO LONG AS DEMOCRACY DOES NOT EXIST IN OTHER PARTS OF THE WORLD.

ADDRESSING 2,000 PERSONS AT THE NATIONAL DONOR LUNCHEON HELD IN CONNECTION WITH THE BIENNIAL CONVENTION OF THE WOMEN'S DIVISION OF THE AMERICAN JEWISH CONGRESS, MRS.ROOSEVELT SAID:

"IT IS NOT ENOUGH TO PRESERVE HERE OUR DEMOCRATIC PRINCIPLES X X X NOT ENOUGH TO THINK THAT BECAUSE WE CAN KEEP THEM HERE THAT THEY ARE SAFE IN THE REST OF THE WORLD X X X LIBERTY IS SOMETHING THAT CANNOT BE DIVIDED--EITHER ALL PEOPLE HAVE LIBERTY OR THE LIBERTY OF ALL PEOPLE IS IN JEOPARDY."

IF ANYTHING BETTER IS TO COME OUT THE WAR, MRS.ROOSEVELT STATED, "WE MUST MAKE SOME CHANGES OURSELVES. WE HAVE TO REALLY WANT THE KIND OF WORLD WHERE PEOPLE CAN BE FREE, WHERE PEOPLE CAN BE FRIENDS."

RED AIR FORCE HELPS FORTRESSES INAUGURATE SHUTTLE BOMBING SYSTEM

Soviet-Selected Targets Hit En Route—Little Nazi Opposition

JUN 3 1944 NIGH

By EDDY GILMORE

A United States Air Base Somewhere in Russia, June 2 (AP)—A large force of American Flying Fortresses, escorted by American Mustang and Russian Yak fighters, bombed Russian-selected targets in Romania today and then continued eastward and landed at new, secretly established bases in the Soviet Union, inaugurating a shuttle-bombing program of historic military significance.

The new Eastern Command of the United States Strategic Air Forces announced that one bomber was lost and one fighter missing and that enemy opposition was slight.

Red Air Force Lends Support

The Red air force aided by attacking German airdromes along the route and providing support throughout the area.

The new shuttle-bombing program lays open the farthest corners of German-controlled territory to the weight of Allied bombs and presents the Germans with vast new problems of combating Allied air assaults on the eve of the western front invasion.

Announcement of the landings in Russia said shuttle bombing was thus inaugurated between Britain, Italy, North Africa and Russia.

[The Americans' place of departure was not specified, but apparently in this instance it was from Italy.]

Many Bases On Russ Soil

This dream of American military and airmen which came true today found not one, but many, American air bases on Russian soil, from which the American bombers are able to bring the war to every part of Hitler's territory. The effect on Romania and Hungary in particular was expected to be tremendous.

Leaving the smoking, smashed freight yards of a Romanian city behind them, the American flyers, from all parts of the United States, touched down in waves on the fields in Russia.

Enthusiastic over their role in this significant first operation, young American airmen piled out, saying they were eager to complete the round trip against Hitler's Europe.

Harriman In Welcoming Party

Dropping out of the western clouds, they reported to a welcoming group that included the United States Ambassador, W. Averell Harriman; his daughter, Kathleen, and Maj. Gen. John R. Deane, head of the American Military Mission to Russia.

The flyers brought the American Legion of Merit which was presented in a warm celebration to Soviet Lieut. Gen. Alexander R. Perminov, who is in charge of Russian facilities for the Americans.

They reported: "No fighter opposition; light, inaccurate flak; good bomb pattern over target; casualties very light; weather over target clear."

Asked, "What do you think of Russia?" a Johnstown (Pa.) pilot, one of the first to land, replied, "Well, it's different."

"A Pleasure Ride" To Texan

"It was just a pleasure ride," exclaimed a flyer from Waco, Texas. "But I got a real thrill in crossing the German lines."

Soviet and American ground crews who have worked side by side for months to establish the bases, raced out to greet the first American planes as they rolled onto the landing strips.

General Deane described it as "a brief but happy celebration before servicing the aircraft with fuel and ammunition for another call on the Axis en route to their home bases in England, Italy and Africa."

[Indicating the possibility that the second leg of the shuttle operation might already be in operation, the Budapest radio left the air late in the night.]

Yanks Call Russians "Ivan"

Unable to speak Russian, the American airmen gaily hailed the Russians as "Ivan." The grinning Soviet mechanics, chosen from throughout the union on the basis of skill, replied jovially in kind.

The bombers and fighters were preceded by American photographic reconnaissance planes. It was learned that the first of these was piloted by Col. Paul T. Cullen.

High American and Russian officials and military men were on hand to witness the arrivals, vast significance of which was pointed out by General Deane, who said in a statement:

"This is shuttle bombing—bombing that makes vulnerable all the industrial facilities of eastern Germany—bombing that can be carried out when weather prohibits returning to British or Mediterranean bases — and bombing that will require redistribution of the German fighter defenses."

Idea Credited To Arnold

Idea for the Russian bases was credited to Gen. H. H. Arnold, commander in chief of the American Army Air Forces, but it first took fruit during the Moscow conference of Secretary of State Hull last October 19-November 1.

Subsequently it was discussed at the Teheran conference of President Roosevelt, Premier Stalin and Prime Minister Churchill, and the tremendous task of creating, manning and supplying the bases got under way in February.

General Deane did the actual spadework of discussions with Soviet military authorities, while Ambassador Harriman handled the diplomatic end.

Bases Fully Equipped

The bases were completed right on schedule. Now they are fully equipped with spare parts, spare planes, food, fuel, medical supplies and even their own transport and field hospitals. American doctors and Medical Corps men are on hand, and American nurses are expected shortly.

High in praise of the Russian assistance in establishing the system, Deane said, "the operations carried out today mark the first large-scale physical cooperation of the air forces of Britain, Russia and America."

"This, of course," he said, "is an American operation, but it is one of wholehearted cooperation between the Soviets, the British and the United States. American bombers, after all, cannot get off the ground without British aid."

His reference was to home-based planes participating in the shuttle service.

As Answer To Critics

The number and location of the bases were not disclosed, but the fact that Russia gave them was described by one veteran Russian observer as "certainly the greatest accomplishment in Soviet cooperation." He said this should quiet critics who had predicted that Russia never would allow Allied forces to operate on her soil.

The bases, already named ECUSSO, or Eastern Command, United States Strategic Air Force, were believed to open the way for many new possibilities of Allied co-operation.

In his statement, Deane declared:

"American officers at Russian bases emphasized the contribution made by Soviet authorities to the success of today's operations. They pointed out that importation of American personnel and material to Russia had constituted an additional burden on the Russian war machine.

Yank, Ivan As "Fighting Team"

"They were unanimous in expressing appreciation of the wholehearted collaboration received from the Russians, and pointed to success of the operation as evidence of the effectiveness of the Russians and Americans as a fighting team."

Col. Alfred Kessler, Jr., of Passaic, N. J., is commanding one of the American bases in Russia.

Colonel Kessler, a West Point graduate of 1922, was in command of an operational wing in England and had been on numerous combat missions before coming to Russia. He will be 46 on August 3. A tall, slender man with a ready smile, he was described by a colleague as "tough as Jersey rocks."

Elliott Roosevelt In Party

It was disclosed that Maj. Gen. Frederick L. Anderson, deputy commander of the United States Strategic Air Force in England, and his chief of staff, Brig. Gen. Theodore Curtis, and Col. Elliott Roosevelt, son of the President, had visited Russia in preparation for establishing the shuttle service.

Working with the American officers in Russia were Col. Gen. Alexei Vladimovich Nikitin and Maj. Gen. Alexander R. Perminov. Nikitin and Perminov are soon to receive the Legion of Merit and certificates signed by President Roosevelt.

Nikitin is second in command of the Red Air Force, while Perminov is in charge of all facilities used by American flyers.

It was learned that to make the shuttle a success many rules and regulations have been ignored. For example, regulation entry visas have been dispensed with.

American officers participating in the shuttle called it "a pattern for further Allied co-operation."

The supply question has been a gigantic one, with the Russians going all-out in assisting the Americans to get materials, bombs, spare parts, spare planes, fuel, food, medicines and transport to the bases. The supplies came in both via the northern sea route and through the Persian Gulf.

"The Russians unloaded our stuff before theirs," said General Deane. "They shoved train after train of materials across their own communications to supply us."

He particularly complimented the American Persian Gulf staff for its contributions, and then in saying what a great amount of material was brought in by trucks from Iran, added: "Again, we have to thank the Soviets."

Besides General Deane, members of the American military mission included Rear Admiral Clarence E. Olsen, head of the mission's naval mission; Brigadier General William E. Crist, head of the Army division of the mission; Brigadier General Sidney P. Spalding, head of the supply division, and Colonel Charlie R. Bond, air officer for the mission.

ALLIED PLANES HIT ROMANIA AND LAND AT RUSSIAN BASES

Washington Reveals New Shuttle Bombing From Mediterranean.

DAY

Washington, June 2 (A. P.).—A force of Allied strategic bombers and fighters landed on Russian bases after attacking targets in Romania, the War Department announced today.

"According to usual custom," said the brief announcement, "further details of this operation will be limited to those announced by the air commander in Russia. As spon as their publication will in no way endanger the success of combat operations, complete details will be made available."

The announcement did not disclose the home base of the force, which might have come from Allied bases in Italy or from other points in the Mediterranean area. This was the first official disclosure of any shuttle bombing of Axis targets by planes based in the Mediterranean area which continued to Russian bases instead of returning home.

today and landed in Russia as part of a massive two-way aerial assault in which more than 5,000 Allied planes dropped nearly 7,000 tons of explosives on Hitler's Europe.

The shuttle-bombers, first Allied planes to attack enemy soil and then make planned landings in the Soviet Union, apparently flew from bases in Italy. Their landings were made on bases previously prepared by American ground crews.

France Also Hit

While the Mediterranean Air force's blow was the more spectacular, heavy bombers of the Eighth Air force in Britain added their own one-two punch to the 15th consecutive day of Allied aerial assaults on Europe.

Flying Fortresses and Liberators swept into France twice during the day to hit prime military targets. the first raid, made against the invasion coast of Pas De Calais, was accomplished without loss either to bombers or escorts, but in the second seven Fortresses were missing.

The latter strike was delivered against a variety of military targets west and southwest of Paris, Air Force headquarters said, including railways junctions and bridges. No enemy air opposition was encountered, but flak was heavy over some targets.

Medium, light and fighter-bombers of the Allied expeditionary air forces also stabbed into France and the low countries at dusk, bombing and strafing railroad yards, bridges, fuel dumps, road transport and coastal objectives. It was announced that none of the more than 300 Marauders and Havocs participating was lost.

Raids Continue Into Night

An indication that the assaults on the Axis were being carried into the night came as the Budapest radio again left the air tonight shortly after 10 p.m.

The American shuttle planes after dropping their loads on important junctions on rail lines supplying the Germans at the Russian front were met by American Mustang and Soviet Yak fighters which escorted them to the newly-made bases in Russia.

From Britain a fleet of 1,000 British-based Fortresses and Liberators, with half as many escorting fighters, slammed into the Pas de Calais area with some 3,000 tons of explosives for their heaviest assault thus far on the Nazi anti-invasion targets. They were unchallenged by German fighters.

The blow from Italy was by a force of up to 750 heavy bombers with an escort of probably equal strength which unloaded at least 500 tons of exploding steel.

"All our bombers and fighters returned safely from the attack on German military installations along the coast of France today," the U. S. Strategic Air Forces communique said.

The Fortresses and Liberators, escorted by medium-sized forces of P-51 Mustangs, P-38 Lightnings and P-47 Thunderbolts, all from the Eighth Air force, encountered only light flak. A few ground rockets were sent up, the communique said.

This 15th consecutive day of bombing of Nazi Europe got off to an early start when R.A.F. heavy bombers struck in the first hours after midnight at objectives over a 2,000-mile front, all the way from Scandinavia to France, Hungary, Germany and the Mediterranean.

Balkan Cities Raided

The American heavy bombers of the 15th Air Force which hit Balkan targets were escorted by Mustangs and Lightnings and met little opposition as they struck at Cluj, Transylvanian city of 99,000 on the Bucharest-Budapest railway; Simeria, small industrial town some 70 miles to the southwest, and the Hungarian cities of Miskolcz, Szeged and Szoinok on railways radiating from Budapest.

Szeged, second Hungarian city, has a population of 135,000. Miskolcz, important commercial center, has more than 60,000 people. Szolnok, 55 miles southeast of Budapest, also was hit by Italian-based Liberators, Halifaxes and Wellingtons in a post-midnight raid.

These trip-hammer blows were not the only Allied air attacks of the day, as the heavies based in Britain returned to action after a one-day rest.

Hundreds of lighter bombers and fighters were seen crossing the channel in the evening, crowding the skies over Dover and sweeping toward many parts of the French coast to carry the aerial prelude to the impending grand-scale assault through the closing hours of its fifteenth day.

Flak Very Light

Switching suddenly back to the vital section of Hitler's Atlantic wall after concentrating on railroads, airfields and production centers farther inland, the crews of the American heavies were surprised to find the flak so light in a sector ordinarily defended heavily by ground guns.

It was one of the few times over enemy-occupied territory that the overcast bombing technique was employed. The Allied planes often pour bombs on Germany through the clouds, but usually bring their bomb loads back to base when the targets are in occupied countries, rather than risk killing civilians in overcast bombing.

However, this has not been true of the Pas De Calais area, one of the most battered sectors of its size in the world, since Prime Minister Churchill disclosed months ago that the Germans had turned this French "county" into a veritable fortress with heavy installations designed to bombard England with rockets and release radio-controlled planes.

British-based heavies alone have hit emplacements there nine times in May, and there were indications that lighter craft also may have been sent against the same area today.

Moscow Announcement

LONDON, June 2 (AP).—The Moscow radio announced officially tonight the landing of American planes on Soviet territory after raids on Romania.

The official statement said:

"On June 2 a considerable force of American bombers accompanied by fighters deal a blow against enemy military objectives in Romania.

"Part of the American planes taking part in the raid landed on air bases on Soviet territory. One bomber and one fighter did not return from this operation."

Earlier the radio had broadcast an official Soviet government statement on the landing of American planes in Russia. The statement said:

"The westward advance of the Red Army has brought the area of operations within the range of the air forces of the United States of America and Great Britain.

"In order to insure that efforts of the combined air forces shall be concentrated on the most important objectives for the United Nations, direct contact has been established between the headquarters concerned."

Allied Headquarters, Naples, June 2 (A. P.).—The Germans' wall before Rome began to crumble today as the Fifth Army captured both Velletri and Valmontone, the two biggest fortress cities guarding the Eternal City.

The Fifth Army was firmly astride the Via Casilina after cutting it near Valmontone, threatening to cut off whatever troops the Germans had been unable to withdraw of the nine divisions battling on the lower front.

Velletri is an Appian Way junction eighteen miles from Rome. Already American troops were fanning out beyond it into Alban Hills, fighting within sight of Rome's prized buildings.

Valmontone, bitterly defended by the crack Hermann Goering armored division, is on the Via Casilina twenty miles southeast of Rome. The Germans were fighting a rear guard action north and west of the break-through onto the Via Casilina by United States tank and infantry forces.

The Eighth Army smashing up the Via Casilina pounded into Ferentino, only eighteen miles southeast of Valmontone, and also struck on the east side of the highway, winning Veroli, five miles northeast of Frosinone.

Beginning of End of Battle for Rome.

All these advances foreshadowed the beginning of the end of the battle for Rome—the city toward which the Allies have been pushing, with blood and sweat, since the landings at Salerno last September.

Fall of Valmontone and Ferentino left a gap of no more than eighteen miles between the eastern and western sectors of the Allied fronts. With the French driving up to the Via Casilina from just southwest of Ferentino, a ring appeared to be closing tightly around retreating German remnants making rear guard stands.

Velletri and Valmontone were seized in the face of flaming resistance, and late today, headquarters said, "fierce fighting continues in this area, where limited progress has been made during the day."

Occupation of Veroli cut yet another potential back door for the Nazi retreat. It is on a junction of roads from the south and east.

P.'s Daniel De Luce reported from the front.

Total prisoners taken since the Allied offensive started May 12 were approaching 20,000.

United States infantrymen drove into Velletri yesterday. All the Germans' escape routes from the town and vicinity have been sealed off.

Two miles to the northwest, Yankee troops fighting on Monte Artemisio, in view of Rome's historic buildings, were meeting obstinate opposition, a communique said.

Surprised Germans.

This force had snaked beyond Velletri and seized the dominating heights of Mounts Peschio and Artemisio, catching the Germans by surprise.

[The German High Command declared the dent the Allies achieved northeast of Velletri had been sealed off with heavy casualties inflicted. Berlin's broadcast said that there was fighting of great fierceness Thursday, especially in the Velletri and Valmontone areas, but that the Allies had been held.]

The smashing blows against the Nazi line guarding Rome also drove in another wedge by capture of Lariano, a village on the highway to Valmontone, four miles northeast of Velletri.

Field Marshal Albert Kesselring had flung his touted Herman Goering armored division into the line near Valmontone in a bitter struggle to hold open the Via Casilina.

Just last Friday American troops had won Artena, two and a half miles below Valmontone, but it took a week of fighting to reach the highway.

The British and French to the southeast squeezed tighter up the highway, and the French seized Ponte Di Morolo, three miles below the famous road, west of Frosinone.

troops cut a two-mile section of the railway in the Artena-Valmontone area, and threw pounding pressure on the Hermann Goering Division astride the Via Casilina in that sector.

The enemy threw fierce artillery barrages against these Allied forces and even used anti-aircraft guns at low elevation, but some gains were made.

The Germans were said still to be throwing every available man into the defense along the twenty-five-mile line from Valmontone to the sea. Parachute troops have been identified in the Velletri area. Elsewhere the Nazis were said to be using such non-combatant forces as company butchers and horse tenders.

The daily communique said Eighth Army troops, advancing astride the Via Casilina toward Valmontone, "have pressed enemy rearguards so severely" in one sector "that enemy demolitions could not be effected."

NIGHT

ALLIED HEADQUARTERS, Naples, June 2.—(AP) Powerful American armored and infantry forces smashed through the key

German strongholds of Valmontone and Velletri in the Alban hills before Rome today, shattering the enemy's last-ditch defenses and foreshadowing the beginning of the end of the battle for the Eternal City.

Valmontone, 20 airline miles from Rome on the Via Casilina, main escape route for the mauled German 10th army retreating from the Hitler line, and Velletri, 18 miles southeast of the Italian capital, fell after days of vicious assault and flaming resistance.

Fierce Fighting Continues

Early tonight fierce fighting was reported still in progress as Lt. Gen. Mark W. Clark's victorious forces continued to pound back the stubbornly struggling Herman Goering armored division and other crack Nazi units. The Allies held three miles of the Via Casilina.

Capture of Valmontone and severance of the Via Casillina drew the Allied sack tighter on the remnants of what once was 12 German divisions holding the Gustav and Hitler lines. Less than 18 miles separated Clark's troops from Canadian forces who pointed up the Via Casilina and seized Ferentoni. Caught between the two Allied wings, Marshal Albert Kesselring's battered forces were streaming northward on several secondary roads toward the temporary safety of a new defense line hinged on Avezzano.

It was disclosed that the crack American First Armored division and other strong American reinforcements had been thrown into the battle now raging within sight of Rome. The First Armored division played a conspicuous part in the Tunisian victory last year.

Tonight a front dispatch reported Fifth Army vanguards were fanning out in a wide arc through the Alban hills above Velletri, advancing on a mountain front extending from the Appian way to the Via Casilina—the two principal highways into Rome.

German prisoners captured since the Allied offensive began May 11 approached the 20,000 mark.

Street Fighting Rages

Street fighting raged in Velletri for several days before its fall. American armor and infantry penetrated to the hill town's central square yesterday, rooting "clusters of shuddering Germans" out of backyards and wine cellars, but the remainder of the doomed garrison continued to give desperate opposition. Their every avenue of escape had been cut by American forces pushing through the mountains north and northwest upon Rome.

The Nazi commanders threw more and more troops into the battle raging in the storied Alban hills immediately before the Eternal City, but these were offset by reinforcements of American and French divisions made available to Gen. Clark by the collapse of enemy resistance between Terracina and Littoria in the coastal sector last week.

These now veteran troops—including two draft divisions—made a brilliant record in their capture of Castelforte and other strongpoints of the Gustav and Hitler lines near the coast, but were squeezed out of the fighting by the hurried German retreat northward to the Via Casilina.

Today's communique said American infantrymen fighting on Monte Artemisio, 2,600-foot peak two miles northwest of Velletri, were meeting "very obstinate opposition." Lariano, a highway village midway between Velletri and Valmontone, fell to other American troops.

(A German High command communique declared that a dent achieved by the Allies northwest of Velletri had been "sealed off" and heavy casualties inflicted on Clark's forces, who scaled Monte Artemisio in a "sneak" advance Tuesday night. It described the fighting in the area as of "very great fierceness.")

All Available Soldiers Used

Every available Nazi soldier was said to have been tossed into the swirling series of battles both on the heights and in the Alban foothills below, around Lanuvio and Campoleone, which still were in enemy hands. Enemy parachute troops were encountered in the Velletri area, and elsewhere the Germans were reported using such non-combatant forces as company butchers and horse hostlers.

For the second straight day a number of the Nazis' hoarded fighter planes appeared over the ffeld, diving to strafe Allied shock troops. Every yard of Allied advance was made through a hurricane of artillery fire from the hills, the enemy even using anti-aircraft guns to sweep the dusty terrain.

Allied warships added their salvoes to the struggle as they shelled enemy gun positions opposing the British advance northward from Ardea in the coastal sector. The naval guns set several large fires.

The busy Allied air force destroyed another 100 German transport vehicles, bringing to more than 4,800 the number they have wiped out or damaged since the offensive began May 11.

Fight Rearguard Action

Allied officers conceded that the Germans were utilizing the utmost skill in their fighting withdrawal before the Eighth army, employing every device they had learned in retreating roughly 2,500 miles across North Africa, Sicily and southern Italy. Machine-gun nests and snipers mile after mile kept Eighth army vanguards in check through the rough terrain and thick foliage.

Nevertheless, today's Allied communique said Eighth Army troops had pressed German rearguards so hard in one sector that the enemy was unable to carry out his usual demolitions. Northeast of Frosinone, above the Via Casilina, Allied armor entered the eown of Veroli. New Zealand units pushed on beyond Sora.

The Germans were estimated to have had 12 divisions in the Gustav and Hitler lines at the start of the Allied drive, of which three virtually have been destroyed. Of the remaining nine divisions, some probably already had reached the safety of Kesselring's new line.

AMERICAN UNITS TAKE VALMONTONE AFTER HARD FIGHT

JUN 31944 LUCE

VALMONTONE, Italy, June 2—(AP) The brawny hands of an American army sergeant tugged at a bell rope in Valmontone's cathedral at 6 a. m. today, ringing the hour of liberation for 100 Italian civilians, four policemen and two priests who had remained throughout the Allied assault on the key town on Highway 6.

A famed beachhead reconnaissance patrol, "the Snoop Troop," led by Lt. Frank W. Connor, of Silver Springs, Md., moved into Valmontone at the first light of day today without firing a shot.

Buildings Shattered

It's tall stone walls shattered by Allied bombs and shells, Valmontone lay seemingly dead on a little knoll between the railroad and Highway 6—the via Casilina—which go winding northwest 20 miles to Rome.

Yet when Sgt. John Samples, Johnson City, Ill., rang the bronze bell in the shrapnel scarred tower of the cathedral of Santa Maria, Valmontonians poured out of a deep shelter under the Pampile palace next door.

Many American lives were lost in yesterday's attacks of infantry and armor against Valmontone's defenses, but during the night the Germans withdrew the bulk of their artillery and tanks protecting the highway.

Lt. Walter Gill, Roswell, N. M., scouted one part of the town; Sgt. James McGee, Daly City, Calif., another. When they reported to Lt. O'Connor on the cathedral steps he had his "human radio station," Pfc. Edward Collins, Portland, Ore., send this message to headquarters on a walky-talky set:

"Have Valmontone. What next?"

Cathedral Damaged

The cathedral was damaged, but still structurally sound. The adjoining palace and many other buildings were hard hit.

A debonairly mustached policeman in a red and blue uniform and a tri-corner hat told me 150 German soldiers were killed by the American air attack on Valmontone May 25.

"After that," he said, "the German commander moved his men outside town. Some of our people, including refugees from Rome, have remained here the whole time. This week two were killed by your shelling but those who stayed below the palace were safe. Now they would like food."

Just one week ago the Fifth Army's tank spearhead drove from the old beachhead to the outskirts of Valmontone. Since then the Goering Division held the escape routes open for the German Tenth Army retreating from the southern front before the British.

Germans Reported Cracking

Now our forces are fanning out in the green valley to the north of the Alban hills and a brigadier general said:

"It's true — the Germans are cracking fast."

I had finished looking at the cathedral's torn paintings and the pile of dusty silver crucifixes and candlesticks behind the barb marble altar when two shy Italian girls appeared. They were almost panic-stricken when one of our cub planes flew over, and the crash of a German shell near by made them wince, but they finally asked their question:

"We are from Rome—when will Rome be free?"

fortress city of the German line defending Rome, was entered by American infantry at 5:15 P. M. (11:15 A. M., Eastern war time) today and nineteen prisoners were captured on the march into the town square.

Past the ruined Bank of the Holy Spirit and the scarred Cathedral of St. Mary's, Capt. William Barnett of Fort Worth, Tex., led his tired, dusty rifle company that rounded up the bedraggled Germans on the way to the municipal piazza.

Two enemy rifles and a mortar tube were left on the cathedral steps, but throughout the city, perched on a high rib of the Alban Hills eighteen airline miles from Rome, there was little sound of firing.

In the fight for Velletri a colonel at the head of an infantry column was killed by a mobile armored gun at a highway intersection on the outskirts.

Lieut. James W. Long of Belzon, Miss., attempted to get his tank destroyer into action, but the German vehicle fled toward Albano in a thick haze of dust.

How Velletri Fell.

Velletri's fate was quickened by a brilliant outflanking maneuver that sent doughboys scaling the 3,000-foot Artemisio Hill behind the city two nights ago. This morning they had Velletri cut off on three sides, but from stone pillboxes and roaming batteries of mortar artillery the Germans continued their fierce resistance during the day.

A general jeeped over the road where German mines were still hidden to view Velletri from the outskirts and to tell Lieut.-Col. Robert C. Johnson, Providence R. I., to "make a fast job of this, Bob."

The road led past a hurriedly vacated enemy divisional headquarters in an elegant villa and signs of a half dozen units, including an SS (Elitè Corps) brigade.

Rout Clusters of Germans.

From backyards, wine cellars and the debris of bombed suburban shops doughboys routed clusters of shuddering Germans.

Pfc. Robert Glover, Gastonia, N. C., nabbed nineteen Germans; Pfc. Albert O. Aguilar, Brownsville, Tex., caught five. After Lieut. Andrew P. Smythe, El Paso, Tex., laid down a close support fire from his 81-millimeter mortars and Lieut. Long's tank destroyer, the Jayhawker, with Corporal Donald Fullerton of Pawnee Rock, Kan., driving, the mop-up of Velletri began.

"See you in Rome," shouted Lieut.-Col. James Balluff of Chicago as he rode off on the rear of Long's vehicle.

Eight old men and women cried out, "No water, no bread, help us, help us," as the doughboys passed them in the narrow, winding, rubble-strewn alley.

Squatting beside some newly captured Germans at the entrance to the Bishop's palace, some American veterans agreed, "It's coming to an end—this war."

"Rome will be easier to take than Velletri," said Sergt. John Cook, Ballinger, Tex.

HARMON'S DIVISION WITH FIFTH ARMY

JUN 31944

Naples, June 2 (A. P.).—The American First Armored Division, commanded by Major-Gen. Ernest N. Harmon, is operating with the Fifth Army, it was disclosed today.

Gen. Harmon is a veteran of the Tunisian campaign in which he led the First Armored Division to victory a year ago. He was one of eighteen generals who by order of King George VI received British decorations in January this year for meritorious action in the Mediterranean.

Baltimore Sailor Finds Dead German In Italy

With the Fifth Army on the Casilinian Front, June 2 (AP)—Among the strange sights on the Valmontone battlefield were two American sailors, who, in poking among the debris for souvenirs, uncovered the body of a German under a wrecked tank.

They were Seaman (first class) John J. Bell, of 1931 West Lanvale street, Baltimore, and Cook James Fitzgerald, of Mattapan, Mass.

They were crew members of an LCT, which landed at Anzio on D-day and afterward supplied the beachhead several times. They got leave and came to the battlefield to find out about things.

Former Newspaper Artist Killed In Italy

With the Fifth Army South of Rome, May 29 (AP—Delayed)—Sergt. Gregor Duncan, 34, former San Francisco and New York newspaper artist, was struck in the head and killed by a shell fragment today while driving a jeep toward the Valmontone front through heavy shell fire.

Killed by Grenade Hurled by Sniper as He Stood in Turret of Tank

WITH THE 5TH ARMY SOUTH OF ROME, June 2 (AP).—A sniper who threw a hand grenade from ambush fatally wounded Lieutenant Allen Tupper Brown, twenty-seven years old, stepson of General George C. Marshall, Army chief of staff, it was disclosed today. (The death was announced in Washington May 30, without details).

Lieutenant Brown was commanding a light-tank detachment attacking with American infantry against the German line south of Rome on May 29. He was standing up in the turret of his tank—a necessary procedure for armored commanders in rolling, tree-covered terrain—when the grenade was hurled.

Paratroopers Capture Tito's Headquarters but Fail to Catch Marshal.

BARI, Italy, May 29.—(Delayed)—(AP) German paratroopers supported by glider-borne infantry swarmed down and captured the Bosnian headquarters of Marshal

Tito May 25 but failed to catch the wily Yugoslav leader, Partisan sources disclosed today.

Field Marshal Erwin Rommel, whose whereabouts had been a mystery for weeks, was said to have directed the attack personally.

Tito escaped to the mountains along with Maj. Randolph Churchill, son of the British prime minister, and virtually all Allied officers attached to Tito's staff.

Correspondents Captured

Two Allied correspondents, Stoyan Pribichevich of Time, Life and Fortune magazines, John Talbot of Reuters, and two photographers were captured in the Nazi stroke, but Pribichevich escaped later during a Partisan attack on the Nazis.

(The Moscow radio, in a dispatch from Cairo, said an attempt by two battalions of German paratroops to capture Tito in his Yugoslav headquarters three days ago had been frustrated by the alert partisans. The broadcast, recorded in London by the Soviet monitor, said "due to measures previously taken the attempt was abortive and several hundred parachutists were killed or taken prisoner.")

A blistering Stuka dive-bombing attack at 6 a. m. preceded the airborne assault on the headquarters, situated in a vast Grotto near Drvar, 70 miles north of Split. Paratroopers and gliders followed quickly, coordinating their attack with a powerful ground assault in which tanks led the way.

With bitter fighting raging over a wide area and vantage points changing hands numerous times, German transports and additional gliders poured in more men, field pieces and supplies throughout the afternoon, night and following day.

Tito's partisans regained much ground the first night but on the second day the enemy managed to push an armored column into Drvar, mean while taking the important airport of Petrovac, 14 miles north, and bombing several partisans towns in the vicinity.

Planes of the U. S. Fifteenth Air force and the RAF went to the aid of Tito's men. Fortresses pounded the big German supply operations center at Bihac on May 26, Liberators roared across the Adriatic twice, and blasted troop concentrations at nine different points.

At the same time P-38's and Spitfires beat up the area thoroughly attacking trahsports, troops and airfields from which the paratroopers took off. One formation caught a troop train near Podjice and left it in flames with more than 100 Nazis hanging from the windows and strewn along the tracks.

Nazis Use Four Divisions

Ground troops employed in the Nazi effort to trap Tito were estimated unofficially here at four divisions at least. Striking from Bihac, 40 miles northwest, from Banja Luka 48 miles northeast and Livno, 50 miles southeast, they sought to envelop the Yugoslav high command and members of Allied missions. In addition a full air-borne division was believed to have landed.

An American colonel who was in Drvar the day of the attack reported counting between 35 and 40 gliders at one phase of the fighting. He described the operation as very well planned and executed.

"It certainly looked as if they knew what they were doing," he said. "It is my guess that the whole headquarters area had been photographed and mapped down to the smallest detail."

Withdrawing into the Dinaric Alps where the Partisans know every goat trail, Tito and his staff had been gone an hour before the first enemy troops reached the stronghold from where the marshal had directed Partisan operations for more than a year. Headquarters was so organized that it could move on 30 minutes notice.

Correspondents in Town

Members of the British mission, taking note of recent strengthening of German forces in the vicinity, had moved to the outskirts of the area several days before the attack. American and Russian groups likewise were well removed, but the correspondents and two photographers were billeted in the center of town and had less opportunity to escape.

After being captured and ordered to assist in caring for the wounded, Pribichevich managed to get away in the confusion of the first Partisan counter-attack. Whereabouts of Talbot and the photographers was not known here.

[On May 31 the German radio reported capture of two correspondents and two photographers with Tito's forces. The correspondents were identified as Talbot and Pribichevich. Making the trip into Yugoslavia with them were Chief Petty Officer G. E. Fowler, of the United States Navy, formerly of Los Angeles, and Sergeant Max Slade, of the British Army, both photographers.]

Nazis Open Wide Attacks

LONDON, June 2 (AP)—The Germans, apparently alarmed at the seriousness of the situation in Yugoslavia and the growing strength of the Partisan army, have launched a large-scale offensive against liberated territory, Marshal Tito declared today.

A communiqué broadcast from his headquarters said the offensive was begun several days ago in western Bosnia with more than three Nazi divisions participating.

Air-borne troops as well as infantry and armored units are being employed by the Germans, the bulletin said. It declared that in one sector Partisans had captured a glider and wiped out a number of air-borne troops.

London, June 2 (AP)—The Berlin radio said today that German naval craft sank a coastal tanker and six fully laden coastal motor vessels southwest of the Yugoslavian port of Sibenik Wednesday, capturing 129 soldiers, 37 women and 5 children.

The soldiers included British, Russians and Americans, the broadcast added. There was no Allied confirmation. Sibenik is 25 miles above Split.

Balkan Front First Hints

DAY

London, June 2 (AP)—A Transocean broadcast from Berlin speculated today that "the invasion of western Europe may be preceded by the opening of a Balkan front."

In a broadcast recorded by the Associated Press the German agency quoted dispatches from Syria and Lebanon via Ankara as saying that "the Anglo-Americans have concentrated troops in the Near East on a mounting basis during the last few weeks."

BALKAN INVASION FEARED BY NAZIS

NIGHT

Berlin Reports Large Anglo-American Troop Concentrations in Middle East.

LONDON, June 2.—(AP) As Allied bomber armadas methodically softened their western anti-invasion defenses, the Germans expressed fear today that Gen. Eisenhower's cross-channel blow would be preceded by an invason of the Balkans from the middle east.

"Increasingly large Anglo-American troop concentrations in the middle east countries have been reported from Syria and Lebanon in the last few weeks," said a Berlin radio broadcast dispatch dated Ankara, "and indications are that the invasion of western Europe may be preceded by a thrust into the Balkan countries."

The United Nations radio at Algiers said that the Germans had clamped down a strict martial law on the Peloponesus at the southern tip of Greece and the Vichy radio told of increasing sea clashes between Corsica and the southern French coast.

Throughout the uneasy continent the Germans reported a tightening of defenses. The United Nations radio in Algiers said that in Pomerania and East Prussia the Nazis had organized "Guerrilla detachments to deal with a possible Russian breakthrough."

Reich Fears Of Nazi D-Day 'Terror' Told

DAY

By Edwin Shanke

Stockholm, June 2 (AP)—Two responsible Swedish businessmen who have returned from an extended trip in Germany said yesterday Germans were growing worried about the possibility that Nazi forces would run amok after the Allied invasion, expected in Berlin to open this month.

Allied silence on post-war plans for the Reich also was reported by these men to be causing concern within Hitler's roofless "European fortress."

"For the first time, Berliners are anxiously discussing what will happen to Germany after the war," they said in a statement.

May Be Plant

(The Allied terms for Germany are unconditional surrender. One of the oldest of Nazi tricks is planting "feelers" in neutral nations and it may be that the Swedish businessmen, in reporting on Germany as they saw it, unconsciously relay an idea which Propaganda Minister Paul Joseph Goebbels would like to get across—a bid for specific conditions.)

The Swedes said it was no exaggeration to say Berlin residents hoped that the western invasion would end the war; that many were predicting an armistice within three or four months after the landings.

(This statement also is not out of line with Nazi propaganda policy. The aim is creation of over-confidence among the Allies.)

"Many fear that, with the end of the war in sight, the Nazis will run amok before the Allies can take a hand," the statement said.

More SS Regiments

"Heinrich Himmler is forming more and more SS regiments and recruiting more men for the Gestapo on the home front. People believe the SS will be given a free rein when the decisive battle begins to go against the Nazis.

"They expect first the wiping out (of inmates) of Jewish ghettos, concentration camps and political prisons.

"Partial confirmation of their fears is seen in Goebbels' recent signal to Germans to lynch American airmen with the promise that the Government would close its eyes to these 'spontaneous manifestations.'"

Of Germany generally, the travelers said railway traffic was always delayed, trains are overcrowded, distribution breakdowns have resulted in deterioration of the food supply, the black markets are flourishing, civilian clothing is poor and ragged uniforms are noted on soldiers on leave.

11 BITS OF MEAT RUIN NAZI MORALE

Allied Headquarters, Naples, June 2 (A. P.).—The French asserted today they had seized a Nazi battalion commander's order for the arrest of an artilleryman on charges that "of eleven portions of meat he ate ten, thereby depriving his comrades of warm food to which they were entitled."

German General Killed

New York, June 2 (AP)—The German radio said tonight that Maj. Gen. Johannes Hintz of the Anti-Aircraft Corps, had been killed in an automobile accident and also related that Major Friedrich Karl Mueller, commander of a fighter squadron and credited by Berlin with 140 air victories, had died a "hero's death."

SAY NAZIS LYNCHED SIX U. S. AVIATORS

PA

Berne, June 2 (A. P.).—The Berlin correspondent of Der Bund today placed at six the number of American airmen lynched in Germany and expressed belief that German propaganda had been interpreted by the people as "permission—even incitement"—to take Allied pilots into their own hands in disregard of the rules of international warfare.

An official announcement from Berlin, transmitted by the Swiss Telegraphic Agency, attributed the attacks to the enraged fury of primitive countryfolk, who had concluded that their action was authorized. This announcement asserted that the German police and army wish to protect aviators, but that this is not always easy, since they sometimes arrive too late to impede "excesses."

In a previous dispatch the Swedish newspaper Aftonbladet, which sometimes expresses the Nazi point of view, previously told of one lynching, while in another dispatch it told of five. Secretary Stimson said yesterday that he had no information on the reports and therefore could not comment.

Ambush Of Flyers By Nazis Reported

DAY

Barcelona, Spain, June 2 (AP)—Reports from Andorra said today that a group of 34 American and Allied flyers being guided to the Spanish frontier by Patroits had been ambushed by German border guards and that only two Americans and one French aviator escaped alive into Spain.

The advices from the tiny state high in the Pyrenees, between France and Spain, said the flyers had been sheltered by French families after being shot down. They were dressed in peasant clothes, given money and false French identity cards.

West Wall Gets Hardest Blow; Hungary Hit

HILL

DAY

London, June 2 (AP)—About 1,500 American heavy bombers and fighters struck the heaviest single blow yet at the French invasion coast today and another great armada of 600-750 four-engined planes from Italy bombed five railway yards in Hungary and Transylvania.

Mediterranean air force headquarters reported "good" results in the assaults upon Miskolc, Szolnok and Szeged in eastern Hungary and upon Cluj and Simeria in Transylvania, the mountainous Romanian province which Germany ceded partially to Hungary in 1940.

Tactical Support Of Russians

The Mediterranean strikes were in direct tactical support of the Russian armies massing in the Carpathian slopes. German troops and material had been funneled to the front over lines passing through the five tangled yards.

The Britain-based planes struck the Pas de Calais department of France and reported no sign of German fighter opposition.

Perhaps 3,000 tons of explosives were unloosed on the French fortifications, with the bombers able to carry maximum loads due to the short trip involved.

No Losses In "Wall" Raid

A United States communique said all bombers and fighters returned from the Pas-de-Calais attacks.

"No enemy fighters were encountered and flak was light," the bulletin said. "A few ground rockets were sent up. Considerable clouds were present and results were unobserved."

The Mediterranean armada was accompanied by Lightnings and Mustangs and early reports indicated no fighter opposition and very little flak. Cluj is about midway between Budapest and Bucharest. Simeria is on the line from Hungary to Ploesti, the Romanian oil center.

Szeged is five miles from the corner where the frontiers of Romania, Hungary and Yugoslavia meet and is a hub of rail lines leading to Bucharest, Budapest and Belgrade. Szolnok is 55 miles southwest of Budapest on the trunk line to the east.

Before dawn, Allied flyers struck over 2,000 miles of airways from Scandinavia to France and from Hungary to Crete.

The Pas-de-Calais section, probably the most intensively bombed area in the world for its size, is a scant 25 miles across the Channel from General Eisenhower's armies.

The department extends 90 miles into the French interior and along 35 miles of the coast and contains such familiar points as Calais; the World War I debarkation port of Boulogne; the resort Le Touquet; and Cape Griz Nez, terminal for Channel swims.

Saumur Target Of RAF

RAF heavy bombers concentrated on southwest French railyards at Saumur, 150 miles from Paris, and the French coast last night. Mediterranean forces attacked Hungarian yards 30 miles east of Budapest at Szolnok.

Mosquitos bombed a target in Denmark and the Germans reported an air attack which damaged a convoy of the west Norwegian coast. Middle East bombers attacked ports on the big Greek island of Crete. Enemy waters were mined.

Nazi Convoy Attacked

A Cairo communique said an important German convoy was attacked in the central Aegean Sea north of Crete yesterday and that four ships were left burning and others were damaged.

Two destroyers among the eight escort vessels were said to have been damaged. Ten aircraft were lost in the attacks yesterday and during the last two weeks.

The attack on the Saumur yards was made by heavy bombers of the Royal Air Force, and the Air Ministry said that attacks were also made on a military objective near the French coast, that Mosquito squadrons bombed an objective in Denmark and that mines were laid in enemy waters, all planes returning safely from all operations.

Offensive in Its Fifteenth Day.

The daylight raiders carried the second big pre-invasion offensive since the first of April into its fifteenth day. They headed toward the much-battered invasion coast between Dieppe and Boulogne and shortly afterward a rumble of explosions echoed back to England. Additional formations went out at noon, including a big force of fighters that circled around Boulogne.

An American communique said that all bombers and fighters returned. It added, however, that considerable clouds were present and results were unobserved.

In offensive sweeps into France and Germany yesterday evening RAF and RCAF fighters shot down three German planes while three planes in the attacking force were lost.

The Vichy radio said 30 persons were killed in Wednesday night's attack on Saumur, an important junction on the rail lines from central France to Nantes. It also said that 42 persons were killed in an attack last night on the northwest coast of France—possibly the unspecified military objective referred to in the Air Ministry communique.

Destruction Pictured

In a statement last night reviewing the results of the Allies' "battle of communications," the Air Ministry gave this picture of the enemy's transportation position:

1. Destruction of bridges has severely restricted military movements which involve the crossing of the Seine river within 100 miles of the coast.

2. Dislocation of the railroad system in occupied countries has driven the Germans to roads where additional bridges are out and in some places traffic jams extend for miles.

3. Earlier strategic bombings doubtless have wiped out many Nazi factories which the Germans need to produce motor vehicles.

4. In general, the capacity of the enemy to repair blasted rail lines has been swamped. Heavy British assaults on French rail centers seem to have forced the Germans to abandon their plan of trying to get all yards in full working order again, and the enemy now appears to be concentrating instead on repairing only through lines.

Col. Wilhelm Ritter von Schramm, a military commentator, said in a Berlin broadcast that large rail repair crews were busy in western Europe, working not only on bomb damage but also on "sabotage of railway installations and military buildings committed on an ever-increasing scale by groups of saboteurs provided with explosives dropped to them by air."

BRITISH PLANES HIT NAZI SHIPS

JUN 31944 DAY

London, June 2 (A. P.).—Carrier-borne aircraft of the British fleet last night attacked and damaged a strongly escorted German convoy of three supply ships off Stadtlandet on the west coast of Norway, the Admiralty announced today.

A communique said that all three supply ships were hit and that four escorting anti-aircraft vessels were damaged. Two naval fighters were reported lost in the engagement, the sixth successful strike in the last two months against Nazi shipping along the roughly indentured Norwegian coast.

A Berlin broadcast said that forty planes attacked, and eleven were shot down. It admitted minor damage to the convoy.

Since April 3 when the German battleship Tirpitz was attacked in Altenfjord, carrier-borne aircraft have sunk a large heavily laden supply ship and another medium-sized one, the Admiralty said. Eleven other supply ships and one large tanker have been severely damaged and some probably sunk.

Shore installations damaged during these attacks included oil tanks and a fishoil factory northeast of Stadtlandet.

The Admiralty said that eleven German planes have been shot down, one probably shot down and two damaged in that period, with seventeen British planes lost.

1,711 Nazi Planes Bagged In May

NIGHT DAY

London, June 2 (AP)—Flyers of the United States Strategic Air Force in Europe during May loosed more than 63,000 tons of bombs on targets in Nazi-held Europe and destroyed 1,268 enemy aircraft in the air, it was announced officially today.

Striking points from the invasion coast to the Balkans almost daily during the month, the planes on Britain and Italy amassed 49,811 sorties—30,106 by bombers and 19,705 by fighters.

Losses amounted to 481 heavy bombers and 235 fighters—at the ratio of 1.59 per cent. of bombers dispatched and 1.19 per cent. of the fighters.

The USSAFE includes the Eighth Air Force based in Britain and the Italy-based 15th Air Force section of the Mediterranean Allied Air Force, but not the latter's 12th Air Force section or RAF sections.

All Records Broken

Allied Headquarters, Naples, June 2 (AP)—The Mediterranean Allied Air Force broke all records for number of sorties (individual plane flights), bomb tonnage dropped and target destruction during May, it was announced today.

DAY

In the course of 59,000 sorties, 50,000 tons of bombs were dropped on objectives in Italy, Austria and the Balkans while tactical air force bombing and strafing accounted for 4,800 enemy vehicles damaged or destroyed along the congested highways behind the battlefront, headquarters said.

433 Nazi Planes Bagged

Four hundred and thirty-three aircraft were destroyed in combat during the month at a cost of 385 Allied planes, of which 171 were heavy bombers.

Lieut. Gen. Carl A. Spaatz, commander of the United States Strategic Air Forces, congratulated Maj. Gen. Nathan F. Twining, commander of the United States 15th Air Force, on the record, commenting specifically on the strikes against the Ploesti oil refineries in Romania.

Yanks Honor Woman Who Died Aiding Them

London, June 2 (AP)—American airmen at a Ninth Air Force base in England have contributed nearly $3,000 to an education fund for 4-year-old Tony Everitt, orphaned last Saturday when his mother saved a gunner from his crashed and burning plane and then died trying to rescue others.

Men from the base filed by a table yesterday after drawing their pay and deposited $2,000. By tonight the fund had grown to more than $2,800 and still was swelling.

Tony, meanwhile, played in his uncle's farmyard, unaware of his mother's valiant death. The plane collided with another aircraft and crashed into a field near the Everitt farmhouse and started to burn.

Mrs. Betty Everett dashed into the inferno, beat out the flames which were searing the body of the turret gunner—the only man to escape—and continued her rescue efforts until the bomber exploded.

Collier's Correspondent Takes Clipper For U. S.

Lisbon, June 2 (AP)—Alice Leone Moats, correspondent for Collier's weekly, whose passport has been canceled, said she was returning to the United States by clipper tonight.

NIGHT DAY

Miss Moats, who asserts she recently made a two-weeks' visit to France, said: "I am glad to return home to be able to tell and write my story there."

She said she was wearing home her "Paris spring hat," which she said she obtained in France.

The State Department has declined to discuss her case, but issued a general statement that anyone who entered enemy-held territory and conversed with the enemy probably would lose passport facilities.

WIND ROUGHENS DOVER STRAIT

London, June 2 (A. P.).—A fresh southwest wind that increased in strength in the morning hours made for choppy seas in Dover Strait today, while overhead skies were cloudy. The weather was cool, with the 9 A. M. temperature 56.

Conditions were a little brighter, and visibility was better than yesterday. The cloud ceiling was higher and the barometer had risen slightly.

High tides at Calais will be at 10:36 P. M. tonight (4:36 P. M. Eastern Wartime) and 11:09 A. M. tomorrow (5:09 A. M. Eastern Wartime).

Pigeon English

DAY

London, June 2 (Reuter)—Wartime West End traffic was held up at the junction of two busy streets for half an hour today because a pigeon attempting to carry a piece of wire to the nest it was building between two advertisement boards, had become entangled in the wire and was hanging head down 30 feet up.

People shouted to the police to rescue the bird, but it remained suspended until a detachment of the fire brigade arrived with an escape and brought it to safety.

A fireman who set it free was loudly cheered.

Footnote: The hoarding over which the pigeon hung carried a notice of a new film, "The Tawny Pipit."

Train Explodes In Britain

NIGHT DAY

East Anglia, June 2 (Reuter)—A small East Anglian town and several surrounding villages were rocked early today when an ammunition train blew up in the town's railway station.

Station buildings and a signal box were wrecked; several houses flattened to the ground, and windows blown out all over the town.

The London and Northeastern Railway issued the following statement today:

"When a freight train was passing through a station in East Anglia this morning there was a violent explosion.

Fireman Killed

"Reports indicate that two cars of bombs caught fire and exploded, resulting in casualties and extensive damage.

"The fireman of the train, named Nightall, was killed, and Engineer Ginbert seriously injured.

"The station master, Mr. Oliver, and his son and Signalman Riches were badly injured."

The fire spread along the train and also broke out in the gas works adjoining the station.

All the air-raid-precaution services went into action.

Rest Center Opened

Rescue parties burrowed into the wreckage of houses for people who were trapped, and a rest center had to be opened in the local grammar school for people whose homes were wrecked or made temporarily uninhabitable.

Early today "Queens Messengers" mobile canteens arrived in the little town to provide food for the homelss people, while officials were arranging for the provision of clothing to some of the people who had been left with little more than their nightclothes.

Bomb Train Explosion Wrecks British Town

NIGHT SINGLETON

London, June 2 (AP)—Two trainmen were killed and an estimated 200 persons injured today in the explosion of a bomb-laden train, which blew up with such force that homes in a near-by Cambridgeshire market town were wrecked.

The blast was said to have damaged 75 per cent. of the town's houses. The explosion was felt as much as 20 miles away. Some homes were flattened, and the roofs were ripped from others.

Air-raid precaution services were called out for the emergency. Ambulances rushed the injured to hospitals and first-aid centers.

London, June 2 (A. P.).—Lord Nathan urged today a system of diminishing rents for increasing families. "You can imagine few slogans better than 'The bigger the family, the lower the rent,'" he told a meeting of building societies.

Liberation.

"The time has come when we feel entitled to ask for a clear understanding," the Daily Mail said. The newspaper added that British refusal to recognize the committee was in deference to United Stats wishes.

Confusion Foreseen

"Unless some sort of an agreement is reached with De Gaulle about the part the National Committee is to play in the liberation of France there will almost certainly be confusion worse confounded in liberated areas," said the News-Chronicle.

The News-Chronicle's diplomatic correspondent wrote that if any British-French agreement is not binding on Gen. Dwight D. Eisenhower, Allied invasion commander, "as military representative of one Allied power he might be forced to take political decisions which would conflict with the contractual obligations of another Allied power."

Clear Understanding

Concern over apparent differences in American and British foreign policy was expressed editorially by the London Star which called for a clearer understanding generally and particularly for an agreement on French relations.

Welcoming the prospect of a new Roosevelt-Churchill meeting, the newspaper said: "Indeed the sooner it takes place the better. If the two leaders could talk over together their policy on France and Spain, they might be expected to achieve an identity of views which at this moment appears to be lacking. When the Allies are fighting so brilliantly together, it would be a pity if they failed to keep step politically."

FRENCH PATRIOTS FIGHT VICHY MEN

DAY

Barcelona, June 2 (A. P.).—French advices said today that the entire Limoges district of central France was gripped by fratricidal war with 7,000 patriots holding at bay nearly 5,000 Vichy militiamen in a prolonged battle for a main line railroad town.

The fight in the wild, mountainous Limoges region was said to have started on May 27 and lasted for three days, subsiding last Tuesday when Vichy reinforcements drove the patriots from the besieged town on the Paris-Toulouse main line. The battle was reported renewed today.

The Germans were said to have not yet entered the action. The reports said the outnumbered patriots in some sections were being forced back into the forests of mountains south of Limoges. The patriots, known as the Maquis, were reported well supplied with light arms but hopelessly outclassed by Vichy artillery and armored cars.

JUN 31944

MOORE KNIGHT

Pope Decries Total Victory Idea

London, June 2 (AP)—Pope Pius declared today that the idea that the war must end in complete victory or complete destruction is "a stimulant toward prolonging the war," and, expressing hope for an early peace, he praised "the heralds of wisdom and moderation" as against those "who openly espouse vengeance."

Addressing the College of Cardinals on his name day, the Pontiff said, as Allied armies approached Rome, that "whoever dared raise a hand" against the city "would be guilty of matricide," and in a discussion of Christianity's current influence in world affairs he decried "cleavages from the church" and the "vast division and dispersal of religious confessions."

Replies To Contentions

Speaking less than two months after the Patriarch of Russia and the Archbishop of York had repudiated the Pope in his role as Christ's vicar on earth, Pius declared that those who so contended "are ignoring and misinterpreting the profound meaning of Papal Primacy."

Leading into his discussion of the prolongation of the war, the Pope declared that "while the instruments of destruction have reached a potency never before known, and while the world finds itself on the eve of still more dramatic and, according to some, decisive events, the discussion of the fundamental outlook and of the detailed guiding principles of the future peace attracts more and more participants."

"Yet," he continued, "besides the heralds of wisdom and moderation there are not wanting others who scarcely dissimulate their program of violence or who openly espouse vengeance. . . .

"Courage Of Desperation"

"In many is thus born the impression or the fear that there may not be, even for the peoples and nations as such, any alternative but this: A complete victory or complete destruction.

"When once this sharp dilemma has entered men's minds, its baneful influence is a stimulant toward prolonging the war, and even among those who by natural impulse or for realistic considerations would be disposed to a reasonable peace, the specter of that alternative and the conviction of a real or supposed will of the enemy to [illegible] life to the very destroy national life to the very roots, smothers all other reflections and instills into many the courage of desperation.

"Scourge Of The Age To Come"

"Those who are under the domination of such feelings go on, as in a hypnotic sleep, through abysses of unspeakable sacrifice and constrain others to a war of extermination that drains their lifeblood, a war whose economic, social and spiritual consequences threaten to become the scourge of the age to come.

"It is, therefore, of the greatest importance that this fear should give way to a well-founded expectation of honorable solutions; solutions that are not ephemeral or carry the germs of fresh turmoil and dangers to peace, but are true and durable; solutions that start from the principle that wars, today, no less than in the past, cannot easily be laid to the account of peoples, as such."

Fervent Wish For Early Peace

The Pontiff closed "with the most fervent wish that the grace of Almighty God may cause to break soon over the hills of the Eternal City and over the whole world, the dawn of such a peace."

Regarding the approach of battle toward Rome, the Pope noted that "the threat of air raids on districts not beyond the outer parts of Rome has given way in fact to conduct that shows greater regard," and added:

"We nourish the hope that this more equitable and moderate trend will prevail over the opposing considerations of seeming utility and so-called military exigencies or needs, and that the Eternal City in every eventuality and at all costs, may be saved from becoming a theater of war."

Rome's Plight Described

Declaring that Rome was crowded with refugees making problems "which are at times almost insoluble," the Pope remarked that "in few parts of Italy, not to say of the world, is there experienced at the present moment as extensively as in Rome and its environs the want of the necessities of life. . . ."

The Pope declared that "today, in fact, more than ever before, is to be seen by any clear-sighted and honest observer, the sadly deficient balance sheet which cleavages from the church in the course of centuries have effected for Christendom.

". . . How much more efficacious would be the influence of Christian thought and Christian life on the moral substructure of the future plans for peace and social reconstruction, if there were not this vast division and dispersal of religious confessions, that in the course of time detached themselves from the Mother Church."

Regarding the position of the Pope, Pius declared:

"Between Christ and Peter (the first Pope) there reigns . . . a mysterious but eminently real bond which was effected once in time but which draws its roots from the eternal counsels of the Almighty. . . . The Eternal Father . . . had from all eternity predestined the fisherman of Bethsaida for his singular office. And Christ himself only fulfilled the will of His Father when, promising and conferring the primacy, he used expressions which were to fix forever the uniqueness of Peter's privileged position.

Address In Italian Broadcast

"Those, therefore, who—as was said (or better, repeated) some time ago by representatives of religious confessions who profess themselves Christian—declare that there is no Vicar of Christ on earth because Christ himself promised to remain with His church as its head and Lord to the end of time, besides depriving the whole episcopal office of its foundation, are ignoring and misinterpreting the profound meaning of Papal Primacy, which is not the negation but the fulfillment of that promise."

The Pope's address, delivered in Italian, was broadcast by the Vatican radio.

Text of Pope's Address to College of Cardinals

An official translation of the Pope's address to the College of Cardinals yesterday as received in New York by The Associated Press follows:

"It is a full year, venerable brethren, since we had the consolation of receiving for the fifth time, on the feast day of our holy patron and predecessor, from the lips of the much-loved and venerated Cardinal Dean whom we are sorry not to see in our midst today, your devoted congratulations, your offering of prayers, the promise of your complete dedication of yourselves to the ever-growing tasks and to the grave responsibilities of the apostolic ministry, and the reiterated pledge of your unfailing participation in the cares and anxieties that weigh on the father of Christendom. A year has gone, a brief span of time, and yet so filled with hate and mournful happenings and unmeasured unspeakable suffering; for the terrible tragedy of the world war, as it unfolds itself before and around us has reached a pitch and kind of frightfulness which smite and shock every Christian and human sense. That is why, as this our feast day comes around, and we see you gathered here once again, we feel the need of confiding to you the intimate anguish of our soul and of deploring, with you, the rampant and sanguinary accumulation of destruction, ruin and carnage, so vast that what, a year ago, many might have thought impracticable or impossible is now, alas, a reality.

The Eternal City, mother cell of civilization, and even holy ground around the tomb of St. Peter, have had to learn by experience how far the spirit inspiring present-day methods of warfare, for a variety of reasons becoming ever more ferocious, has departed from those abiding norms which were once hailed as inviolable laws. On the other hand, amidst so much suffering, we do not wish to overlook the fact that threat of air raids on districts not beyond the outer parts of Rome has given way, in fact, to conduct that shows greater regard. We nourish hope that this more equitable and moderate trend will prevail over the opposing considerations of seeming utility and so-called military exigencies or needs, and that the Eternal City in every eventuality and at all costs, may be saved from becoming a theater of war. We therefore do not hesitate to repeat once again, with complete impartiality and due firmness: whoever dared raise a hand against Rome would be guilty of matricide in the eyes of the civilized world and in the eternal judgments of God. If we now pass on to consider the present state of affairs throughout the world, we find ourselves confronted with events which, in their spiritual and material issues, fill our souls with justifiable anxiety.

His Heavy Burden

The bitter dissensions and quarrels between children of the same people, while carrying with them the germs of more serious consequences, create an atmosphere in which authority of the Church (which stands above all earthly and passing currents of thought) finds itself drawn by both sides into a vortex of controversies which not infrequently creates lack of essential clarity of ideas and true balance of judgment. Thus it is that the heavy responsibility that weighs on our weak shoulders increases and intensifies to a degree unknown in other times and demands from us from day to day and from hour to hour an indefatigable largeness of heart open to all souls who seek sincerely the true and the good.

[His Holiness referred to the activity of the Apostolic See in defense of justice and in relief of want.]

Here we may aptly appeal to the thoughts expressed in 449 by an eastern bishop, Eusebius of Dorileus, in a letter to Pope Leo the Great. "The Apostolic Throne," he writes "has been from the beginning accustomed to defend those who suffered injustice . . . to relieve, as far as it could, the prostrate: you indeed commiserate all men. The reason is that you are inspired by the sense of right and keep inviolate the faith towards our Lord Jesus Christ, as you also portray a genuine charity toward all the brethren and toward every one who is called in the name of Christ." These noble words, which pay tribute to the constant defense of truth and right by this Apostolic See, and to its practical charity toward all who suffer and are oppressed, were inspired by the experience of the first centuries of Christendom. But the Roman Church thanks and praises Our Lord for having maintained, with the help of the divine assistance, this holy custom in successive ages, also. Thus it is that one of the best-known historians of the nineteenth century, a man who certainly is under no suspicion of being favorable to the See of Peter, did not hesitate to make this confession at the end of his work on the city of Rome in the Middle Ages: "History has not sufficient titles for heroes . . . with which to indicate even approximately the world-wide activity, the great achievements and the imperishable glory of the Popes. (Indication reference work of Ferdinand Gregorovius)."

Relief of Indigence

Following, therefore, the example of our predecessors we, too, venerable brethren, in this period of unparalleled want and poverty, deem it our sacred duty to devote our pastoral care to an extent hitherto scarcely surpassed or reached, to the indigence which surrounds us on every side and calls for help. It is not that the Church, least of all at the present moment, aspires in any way after earthly advantage or human glory; for our thoughts, day and night, are bent on one only purpose: How we may be able to meet this bitter trial, helping all without distinction of nationality or race, and how we may help toward restoring peace at last to tortured mankind. (Referring to his anxiety about the serious situation in Rome.) If at the moment our anxiety is especially for Rome it is because such sentiments are evoked by the pitiable conditions in which so large a part of the population of the city —which is also our diocese— finds itself. It is certainly not the first time that the storm has smitten the Eternal City. Christian Rome, in the course of its history, has known other very bitter calamities: occupation and sackings, from that of Alaric to the terrible sack of 1527; internal party strife as in the tenth century; dereliction as in the Avignon period and at the time of the great western schism; pests, as in the calamitous days of St. Gregory and under Pope Sixtus IV; starvation and famine from natural causes, as during the reign of Clement XIII in the years 1763 and 1764.

During this last public calamity the famished crowds also flocked to Rome from all the states of the church and even from Tuscany and Naples, and the provision of food and lodging for them demanded the greatest exertion. The Pope, with untiring and generous hand, succeeded in averting a catastrophe. But what were the 6,000 refugees of that occasion, joined to the less than 160,000 Romans—the whole of the Papal States numbered a little more than 2,000,000 souls—what were they, we say, in comparison with the situation of today with the sum of the population, with the want, the risks, the worries, the separations, the sufferings of all kinds by which they are stricken and intimidated? In few parts of Italy, not to say of the world, is there experienced at the present moment as extensively as in Rome and its environs the want of the necessities of life and the danger that this want may culminate in an all but incalculable impoverishment of whole masses of the people. On the other hand, the force of the attraction which the Eternal City exerts on many war victims, who come here in search of shelter and help, brings those who provide for their housing and feeding face to face with problems which are at times almost insoluble. In spite of laudable zeal of public authorities and charitable associations, the army of poor grows from day to day. With ever greater anxiety these unfortunate ones turn their gaze, and with ever greater insistence outhold their hands to the common father: few of them find themselves now constrained to seek that charity which but yesterday they themselves generously dispensed.

Seeks Food by Sea

To the very utmost limit of our means and our powers, helped and supported by the offerings of generous souls, by the organizing activity of provident and industrious experts, by the courage and self-sacrifice of upright and capable workers, (to all of whom we wish to express our lively gratitude) we have often been able to send into the gloom of direst misery and cruelest abandonment a comforting ray of light in the form of practical paternal charity; it has not, alas, always been adequate to the vast need or to the deeper promptings of our heart. Without shirking any sacrifice, neither losing courage because of any refusal nor fearful before any violation of our rights, we have contributed uninterruptedly as far as we could toward providing the population of Rome and the country around it with at least the most urgent and essential food. We have also initiated negotiations in order to secure the transport of food by sea in Papal ships. But we are still waiting for the consent of one of the belligerents to this undertaking, which would provide a really efficacious remedy for the immense evil. In any event, we shall not, for our part, diminish our efforts to surmount obstacles and to overcome opposition in order that this, our native city and our Episcopal See, which today, as at no other period, counts within its wall sons and daughters of every region of Italy, may be spared as far as possible, in one of the gravest moments her history, so rich in glory and sorrow, from having to apply to itself the words of the prophet "all her people sigh, they seek bread (Lamentations i, 2) the little ones have asked for bread and there was none to break it unto them" (Lamentations iv, 4).

But above such external cares and those of particular duties imposed by the contingencies of time and place, there stands, venerable brethren, our supreme and paramount duty, from whose full and conscientious fulfillment no human power can detach us, no external crisis distract us; it is the unquestioning obedience to the commandment of Our Lord: "Feed my lambs: feed my sheep" (John xxi, 15-17). This divine command, which from the first Peter has passed down through the long line of Roman Pontiffs, even to us, their unworthy successor, entails in the confused and torn world of today an even vaster multitude of responsibilities, and meets with obstacles and opposition which demand that the church, in her visible head and in her members, be ever more on the alert and vigilant.

Deplores Cleavages From Church

Today, in fact, more than ever before, is to be seen by any clear-sighted and honest observer the sadly deficient balance sheet which cleavages from the church in the course of centuries have effected for Christendom. In a turbulent and afflicted age like ours, when mankind is engaged in reaping the consequences of a spiritual decadence that has hurled it into the abyss, and when in every nation voices are raised to insist that for the gigantic work of restoring order anew not only external guaranties but the essential juridical and moral foundations be secured, it is of vital importance to know what influence the current of Christian ideas and of Christian moral standards can exert on the content and on the spirit of such a future reconstruction and what influence it can have to prevent false and dangerous tendencies again predominating. Mother Church, Catholic, Roman, she who has remained faithful to the constitution received from her Divine Founder, and who even today stands firmly on the solid rock on which He willed to found her, possesses in the primacy of Peter and of his legitimate successors the assurance, guaranteed by Divine promises, of maintaining and transmitting whole and inviolate, through centuries and tens of centuries, even to the end of time, the whole body of truth and grace contained in the redemptive mission of Christ. And while she finds in the stimulating and comforting consciousness of this double possession her force to conquer all the darkness of error and all moral deviations, she exerts her activity to the advantage not only of Christendom but of the entire world, inspiring sentiments of justice and of genuine fraternal charity in those great divergencies in which blessings and calamities, abundant harvests and poor gleanings often are to be found side by side.

But how much more potent and efficacious would be the influence of Christian thought and Christian life on the moral substructure of the future plans for peace and social reconstruction, if there were not this vast division and dispersal of religious confessions, that in the course of time have detached themselves from Mother Church. Who today can fail to recognize what substance of faith, what a genuine power of resistance to anti-religious influences is lost in many groups as a result of that separation? A striking proof—among many others—of this painful reality is afforded by the history of rationalism and naturalism in the past two centuries. In those quarters where the office of "confirming his brethren" (Luke xxii, 32), committed to him who is invested with the primacy, cannot exercise and exert its preservative and protective activity, the cockle of rationalism has penetrated in a thousand different forms, with its stalks and baneful offshoots, into the thought and mentality of many souls who call themselves Christian, and has poisoned what was still left in them of the divine seed of revealed truth, spreading everywhere darkness, schism and a growing abandonment of faith in the divinity of Christ.

Between Christ and Peter there reigns, from the day of the promise near Cesarea Philippi and that of the fulfillment by the Sea of Tiberias, a mysterious but eminently real bond which was effected once in time but which draws its roots from the eternal counsels of the Almighty. The Eternal Father, who revealed to Simon bar Jona the mystery of the Divine Sonship of Christ, and thus rendered him capable of answering with an open and ready confession the question of our Redeemer, had from all eternity predestined the fisherman of Bethsaida for his singular office. And Christ Himself only fulfilled the will of His Father when, promising and conferring the primacy, He used expressions which were to fix forever the uniqueness of Peter's privileged position.

Replies to Attacks

Those, therefore, who—as was said (or better, repeated) some time ago by representatives of religious confessions who profess themselves Christian—declare that there is no Vicar of Christ on earth, because Christ himself promised to remain with His Church as its Head and Lord to the end of time, besides depriving the whole Episcopal office of its foundation are ignoring and misinterpreting the profound meaning of papal primacy, which is not the negation but the fulfilment of that promise. For if it be true that Christ in the fullness of His divine power disposes of the most varied forms of enlightment and sanctification, in which He is really with those who confess Him, it is no less certain that he wished to entrust to Peter and to successors the guidance and government of the Universal Church and the treasures of truth and grace of His work of redemption.

The words of Christ to Peter leave no doubt as to their meaning: that was recognized by West and East in times that cannot be questioned and with marvelous harmony. To try to create an opposition between Christ as Head of the Church and His vicar, to see in the affirmation of one the negation of the other, means distorting the clearest and most luminous pages of the Gospel. It means closing one's eyes to the most ancient and venerable testimonies of tradition, and depriving Christendom of that precious heritage, the correct knowledge and appreciation of which, at the moment known only to God and by the light of grace which He alone gives, can instill into the separated brethren the longing to return to their Father's house, and the efficacious will to come back to it.

Every year when, on the eve of the Prince of the Apostles, we visit our patriarchial Vatican basilica to implore at the tomb of the first Peter the strength to serve the flock committed to us according to the designs and purposes of the eternal and supreme Priest, from the majestic architrave of that lofty temple there appear before our gaze in glittering mosaic the words of power with which Christ manifested his intention of founding the Church on the rock of Peter; and they remind us of our insistent duty to keep intact that incomparable heritage of our Divine Redeemer. Then as we see glistening before us the "Gloria" of Bernini, and above the chair, held aloft by the giant figures of Ambrose and Augustine, Athanasius and John Chrysostom, behold refulgent and supreme, the symbol of the Holy Spirit, we are deeply conscious of all the sacred character, all the superhuman mission, which the will of our Lord with the assistance of the spirit whom He promised and sent, has conferred on this central point of the Church of the Living God, "the pillar and ground of truth" (I Timothy iii, 15). And in this octave of Pentecost there breaks forth from our heart and our lips the invocation to the Creator Spirit that He may arouse in our separated brethren the desire to return to the unity they desire."

"Unsurpassed Field of Action"

Would that all those who are counted Christians could understand what an unsurpassed field of action would be open to Christianity at the present moment if, in full unity of faith and purpose, they were to dedicate their activity to saving the human family and preparing it for a better future. One thing that has contributed significantly towards making men open their hearts to the hope of this fair and more peaceful morrow is the fact that, while the instruments of destruction have reached a potency never before known, and while the world finds itself on the eve of still more dramatic and, according to some, decisive events, the discussion of the fundamental outlook and of the detailed guiding principles of the future peace attracts more and more participants; the numbers and the interest of those joining in that discussion grow from hour to hour.

Yet beside the heralds of wisdom and moderation there are not wanting others who scarcely dissimulate their program of violence or who openly espouse vengeance. While the former follow the suggestion of that Greek leader, of whom we read that he reckoned that victory outstanding in which clemency prevailed over cruelty, the latter, on the contrary, recall vividly the saying of Cicero that victory is essentially insolent and overbearing. In many is thus born the impression or the fear that there may not be, even for the peoples and nations as such, any alternative but this: a complete victory or complete destruction. When once this sharp dilemma has entered men's minds, its baneful influence is a stimulant toward prolonging the war, even among those who by natural impulse or for realistic considerations would be disposed to a reasonable peace. The specter of that alternative, and the conviction of a real or supposed will of the enemy to destroy national life to the very roots, smothers all other reflections and instills into many the courage of desperation. Those who are under the domination of such feelings go on, as in a hypnotic sleep, through abysses of unspeakable sacrifice and constrain others to a war of extermination that drains their life blood, a war whose economic, social and spiritual consequences threaten to become the scourge of the age to come.

It is, therefore, of the greatest importance that this fear should give way to a well-founded expectation of honorable solutions; solutions that are not ephemeral or carry the germs of fresh turmoil and dangers to peace, but are true and durable; solutions that start from the principle that wars, today, no less than in the past, cannot easily be laid to the account of peoples, as such. You, venerable brethren, know well how, in fulfillment of the serious obligation imposed by our apostolic ministry, we have already on several occasions, in concrete form, outlined the essential fundamentals, according to Christian thought, not only with regard to peaceful relations and international collaboration among men, but also with regard to the internal order of state and peoples.

Today we limit ourselves to observing that any right solution of the world conflict must take into consideration and treat as quite distinct, two grave and complex questions: the guilt of beginning and of prolonging the war on the one hand, and on the other, the kind of peace and its maintenance; it is a distinction which naturally leaves untouched the demands for a just expiation of acts of violence, not really called for by the conduct of the war, committed against persons or things, as well as the guaranties necessary for the defense of right against possible attempts of violence. These two different aspects of the formidable problem have been widely echoed in the conscience of peoples; and in the public declaration of competent authorities has been expressed the resolution and decision to give to the world, at the end of the armed conflict, a peace that all nations can bear.

A Plea for Justice

We desire and hope that the prolongation of the war, together with the progressive harshening of the methods of warfare and the resulting heightening of tension and exasperation of spirit, do not end by lessening and extinguishing these healthy sentiments and along with them, the readiness to subordinate the instincts of vengeance and anger which is the enemy of counsel, to the majesty of justice and equanimity. In any war where one of the belligerents succeeded only through the power of the sword and other means of irresistible coercion, in reaching a clean and unquestioned victory, it would find itself in the position of being physically able to dictate an inequitable peace imposed by force. But it is certain that nobody, whose conscience is illumined by the principles of true justice, could recognize in such a precarious solution of character of assured and prudent wisdom.

Although in the nature of things it may be that the period of transition that runs from the termination of hostilities and the formal conclusion of peace to the attainment of normal social stability is determined, in large part, by the power of the victor over the vanquished, nevertheless wise, and hence moderate, political skill never forgets or fails to give the losing side the hope—we should like to say confidence—that even to their people and its vital necessities a worthy place be prepared and juridically assigned. We should, therefore, wish that governments and peoples should keep before their minds, at least as an ideal at which to aim, the words spoken in compliment to Marcus Claudius Marcellus by the most distinguished orator of ancient Rome: "To conquer one's self, to curb anger, to spare the vanquished, to raise the fallen enemy—a man who does this I shall not compare with the greatest of men, but will deem as most like to a god."

We nourish the hope that all our sons and daughters scattered over the earth may have a lively consciousness of their collective and individual share in the responsibility for the setting up and organization of a public order confirmable to the fundamental exigencies of the human and Christian conscience, being always mindful of the fact that for those who glory in the name of Christian, every peace proposal is always made under the unerring standard: "To reject all that is hostile to that name, and to promote that which is consonant with it."

With the fervent wish that the grace of Almighty God may cause to break soon, over the hills of the Eternal City and over the whole world, the dawn of such a peace, we express to you, venerable brethren, our sincere gratitude for the good wishes so kindly offered us through your eminent vice-dean, while we impart from our heart on you and all those especially dear to you in the Lord, our apostolic benediction.

Plans To Supply Rome Told In D.C.

JUN 31944 DAY

Washington, June 2 (AP)—Several propositions have been made for moving food and medical supplies to Rome under Vatican sponsorship, it was indicated in diplomatic quarters today.

At least one was definitely turned down by Allied authorities as being contrary to Allied military interests. Another and later plan apparently still is pending.

Some American officials suggested that the progress of Allied forces south of Rome might make the whole question of moving supplies into the city through German lines purely academic. Relief and assistance for the city will become strictly an Allied responsibility once it is captured.

Pope's Statement

In discussing the problem today, Pope Pius said that negotiations had been started to "bring food in by way of the sea. But the consent of one belligerent still is awaited."

None here would venture a guess as to which plan the Pope referred.

Those which have been considered include:

Generalissimo Francisco Franco of Spain recently placed at the disposition of the Pontiff a ship to carry medical supplies and some foodstuffs from Barcelona to a port near Rome. The supplies were reported available but the shipment was being held up pending arrangements with the belligerents.

Supplies From North

Earlier, Vatican authorities are said to have proposed the movement of supplies by sea from German-held northern Italy to a Germanheld port near Rome from which they could have been trucked overland to Rome. The Germans approved this plan and Allied safe-conduct was sought.

It was turned down by General Sir Henry Maitland Wilson, Allied Mediterranean commander, and also by the chiefs of staff here. The military men are said to have decided that the ships under safe-conduct could be misused by the Germans and also that it is the responsibility of a belligerent power to support the civilian populations under its control.

Finns Report Red Attacks In North

JUN 31944 DAY

London, June 2 (AP)—A broadcast of a Finnish communique heard in London today reported strong Russian attacks on two fronts facing Finland—on the Karelian Isthmus, northwest of Leningrad, and between Lakes Ladoga and Onega. Moscow made no mention of these actions, but told of a two-hour skirmish southeast of Stanislawow, in old Poland, that cost the Germans 100 dead, and of scouting action northwest of Vitebsk, in White Russia.

Moscow also announced that Red army troops have smashed all German attempts to crack the Russian lines north of Iasi in Romania and have even counterattacked in some sectors, inflicting heavy casualties.

A broadcast Soviet communique, telling of the fourth successive day of battle north of the Moldavian province city, said 800 Nazi soldiers were killed and 17 tanks were knocked out.

Three Separate Drives

Throwing in large forces of tanks and infantry, the Nazis made three separate thrusts, but were stopped by Soviet artillery, mortar and machine-gun fire, the communique declared. Red tanks and infantry launched successful counterattacks on some sectors.

The Berlin radio acknowledged that Soviet resistance had "stiffened considerably" and said the Red army was counterattacking at some points "to regain lost territory."

In one sector a Romanian infantry regiment struck at advanced Soviet positions, but suffered heavy casualties and fell back under a Russian counterblow, the Moscow communique said.

GERMANS DENT RUSSIAN LINES

Moscow Says Enemy Paid Dearly For Small Wedge

LANDSTROM

London, Saturday, June 3 (AP). Nazi troops, attacking savagely with large forces of tanks and infantry through the fourth day of their battles in the Moldavian province of Romania, have driven another dent into Russian lines northwest of Iasi, Moscow acknowledged last night.

"An insignificant wedge" was accomplished by the Germans at the cost of heavy losses in manpower and equipment in a series of blows northwest of the town, the Russians said in their broadcast communique recorded by the Soviet monitor.

Further Attacks Beaten Off

The term used in the communique was the same as Moscow had used to describe the Germans' initial puncture of Russian defenses north of Iasi when the battle opened Tuesday, breaking a six weeks' lull on the main eastern front.

The Germans continued to attack yesterday north of Iasi in the same area as the original blows, but Moscow said all of these thrusts were repulsed.

During the day's fighting 25 German tanks were destroyed, "according to preliminary data," the communique stated.

On other sectors of the front Moscow said there were no essential changes.

Berlin Tells Of 1,000 Plane Action

Moscow made no mention of air action in the communique, but earlier the German radio had said that at least 1,000 Nazi planes were in action over the Romanian front and even so conceded that the Russians held air superiority there.

One Berlin broadcast called the fighting in the Iasi area "exceptionally violent" and declared that the Russians were making strong counterattacks in an effort to regain heights taken previously by the Germans.

A dispatch by DNB said a bloody contest continued for the town of Stanca, north of Iasi, which it claimed was still in German hands.

Soviet counterattacks in the Kolomea area of the Carpathian foothills and near Vitebsk in White Russia also were related by the German radio.

900 Germans Killed

In one sector of the front around Iasi, the midnight supplement to the Soviet communique said, 900 Germans were killed, seven tanks and three self-propelled guns destroyed and a considerable number of prisoners taken.

Southeast of Stanislawow the Germans lost more than 200 dead as well as two armored troop carriers and several self-orppelled guns during a small-scale skirmish, Moscow added.

The supplement said Russian bombers off the northern coast of Norway sank a 4,000-ton German transport and damaged another and that Soviet torpedo cutters sank three enemy patrol vessels in the Gulf of Narva.

WALLACE SPEECH HAILED IN SIBERIA

JUN 31944

Vice President, on Way to China, Gives Talk in Russian for Unity in Peace

NIGHT

LONDON, June 2 (AP).—Vice President Wallace of the United States, en route to China, told a Russian audience that full collaboration among the United States, the Soviet Union and their allies was necessary to insure world peace, the Moscow radio said tonight.

Speaking in Russian, Mr. Wallace addressed a gathering in the opera house at Irkutsk, Siberia, and was greeted warmly, the radio reported.

"Men born in wide, free spaces will not brook injustice and tryanny," he said. "They will not even temporarily live in slavery.

"Now that the early dawn of the future post-war world is slowly rising on the horizon, it is becoming quite clear that only the full collaboration between our two great countries and their allies can insure to the world a stable peace and true development."

He told the audience that development of the American Northwest, Canada, Alaska and Soviet Siberia must play an important part in post-war reconstruction.

"These huge, thinly populated territories have been conquered in our time by aviation. Now both their agriculture and their industry stand in need of development," Mr. Wallace asserted.

"The duty of the United States and of Canada is to make a decisive effort in the task of developing their northern regions, as has been demonstrated by the Soviet Union in its task of developing Siberia and the Far East."

The Vice President said he landed last week and had visited Uelkal-Seymchan, Magadan and Komsomolsk, the Moscow broadcast related, and gave this account of his talk:

"I can bear witness to the willingness with which your citizens give their utmost efforts in mines, aircraft factories and metallurgical works."

U. S. OFFICERS LAUD CHINESE SOLDIERS

Chungking, June 2 (A. P.). Lieut.-Gen. Joseph W. Stilwell's headquarters paid high tribute today to the work of the Chinese soldier in the Yunnan campaign. American officers with the Chinese troops, the communique said, "have reported that the Chinese soldier has proved his bravery and fortitude in the face of incredible terrain and supply difficulties."

It added: "Close Chinese-American co-operation in the field is solving the world's toughest supply problem and enables the Chinese armies to continue on the offensive."

DAY

ALLIES FIGHTING INSIDE MYITKYINA

Southeast Asia Command Headquarters, Kandy, Ceylon, June 2 (A. P.).—American and Chinese forces attacking the big Japanese base of Myitkyina on three sides advanced 400 yards in the southern part of the town and gained nearly a mile in the northwest, Allied headquarters said today.

The forces made progress both outside and within the town—a place 7,000 in North Burma—inflicting severe casualties, the communique added. The column advancing from the northwest gained 1,500 yards despite stiff opposition.

West of the Mogaung River, Chinese units with artillery support continued their advance from Malakawng. Another force attacked a Japanese disposition south of the isolated base of Kamaing in a stab on the main Mogaung valley highway near Seton. In northwest India, the Allies employed tanks against invading Japanese in the Kohima area and continued clearing the area "with success." Hills were seized.

Allies Gain 400 Yards in City Proper, Advance 1,500 Yards in Push From Northeast

GRUMICH

SOUTHEAST ASIA HEADQUARTERS, Kandy, Ceylon, June 2 (AP)—Americans and Chinese, attacking from three sides, are gaining steadily within and outside the north Burma Japanese bastion of Myitkyina, an Allied communiqué announced today.

One column striking from the northwest gained 1,500 yards in the face of stubborn opposition, another made progress from the north and resistance cost the Japanese heavily in casualties, while in the southern part of the town itself, Allied troops, slugging doggedly forward, gained an additional 400 yards.

NIGHT

West of the Mogaung River Chinese units, supported by artillery, advanced from Malakawng, enemy strong point reported taken yesterday, and to the west, south of Kamiang, another Chinese element struck at a Japanese party near Seton, the bulletin said.

Before they withdrew from a block southwest of Mogaung, the communiqué said, Maj. Gen. W. D. A. Lentaigne's Chindits "are now known to have killed more than 700 Japanese."

This brought the claimed total for the Chindits to at least 3,700 Japanese slain thus far in the Burma campaign.

Reliable reports said Japanese efforts to reinforce the sandwiched Mogaung Valley and Myitkyina forces were stymied on all sides.

[On the Yunnan front, a Chinese communiqué said that Peichaikungfang, strongly defended by a series of pillboxes, was partially occupied by Chinese troops. The town lies north of the Burma Road, prize sought in both the Burma and Yunnan fighting.]

American heavy and medium bombers attacked Bhamo and Tahoma Wednesday and railyards at Yeu, destroying numerous buildings and kindling several fires, it was announced today. They also bombed the Tiddim Road on the frontier. American fighters and bombers attacked troops, positions and river craft in the Myitkyina and Mogaung theatre. Long-range British fighters strafed the south Burma railroad between the Gulf of Martaban port of Moulmein and Pegu. Two Allied planes were lost.

CHINESE HALT ONE JAP COLUMN

MOOSA DA

Chungking, June 2 (A. P.).—The Chinese command asserted today that a Japanese column advancing on Changsha along the Canton-Hankow railroad had been halted but that other units of the 280,000 enemy troops massed in the offensive have taken Pingkiang, fifty miles northeast of the provincial capital. The Chinese said that they had retaken Kweiyi, forty-two miles north of Changsha, from Japanese who had crossed the Milo River. The town was said to have changed hands several times in fighting which cost both sides heavily.

Chungking, June 2 (A. P.).—A Chinese communique said today that in Yunnan Province, where 20,000 American-trained Chinese are advancing across the Salween river and helping Gen. Stilwell squeeze the north Burma base of Myitkyina, advances were made despite heavy rain, mud and mist.

The communique recorded a Japanese advance in the Changsha theater to a point twenty-two miles east of Changteh.

Major-Gen. C. C. Tseng, Army spokesman, made the estimate of 280,000 Japanese troops massed in the Hankow and Canton area and said that they expected to seize the entire length of the Canton-Hankow railroad and strike new blows elsewhere in China.

The forces comprise 210,000 in the Hankow area and 70,000 in the Canton area, compared with a force of only 40,000 hitherto employed, Gen. Tseng said.

The Japanese are massing troops on the Indo China - Yunnan border, building a new motor highway between Hanoi and the frontier town of Laokay, 160 airline miles northwest of Hanoi, and constructing a big air base near the border, Gen. Tseng said.

JAPANESE TAKE 2 STRONG POINTS

EAST OF CHANGTEH

NEA

CHUNGKING, June 2—(AP) The Japanese have captured two strong points—east of Changteh and northeast of Changsha—after incessant pounding of the Chinese defenders along a 120-mile front, and new battles have developed for those two major enemy objectives in the Hunan province offensive, the Chinese high command said tonight.

Pingkiang, Chinese bastion 50 miles northeast of Changsha, fell last night to invader troops striking along the Milo river, while to the west, some 100 miles northwest of Changsha, the Japanese seized Hanshow, where they were stopped, the communique said.

Japs Nearing Rice Bowl

This places the enemy 22 miles east of Changteh, scene of last year's bitter rice bowl battle.

A third major prong of the Hunan offensive, a central column driving down the Canton-Hankow railway, was stopped at Kweiyi, 40 miles north of Changsha, the communique said, after the town had changed hands several times in bitter fighting, with casualties heavy on both sides.

Fighting raged at Pinkiang and at Shangshouchien, further east, where the enemy crossed the Milo and entered the town. Repeated enemy attempts to force further crossings of the Milo, from Sinshim and Changlokai, were stopped yesterday afternoon on the south bank, the Chinese said.

Enemy Planning New Blows

Major objective of the Hunan offensive is complete control of the Canton-Hankow route, but the Japanese apparently are planning other new blows at China, Maj. Gen. C. C. Tseng, Chinese army spokesman, said. The enemy strategy, he said, is to apply more pressure on China as the Allies increase their pressure on Japan in the Pacific.

He estimated that the Japanese have amassed 280,000 troops in the Hankow and Canton areas—210,000 in the former and 70,000 in the latter, and have gathered still other forces on the Indo-Chinese border of Yunnan province. The Japanese, he pointed out, have termed 1944 the decisive year, and as the Allies in the Pacific move nearer Japan, the invaders probably will seek a decisive outcome in China, where they believe the final battle of the war must be fought eventually.

The fighting in Honan province, 400 miles to the north of Hunan, now has become of minor importance, the spokesman said. There the communique reported that Chinese troops east of Lushin near the western Honan border defeated the enemy yesterday at Chungshulcheng and occupied Hsihkang after killing numerous Japanese.

Gen. Tseng said the Japanese were withdrawing many of their Manchurian troops for other fronts while they applied this new pressure against China.

Railway Aiding Japs Is Strafed

FARNSWORTH

United States 14th Air Force Headquarters in China, June 1 (AP—Delayed)—In a ten-hour strafing mission which reached Peiping, a force of American Mustangs swept over more than 600 miles of the railway system supplying the Japanese offensive in Honan province last Tuesday, it was announced today.

This was the northernmost penetration ever made by planes of the 14th Air Force and was almost 400 miles above the nearest active Chinese battlefront.

22 Locomotives Damaged

The principal result of the mission, from which all planes returned, was the destruction or damaging of 22 locomotives, including one destroyed at Peiping.

With 50-caliber machine guns spitting, the fighters made six passes at an armored train in the face of fierce fire from the windows and tops of the cars and left the locomotive spouting steam and water from holes.

Strafed From Low Level

The force had been briefed specially by Maj. Gen. Claire L. Chennault. Flying in pairs, the planes covered the railway from Puchow in the bend of the Yellow river northeastward through Shihkiachwang, the junction point with the Peiping-Hankow main line, and thence to Peiping. The planes swept into low-level strafing positions every time they spotted likely targets.

A communique from Lieut. Gen. Joseph W. Stilwell's headquarters, meanwhile, paid high tribute to the work of the Chinese soldier in the Yunnan campaign.

Tokyo Promotes China Chief

LONDON, Friday, June 2 (AP)—The German news agency DNB broadcast today that Gen. Shunroku Hata, commander-in-chief of Japanese forces in China, has been promoted to field marshal.

New Raid on Kuriles.

Washington, June 2 (A. P.).—Navy search planes raiding Shumushu in the North Pacific Kurile Islands started several large and small fires near the air field, and despite moderate anti-aircraft fire returned to their base from a pre-dawn Wednesday raid. The attack was the third in as many days upon the North Pacific islands. All of the planes returned.

TROOPS MASSED TO SEIZE BIAK

EUNSON

U.S. Lands More Men Under Guns of Fleet.

JUN 31944 DAY

Advanced Allied Headquarters, New Guinea, June 2 (A. P.).—Massing of American reinforcements for an all-out assault on tough Biak Island in the Schoutens and pincer moves aimed at trapped Japanese on two other fronts were announced today.

Under Seventh fleet guns and without enemy aerial or naval interference, more Yanks landed Tuesday at Biak, enemy air base in Dutch New Guinea's Geelvink Bay, which was invaded Saturday. As they moved up from the Bosnek beachhead, aircraft and ground fighters hammered at Japanese sniper and mortar positions on ridges commanding the beach for several miles and the coastal road leading to the island's three airdromes.

The field commander would not order a further advance on Mokmer, the nearest airfield, until these enemy nests were eliminated. American patrols have been blocked two miles from the airfield.

On Bougainville Island, in the northern Solomons, Allied units landed behind Japanese lines Tuesday at the mouth of the Tekissi River, in the southern sweep of Empress Augusta Bay, on the island's west coast. Supporting naval gunboats and attack planes neutralized opposing shore batteries.

YANKS SEIZE RIDGE IN BIAK

JUN 31944

Troops Now In Position To Move Against Airfield

Allied Headquarters, New Guinea, Saturday, June 3 (AP)—American jungle troopers fought to the top of a heavily wooded ridge overlooking the Bosnek-Mokmer road to increase their pressure Thursday on the Japanese defenders of Biak, Gen. Douglas MacArthur announced today.

Enemy resistance atop the vital heights was shattered by the tough Sixth Army Yanks, who invaded the largest of the Schouten Islands a week ago today.

Now Mopping Up

"We are now mopping up," a headquarters spokesman said of the Americans' struggle to throw out the Japanese who have been holding up the advance on the important Mokmer airdrome since Monday. The enemy had dug in in prepared positions on the ridge and streamed sniper fire down on the Yanks moving west along the road.

Storming of the ridge was achieved near Ibdi and Mandom villages just off the main route between Bosnek and Mokmer airdrome which is only 880 miles from the southern Philippines. The Sorido and Borokoe airfields are just beyond Mokmer.

Possession of the cliffs poises the Americans for their main thrust for the three airfields. The Japanese positions enabled them to threaten the Yanks' flanks, and commanders ordered the advance slowed until the enemy could be driven from the heights, which parallel the road about 200 yards inshore.

Liberators Give Aid

Ground troops received the aid of Liberator bombers which skimmed the trees on the ridge and tore apart the enemy strong points with 80 tons of bombs.

Small-scale jungle fighting flared also in British New Guinea, more than 450 miles southeast of the Biak battleground, as by-passed Japanese ambushed one of the Allied carrier lines 20 miles southeast of Aitape.

At noon Wednesday, the Japanese, isolated since the Aitape invasion April 22, jumped the carrier, killing nine Americans and six native helpers. The enemy got out with the loss of only one man.

Truk Again Is Raided

MacArthur's flyers were carrying on widespread bombing attacks meanwhile with Liberators again hitting the approaches to Truk, enemy bastion in the Carolines. They hit Stawan, 189 miles southeast of Truk, and Woleai, 525 miles west of Truk.

[These assaults were made Wednesday. Truk time—the same day that Central Pacific bombers set fires on Truk atoll visible 150 miles.]

The Japanese hit back in the air Thursday with a five-bomber raid at the Biak invaders, but these were driven off by anti-aircraft with one plane, possibly two, shot down. The enemy came back again the same day with three planes and dropped five bombs, which fell harmlessly near the Yank beachhead.

Natives Returned to Pribilofs

WASHINGTON, June 2 (AP).—Interior Secretary Harold L. Ickes announced today the successful return to the Pribilof Islands in the Bering Sea of 400 Aleut natives who were evacuated nearly two years ago because of Japanese activities in the area.

Australia Accepts Monetary Parley Bid

Canberra, June 2 (A. P.).—Acting Prime Minister Francis Forde today announced Australia had accepted President Roosevelt's invitation to attend an international monetary conference.

'Chicago Tribune' Plan Is Rejected by Australia

Permission to Publish Edition for U. S. Troops Is Denied

MELBOURNE, Australia, June 2 (AP).—Customs Minister R. V. Keane said today the Federal Australian government had refused the Australian agent of Colonel Robert R. McCormick, owner of "The Chicago Tribune," permission to publish an edition of "The Tribune" in Australia for United States troops. No reason was given for the rejection.

Miners Strike Over Butter

Sydney, June 2 (Reuter)—Twelve New South Wales coal mines were idle today—six of them as a protest against the approaching reduction of the Australian butter ration.

The loss in coal production this week now amounts to 45,000 tons.

Although the miners in the western coal fields decided to continue work pending a decision by the Government on the question of the butter ration, the Miner Federation secretary there said today that failing prompt Government action the position would be beyond the federation officials' control.

CUBA ELECTS RAMON GRAU AS PRESIDENT

Havana Professor Wins Over Candidate Backed By Batista Coalition

FRED STROZIER

Havana, June 2 (AP)—Dr. Ramon Grau San Martin, University of Havana professor, won the Presidency of Cuba in yesterday's election over Dr. Carlos Saladrigas, who was supported by four parties supporting the Government of Presid nt Batista.

Dr. Saladrigas, former Prime Minister and personal friend of Batista, conceded defeat today and congratulated Dr. Grau. He wished Dr. Grau, leader of the opposition for more than a decade, the "greatest success" with his Government "for the good of Cuba."

Calls For Unified Cuba

Dr. Grau immediately made a radio address, calling for a unified Cuba in support of the Allied nations.

He asserted his party's willingness to forget partisan disputes and work together for a Cuban program and praised President Batista's direction of yesterday's elections as fair, honest and peaceful.

Batista himself declined to comment, but a crowd of more than 10,000 in front of the palace, shouting "Viva Batista! Viva Grau!" forced the Chief Executive to appear on the balcony and acknowledge the applause.

Batista Addresses Crowd

"I observe with pleasure," Batista said, 'the jubilation of the people, but cannot make official declarations, since I have not received officials news, even though it appears from incomplete returns that the result of the elections is favorable to Dr. Grau San Martin. When the results are known officially, the President of the republic then can express his sentiments to the winner."

The President exhorted the people to restrain their natural enthusiasm, avoid disturbances and help maintain order—but his words failed to dampen the frenzy of the shouting crowds who had been restrained 24 hours by a ban on public meetings during the vote count. Thousands poured into the streets. The populace seized trolleys for victory rides in downtown Havana. Cuban flags were displayed on balconies. Bars and restaurants were jammed.

Once President For 5 Months

Dr. Grau, who served in the Presidency five months in 1933 and 1934, after the ouster of the late dictator, President Gerardo Machado, and was defeated for election by Batista four years ago, retired to his home for a rest after a radio address hailing the United States and promising hemisphere cooperation.

Grau announced he planned a vacation in Washington and in Central American capitals shortly.

Meanwhile, on the basis of three fifths of the vote in Havana city, the government coalition of four parties acknowledged that its candidate was trailing the incumbent, Raoul Menocal, for the mayorship, the second Cuban post in importance—58,092 to 64,199.

Newspapers of both factions hailed the election as free from pressure.

F. D. R. Congratulates Grau, Historian Says

Miami, Fla., June 2 (AP)—Dr. Emil Ludwig, historian and biographer, reported tonight that President Roosevelt brushed aside formality to telephone his congratulations today to Dr. Ramon Grau San Martin on his election to the Presidency of Cuba.

"Cuban Government officials weer amazed when Grau received a call from Washington this afternoon and it turned out to be Mr. Roosevelt on the other end of the line," said Ludwig, who returned by clipper tonight from a five-

Terming Grau's victory one of the most important in the history of Latin America, the historian declared "Batista has demonstrated to all of Latin America that honest elections can and should be held."

ARGENTINA AND SPAIN SIGN

New Trade Accord Supplements One Reached in 1942

BUENOS AIRES, June 2 (AP)—The Finance Ministry announced yesterday a commercial agreement under which Argentina will supply Spain 1,000,000 tons of wheat, 500 tons of tobacco and 10,000 tons of cotton in exchange for iron, steel and cash.

The agreement, which supplements one signed in 1942, requires that Spain deliver 52,500 tons of iron and steel by next May 15, in addition to 30,000 tons stipulated in the former agreement, and thereafter 60,000 tons annually. The period covered by the agreement was not announced.

The exhibits, both form letters, purportedly were sent to all members of the Friends of the New Germany in June, 1933, and closed with "Hitler Heil."

Hull Sees House Leaders On World Security Plan

Confers With Them in Effort to Gain Congressional Support

WASHINGTON, June 2 (AP).—Secretary of State Cordell Hull today extended to the House his campaign for Congressional support of a post-war peace agency, conferring with four Democratic and three Republican House leaders on his plans for American participation. He has conferred previously with a Senate group.

The hour-long meeting at the State Department was the latest in a series of post-war international planning developments which yesterday disclosed Mr. Hull as apparently determined to reinforce his aims for a security organization with the ideal of liberty "for aspiring peoples everywhere" and equality for all small nations.

The House group was headed by Speaker Sam Rayburn, of Texas, and included these other Democratic Representatives: Chairman Sol Bloom, of New York, of New York, of the Foreign Affairs Committee; John McCormack, of Massachusetts, majority leader, and Robert Ramspeck, of Georgia, majority whip. Republicans were Joseph W. Martin, of Massachusetts, minority leader, and Representatives Charles Eaton, of New Jersey, and Leslie Arends, of Illinois.

Economic Administration.

Washington, June 2 (A. P.).—The House Appropriations Committee gave the lend-lease administration and the new world relief setup, known as UNRRA, a blanket approval today, recommending to the full membership the identical 1945 budget the agencies requested.

The committee reported to the House legislation providing:

For lend-lease—$3,450,570,000.

For UNRRA—$450,000,000 for this nation's participation in the United Nations Relief and Rehabilitation Administration with additional authority for the President to transfer to it $350,000,000 in lend-lease funds which might not be needed immediately.

For the Foreign Economic Administration, the agency charged with waging economic warfare against the enemy—$19,500,000, a reduction of $1,381,000 from the FEA's budget request.

The appropriations are for the fiscal year which starts July 1.

Lend-lease aid by the United States to the Allies now totals $24,225,000,000. The committee declared that the guns, tanks and food distributed this way meant the difference between "a relatively ineffectual and an all-out utilization of the resources of our allies in destroying the enemy."

The committee stated that it was faced with a situation now similar to the first world war. In the early fall of 1918, the report said, many persons thought Germany must surrender soon but the House appropriated $6,500,000,000—a bill that was signed only seven days before the Armistice.

"There was no choice then except to maintain full preparation and there is none now," the committee declared.

The largest lend-lease item is $2,695,966,220 for food. The committee said the Soviet Union is sorely in need of food and that, in the case of Great Britain, it would be lend-lease which would make up the margin between a "bare existence diet" and enough food for the British people to produce and fight efficiently.

The sum provided UNRRA represents less than what the nation is spending every five days for the war, the committee said, and the funds will be needed to rebuild "starving" populations once the European countries are liberated.

UNRRA funds are to be pressed into use when the Army feels the emergency in a given area is over. To illustrate the need the liberated populations will or do have now, the committee noted that nine babies die out of every ten born in Greece.

Quizzing Of Kimmel, Short Denied Sedition Defense

Washington, June 2 (AP)—Judge Edward C. Eicher, presiding at the mass sedition conspiracy trial, denied today a defense motion that depositions be taken from Rear Admiral Husband E. Kimmel and Maj. Gen. Walter C. Short, navy and army commanders in Hawaii at the time of the Japanese attack.

Eicher said the motion, filed by James L. Laughlin in behalf of two of the 29 defendants, failed to set forth any facts to show that the testimony would be "relevant to any issues" in the trial. He previously had denied a motion that Kimmel and Short be subpoenaed as witnesses.

Ex-Bund Chief To Return

The ruling came as Peter Gissibl, former Chicago Bund leader, prepared to resume his testimony. The Government is seeking through him to lay further ground work for the charge that the defendants conspired with Nazis in Germany.

O. John Rogge, chief prosecutor, said Gissibl's testimony probably would not be completed until next week.

More Old Exhibits Admitted

Two more exhibits from the McCormack-Dickstein committee of the House, which investigated Nazi propaganda here a decade ago, yesterday went into the record over hours-long protests from defense attorneys that they were

Army Expects to Get Strong Foothold In Fortress Europe Before December

Washington, June 2 (A. P.).—The Army expects to have a sufficiently strong foothold on the Continent of Europe between next month and next December so that it will need $562,000,000 to feed, clothe and maintain the liberated civilian populations during that period. That was revealed in hearings before the House Appropriations Committee considering funds for the United Nations Relief and Rehabilitation Administration. They were made public today.

Major-Gen. Lucius D. Clay, director of material for the Army Service Forces, disclosed the request for funds for the July-December period without comment otherwise on the invasion.

War Refuge[e] Havens Problem Is Discussed By Roosevelt

Washington, June 2 (AP)—Some war refugees unquestionably will be brought to the United States, President Roosevelt said today, and one of the plans under study contemplates housing them in an army camp no longer needed by the military.

The Chief Executive emphasized in a news conference discussion, however, that the emphasis in this country's approach to the problem is on finding wartime havens closer to the refugees' own homelands.

Any refugees brought here would have to go back home after the war or find other places to live, he said, and it is only common sense to try to avoid two sea voyages.

Mediterranean Area As Haven

Saying officials are trying to find places in other parts of the world for havens, Mr. Roosevelt mentioned as possibilities, Taormina, a resort on the east coast of Sicily, and the resorts in Cyrenaica (Italian Libya). He said there were hotels in these resorts which could be used.

Asked what appropriation would be used to finance transfer of refugees to this country, the President said he didn't know—probably funds of the United Nations Relief and Rehabilitation Administration but possibly military appropriations.

Partly A Military Problem

It is partly a military problem, he commented, since people have to be taken out of military areas. For instance, he said, 1,800 refugees turned up in one week on the Adriatic coast and the army had to take care of them.

Then, reiterating that he didn't know, the President said the question of finances should be put to John W. Pehle, executive director of the War Refugee Board. This board is composed of Secretaries Hull, Morgenthau and Stimson and was created last January.

At Pehle's office, officials said the matter of finances was one which had not yet been decided. They also said the question of taking over an army camp had not gone beyond the study stage.

The board is a purely American agency. In addition, there is an intergovernmental committee on refugees, with headquarters in London, to coordinate efforts of the United Nations in meeting the problem.

ROOSEVELT DOUBTS ARABIAN PIPELINE WILL BE BUILT

WASHINGTON, June 2—(AP) President Roosevelt raised doubt today that this government will go through with its project of constructing a 1,250-mile oil pipeline across Arabia.

At his news conference, Mr. Roosevelt said that the project was now in an uncertain stage and that this government was still talking with the British about the pipeline, who is to build it and how.

New Plan Favored

Elsewhere, it was learned that the present plan, based on exploratory talks already held with the British, favors dropping the pipeline as a wartime measure and leaving its construction to private companies after the war.

The original proposal was for the government to build the line from American-controlled fields in Kuwait and eastern Arabia to Egypt or Palestine. Secretary of Interior Ickes, as Petroleum Administator for war, announced last Feb. 5 that it would be done. He estimated the cost at $130,000,000 to $165,000,000 and said the oil companies would repay the government, with interest, within 25 years.

American Companies Involved

The companies involved are the Arabian American Oil company, owned by the Standard Oil company of California and the Texas Company, and the Gulf Exploration company, owned by the Gulf Oil corporation.

Oil experts said that if construction of the pipeline is left to private interests in the postwar period, it would probably be somewhat smaller than the government-planned 24 inches with a 300,000 barrel daily capacity.

The original proposal for a government-built line ran into a storm of opposition from virtually all the American Oil companies not included in the contracts and was attacked by some members of Congress and some members of the British Parliament.

It was supported by the navy as a defense measure, but if the revised idea is carried out, the pipeline would be chiefly a commercial venture.

British experts have indicated they are well disposed to an agreement which would assure respect for concessions of both countries.

The Anglo-American oil talks began two months ago at the technical level, and word is expected from London at any moment of when a high ranking British group will come to Washington to continue the policy discussions.

COMMENTATORS MAY BE LICENSED

Washington, June 2 (A. P.).—Radio news commentators with commercial sponsors would have to get Federal licenses under legislation being drawn up by Senator Johnson (D.-Colo.). They also would have to obey a "code of ethics" laid down by Congress.

Senator Johnson, a member of the Senate Interstate Commerce Committee, advanced this plan to take the place of a now-sidetracked proposal by Chairman Wheeler (D.-Mont.) to prohibit news broadcasts sponsored by advertisers.

Calling a flat prohibition too drastic, Senator Johnson told a reporter he thought Senator Wheeler's aim of preventing what he called the "smearing" of people in official life or public prominence could be accomplished if:

1. Sponsored commentators had to get licenses from the Communications Commission and be subject to a "code of ethics" written into law.

2. The commission could revoke the licenses of those who break the code by "departing from the path of decency and fair play in attacks upon those who do not have an equal opportunity to answer."

Mr. Wheeler has called off committee hearings on a bill he drafted jointly with Acting Minority Leader White (Me.) making sweeping changes in the communications act, including his ban of commercial news broadcasts.

Ludlow Puzzled About U. S. Paper

a former newspaper man, thinks it paradoxical for the United States to send pulp and paper abroad while getting much of its own supply from Canada.

He raised the question at House committee hearings on appropriations for the United Nations Relief and Rehabilitation Administration (UNRRA). "When we have to get our supply from Canada," he asked Lend-Lease Counsel Oscar S. Cox, "why should we be sending pulp and paper to the United Kingdom?"

Mr. Cox said the United Kingdom got most of its supply from the Dominions but could obtain only in the United States the type needed for making certain things for war.

Roosevelt Asserts Censorship Should Be for Security Alone

JUN 3 1944

By The Associated Press.

An expression that considerations of military security alone should guide the operations of Allied censorship in war theaters was emphasized by President Roosevelt in response to a request from Kent Cooper, executive director of the Associated Press, that the President intercede in obtaining release of an A. P. interview with Marshal Tito.

The interview in question, obtained by Associated Press war correspondent Joseph Morton, was released by Allied military censorship in the Mediterranean theater on May 20, three weeks after it was filed and four days after Mr. Cooper addressed appeals to Mr. Roosevelt and Prime Minister Churchill.

No response has been received from Mr. Churchill.

In the exchange of correspondence with the President, the release of which has White House approval, Mr. Cooper, on May 16 said he was writing to Mr. Roosevelt "because of my deep concern that no barriers be erected unduly to block either American journalistic enterprise or the avenues whereby this enterprise may contribute to better information and broader understanding of European affairs among the American people."

After noting that he did not seek to disclose military matters against the wishes of the military and that the dispatch in question was political news instead of military news, Mr. Cooper added:

"I feel that you will be the last to want to suppress the right of any leader allied in this war from expressing his views to the United States.

"This entire matter of suppression, Mr. President, is fraught with extreme danger in that if matters of a political nature are unduly subject to censorship, then we are drifting into the darkness that brings misunderstanding. In such darkness there is brewed the thing that causes another war."

On May 25 the President replied as follows:

"Dear Mr. Cooper:

"I am happy to note, with regard to your letter of May 16, 1944, that The Associated Press article in question has been released from the Mediterranean area for publication. I agree with you that the full flow of news from the theaters of operations should be encouraged. Censorship barriers should not be imposed unless the success of our operations and the lives of our men would otherwise be endangered.

"The theater command gives assurances that it has no desire to censor for anything other than military security. Sincerely yours,

"FRANKLIN D. ROOSEVELT."

COURT HOLDS WLB IS ABOVE REVIEW, AS BIDDLE STATED

JUN 3 1944

District of Columbia Appeals Bench Says Congress Implied as Much in Disputes Law

OPINION IN TRUCKERS' SUIT

Attorney General Asserts It Makes Judgment of McCarran Report 'Somewhat Hazardous'

By The Associated Press.

WASHINGTON, June 2 — A broad ruling that no statute authorized court review of War Labor Board orders came today from the United States Court of Appeals for the District of Columbia, in a unanimous decision by Associate Justices Justin Miller, Henry W. Edgerton, who wrote the opinion, and Thurman W. Arnold.

Attorney General Francis Biddle called the decision "of first importance regarding the whole War Labor Board controversy." He declared also that in the light of the decision some criticism in the McCarran report appeared "a somewhat hazardous judgment." The Nevada Senator headed a judiciary subcommittee whose majority report sharply criticized Mr. Biddle's rulings leading up to the seizure of Montgomery Ward's Chicago properties by the Government.

A Government attorney interpreted the decision as putting the Government in a position to ask dismissal of every action brought against the board, among them five suits in the Federal District Court here by Montgomery Ward & Co. for injunctions against enforcement of WLB orders.

Delay in Ward Suit

In another action, the Appeals Court dismissed a Government petition for a special appeal from the District Court's refusal to dismiss one of Ward's injunction suits. The higher court said it could not hear the petition before October and the dismissal was without prejudice to reconsideration of the petition after Sept. 15.

In this case Ward's seeks to enjoin the Government from enforcing a WLB order affecting its stores in Denver, Detroit and Jamaica, N. Y. The Government, without replying to the complaint, asked the court to dismiss the suit. When the court refused the Government sought a special appeal.

The Appeals Court said there appeared to be no good reason why the case "cannot be speedily heard and disposed of by the trial court."

Under normal circumstances the ruling would lead to a hearing in the lower court on the merits of the case. In the present circumstances, however, the Government may again seek dismissal, pointing to the decision that the courts are without authority to review WLB orders.

Ruling in Major Decision

In its major decision the Appeals Court held that the President's power to take property to help the war effort did not depend on any action by the board, and any board action in notifying the Chief Executive of non-compliance with its orders was "informatory and, at most, advisory."

The tribunal decided therefore that a demand that it annul a board order amounted "to a demand that we prevent the board from giving the President advice which appellants (those who made the demand) contend would be erroneous."

"The correctness of administrative advice cannot be reviewed by the courts," the opinion added. "They have neither the necessary authority nor the necessary qualifications for such work."

The court's findings were on an appeal by the Employers Group of Motor Freight Carriers, Inc., and others representing some 300 trucking companies in Boston and throughout New England. The board had ordered that they give their employes a pay increase of $2.75 per week and pay time and one-half for work of more than eight hours daily.

Opinion of Appeals Court

"It is clear and undisputed," the court said, "that no statute authorizes review of the board's orders.

"The legislative history of the War Labor Disputes Act implies a positive intention that these orders should not be reviewed. Aside from that important and probably conclusive fact, the question is whether general equitable principles authorized review. We think they do not.

"Appellants say in effect that if they do not comply with the order the board may notify the President of their noncompliance and the President may take possession of their plants and facilities.

"We have no occasion to decide whether in our opinion this is true. In some instances concerns which have failed to comply with board orders have ultimately been taken over by Presidential orders. In other instances concerns which have not been the subject of any board order have been taken over by Presidential orders.

"If it be true, as appellants suggest, that the President may ultimately take possession of their plants and facilities, that possibility is irrelevant not only because it is speculative but also because it is independent of the board's order.

"Neither the broad constitutional power nor the broad statutory power of the President to take and use property in furtherance of the war effort depends upon any action of the War Labor Board. Any action of the board would be informatory and 'at most, advisory.'

"Appellants' demand that we annul and enjoin the board's order therefore amounts to a demand that we prevent the board from giving the President advice which appellants contend would be erroneous. A court might as well be asked to prevent the Secretary of State or the Attorney General from giving alleged erroneous advice."

The truckers' group contended that the board's findings were unlawful and violated executive orders of the President and also asserted that "the industry is confronted with outright failure and dissolution."

Statement by Biddle

Attorney General Biddle's statement stressed the opinion of the Appeals Court that "orders of the War Labor Board are not reviewable," attacked the McCarran committee's report on the Montgomery Ward dispute and discussed the court's denial of the Government's petition for special appeal in the Ward suit. He said:

"The opinion by Judge Edgerton points out 'it is clear and undisputed that no statute authorizes review of the War Labor Board's order,' that 'the legislative history of the War Labor Disputes Act implies a positive intention that these orders should not be reviewed.'

"The court examines the course of this legislation through the Congress, notes that proposed amendments to authorize court enforcement or review of the board's orders were rejected and concludes that it was the obvious intention of the Congress that the legislation did not authorize such applications to the courts. The opinion says, 'No one could maintain either judicial or administrative proceedings against the appellants upon the authority of the board's orders.'

"The decision has peculiar interest in the light of the fact that the McCarran report expressed the view that the Attorney General of the United States was in error in stating that all peaceful and orderly processes for the settlement of the Ward dispute had been exhausted at the time he advised the President of his right to take possession of Montgomery Ward & Co. According to the McCarran report, a lower court decision, clearly overruled by the Circuit Court of Appeals in this case, resolved 'all questions of doubt as to whether the War Labor Board had the right to go into a Federal court and ask for a mandatory injunction to compel compliance with an order of the board.'

"Hazardous Judgment"

"In the light of present decision this assertion of the McCarran report that all doubts have been resolved by one lower court decision in conflict with two other lower court decisions, while an appeal was pending in the Circuit Court of Appeals, now appears a somewhat hazardous judgment to have been made without benefit of hearing the Attorney General.

"The Supreme Court may of course review the issue, but the fact of the matter is that the legislative history leaves little doubt that it was Congress itself which had rejected any suggestion of court review or mandatory enforcement of War Labor Board orders. Congress rejected it because, as the court points out in its opinion, Congress was persuaded that 'for the duration of the war it would be in the best interests of the country to permit the War Labor Board to function as it has in the past sixteen months without the right to apply to the court for legal sanctions and without being subject to court review of its decisions.'

"One final point of interest in the decision is the court's answer to the argument that the President might take over the facilities involved in this case if the War Labor Board's order was not complied with. The court said: 'Neither the broad constitutional power nor the broad statutory power of the President to take and use property in furtherance of the war effort depends upon any action of the War Labor Board.'"

WMC SETS UP RIGID CONTROL OF MAN POWER

JUN 3 1944

All Job Seekers Ordered to Obtain Work Through Federal Bureau.

U. S. WOULD DO ALL HIRING

Proposal Is Regarded as More Sweeping and Totalitarian Than Draft Measure.

JUN 3 1944

Washington, June 2 (A. P.).—Sweeping new controls over the nation's dwindling supply of male workers were ordered today by the War Manpower Commission to be placed in effect by July 1. They provide that virtually every job-seeking man in America will be required to apply to the United States Employment Service for assignment to the war plant where he is most needed, regardless of where that plant may be situated.

Employers, on the other hand, will be permitted to hire only those men referred to them by the USES.

"The successful conduct of the war now requires the channeling of all available male labor in the nation to jobs of greatest war production urgency, and the retention of such labor in those jobs, Paul V. McNutt, War Manpower Commissioner declared in announcing the new program. It extends on a nationwide basis the WMC's voluntary program already in effect in about a dozen areas of critical labor shortage.

Farm Workers Not Restricted.

"We propose," Commissioner McNutt declared, to accomplish the channeling "by a system of priority referral, effective throughout the nation, but varying among communities by such adaptations as may be found desirable." Farm workers are not restricted, nor are businesses with eight or fewer employees.

Commissioner McNutt said that the program would make it possible for a worker anywhere in the country to "take his most useful place on the industrial firing line," adding: "This is just as important as it is for us to get our soldiers onto the firing line when they are needed."

He said that one principal difficulty in recruiting men for war jobs and retaining them is "over-optimism with respect to an early ending of the war—this causing workers to look for peacetime employment.

"I have been most disturbed by this attitude," he said. "The war is not nearly over, and such sentiment is positively dangerous to the war effort."

Production needs and man power demands may be easing up in specific plants or areas due to cutbacks, but "workers who may be released in such situations are sorely needed in other plants or other areas where war production schedules are being increased. Experience in the past has shown that this easing of man power does not result in the filling of all labor demands in critical war industries."

McNutt Explains Program.

While some sources saw the expanded program as a move necessary because of the lack of national service legislation, Commissioner McNutt said that it had "no relation to any legislation." The WMC national management-labor policy committee has reaffirmed its conviction, he added, that the nation's manpower needs can be met best under programs developed and adopted voluntarily.

He explained that while the try will have considerable latitude in determining detailed application of the plan. In order to "utilize all the help we can get," other agencies will be approved by the area USES offices for clearing and referring workers.

These will include union hiring halls, colleges and universities and other normal employment channels. While the WMC order instructs each regional man power director to put the plan into effect by July 1, Commissioner McNutt said that it could be adopted earlied by any area wishing to do so.

program is on a voluntary basis, sanctions can be imposed in cases of non-compliance. He said that workers who refuse to co-operate would find it difficult without a clearance slip to get a job, while employers who do not participate will not have workers referred to them.

Industries most in need of "strong male labor" at present, Commissioner McNutt asserted, are foundries and forge shops, rubber and tire production, ship repair, logging and lumbering. Similar acute shortages, he added, are developing in such fields as textile manufacturing, coal mining and electronic equipment.

To stiffen further the voluntary man power system, Commissioner McNutt directed that in the 184 certain specified areas of serious labor shortage there should be established:

1. Employment ceiling programs fixing the total number of men who may be employed in specific establishments. These programs already exist in about twenty-five areas.

2. Man power priority committees to decide which industries in their respective areas are entitled to worker priorities. About thirty-five areas have such committees.

Order of Importance.

The broadened program provides that USES offices will expose applicants to jobs available in the order of their relative importance to the war effort.

"To the greatest degree consistent with the war effort, workers shall be given the maximum possible freedom of choice as to the jobs they accept," Commissioner McNutt said. "Employers also shall be given the maximum possible freedom of choice as to the workers they employ."

In some areas, he continued, the choice will be wider than in others, depending upon the stringency of the labor situation. Under the plan, a worker may be referred to other than an essential job only if he is not needed for an essential job in the area, if he is not adaptable to an essential job outside the area, or if there is "undue hardship, special emergency circumstances or other good cause."

Latitude for Offices.

Commissioner McNutt stressed that every WMC area in the coun-

Roosevelt Says He Backs Job Equality to Limit Inquires How He Can Support the F. E. P. C. More

WASHINGTON, June 2 (AP).—President Roosevelt said today he wished somebody could tell him how he could possibly give more support to the Fair Employment Practices Committee.

The question came up in his news conference when a reporter told the President there were reports around Congress that the Administration is not giving full support to the F. E. P. C. set up by Mr. Roosevelt to combat racial and other discrimination in employment.

Meanwhile, the Congress of Industrial Organizations indorsed legislation to create a permanent commission to prevent unfair employment practices as necessary to thwart post-war "confusion and strife."

This condition, James B. Carey, national C. I. O. secretary-treasurer, told the House labor committee, would result from "discharging workers in wholesale lots for no better reason than that they are black, brown, Catholic or Jewish." The committee continued hearings on several bills to set up a permanent commission of seven members to carry on the program started by the F. E. P. C., which now operates only under executive order.

338 Planes a Week Exported

Roosevelt Reveals We Have Sent 4000 Aircraft to Allies in Last 91 Days.

DAY

Washington, June 2 (A. P.).—President Roosevelt said today that the United States has produced more than 175,000 airplanes in about three years. In the first ninety-one days of this year, the President said, 4,400 planes were sent to our Allies from the United States—at an average of 338 planes a week.

In making public the report from the Foreign Economic Administration, Mr. Roosevelt recalled that some doubting Thomases scoffed when he told Congress before the war that the administration's goal was to produce 50,000 planes a year. The goal, he said, has been exceeded tremendously.

The Roosevelt Statement.

Following is the text of the President's statement on lend-lease plane exports.

"Tabulation of figures on lend-lease plane exports for the month of March has now been completed by the Foreign Economic Administration. On the basis of these figures it can be announced that:

"1. In the ninety-one days from January 1, 1944, to April 1, 1944, a total of 4,400 planes were sent to our allies from the United States. This means that on the average 338 planes were shipped or flown every week to fighting forces allied with our own against our common enemies on battle-fronts around the world.

"2. Between March 11, 1941, when the lend-lease act was passed, and April 1, 1944, more than 33,000 planes have been sent from the United States to the forces of the other United Nations. Our allies paid cash for 7,000 of the planes. The remaining 26,000 were sent under lend-lease. Many thousands were ferried all the way by air from the factories to the battle fronts.

"3. In the same period the United States produced over 175,000 planes. We thus retained for our part of the combined United Nations' war effort more than four-fifths of the planes we produced, while sending very large numbers of our allies. Through lend-lease we have seen to it that the men that fight beside Americans, in the offensives already under way and in the still greater offensives that are ahead, have the extra striking power they need to deliver the most damaging possible blows against our enemies—the Germans and the Japanese."

Oil Pipeline in Iffy Stage.

Mr. Roosevelt said at his news conference today that the question of an American-built oil pipeline in the Mediterranean area is in the iffy stage and added that no one knows whether there will be a pipeline. Secretary of the Interior Ickes announced last winter that the United States would construct a pipeline in the Near East to transport oil from an oil concession owned by an American company.

The President said today that not only does no one know if there will be a pipeline but no one can say who will pay for it. A reporter asked the President if his remark meant that the oil pipeline situation had gone backward. The President replied only that conferences between this country and Great Britain on the Near Eastern oil situation are still going on.

The President conferred yesterday with Mr. Ickes, Under-Secretary of State Stettinius, and Senator Maloney (R.-Conn.), chairman of a special senatorial committee looking into the pipeline proposal. The President said progress is being made as a result of this country's oil conference with Great Britain but emphasized that the conferences were not limited to pipeline discussions but dealt with all oil questions of the Near East.

A reporter asked the President whether there was anything to a report that the American company which owns the Arabian oil concession was considering selling to the British, but the President declared there is nothing to that report.

Mr. Roosevelt said he wished somebody could tell him how he could possibly give more support to the Fair Employment Practices Committee. The question came up when a reporter told him there were reports around Congress that the administration is not giving full support to the FEPC, set up by the President to combat racial and other discrimination in employment.

Army Camp for Refugees.

The President indicated that an unused Army camp in this country may be converted into a temporary haven for war refugees from abroad. He said nothing definite has been done on the problem but that the humanitarian thing to do is to give assistance to helpless people anywhere in the world.

He said officials have been studying taking one camp which the Army does not need and may be turning it into a refugee camp. In addition, he said, there were some resort areas on the east coast of Sicily, in Italy and possibly other places in the Mediterranean region which could be used to house war refugees temporarily. He emphasized that the refugees would be given only temporary haven and that they would be expected to go home as soon as conditions permit after the war.

The President said the problem is a difficult one for the Army which must deal with refugees at the fighting fronts. As an example, he said, 1,800 refugees turned up in one week on the Adriatic coast and the Army had to take care of them.

Hopes for UNRRA Appropriation

The President said he hoped to goodness Congress would make an appropriation to finance the United Nations Relief and Rehabilitation Administration, since he said the idea was as much ours as anybody's. Congress has authorized the financing of UNRRA, but no actual appropriation has been passed. A financing bill is pending now in Congress. The President said several other countries already have set up funds for the program.

Mr. Roosevelt smiled and said a reporter was about to send him to a dictionary when the newsman asked the President whether he regarded the words independence and integrity as being synonymous with the word sovereignty. A discussion came up in a reporter's attempt to develop Mr. Roosevelt's statement of last week that nothing in our post-war planning would hamper the independence and integrity of the United States. The reporter asked him if that meant sovereignty.

Mr. Roosevelt said he didn't get the point and that he would have to do a lot of thinking and go to the dictionary. He added that he still is as much in favor of the sovereignty of the United States as he ever had been, and as much as the reporter was.

Ship Launched for Greeks

SOUTH PORTLAND, Me., June 2 (AP).—The Liberty freighter Maoulis, which will be transferred to Greek registry, was launched at the New England Shipbuilding Corporation yards today. Mrs. Sappho Diamantopoulos, wife of Cimon P. Diamantopoulos, Greek Ambassador to the United States, sponsored the vessel.

Italian King's Men Now Serving U. S.

CAMP ANZA, Calif., June 2 (AP).—Once they were special troops of King Victor Emmanuel III, but now Italian prisoners of war are serving the United States Army.

All volunteers, they compose the 302d Italian Quartermaster Service Battalion, a non-combatant unit. Although not inducted as actual members of the United States Army, they are sworn "to serve faithfully under United States Articles of War."

Colonel James K. Herbert, commanding the Los Angeles Port of Embarkation, in reviewing the battalion, told them they would eat the same food and sleep in the same kind of barracks as American soldiers. The battalion wears the United States Army uniform, but with the word Italy on armband and cap.

Sedition Trial Lawyer Indicted

Laughlin Is Accused of Attempt to Obstruct Justice in Robbery Case.

DAY

Baltimore, June 2 (A. P.).—James J. Laughlin, Washington attorney who has figured prominently in the sedition trial in progress at the capital, was indicted today by a Federal Grand Jury on two charges of attempting to obstruct and impede the administration of justice.

The indictment was returned in connection with Laughlin's activities during the trial early in 1942 of Hilliard Sanders and William Leo Keith, two of four men convicted in the $52,000 robbery of a bank messenger at Hyattsville, Md., on September 25, 1941.

The first count of the indictment charged that he endeavored to submit false alibi evidence by producing a witness who attempted to state that Sanders made a visit to a Florida State prison on September 25, 1941, when he actually made the visit on a different date. The second count accused Laughlin of submitting false affidavits also dealing with Sanders's visit to the Florida prison, in connection with a new trial motion for Sanders and Keith before Federal Judge William C. Coleman. The United States Attorney's office said that bail had been fixed at $2,500, but that Laughlin had not yet been taken into custody.

THE VICHY RADIO SAID THAT A LOCALITY ON THE NORTHWEST COAST OF FRANCE WAS BOMBED DURING THE NIGHT AND THAT 42 PERSONS WERE KILLED.

THE NIGHT OPERATION FOLLOWED DAYLIGHT ASSAULTS ON MILITARY OBJECTIVES IN NORTHERN FRANCE YESTERDAY BY AMERICAN MARAUDERS ESCORTED BY THUNDERBOLTS. OFFENSIVE PATROLS ALSO WERE CONDUCTED BY FIGHTERS OF THE BRITISH SECOND TACTICAL AIR FORCE, AND ONE GERMAN PLANE WAS SHOT DOWN BY LONG-RANGE MUSTANGS OFF THE GERMAN ISLAND OF BORKUM.

A LANCASTER PILOT RETURNING FROM THE ATTACK LAST NIGHT ON SAUMUR SAID THE BOMBING WAS CONCENTRATED. ANOTHER PILOT DECLARED THE SMOKE WAS SO THICK THAT FRESH TARGET MARKERS HAD TO BE DROPPED 20 MINUTES AFTER THE BOMBING STARTED AND ADDED:

"THEN THE BOMBING BEGAN AGAIN AND SEEMED TO BE VERY ACCURATE INDEED. WE MUST HAVE FOXED THE FIGHTERS, BECAUSE WE HAD NO TROUBLE WITH THEM UNTIL RIGHT AT THE END. WHEN THEY (ENEMY FIGHTERS) DID REACH THE TARGET AREA THEY WERE TOO LATE TO DO ANY GOOD."

SINCE THE ALL-OUT ALLIED CAMPAIGN TO DISRUPT COMMUNICATIONS IN WESTERN EUROPE BEGAN EARLY IN MARCH, AMERICAN AND BRITISH PLANES HAVE CARRIED OUT 246 ATTACKS ON 94 RAILROAD TARGETS, SOME IN GREAT STRENGTH.

WHILE MOST OF THESE RAIDS WERE CONCENTRATED IN FRANCE, BELGIUM AND HOLLAND, SOME WERE MADE ON POINTS AS DEEP AS BRUNSWICK, GERMANY, 400 MILES FROM THE CHANNEL COAST.

AT A U.S. BOMBER BASE IN ENGLAND, JUNE 2-(AP)-SGT.FRANK THOMAS OF RUTLAND, VT., GAVE HIS PANTS FOR HIS COUNTRY AND HIS SACRIFICE HELPED TO BRING THE CRIPPLED FLYING FORTRESS "YEHUDI" BACK FROM LEIPZIG, SPUTTERING ON ONE ENGINE AND A HALF.

NAZI FIGHTERS HAD KNOCKED OUT TWO OF THE FORT'S ENGINES AND HIT THE SUPERCHARGER OF THE THIRD, REDUCING ITS EFFECTIVENESS BY HALF. AS THE SHIP LOST ALTITUDE, PILOT LT.JOHN KEYS OF ELIZABETHTON, TENN., ORDERED THE CREW TO "THROW OUT EVERYTHING THAT CAN'T SHOOT."

OUT WENT A THOUSAND POUNDS OF EQUIPMENT AND THOMAS' OLD TROUSERS, SHIRT AND UNDERWEAR. HE HAD CHANGED FROM STATION TOGS TO FLYING GEAR AFTER BOARDING THE PLANE.

"MY PANTS AND MY ALL I GIVE FOR MY COUNTRY," LAUGHED RADIOMAN THOMAS, AS HIS SHORTS FLUTTERED IN THE BOMBER'S SLIPSTREAM.

IT WAS THE ALTERNATIVE, THE CREW REPORTED, TO THROWING OUT NAVIGATOR LT.PATRICK LOLLIS OF 6100 BROOKSIDE AVE., KANSAS CITY, MO., WHOSE 200 POUNDS WERE THE HEAVIEST CARGO ITEM NOT BOLTED DOWN.

"IT SOUNDED LIKE A GOOD IDEA," SAID LOLLIS, "BUT I REMEMBERED I HAD A PASS COMING UP THE NEXT DAY, SO I DECLINED."

SGT.JOSEPH CONSTANZA, WAIST GUNNER, OF 531 EAST 11TH ST., NEW YORK, ALMOST WENT OVERBOARD WHILE JETTISONING HIS FLAK SUIT, BUT HIS MATES PULLED HIM BACK.

IT WAS THE CREW'S THIRD NARROW SQUEEZE IN TWO WEEKS. THEY RETURNED FROM BERLIN WITH THEIR STABILIZER AND ENGINE SHOT UP, AND FOUR DAYS LATER A 15-FOOT HOLE WAS KNOCKED IN THEIR WING OVER BERLIN.

THE OTHER CREWMEN WERE LT.ELTON DICKENS, 6912 NORTH CRESTLINE, SPOKANE, WASH.; FLIGHT OFFICER ELVIN SAMUELSON, BIG ROCK, ILL.; SGTS. GILBERT BORBA, AROMAS, CALIF.; DONALD RIEGER, LATHROP, CALIF.; HARRY PARK, GALESBURG, ILL., AND PETER MARTIN, 2870 HARRISON ST., SAN FRANCISCO.

SUPREME HEADQUARTERS, ALLIED EXPEDITIONARY FORCE, ENGLAND, JUNE 2 -(AP)-TWO BOOKS ON THE NEATLY-KEPT DESK OF GEN.DWIGHT D.EISENHOWER IN HIS OFFICE AT SUPREME HEADQUARTERS INDICATE A PHILOSOPHY OF PRAYING FOR VICTORY AND KNOW THY ENEMY GO HAND-IN-HAND.

THE BOOKS ARE THE SOLDIERS AND SAILORS PRAYER BOOK, AND ONE DEALING WITH HITLER'S GENERALS.

THE OFFICE OF THE SUPREME COMMANDER, WHICH SEES VERY LITTLE OF HIM THESE DAYS, IS FILLED WITH MEMENTOS OF HIS PAST CAMPAIGNS, AS WELL AS COUNTLESS SECRETS FOR WHICH THE GERMANS WOULD SACRIFICE MANY DIVISIONS

OF MEN TO G.

IT IS A RECTANGULAR ROOM, WITH A BIG FIREPLACE, TWO SMALL TABLES, AND A LARGE DESK IN A CORNER BETWEEN TWO WINDOWS.

EXCEPT FOR A MEMO OR TWO AND THE TWO BOOKS, THE DESK IS KEPT AS ORDERLY AS THE SUPREME COMMANDER'S MIND.

AIR CHIEF MARSHAL SIR ARTHUR WILLIAM TEDDER WROTE, "TO GENERAL IKE FROM ONE OF HIS TEAM." THERE ARE OTHER PICTURES, INCLUDING LT.GEN. GEORGE S.PATTON JR., ADMIRAL SIR ANDREW CUNNINGHAM, AND VARIOUS MILITARY AND POLITICAL FIGURES.

THERE IS ONE FROM GENERALISSIMO CHIANG KAI-SHEK. THE INSCRIPTION IS IN CHINESE. THERE ARE ALSO COPIES OF VARIOUS IMPORTANT DOCUMENTS. THE MOST IMPORTANT OF THESE IS THE SHORTEST--ROOSEVELT'S CABLE TO STALIN INFORMING HIM OF EISENHOWER'S APPOINTMENT AS COMMANDER IN CHIEF OF THE WESTERN FRONT INVASION FORCE. IT WAS SENT FROM CAIRO.

ON NEARBY TABLES ARE PICTURES OF THE GENERAL'S MOTHER, HIS WIFE AND SON, AND HIS DOG, TELEX, NOW IN BRITISH QUARANTINE.

ON THE MANTELPIECE IS A SERIES OF PICTURES OF A MAN EISENHOWER HAS NEVER MET, GIVEN HIM BY HIS INTELLIGENCE STAFF IN AFRICA. WHEN THE SUPREME COMMANDER SEES THIS PERSON IN THE FLESH THE WAR WILL PROBABLY BE OVER.

THE PICTURES ARE OF FIELD MARSHAL ERWIN ROMMEL.

LONDON JUNE 2-(AP)-FORMATION OF A NEW SOFIA GOVERNMENT, HEADED BY A STRONGLY PRO-AXIS PREMIER, WAS ANNOUNCED LAST NIGHT B BERLIN--A MOVE THAT APPARENTLY BROUGHT BULGARIA DEFINITELY INTO THE FOLD AS A GERMAN PUPPET STATE.

A BROADCAST TRANSOCEAN DISPATCH SAID THE NEW REGIME WAS HEADED BY IVAN BAGRIANOV, A FORMER MINISTER OF AGRICULTURE WHO RESIGNED THREE YEARS AGO AFTER REJECTION OF HIS PROPOSAL THAT BULGARIAN FARM ECONOMY BE PLACED COMPLETELY UNDER STATE CONTROL, AS IN GERMANY.

THE BAGRIANOV GOVERNMENT REPLACES THAT OF PREMIER DOBRI BOJILOV, WHO RESIGNED LAST WEEK UNDER PRESSURE FROM BERLIN TO INCREASE BULGARIA'S WAR CONTRIBUTION AND WARNINGS FROM MOSCOW THAT BULGARIA GET OUT OF THE CONFLICT OR SUFFER THE CONSEQUENCES. BULGARIA IS AT PEACE WITH RUSSIA.

NEUTRAL REPORTS HAVE SAID THAT SINCE BOJILOV'S FALL THE GERMANS HAVE BEEN POURING TROOPS INTO THE COUNTRY AND HAVE INTEGRATED THEM WITH THE BULGARIAN ARMY FOR A DEFENSE AGAINST THE EXPECTED NEW RUSSIAN OFFENSIVE.

IN THE NEW GOVERNMENT, BAGRIANOV, 53, A GRADUATE OF THE BULGARIAN MILITARY ACADEMY AND ONE-TIME ADJUTANT OF THE LATE KING BORIS, WILL FILL THE OFFICES OF BOTH PREMIER AND FOREIGN MINISTER, THE BERLIN ANNOUNCEMEN SAID.

IN HIS CABINET THERE IS ONLY ONE HOLDOVER--LT.GEN.RUSSI RUSSEV, AS MINISTER OF WAR, AN INDICATION THAT RUSSEV YIELDED TO GERMAN MILITARY DEMANDS.

OTHER MINISTERS AS ANNOUNCED BY BERLIN: INTERIOR, ALEXANDER STANISCHEV; FINANCE, DIMITAR SAVOV; AGRICULTURE, DONCHE KOSTOV; TRADE, CHRISTO VASSILEV; EDUCATION, MICHAEL ARNAUDOV; AND TRANSPORT AND PUBLIC WORKS, BORIS KOLCHEV.

LONDON, JUNE 2-(AP)-PLANS FOR REDISTRIBUTING THE SEATS IN BRITAIN'S HOUSE OF COMMONS SO THAT EACH CONSTITUENCY WOULD REPRESENT A MORE EQUAL NUMBER OF VOTERS WERE RECOMNENDED TODAY BY A GOVERNMENT COMMITTEE ON ELECTORAL REFORM.

UNWIELDY CONSTITUENCIES WOULD BE SUBDIVIDED AND SMALL CONSTITUENCIES WHICH NOW HAVE TWO MEMBERS WOULD LOSE ONE.

THE STANDARD UNIT OF ELECTORATE FOR EACH MEMBER OF THE HOUSE WOULD BE A QUOTA ASCERTAINED BY DIVIDING THE TOTAL ELECTORATE IN BRITAIN BY THE TOTAL NUMBER OF SEATS AT THE TIME OF THE REPORT BY FOUR BOUNDARY COMMISSIONERS WHO WOULD BE APPOINTED TO WORK OUT THE FINAL SCHEME. WHEREVER POSSIBLE THE NEW PARLIAMENTARY BOUNDARIES WOULD COINCIDE WITH LOCAL GOVERNMENT BOUNDARIES.

THE COMMITTEE RECOMMENDED THAT, TO COVER THE POSSIBILITY OF A GENERAL ELECTION BEFORE THESE PLANS WERE CONCLUDED, THE LARGEST CONSTITUENCIES SHOULD BE SUBDIVIDED NOW, PROVIDED THE INCREASE IN MEMBERS OF PARLIAMENT WAS NO MORE THAN TWENTYFIVE.

IN THE FINAL SCHEME THE TOTAL OF MEMBERS WOULD REMAIN AT THE PRESENT NUMBER--591, EXCLUSIVE OF UNIVERSITY MEMBERS.

THE COMMITTEE REJECTED A SUGGESTION FOR LOWERING THE VOTING AGE BELOW TWENTYONE AND THE ADOPTION OF A PROPORTIONAL REPRESENTATION PLAN.

LONDON, JUNE 2-(AP)-U.S. SOLDIERS FROM OKLAHOMA AND IDAHO STATIONED IN THE UNITED KINGDOM PROBABLY WILL BE UNABLE TO VOTE IN THEIR STATE PRIMARY ELECTIONS THIS YEAR UNLESS THOSE STATES EXTEND THE TIME FOR RETURNING OF BALLOTS, THE STARS AND STRIPES SAID TODAY.

UNDER EXISTING REGULATIONS, SAID THE SERVICE PAPER, OKLAHOMA ALLOWS ONLY 12 DAYS FROM THE MAILING OF BALLOTS UNTIL THEY MUST BE BACK IN THE HANDS OF ELECTION OFFICIALS. ARMY POSTAL AUTHORITIES REPORT THE AVERAGE TIME FOR ROUND-TRIP AIRMAIL BETWEEN THAT STATE AND THE EUROPEAN THEATER OF OPERATIONS IS 18 DAYS.

A SIMILAR SITUATION EXISTS IN IDAHO, WHERE BALLOTS COULDN'T BE MAILED OUT BEFORE JUNE 1 AND MUST BE RETURNED BY JUNE 13 WHILE THE AVERAGE AIRMAIL ROUND TRIP REQUIRES 21 DAYS, SAID THE PAPER.

WITH THE FIFTH ARMY ON THE CASILINIAN WAY TO ROME, JUNE 2-(AP)-AMERICAN INFANTRY AND ARMOR TODAY OCCUPIED A STRETCH OF THE VIA CASILINA (HIGHWAY 6), SOME THREE MILES LONG, AFTER THE HERMANN GOERING DIVISION SUDDENLY DROPPED ITS FRENZIED RESISTANCE IN THE SECTOR AND PULLED OUT.

THE GERMANS YESTERDAY HAD CLUNG TO THE ROAD IN DESPERATE FIGHTING AND AGAINST SLEDGEHAMMER ATTACKS OF SEASONED AMERICAN UNITS, BUT AT MIDNIGHT THEIR MORTAR FIRE CEASED AND THEY SLIPPED AWAY ON THE HIGHWAY, OTHERS RETIRING TO THE HIGH GROUND NORTH OF IT.

AS IT BECAME APPARENT THE GERMANS HAD DEPARTED, THE AMERICANS WHO HAD BATTERED AGAINST THEM THROUGHOUT YESTERDAY SURGED FORWARD ONTO THE HIGHWAY. THEY ENTERED VALMONTONE, KEY POINT ON THE ROAD, BEFORE DAWN, WITH SCARCELY ANY OPPOSITION.

THE FIRST UNIT TO REACH THE HIGHWAY SET UP THREE ANTI-TANK GUNS. A FEW MINUTES LATER THREE GERMAN TRUCKS LOADED WITH SOLDIERS, APPARENTLY STRAGGLERS OF THE MAIN ESCAPE COLUMN, APPROACHED. THE AMERICANS HIT ALL THREE, KILLING OR WOUNDING VIRTUALLY EVERY PASSENGER.

WHILE AMERICAN UNITS HAVE CUT HIGHWAY 6, THE GERMANS HAVE ESTABLISHED NEW POSITIONS ON THE HILLS, APPARENTLY WITH THE INTENTION OF KEEPING THE ROAD UNDER THEIR ARTILLERY FIRE.

THUS IT APPEARED THE GERMANS, WHILE RECONCILED TO THE LOSS OF THE ROAD, HOPED FOR THE TIME BEING TO DENY ITS FULL USE TO THE AMERICANS, AS THE AMERICANS FOR SEVERAL DAYS HAD DENIED ITS FULL USE TO THE GERMANS.

A WHOLE GERMAN COMPANY WAS CAPTURED WITH HARDLY ANY FIGHTING. THEY SAID THAT SINCE THEY KNEW THEY WERE TRAPPED, THEY DECIDED THAT RESISTANCE WAS USELESS. THEY WERE NOT MEMBERS OF THE GOERING DIVISION.

ONLY 100 CIVILIANS REMAINED IN VALMONTONE, WHICH WAS LARGELY WRECKED. THEY WERE HUDDLED IN A CHURCH WHICH HAD BEEN DAMAGED BY SHELLS BUT NOT DEMOLISHED, AN AMG OFFICER ARRIVED SHORTLY AFTER THE TROOPS TO LOOK AFTER THEM.

AT MID-MORNING THE GERMANS STARTED TO SHELL VALMONTONE FROM THEIR NEW MOUNTAIN POSITIONS.

IN THEIR HASTY DEPARTURE, THE GERMANS NEGLECTED TO LAY MINES.

LT.WILLIAM ALEXANDER TARBORO, N.C., WAS ONE OF THE FIRST INTO VALMONTONE. HE LED HIS PLATOON IN EXPECTING SERIOUS OPPOSITION AND WAS SURPRIUED WHEN A FEW ITALIANS CAME RUNNING OUT SHOUTING "TEDESCHI HAVE GONE."

WHILE THE SHUTTLE IDEA WAS FIRST PUT ACROSS AT U.S. SECRETARY OF STATE HULL'S MOSCOW CONFERENCE OCT. 19 TO NOV. 1, 1943, IT REALLY GOT UNDER WAY EARLY IN FEBRUARY THIS YEAR AFTER HAVING BEEN DISCUSSED AT TEHERAN BY PRESIDENT ROOSEVELT, PREMIER STALIN AND PRIME MINISTER CHURCHILL.

THE BASES ALREADY HAVE STAFFS OF AMERICAN DOCTORS AND FIELD HOSPITALS. NO AMERICAN NURSES ARE HERE YET, BUT SOME ARE DUE TO ARRIVE SOON.

KEY PERSONNEL FOR THE BASES CAME FROM BRITAIN AND ITALY. SOME OFFICERS CAME BY AIR BUT THE MAJORITY OF THE PERSONNEL CAME OVERLAND VIA THE MIDDLE EAST.

THE FIRST AMERICANS WHO ARRIVED TO SET UP THE BASES ATE RUSSIAN FOOD, AND GEN.DEANE SAID THEY STILL WERE RELYING "SOMEWHAT" ON THE RUSSIANS, ALTHOUGH SOME AMERICAN FOOD HAS BEEN BROUGHT IN.

SOME OF THE RUSSIAN EXPENDITURES WILL BE MARKED UP TO REVERSE LEND-LEASE.

AMERICAN OFFICERS IN RUSSIA ARE BEING PAID IN RUBLES. CONSIDERABLE DISCUSSION WAS NECESSARY TO WORK OUT EXCHANGE RATES.

BESIDES NIKITIN AND PERMINOV, RUSSIANS PARTICIPATING IN ESTABLISHMENT OF THE SYSTEM WERE NAMED AS FOLLOWS:

CHIEF MARSHAL OF AVIATION A.A.NOVIKOV, MARSHAL ALEXANDER M. BY CLYDE A.FARNSWORTH
WITH THE CHINESE-AMERICAN COMPOSITE WING ON THE HONAN FRONT IN CHINA, MAY 31-(DELAYED)-(AP)-CHINESE AIRMEN HAVE COME TO LOOK UPON THEIR CHERISHED AMERICAN P-40 FIGHTER PLANES AND THEIR B-25 BOMBERS ALMOST AS HUMAN BLOOD RELATIONS, AND SOME OF THEM, LIKE THE SEA CAPTAINS OF TRADITION, WOULD RATHER GO TO THEIR DEATHS THAN SURVIVE THEIR CRASHED SHIPS BY BAILING OUT.
OFTEN AMERICAN SQUADRON COMMANDERS IN THE CHINESE-AMERICAN COMPOSITE WING HAVE HAD TO ORDER THE CHINESE FLIERS TO BAIL OUT WHEN THERE WAS NO CHANCE OF LANDING DISABLED PLANES SAFELY.
"WE'VE GOT TO CONVINCE THEM IT'S EASIER TO REPLACE THE PLANE THAN THE PILOT," ONE COMMANDER SAID.
ONE OF THE MOST DRAMATIC STORIES IN THIS RESPECT CONCERNED THE CREW OF A B-25 WHO, LOST ONE NIGHT DURING BAD WEATHER WITH THE GASOLINE SUPPLY RUNNING LOW, REFUSED TO JUMP UNTIL REPEATEDLY ORDERED TO DO SO BY THE CHINESE PILOT.
AFTER ALL BUT THE NAVIGATOR AND THE PILOT HAD PARACHUTED SAFELY, THE TWO REMAINING AIRMEN FLEW ON IN THE DARKNESS--THE PILOT STICKING IT OUT BECAUSE HE FELT IT WAS HIS PLANE, THE NAVIGATOR BECAUSE HE WAS PARTLY RESPONSIBLE FOR THE SHIP'S PREDICAMENT. IT WAS A MATTER OF "FACE."
SURVIVING CREWMEN TOLD THE STORY. THE B-25 CRASHED IN MOUNTAINOUS COUNTRY WHERE A LANDING WAS ABSOLUTELY IMPOSSIBLE. THE PILOT AND NAVIGATOR WERE STILL AT THEIR STATIONS.
WHILE I HAVE BEEN AT THIS BASE I HAVE SEEN A CHINESE FIGHTER RETURN FROM A YANGTZE RIVER SWEEP WITH FOUR OR FIVE CHUNKS OF RIVERBOAT MAST IMBEDDED IN HIS PLANE, THE WING TRAILING 30 OR SO FEET OF ROPE. HE WAS FLYING CLOSELY ON THE WING OF AN AMERICAN SQUADRON COMMANDER WHEN HE SCRAPED THE VERY TARGET THEY WERE STRAFING. HE CAME BACK AND MADE A PERFECT LANDING, DESPITE A DROOPING TENDENCY IN THE DAMAGED WING.

A46
THE CHINESE FLIER, NEVER FLINCHING IN BATTLE, IF ANYTHING IS NOT CAUTIOUS ENOUGH. LIKE HIS AMERICAN COLLEAGUE, HE LIKES TO PAINT NAMES ON HIS PLANES, THOUGH THE NAMES ARE LIKELY TO BE LIFTED FROM CHINESE CLASSICAL QUOTATIONS RATHER THAN FROM THE EXTREMES OF RIBALDRY OR SENTIMENTALITY THAT MARK THE AMERICAN'S CHOICES.
AS MUCH AS THE CHINESE AIRMAN CHERISHES HIS PLANE, HE WILL SET FIRE TO IT IF IT FALLS IN ENEMY TERRITORY, OR WILL STRAFE A COMRADE'S WOUNDED PLANE UNDER SIMILAR CONDITIONS. THERE IS NO DOUBT THAT THE JAPANESE WOULD LIKE TO USE ANY P-40'S OR OTHER AMERICAN PLANES FALLING INTACT INTO THEIR HANDS.
ON THE WHOLE, THOUGH, THE CHINESE PERSIST IN TRYING TO BRING BACK THEIR PRECIOUS PLANES, DAMAGED OR INTACT, IN A COUNTRY WHERE THERE IS LITTLE CHANCE FOR SUCCESSFUL DEAD-STICK OR ANY OTHER KIND OF FORCED LANDING, AND WHERE THE SAFEST THING IS FOR THE PILOT TO BAIL OUT, DESPITE THE RISK OF FALLING INTO ENEMY HANDS.
HERE AT THIS COMPOSITE WING BASE THERE IS A GREAT DEAL OF CAMARADERIE AMONG AMERICANS AND CHINESE. ALTHOUGH THEY EAT SEPARATE MEALS TO ALLOW FOR THE MINORITY OF AMERICANS WHO DO NOT LIKE CHINESE FOOD, AND FOR THE CHINESE WHO DO NOT LIKE THE FOREIGN MENU, THIS DIVISION VANISHES AFTER DINNER. EVERYBODY GOES TO THE MOVIES TOGETHER AT ONE OF THE MESS HALLS.

ADVANCED ALLIED HEADQUARTERS, NEW GUINEA, SATURDAY, JUNE3 -(AP)-AMERICAN PRESSURE ON THE HARD-PRESSED JAPANESE DEFENDERS OF INVADED BIAK ISLAND IN THE SCHOUTENS IS INCREASING, HEADQUARTERS ANNOUNCED TODAY.

THE SIXTH ARMYFORCES WHICH INVADED THE ISLAND A WEEK AGO TODAY WERE BEING REINFORCED STEADILY BY FRESH TROOPS STREAMING ONTO THE ISLAND.

THE INVADERS, STYMIED ON THE BOSNEK-SORIDO COASTAL ROAD IN THEIR DRIVE FOR THE IMPORTANT MOKMER AIRDROME, 880 MILES FROM THE SOUTHERN PHILIPPINES, WERE GETTING HELP FROM BIG LIBERATOR BOMBERS FROM GEN. DOUGLAS MACARTHUR'S AIR FORCES.

THE LIBERATORS RANGED OVER THE RIDGES ABOVE THE COASTAL ROAD, DUMPING 80 TONS OF BOMBS ON JAPANESEPOSITIONS AND SNIPERS' NESTS.

THE ENEMY AIR ARM STRUCK BACK WEAKLY AT THE BIAK INVADERS WEDNESDA AND ONEOF THE JAPANESE PLANES WAS SHOTDOWN.

WHILE MACARTHUR'S FORCES WERE GIRDING FOR THE MAIN PUSH ON MOKMER AIRFIELD, OTHER GROUND TROOPS PRESSEDUP THE RIDGES AGAINST ENTRENCHED JAPANESE AND GAINED THE TOP OF SOME OF THE CLIFS.

CENTRAL PACIFIC (300)

U. S. PACIFIC FLEET HEADQUARTERS, PEARL HARBOR, JUNE 2-(AP)-A GIANT PACIFIC TRIANGULAR AREA WAS DOTTED BY BOMB CRATERS TODAY --ACROSS 1,000 MILES OF THE CAROLINES, NORTH TO GUAM, THEN BEYOND JAPAN IN THE FRIGID KURILES AND BACK TO WAKE -- AS THE CONSEQUENCE OF COORDINATED BLOWS BY AMERICAN BOMBERS FROM THREE WAR THEATERS.

IN OPERATIONS UNPRECEDENTED FOR THEIR SWIFT EXTENT, BOMBERS FROM THE SOUTHWEST AND CENTRAL PACIFIC COMBED THE CAROLINES; CENTRAL PACIFIC PLANES FLEW THE 1,200 MILES TO GUAM; OTHER CENTRAL PACIFIC BOMBERS POUNDED WAKE; AND ALEUTIAN-BASED PLANES STRUCK THE KURILES. ALL PLANES RETURNED SAFELY FROM THESE HAZARDOUS OPERATIONS.

THESE BLOWS WERE MASSED FROM SUNDAY THROUGH TUESDAY AND WERE ANNOUNCED TODAY AND YESTERDAY BY GEN. DOUGLAS MACARTHUR AND ADM. CHESTER W. NIMITZ.

ARMY MITCHELLS FROM THE NIMITZ THEATER RIPPED INTO THE DEFENSES OF PONAPE IN THE EASTERN CAROLINES. AT TRUK, 440 MILES BEYOND, CENTRAL PACIFIC BOMBERS STARTED FIRES WHICH COULD BE SEEN FOR 150 MILES AND BOMBERS FROM THE MACARTHUR THEATER MADE A LIGHT STAB FROM THE ADMIRALTY ISLANDS.

OTHER ADMIRALTY-BASED PLANES STRUCK 190 MILES WEST AT ALET ISLAND AIRDROME AND FAR INTO THE WESTERN CAROLINES AT WOLEAI.

CENTRAL PACIFIC ARMY LIBERATORS FROM ENIWETOK GAVE GUAM ITS THIRD LAND-BASED POUNDING SINCE JAPAN WRESTED THAT MARIANAS ISLAND FROM THE AMERICANS. THEY FOUGHT OFF 10 ENEMY FIGHTERS, PROBABLY DOWNING ONE, WITHOUT LOSS.

WAKE, THE FORMER AMERICAN BASE WHICH A CARRIER TASK FORCE VIRTUALLY IMMOBILIZED MAY 23, WAS HIT BY CENTRAL PACIFIC ARMY LIBERATORS WHICH HAD TO CONTEND ONLY WITH MODERATE ANTI-AIRCRAFT FIRE.

IN A CONTINUATION OF ATTACKS ON THE KURILES, GUARDING THE NORTH APPROACH TO JAPAN, NAVY VENTURA SEARCH PLANES FROM THE ALEUTIANS HIT SHUMUSHU AT THE NORTHERN TIP OF THAT CHAIN. WITHIN THE SAME THREE-DAY PERIOD, BUT ANNOUNCED PREVIOUSLY, BOMBERS HIT FOUR ISLANDS IN THAT CHAIN, INCLUDING ONE LESS THAN 500 MILES FROM THE JAPANESE MAINLAND.

NIGHT LEAD CUBAN (220)

BY FRED L.STROZIER

HAVANA, JUNE 2-(AP)-DR.RAMON GRAU SAN MARTIN, ELECTED TO A FOUR-YEAR TERM AS PRESIDENT OF CUBA IN YESTERDAY'S ELECTIONS, RECEIVED CORDIAL CONGRATULATIONS TODAY FROM HIS OPPONENT, DR.CARLOS SALADRIGAS, WHO CONCEDED DEFEAT WITH DRAMATIC SUDDENNESS WHEN RETURNS WERE IN FOR ONLY ONE-FOURTH OF THE TOTAL VOTE. THESE, HOWEVER, SHOWED SALADRIGAS AHEAD IN ONLY ONE PROVINCE, AND TRAILING 211,931 TO 184,822.

SALADRIGAS, FORMER PRIME MINISTER AND PERSONAL FRIEND OF PRESIDENT FULGENCIO BATISTA. WAS DEFEATED DESPITE SUPPORT BY FOUR GOVERNMENT PARTIES. HE WISHED DR.GRAU, LEADER OF THE OPPOSITION TO THE GOVERNMENT FOR MORE THAN A DECADE, THE "GREATEST SUCCESS" WITH HIS GOVERNMENT, "FOR THE GOOD OF CUBA."

DR.GRAU JOINED WITH SALADRIGAS AND FELLOW LEADERS OF BOTH PARTIES IN ENTHUSIASTIC PRAISE FOR BATISTA'S CONDUCT OF THE ELECTIONS, REMARKING ON THE IMPARTIALITY AND ORDERLY ACTIVITIES OF THE SOLDIERS AND POLICE.

BATISTA DECLARED TONIGHT THAT, IF THE OFFICIAL RETURNS BORE OUT SALADRIGAS' ELECTION, HE WOULD BE SEATED NEXT OCTOBER 10 WITH FULL SUPPORT OF CUBA'S ARMED FORCES.

DR.GRAU, WHO SERVED IN THE PRESIDENCY FIVE MONTHS IN 1933 AND 1934, AFTER THE OUSTER OF THE LATE DICTATOR, PRESIDENT GERARDO MACHADO, AND WAS DEFEATED FOR ELECTION BY BATISTA FOUR YEARS AGO, ANNOUNCED HE PLANNED A VACATION IN WASHINGTON AND CENTRAL AMERICAN CAPITALS SHORTLY.

BATISTA'S YOUNG BROTHER, FRANCISCO BATISTA, WAS REPORTED TO HAVE LOST HIS ATTEMPT TO UNSEAT MAYOR ISIDRO VIERA OF SUBURBAN MARIANAO.

THE MAYORSHIP OF HAVANA WAS LOST BY ALFREDO IZAGUIRRE HORNEDO, CANDIDATE OF THE FOUR COALITION PARTIES, WHO CONCEDED REELECTION OF THE OPPOSITION CANDIDATE, MAYOR RAUL MENOCAL.

IT WAS CONSIDERED LIKELY THAT BOTH THE HOUSE AND SENATE WOULD BE CONTROLLED BY THE AUTHENTIC REVOLUTIONARY AND REPUBLICAN PARTIES, WHICH ELECTED GRAU. THESE GROUPS WERE LEADING IN FIVE OF THE SIX PROVINCES OF CUBA.

COCHRAN (340)

WASHINGTON,JUNE 2-(AP)-THE WAR DEPARTMENT ANNOUNCED TODAY THAT COL.PHILIP G.COCHRAN, COMMANDING OFFICER OF THE FIRST AIR COMMANDO FORCE, WHICH FLEW THE BRITISH CHINDITS INTO BURMA AND THEN SUPPLIED THEM BY AIR, HAS RETURNED TO WASHINGTON TO REPORT TO GEN. H.H.ARNOLD, COMMANDING GENERAL, ARMY AIR FORCES.

"WE HAVE ONLY SCRATCHED THE SURFACE OF THE POSSIBILITY OF MOVING ARMIES BY AIR," SAID COCHRAN IN AN ENTHUSIASTIC REPORT ON THE BOLD AIRBORNE INVASION OF CENTRAL BURMA.

"THEY WILL BE PLACED IN STRATEGIC PLACES BY AIRPLANES. ONE THING WE DID WAS TO PROVE THAT. THERE WERE, OF COURSE, SOME THINGS WE DIDN'T GET DONE THAT WE WANTED TO, BUT I GUESS THAT'S THE WAY IT IT IN ANY OPERATION."

COCHRAN, WHOSE HOME IS AT 1052 W. 9TH ST., ERIE, PA., WAS ACCOMPANIED BY LT.COL.ARVID E.OLSON, 2352 N.SPALDING, CHICAGO, OPERATIONS OFFICER OF THE FIRST COMMANDO AIR FORCE, AND LT.COL.GRANT MAHONY, 145 DANIELS AVE., VALLEJO, CALIF., CHIEF OF ITS FIGHTER SECTION. ALL THREE WILL GO ON LEAVE SHORTLY.

COCHRAN'S FORCE OPERATED FROM FEB. 1 TO MAY 20, FLYING THE LATE MAJ.GEN.ORDE C.WINGATE'S CHINDITS INTO BURMA, WHERE THEY OPERATED BEHIND THE JAPANESE LINES, SLASHING ENEMY COMMUNICATIONS AND CUTTING THE SUPPLY LINES OF THE JAP FORCES.

COCHRAN REPORTED THAT FOR A MONTH AND A HALF BEFORE THE GLIDER INVASION BEGAN, THE FIGHTERS UNDER MAHONY AND BOMBERS UNDER LT.COL. ROBERT T.SMITH, 9200 BEVERLY BLVD., BEVERLY HILLS, CALIF., GAVE THE JAP AIR FORCE IN BURMA A THOROUGH GOING-OVER.

"WE WENT UP AND LOOKED EVERY DAY," HE SAID. "IT WAS CONSTANT ACTION. WHEN THE JAP CAME IN WITH PLANES, WE WOULD SLAM HIM. WE JUST FOUND AN OLD-FASHIONED WAR. HIGHLIGHT OF ONE DAY WAS WHEN OUR BOYS CAUGHT THE JAPS ON THE GROUND AND FINISHED OFF 43 OF THEM. WE 'LEARNED' THEM NOT TO COME INTO OUR DISTRICT. THE JAPS FINALLY BACKED UP TO HEHO WITH THEIR PLANES."

AFTER THE CHINDITS WERE LANDED, HE SAID, THEY WERE NOT ONLY SUPPLIED BY AIR, BUT THE PLANES BECAME THEIR ARTILLERY, AND ALSO EVACUATED THE WOUNDED.

IN MOST INSTANCES, RADIO CONVERSATIONS WERE IN THE CLEAR, WITHOUT CODE, SAID COCHRAN, AND THE MOVEMENTS WERE SO QUICK THEY WERE USUALLY COMPLETED BEFORE THE JAPS HAD TRANSLATED THE MESSAGES.

"WE WERE SO AUDACIOUS," HE SAID, "THE JAPS WOULDN'T BELIEVE WE WOULD DO IT."

MORE THAN ONCE, COCHRAN RELATED, THE SITUATION WAS SO TANGLED THAT WHILE THE CHINDITS HELD ONE END OF AN AIR STRIP, THE JAPS HAD CONTROL OF THE OTHER, AND A LIAISON PLANE PILOT, FLYING OUT WOUNDED, MIGHT BE WARNED TO TURN RIGHT AS HE TOOK OFF, BECAUSE THE JAPS WERE ON THE LEFT.

NEW YORK, JUNE 2-(AP)-IN A STATEMENT DISTRIBUTED BY THE DELEGATE OF THE GOVERNMENT OF YUGOSLAVIA FOR INFORMATION HERE, GEN. DRAJA MIHAILOVIC SAID TONIGHT "THE CIVIL WAR RAGING IN OUR COUNTRY UNDER ENEMY OCCUPATION X X X HAS BEEN PROVOKED BY THE PARTISANS MOVEMENT."

MIHAILOVIC, LEADER OF THE CHETNIKS IN YUGOSLAVIA, WHO WAS MINISTER OF WAR IN THE GOVERNMENT OF KING PETER II UNTIL A RECENT CABINET SHAKE-UP, DENIED "WITH INDIGNATION" REPORTS THAT SOME UNITS UNDER HIS COMMAND WERE COLLABORATING WITH THE GERMANS AND QUISLINGS.

SOME UNITS GOING OVER TO THE ENEMY HAVE GIVEN THEMSELVES THE NAME CHETNIKS, HE SAID, BUT ASSERTED THAT WITH THEM "THE YUGOSLAV ARMY UNDER MY COMMAND HAS NO RELATIONS WHATSOEVER NOR AS EVER HAD."

"WE ARE FULL CONSCIOUS OF OUR DUTY BOTH TO OUR PEOPLE AND TO THEIR FUTURE AS WELL AS TO OUR GREAT ALLIES," HE CONTINUED. "THAT IS WHY WE ARE FIGHTING AGAINST THE GERMAN AND BULGARIAN TROOPS OF OCCUPATION. WE ARE FIGHTING AGAINST THE QUISLINGS X X X BUT WE ARE ALSO FIGHTING IN SELF DEFENSE AGAINST THE PARTISANS WHO ARE ATTACKING US ON THE ENTIRE TERRITORY OF OUR COUNTRY."

HE SAID THE PARTISANS ABANDONED UNITED FRONT RESISTANCE AND ATTACKED HIS UNITS IN THE REAR AND HAVE NEVER CEASED. HE ASKED THAT AMERICAN CORRESPONDENTS COME TO HIS HEADQUARTERS TO OBSERVE WHAT WAS HAPPENING. MARSHAL TITO IS LEADER OF THE PARTISANS.

NEW YORK, JUNE 2--AN EXPRESSION THAT CONSIDERATIONS OF MILITARY SECURITY ALONE SHOULD GUIDE THE OPERATIONS OF ALLIED CENSORSHIP IN WAR THEATERS WAS EMPHASIZED BY PRESIDENT ROOSEVELT IN RESPONSE TO A REQUEST FROM KENT COOPER, EXECUTIVE DIRECTOR OF THE ASS PRESS, THAT THE PRESIDENT INTERCEDE IN OBTAINING RELEASE OF AN A.P. INTERVIEW WITH MARSHAL TITO.

THE INTERVIEW IN QUESTION, OBTAINED BY ASSOCIATED PRESS WAR CORRESPONDENT JOSEPH MORTON, WAS RELEASED BY ALLIED MILITARY CENSORSHIP IN THE MEDITERRANEAN THEATER ON MAY 20, THREE WEEKS AFTER IT WAS FILED AND FOUR DAYS AFTER MR.COOPER ADDRESSED APPEALS TO MR.ROOSEVELT AND PRIME MINISTER CHURCHILL.

NO RESPONSE HAS BEEN RECEIVED FROM MR.CHURCHILL. THE EXCHANGE OF CORRESPONDENCE WITH THE PRESIDENT, THE RELEASE OF WHICH HAS WHITE HOUSE APPROVAL, FOLLOWS:

MAY 16, 1944

THE PRESIDENT,
THE WHITE HOUSE,
WASHINGTON, D.C.

JUN 31944

DEAR MR.PRESIDENT:

I AM ADDRESSING YOU AS COMMANDER-IN-CHIEF ON A MATTER INVOLVING ALLIED CENSORSHIP OF POLITICAL NEWS IN THE MEDITERRANEAN WAR THEATER BECAUSE OF MY DEEP CONCERN THAT NO BARRIERS BE ERECTED UNDULY TO BLOCK EITHER AMERICAN JOURNALISTIC ENTERPRISE OR THE AVENUES WHEREBY THIS ENTERPRISE MAY CONTRIBUTE TO BETTER INFORMATION AND BROADER UNDERSTANDING OF EUROPEAN AFFAIRS AMONG THE AMERICAN PEOPLE.

AS IS OBVIOUS FROM THE ATTACHED MEMORANDUM, I HAVE NOT SEEN THE DISPATCH WHICH THE CENSOR HAS SUPPRESSED. OBVIOUSLY, ALSO, I DO NOT SEEK TO DISCLOSE MILITARY MATTERS AGAINST THE WISHES OF THE MILITARY, BUT I AM TOLD THAT THE DISPATCH IN QUESTION IS POLITICAL NEWS INSTEAD OF MILITARY NEWS AND I FEEL THAT YOU WILL BE THE LAST TO WANT TO SUPPRESS THE RIGHT OF ANY LEADER ALLIED IN THIS WAR FROM EXPRESSING HIS VIEWS TO THE UNITED STATES.

THIS ENTIRE MATTER OF SUPPRESSION, MR.PRESIDENT, IS FRAUGHT WITH EXTREME DANGER IN THAT IF MATTERS OF A POLITICAL NATURE ARE UNDULY SUBJECT TO CENSORSHIP, THEN WE ARE DRIFTING INTO THE DARKNESS THAT BRINGS MISUNDERSTANDING. IN SUCH DARKNESS THERE IS BREWED THE THING THAT CAUSES ANOTHER WAR.

EARNESTLY HOPING THAT YOU WILL SET A PRECEDENT BY YOUR FAVORABLE ACTION ON THE ATTACHED PLEA FOR THE RELEASE OF A SPECIFIC DISPATCH OR AT LEAST THAT YOU HAVE IT TRANSMITTED TO CENSORSHIP AUTHORITIES IN THIS COUNTRY TO PASS UPON IT RATHER THAN TO CONSIDER IT A LOCAL THEATER MATTER IN THE MEDITERRANEAN WAR, I AM, WITH ASSURANCES OF HIGH REGARD,

FAITHFULLY YOURS,

I AGREE WITH YOU THAT THE FULL FLOW OF NEWS FROM THE THEATERS OF OPERATIONS SHOULD BE ENCOURAGED. CENSORSHIP BARRIERS SHOULD NOT BE IMPOSED UNLESS THE SUCCESS OF OUR OPERATIONS AND THE LIVES OF OUR MEN WOULD OTHERWISE BE ENDANGERED.

Report of Invasion Flashed by Error, Startles the Nation

FALSE INVASION NEWS FLASHED BY NOVICE OPERATOR

Girl Practicing on Teletype Machine Causes World Wide Sensation.

GOT BY CENSORS

Newspaper and Radio Station Offices Swamped by Phone Calls.

NEW YORK, June 3—(AP) A young British girl teletype operator employed in the London bureau of the Associated Press punched out a strip of practice tape tonight and within a matter of moments was responsible for transmission throughout the United States and Latin America of an erroneous announcement that the Allies had landed in France.

Through almost incredible circumstances, the error slipped through the most elaborate system of safeguards and censorship ever established both by the Associated Press and Allied authorities.

The girl, Joan Ellis, had been practicing on a disconnected machine, and in violation of instructions included in her exercise this urgent message:

"FLASH, EISENHOWER'S HEADQUARTERS ANNOUNCE ALLIED LANDINGS FRANCE."

At 4:39 p. m., Eastern War Time, the flash appeared on the AP's direct London printer in New York and was relayed immediately throughout the United States and to Latin America.

Less than two minutes later came a message, "Bust That Flash," and word was sent out at once to editors to withhold publication. At 4:44 p. m. another London message directed that the flash be "killed," and this was done.

Announced Over Radio

In the two-minute interlude between the erroneous flash and the withhold order, however, the incorrect news had been announced over many radio stations in America and at some baseball parks. In New York's Polo Grounds the crowd observed one minute of silence after the word was given over the loudspeaker system.

In Ciudad Trujillo, capital of the dominican republic, newspaper sirens were sounded and crowds gathered, only to exclaim in disappointment when the error was announced.

The error was caught quickly enough so that it did not appear anywhere in print.

In New York and elsewhere newspaper and radio station switchboards were almost instantly swamped with inquiries from persons who had heard the original and incorrect flash but not the "kill."

The London bureau of the Associated Press cabled this explanation:

"The flash erroneously stating Eisenhower had announced Allied landings in France was transmitted by a new teletype operator in a wholly unauthorized test of a perforator.

"It moved without authority of censors and without knowledge of the editorial staff, which had no such copy on hand.

"Experienced operators saw the flash on the printer and immediately notified New York and the editors, who sent a 'kill'.

"Both editorial and traffic staffs were under strict instructions neither to prepare nor to practice with any such kind of copy, against the possibility of precisely such an incident.

"Joan Ellis, the young operator who erred, said she had been practicing on a disconnected machine and thought she had torn up all that tape and thrown it away."

"However, before transmitting the first 'take' of the Russian communique she said she inadvertently ran through part of the tape that she thought she had destroyed.

"The wholly mechanical error occurred in one of the busiest periods of the evening, which the tearful operator said probably accounted for the fact she did not notice her mistake at once.

"The censors were entirely unaware of the transmission."

Not Seen By Censors

The censors in London work from the typed copy prepared by reporters and editors, not from teletype perforator tape. Since in this case there was no 'copy', they did not know about the erroneous flash until it had been transmitted.

"The girl was one of several operators authorized to transmit on the direct facilities and fully and individually instructed to send only material passed by the censor and so stamped. Each operator has signed a secrecy form affirming he or she understood his full responsibility.

"In this instance, however, no copy such as that wrongly transmitted had passed through the regular guarded editorial and censorship channels. The censors are not concerned with traffic routine nor physically able to keep tab on practicing operators. Nevertheless censorship also is taking added precautions.

"Miss Ellis is 22 and has been with the Associated Press since January, 1944. Prior to that she had four years, experience as a teleprinter operator in the WAAF (Women's Auxiliary Airforce)."

How System Works

The teletype system operates with a roll of narrow paper tape in which holes are punched as the operator manipulates a keyboard. When the tape is then run through a transmitting machine, each of these series of holes causes a different electrical impulse which causes the printers at the receiving end to print the different letters and characters. The sending operator also has a printer at hand for "record copy" purposes.

Thus it is possible, as occurred in this almost unheard of instance, for the tape, with its code-like rows of holes—unreadable except by the highly-experienced — to be run hours or even days after it was actually peforated.

The big American radio chains, NBC, CBS, Blue Network and Mutual, all interrupted programs to carry the erroneous flash, and again to announce the correction, which they repeated at intervals during the evening.

By coincidence the British Broadcasting company at the time was broadcasting a dramatic reenactment of the Dunkerque epic of four years ago. The BBC did not receive the false flash, but had anyone tuned in on its program the impression might easily have been gained that invasion was in progress.

JUN 4 1944

The German radio late in the evening broadcast a factual account of the error.

Millions of Americans were electrified when they heard broadcast the erroneous report but the excitement subsided quickly when, in a few minutes the error was discovered.

In churches, in baseball parks, theaters and in their homes the populace heard the report.

Newspapers and radio stations throughout the United States were flooded with inquiries.

Washington Calm

Possibly the calmest city in the country was Washington, where few seemed surprised at the report and, when it was subsequently corrected, many officials said they were confident it was "only slightly premature."

Clergymen hurried to call special services which had been announced for D-day when they heard the "Flash" and many church bells were rung to summon congregations to special prayers.

Radio networks interrupted their programs, including a description of the Belmont Stakes at Belmont race track, to broadcast the erroneous flash and through the remainder of the evening repeated the announcement of its correction and the explanation of transmission of the misinformation from London.

Many morning newspapers today put the story of the false invasion flash on their front pages and virtually every paper in the country displayed the story prominently.

Lanuvio, Keystone of Foe's Defenses, Falls After Fierce Battles.

WHOLE NAZI POSITION IN PERIL

Yanks Roll Along Via Casilina, Toward Eternal City, Only Fourteen Miles Ahead.

NORGAARD

BULLETIN.

Allied Headquarters, Naples, June 3 (A. P.).—The Allied Fifth and Eighth Armies joined forces east of Valmontone today.

DAY

Allied forces have "broken through enemy positions south of Rome in many places," and now hold most of the Alban Hills dominating the approaches to Rome, headquarters also announced.

At the same time the Eighth Army moving through the Sacco valley to the southeast occupied Anagni, seven miles northwest of Ferentino, and a mile and a half above the Via Casilina, Allied forces of the two main armies are driving toward a junction on the famed highway.

American troops broke through the Nazi stronghold of Lanuvio west of Velletri today, knocking out one of the most heavily defended points in Rome's defense lines, and other United States forces moved two miles up the via Casilina from Valmontone on the right flank into the town of Labico.

In the Alban hills six miles north of Velletri, American troops had seized Monte Castellacio, fourteen miles southeast of Rome.

Whole Nazi Position in Peril.

The newest break-through jeopardized the whole Nazi position between the Alban hills and the seacoast, apparently leaving the Nazis guarding the Appian Way into Rome with the alternative either of fleeing or fighting where their retreat route might easily be cut behind them.

From the heights Americans were looking down on the last few miles to Rome's gates.

Infantrymen who had taken the Nazis by surprise in smashes through the hills instead of following the valleys now were in position to link up with other United States troops advancing toward the city along the Via Casilina.

Headquarters said fierce fighting was continuing in the Alban Hills tonight, and progress is being maintained.

Yanks Fan Out in 3 Directions.

United States units which took Valmontone struck out in three directions — northwest along the Via Casilina toward Rome, twenty miles away; southeast along the same road to link up with the French who are driving the Germans out of their last footholds on the south side of the Sacco River, and due north along an imoprtant secondary road toward a vital highway junction at Cave, three miles from Valmontone.

The French, meantime, closed in quickly from the south on Colle Ferro, four and a half miles southeast of Valmontone and within pistol shot of both Highway Six and the river.

Farther to the southeast other French troops closed the retreat route from the area south of the Sacco river by slicing across a secondary road at Sgurgola, fourteen miles from Valmontone and five and a half miles west of Ferentino, which the Eighth Army already had taken.

Gen. Alphonse Juin's troops also were driving northward from the village of Montelanico, eleven miles southeast of Valmontone. Montelanico was taken the night of June 1.

Thus iron claws were closing in on whatever German units were attempting to fight a rearguard action in the 13-mile sector between Colle Ferro and Ferentino, looping south of the Sacco river.

Heavy Loss Due

From this bag the Nazis had four unsurfaced country roads extending northward, along which they could attempt to escape, but close pursuit from three sides was certain to cost them heavy casualties as well as the loss of all but their most highly mobile vehicles.

In the Alban hills the enemy lost a thousand men in prisoners alone in the past 24 hours in repeated counterattacks, vainly attempting to halt the Americans from widening the gap in their frontal defenses.

This brought the total prisoners taken by the Fifth Army alone in the current offensive to more than 14,000. The Fifth and Eighth Armies together have taken over 20,000 prisoners. It was officially reported that the whole Campoleone area near Lanuvio was "littered with enemy tanks and vehicles" and that German losses were mounting steadily as Allied artillery smashed desperate enemy attempts to form up for fresh counter-attacks.

Despite the cautious tone of General Sir Harold Alexander's communique, it was obvious the Germans already were routed out of the strongest positions they could hope to hold in the Alban Hills and that the Fifth Army break-through to Rome might come soon.

The enemy was fighting desperately to cling to what is left of his deep defenses all the way from the sea coast to the Via Casilina, but without reserves he could not long stand losses such as he has suffered in the past three weeks and hope to do anything more than delay the Allied entry into Rome.

In their advances both in the Alban Hills and north of Valmontone, the Americans were encountering the greatest difficulty from Nazi snipers who had to be killed one by one.

Nazis Bewildered

"German soldiers have been found so bewildered by the fighting that they have been rounded up and described as stragglers rather than as prisoners. Others are making use of fields of high-standing grain in which to hide. Many have mingled with civilians and tried to settle down in Italy to get out of the war."

A British security officer reported that German looting left Frosinone "almost denuded of furniture, fixtures, even doors and windows. It is quite clear the Germans are continuing their systematic pillage of the countryside."

Extensive Demolitions

Enemy demolitions are extensive. In two cases British patrols pursued the enemy so closely they captured demolition parties at work and at other times surprised parties just starting to dig new lines.

Allied destroyers yesterday bombarded targets north of Anzio and successfully "neutralized" an enemy battery firing upon small minesweepers clearing a channel off the coast.

Fighter-bombers knocked out more than 200 enemy motor transports, scored hits on bridges and attacked communications, troop concentrations and supply dumps both in the battle area and on the main Rome-Florence route.

Flat Cars Blasted

One formation of six Thunderbolts alone destroyed 16 motor transports, then strafed a train of 60 flatcars loaded with motor vehicles and 88-millimeter guns and rail yards south of Pescia. Six flatcars exploded, 40 or 50 others were damaged and a locomotive was destroyed.

Intensified Allied air support of the Yugoslav Partisans in the last few days in the form of raids on German troop concentrations, convoys and other targets has been acknowledged in a message of thanks to the Mediterranean Allied Air Force, it was announced.

TONIGHT

Germans Pillage Countryside, Leave Snipers to Try to Delay Allies.

FEDER

ALLIED HEADQUARTERS, Naples, June 3.—(AP) American troops raced through Rome's outer approaches from the south and southeast tonight under orders to destroy the retreating German armies, five of whose 18 divisions already have been practically annihilated and whose defensive lines have been blasted apart.

With the city's skyline in easy view of the advancing American armor and infantry, it appeared that within a matter of hours Rome might become the first European capital to be liberated from the Nazis.

Ordered to Destroy Nazis

Lt. Gen. Mark W. Clark, commander of the Fifth army, instructed his subordinates, however, that the immediate task was to pursue and destroy as much as possible of the German Tenth and Fourteenth armies and that entry into Rome would come afterwards.

Besides the five Nazi divisions, virtually destroyed since the present Allied offensive began May 11, several others have been battered badly, and front-line dispatches tonight said further progress was being made towards the goal of annihilation.

There was no word as to how many Germans might be caught by the American, British and French troops converging below Rome and be added to the 16,000 prisoners already in the Allied bag.

The belief grew, however, that the Allied forces closing in on a pocket in the northern edge of the Sacco valley still held by the enemy could hope to trap only a relatively small proportion of the German units which earlier had been reported there.

This was supported by front-line accounts tonight showing that, despite its apparent speed, the German retreat was not a rout.

Edward Kennedy, Associated Press correspondent with the Fifth army, reported that, "there were still many German pockets behind us, raking the road with machine-gun and shellfire, but these were being mopped up."

He said further that the Germans were taking time in their flight to pillage the countryside and were leaving snipers behind to try to delay the Allies.

Present distances of the Allies from Rome were not disclosed, but front dispatches indicated clearly that they were short and growing shorter.

The Americans, were thrusting up both the Appian and Casilinian ways and across open country, while other Allied troops converged on routes leading up to the city.

The British Eighth army, which had pushed up through the Liri and Sacco valleys, made a junction with the Americans on the Via Casilina 10 miles east of Valmontone shortly before noon Saturday and continued towards Rome on that route.

JUN 4 1944

Seize Alban Hills

Fifth army fighters smashed apart the Germans' last mountainous positions guarding Rome by seizing most of the Alban hills dominating the capital on the south. Descent from the hills would put them within ten miles of Rome's outskirts.

The Berlin radio broadcast that Rome now was "free of armed forces," indicating the possibility that the city might not be defended.

Allied headquarters already had announced that if the Germans chose to fight for Rome, the Allies "will be obliged to take appropriate military measures to eject them."

Tonight the Allied command broadcast over the Free Italian radio at Naples to Italian Partisan forces inside Rome, declaring "Rome's liberation is at hand" and apprising them of their duty to locate mines and booby traps which the Germans might leave behind and to prevent German sabotage.

Sees Liberation of Rome Near

The message, issued by Gen. Sir Harold Alexander, Allied commander in Italy, said:

"The liberation of Rome is near x x x. Do everything to prevent destruction of the city. Prevent the enemy from exploding his mines which he might have placed under bridges and government offices x x x. Remove from the streets all obstacles, barricades and other obstructions x x x.

"It is vital for the Allies that troops can go through Rome without any loss of time in order to complete the destruction of the German armies retreating northward x x x.

"Citizens of Rome, the future of Rome is in your hands."

Fierce fighting continued tonight in the Alban Hills, also known as the Colli Laziali mountain pass, as the Germans struggled desperately to hold off smashing attacks that every hour threatened more and more to engulf their defenses and send the Fifth Army surging down the last few miles to Rome.

The newest breakthroughs, catching the Germans by surprise, jeopardized the entire Nazi position between the Alban Hills and the seacoast, apparently leaving the Germans guarding the Appian Way to Rome faced with alternatives of fleeing or remaining to fight where the retreat route might easily be cut from behind them.

Enemy Defenses Pierced

Although the Allied progress was being maintained tonight, it was problematical just how large a number of the wearying German Army would be added to the 16,000 already in the Allied prisoner bag in the rapidly tightening noose the British, French and Americans were throwing around the area.

Ripping the enemy fortress wall from Valmontone to Velletri and beyond, the doughboys seized vital peaks dominating the approaches to the Italian capital. The drive was accompanied by twin smashes westward from the captured strongholds of Valmontone and Velletri on the direct roads to the city, and from one end to the other the final enemy defenses before Rome seemed to be crumbling.

Fifth Army troops also advanced to within fourteen miles of Rome from the southeast, capturing the Alban Hills stronghold of Mount Castellacio, six miles north of Velletri.

Yard by yard the Americans punched their way through the stubborn defenses. One of these smashes tore through the powerfully held and bitterly defended town of Lanuvio, four miles west of Velletri and sixteen miles from Rome, after several days of blazing battle. Another overwhelmed the village of Labico on the Via Casilina, two miles closer to Rome than Valmontone.

German defenses astride the Via Casilina were apparently jeopardized by the simultaneous Fifth Army smash into Monte Castellacio, where doughboys continued to drive forward in the face of stiff resistance.

The Allied communique told of penetration into the enemy position north of Velletri, but added that "the enemy's defenses are in considerable depth, and firm resistance is being encountered."

break-through, smashed numerous heavy German counterattacks and took a bag of more than 1,000 prisoners within 24 hours, swelling the total of prisoners taken by the Fifth Army alone in the current offensive to more than 14,000.

Germans Lose Heavily

Near Lanuvio, just west of Velletri the Germans lost heavily in blistering counterattacks which were successively turned back. The area of the town of Campoleone, three miles west of Lanuvio, was littered with enemy tanks and vehicles and much equipment was captured.

[The German broadcast communique said that at Lanuvio and west of the town German troops "repulsed all enemy attacks in grim fighting." It said that "on the southeastern slopes of the Alban mountains and on both sides of the Via Casilina, the enemy attacked with superior forces all day long."]

To the east of this theater, "the Eighth Army continues to drive the enemy to the north and west," the Allied communique said. "Ferentino and Veroli have been occupied and our advance elements are approaching Alatri." The Eighth Army troops were reported within a mile of Alatri, town of 19,000 five miles northwest of Veroli and six and a half miles north of Frosinone.

Report Capture Of Alatri

[The British radio in a broadcast heard by the OWI reported that advance Eighth Army elements had captured Alatri, and that farther west, New Zealand units had pushed ahead beyond Sora in the Liri Valley.]

So hard were the Allies punching along the Italian front despite fierce counterattacks that German soldiers do not seem to know what has hit them. Many were found so bewildered they were more like stragglers than prisoners when they were rounded up. Some were hiding out in fields of high grain, waiting for the battle to pass by, and others were mingling with Italian civilians and attempting to settle down in Italy.

Continue Pillaging

Germans who have managed to escape the Allied traps left little behind in their flight northward except where pursuit compelled them to abandon equipment.

A British survey officer reported that the Germans' looting left Frosinone "almost denuded of furniture, fixtures, fittings, and even doors and windows." It was clear the Germans were continuing their systematic pillage of the Italian countryside. Once rich Italian farm areas were found completely devoid of live stock by civilians who began straggling timidly back to their homes

Enemy demolition parties ahead of the advancing Allied forces continued to blow up bridges and culverts. Some of the intended demolition was halted by the close pursuit of the enemy.

YANK IN JEEP UNITES ARMIES

Meets British Unit Ten Miles East Of Valmontone

JUN 4 1944

By LYNN HEINZERLING

With the Eighth Army on Highway 6, Italy, June 3 (AP)—An American came booming down Highway 6 in a jeep shortly before noon today, pulled up sharply at a deep hole in the road ten miles east of Valmontone and there a more or less official meeting with the Eighth and Fifth armies took place.

Except for holes blown by Germans, Highway 6 now is open from the Eighth Army front to Valmontone.

From Artillery Unit

The American was Warrant Officer George Mitra, attached to a United States artillery unit with the French units of the Fifth Army. He told an Eighth Army reconnaissance unit which greeted him that he was from Pennsylvania and all members assumed that was a very important place and didn't inquire what part of Pennsylvania.

Mitra said he was making a little reconnaissance of his own looking for transport, but while there was plenty of transport in this area his artillery unit was on the wrong side of a hole which the Germans had blown in the road at a point where a culvert drains a gully.

The happy part of his stay was that a meeting had taken place.

Flag For Event Overlooked

Lieut. John Butcher, of Southill, Bedfordshire, was in charge of the Eighth Army reconnaissance party which met Mitro. Butcher had a big flag ready just for the occasion, but somehow in the confusion he failed to get it out.

Mitro had no flag, since he was representing no one except a small artillery unit looking for transport.

Mitro left his jeep on the west side of the hole, walked down and up the other side, reaching the British at about 11.15 A. M.

He was very lucky at that, because Lieutenant General Sir Oliver Leese happened to be about at the time looking over the situation at the extreme flank of the Eighth Army front and Mitro was introduced to him.

Nazi Wreckage Is Strewn On Highway 6

By Lynn Heinzerling

With the Eighth Army on Via Casilina, June 2 (AP—Delayed)—The hills and roads on both sides of Via Casilina are strewn with the wreckage and wasted resources of an army in flight, and there were plentiful indications today that the Eighth and Fifth armies would soon straddle the highway from Cassino to Valmontone, with the Germans fleeing to the hills.

Between Frosinone and Alatri in the hills there are great piles of abandoned German shells, mortar projectiles and other equipment. The ammunition apparently was intended for use in stemming the Eighth Army's surge up Highway 6. But there were no shells falling on Highway 6 in this area today.

Panther Tanks Line Road

Also lining the roads are great, hulking panther tanks—still and helpless. These are some of the 45-ton monsters the Germans now consider their best tanks.

Eighth Army Commander Lieut. Gen. Sir Oliver Leese inspected one today along the highway—one which was captured by Canadians—and took a short ride through the fields in it.

Some German prisoners are being rounded up in the hills, and many of them appear completely lost. Others wearing Italian clothes are being sought in the countryside.

Blowing Up Bridges

In one prisoners' cage along the highway today I saw a group of about 50 tired-looking, ragged and dispirited Nazis. They were part of the army which only a few days ago taunted Eighth Army troops with leaflets boasting that at the current rate of progress it would take the Allies "seven long years of bloodshed" to reach Berlin, adding "and that means you will never live to see it."

Most of the German effort now seems to be devoted to blowing up all bridges and culverts to slow the steady advance of the Eighth Army. A miracle of engineering skill has nullified most of this destruction. Bridges seem to spring up in a matter of hours. The new route is demined and smoothed and traffic moves forward in almost awesome volume.

2 Motorcyclists Escape

Fast German motorcycle riders do much of the last-minute demolition work, and one of them was caught today as he was leaving a hill town north of Highway 6. Two others escaped. The three were seen riding out of the town shortly before a large explosion sent up clouds of dust.

In the same town the Germans used the church tower as an observation post. Eighth Army gunners lopped off the tower with a well-aimed fusillade and soon afterward German shelling of the road into the town ceased.

Occupation of Ferentino has placed the Allies in a position where Americans and the French and the Eighth Army are all converging, and a violent realignments of the front line seems a matter only of hours.

Fate Of Rome Up To Nazis, Allies Say

Allied Headquarters, Naples, June 3 (AP)—The Allied command in Italy pledged every precaution to safeguard Rome in a statement today following Pope Pius XII's plea that the city be spared, but declared its fate lay in the hands of the Germans—that they would be ousted by force if they defended the capital.

(A Berlin broadcast, quoting a Foreign Office spokesman, declared the Italian capital is free of German armed forces.

("On the German side everything has been done for months to preserve Rome from such a fate," it declared. "Rome today can be regarded as a city free from armed forces.")

Aim Is Explained

Today's Allied pledge expressed hope the enemy "will not make such an ill-considered choice"—to defend Rome. Pope Pius declared that "whoever would dare lift a hand against Rome would be guilty of matricide."

The Allies "have only taken and only will take military action against Rome in so far as the Germans use the city, its highways and its roads for their military purposes," the communique said.

The complete text of the statement:

"Allied military authorities, confronted by the ruthless enemy in Italy, are interested solely in the destruction and elimination of German forces in that country.

Precautions Taken

"They have taken and will continue to take every possible precaution during the course of their campaign to spare innocent civilians and cultural and religious monuments of permanent value to civilization.

"In particular they are deeply conscious of the unique position occupied by Rome as one of the chief historical, religious and cultural centers of the world, and of the fact that Rome is the seat of His Holiness, the Pope, and contains the neutral state of the Vatican City.

Safeguards Pledged

"It is therefore the firm intention of Allied Governments and of Allied military authorities to continue to take every precaution in their power, consistent with essential military requirements, to safeguard the population of Rome and its historical and religious monuments."

"The Allies have only taken and will only take military action against Rome in so far as the Germans use the city, railways and roads for their military purposes. If the Germans choose to defend Rome the Allies will be obliged to take appropriate military measures to eject them. It therefore is the sincere hope of His Majesty's Government and the United States Government that the enemy will not make such an ill-considered choice."

Conflicting Claims

Premier Pietro Badoglio attempted to have Rome declared an open city before the Italian capitulation last September and the Germans have issued a number of claims, some conflicting, that the city would be demilitarized. Neither the Italians before their capitulation nor the Germans since their occupation of the capital have, however, offered proof that it has been divested of military units and establishments.

Last March President Roosevelt assailed the Germans for their use of Rome as a military center and last February the Ankara radio said the Germans had issued a thinly veiled threat to Pope Pius, in their effort to have him quit the Vatican, that the capital would be defended regardless of the destruction entailed.

Answers De Valera

In answer to a plea from Prime Minister Eamon de Valera of Eire that Rome be spared, Berlin again said on April 18 that the city had been demilitarized. President Roosevelt messaged De Valera the following day that the Allies were deeply concerned over the possibility the city might suffer, but said that its fate was up to the Germans.

"If the German forces were not entrenched in Rome, no question would arise concerning the city's preservation," the President messaged.

ROME'S FATE UP TO NAZIS

JUN 4 1944

Allies Promise Efforts To Save City, Foe Denies Use

NO ROAD

Allied Headquarters, Naples, June 3 (AP)—With its armies nearing Rome, the Allied command today placed upon the Nazi military the responsibility for making the city a bloody battlefield or withdrawing and sparing it further ravages of war, and the Germans countered quickly with a claim that Rome "can be regarded as a city free from armed forces."

Issuing a special communique one day after Pope Pius expressed hope that Rome "at all costs may be saved from becoming a theater of war," the Allied command said the United Nations forces "have only taken and will only take military action against Rome in so far as the Germans use the city, its railways and roads for military purposes."

German Agency Answers

Promptly the German propaganda agency Transocean countered with what it called an official statement by a German Foreign Office spokesman concerning the Pontin's plea, it said:

"On the German side everything has been done for months to preserve Rome from such fate. Rome today can be regarded as a city free of armed forces."

The Allied communique declared the United Nations forces to be interested only in "the destruction and elimination of German forces" in Italy, adding that every possible precaution had been and will be taken "to spare innocent civilians and cultural and religious monuments of permanent value to civilization."

Will Eject Any Of Foe

"If the Germans choose to defend Rome," the communique said "the Allies will be obliged to take appropriate military measures to eject them. It is therefore the sincere hope of his Majesty's Government and the United States Government that the enemy will not make this ill-considered choice."

The statement said the Allies were deeply conscious of the unique position of Rome as one of the chief religious, historical and cultural centers of the world, "and of the fact that Rome is the seat of His Holiness, the Pope, and contains the neutral state of Vatican City.

"It is therefore the firm intention of the Allied governments and Allied military authorities to continue to take every precaution in their power, consistent with essential military requirements, to safeguard the population of Rome and its historical and religious monuments."

Pope Pius in an address to the College of Cardinals yesterday said Rome should be spared the fate of becoming a theatre of war despite "the opposing considerations of seeming utility and so-called military exigencies and needs." He declared that "whoever dared raise a hand" against Rome "would be guilty of matricide."

Benedictine Altar Sent To Reich, Report

With the Eighth Army in Italy, June 3 (AP)—It has been learned on good authority that Lieut. Gen. Richard Heidrich, commander of the First Nazi Parachute Division, sent a part of the altar of the Benedictine Monastery, on Mount Cassino, as a souvenir to Reichsmarshal Goering.

The reichsmarshal, it was reported, sent his thanks to the entire German division, which played a prominent role in the bloody battles at Cassino.

Air Group Makes Record Raiding Italy

Mediterranean Air Force Headquarters, June 3 (AP)—Maj. Gen. John K. Cannon's First Tactical Air Force closed out May as the greatest month in its history by dropping 20,580 tons of bombs—more explosives than landed on Italy during all the months before her capitulation and greater than the weight dropped during April by the entire Mediterranean Air Force.

The tactical force flew more than 39,000 sorties during May. It destroyed 2,768 German motor vehicles and damaged 2,027 others; destroyed 95 bridges in northern Italy and damaged 100 others; destroyed 16 railroad tunnels in the battle area; knocked out 9 fuel dumps and 21 supply dumps; blew up 65 enemy vessels, and knocked out 3 factories.

DUKE GETS HIS 26TH

Allied Air Force Headquarters, Italy, June 3 (A. P.).—Squadron Leader Neville Duke became the top scoring pilot in the Mediterranean area by destroying six enemy aircraft from May 13 to 21 to bring his total to twenty-six, it was announced today. His squadron, operating from the beachhead strip, wiped out sixteen enemy planes and damaged ten in that period.

Yank Planes Hit 2 New West-Wall Blows

London, June 3 (AP)—American heavy bombers struck twice at Nazi coastal fortifications in the Pas-de-Calais and Boulogne areas of France today, carrying on the non-stop aerial assault of Europe now under intensified pressure after the shuttle raid to Russian bases.

Flying two missions from Britain for the second day, 250 Fortresses and Liberators with equally strong escort hit coastal emplacements in the morning and similar fleets struck in the same area in the afternoon.

These West Wall fortifications were raided yesterday in their heaviest daylight pounding of the war, and 500 RAF bombers attacked invasion defenses and rail facilities last night.

Offensive In 16th Day

The daylight attacks sent the air offensive into its 16th day.

Today's raiders hurled probably 1,500 tons of explosives on this Atlantic Wall section—for a total of about 4,500 tons in the last 24 hours on this area closest to Britain.

The night blows climaxed a day which saw the Allied air forces expand their pincers campaign to three-way attacks from Britain, the Mediterranean and Russia.

Rounding out a day which brought an epochal shuttle raid by American bombers to new Russian bases and two heavy bomber attacks on France from Britain by daylight, the RAF night bomber fleet struck German Channel defenses and again attacked the great Trappes railway yards on the outskirts of Paris.

Leverkusen A Side Target

A side force of Mosquitos attacked the chemical center of Leverkusen in Germany near Cologne, a frequent target, and other formations laid mines.

Seventeen British planes were missing from the night operations and at least seven German fighters were shot down, the Air Ministry announced.

Italy-based Allied bombers attacked objectives at Giurgiu, a Romanian city on the Danube, last night. Planes of the Mediterranean Allied Air Force flew 2,700 sorties (individual plane flights) yesterday. Five of these Italian-based planes were missing.

Port For Ploesti Oil

Giurgiu is Romania's most important river port for the shipment of oil from the Ploesti fields. The town has storage tanks, quays and shipyards stretching for miles along the river and a pipeline connects the port with the oil fields.

When the RAF Halifaxes, Liberators and Wellingtons which made the attack left the city, oil was seen spreading into the river. Returning crewmen said they were able to see fires for 150 miles.

Exclusive of the night attacks a total of more than 5,000 Allied planes participated in the massive two-way assaults yesterday, dropping nearly 7,000 tons of explosives.

American Flying Fortresses and Liberators with their fighter escorts bored into France twice yesterday making the first attack against the invasion coast of Pas de Calais and the second against a variety of targets, west and southwest of Paris.

Seven heavy bombers were lost to anti-aircraft fire in the second mission. There were no losses in the first.

Medium, light and fighter-bombers of the Allied Expeditionary Air Forces also stabbed into France and the Low Countries at dusk.

The Romanian radio said today in a broadcast recorded by the British Ministry of Information that "several formations of Anglo-American planes had carried out attacks on the western part of Romania."

"Several People Killed"

Declaring that localities of no military importance were bombed, the broadcast added that "damage was caused to property and several people were killed."

The shuttle raid on Romania yesterday, made by American Fortresses and escorting Mustangs which landed in Russia, was given a big play in London newspapers today.

There was virtually no speculation about the implications of the operation beyond the official announcement however, because of security precautions.

Climax Reached, Nazi Asserts

Karl Zeplin, a German air correspondent, concluded in a Berlin broadcast that the British and American air forces have reached a climax in the air war over the Continent during the past month as far as numbers and intensity of the attacks was concerned.

"Some experiences are significant," he said. "For instance, that the main burden of air operations has been taken over by American heavy day bomber formations while the British night attacks are of a secondary character."

BIG BOMBERS TWICE BATTER FRENCH COAST

U. S. Heavies In Double Trip To Calais And Boulogne Areas

London, June 3 (AP)—The ramparts of Europe—under new aerial pressure of shuttle raids by American planes using Russian bases—were blasted on the west twice today by United States Fortresses and Liberators without the loss of a single bomber.

Both the assaults by United States heavies were directed against the Nazis' invasion coast of northern France and out of a total force of perhaps 1,000 bombers and fighters taking part in the double operation, only one fighter failed to return.

Second Day In Area

The Pas de Calais region also was hit Friday by Fortresses and Liberators without loss. Thus the cost of three attacks on Hitler's west wall by nearly 2,500 planes dropping an estimated 4,500 tons of explosives has been one single-engined plane.

This means that only one man is missing from a total of nearly 16,000 airmen flying against Pas de Calais in the last two days—an example of the way in which air units are paving the way for the landing of ground forces at a minimun loss of life.

While the heavy bombers were hitting the coastal fortifications, hundreds of fighters and fighter bombers of both the American and British sections of the Allied expeditionary air force ranged back and forth across France and the Low Countries in a series of attacks on the enemy's transport and communications.

Marauders Strike Again

Late in the evening Marauder bombers with an escort of Thunderbolts swept over the invasion coast to give the Nazi fortifications one more lick. The Marauders also attacked a highway bridge over the Seine just west of Paris and Havocs bombed an airfield at Chartres.

An indication that RAF night raiders were following up the daylight assaults came as the German warning system announced "nuisance raiders" were approaching western Germany and the Frankfurt station left the air in the middle of a program.

It was the second straight day that Fortresses and Liberators had flown a twice-a-day schedule from Britain, and around 250 heavy bombers appeared in each streamlined task force that swept the coastal defenses with perhaps 1,500 tons of exploding steel. The escort was in the same strength.

Half On Pas-De-Calais Area

Half of the 6,000-ton load was hurled yesterday by 1,000 bombers on emplacements that the Germans, awaiting invasion, have installed in the Pas-de-Calais area. Other bombers raided the Boulogne area.

From bases in Italy, United States heavy bombers attacked targets in Romania yesterday and flew onto newly prepared American bases in Russia in the first west-east shuttle raid.

In today's double-barreled assaults on the west wall, bombers were able to carry maximum loads because of the short distance involved.

As in yesterday's attacks, the bombing had to be done through an overcast, and returning crewmen said the skies were free of German fighters and flak was only moderate. Some Liberator crews said, however, they hit heavy ground barrages, including a sizable number of rockets.

RAF In Night Coast Blow

The RAF, with a fleet of upward of 500 bombers, heaped more destruction on the coastal emplacements of France last night, and struck the great Trappes railroad yard in the Paris outskirts, scattering probably well over 2,500 tons of bombs.

This aerial battering went into its sixteenth day without a letup.

The Mediterranean Allied air force kept up the night pressure from the south with a damaging raid on the Danube city of Giurgiu, most important port for river shipment of oil to Germany. Bombers left fires visible 150 miles away, and flaming oil spread into the Danube.

Emphasize Shuttle Raid

The shuttle bombing trip to Russia was given a big play by London newspapers, but there was virtually no speculation concerning its implications because of security precautions.

A German air correspondent, Karl Zeppelin, said in a broadcast that the British and American air forces had reached a climax in the air war over the Continent during May, both in the number of attacks and in their intensity.

The Nazi-controlled Paris radio said fires were spread in Rouen and 36 persons were killed in Paris in last night's bombings.

Vichy Tells Of Rouen Raid

The Vichy radio said Rouen had been attacked again today by Allied planes.

Fighters and fighter-bombers of both the American and British tactical air forces joined in the widespread attack on transport and communications in the occupied countries.

Thunderbolts, Mustangs and Lightnings hit rail targets near St. Quentin and Hirson, highway bridges near Paris, a fuel dump at Domfront, an airfield at Chauny and troop-carrying trucks near Compiegne.

Rocket Planes Used

Rocket-firing Typhoons formed the spearhead of similar bombing and strafing missions by the RAF. More than 20 squadrons of Spitfire fighter-bombers took part in a single assignment to destroy military transport wherever found in the Caen and Cherbourg peninsula area.

One pilot described this mission by saying, "we cleared up the roads until our section looked absolutely dead except for bonfires here and there to mark our attacks."

The Air Ministry disclosed that the Typhoons and Spitfires had been doing a systematic wrecking job on the German radio network in northwestern Europe. Several continental stations have not been heard on the air for two days.

London, June 3 (AP)—The Berlin radio in a Stockholm dispatch said today that 502 American airmen are now interned in Sweden. No figures were given on the British.

3-SHIP NAZI CONVOY SMASHED BY BOMBS

British Carrier Planes' Toll in Strike Off Norway Is Set at 20,000 Tons

By ERNEST AGNEW,
Associated Press Correspondent

For the Combined American Press.

ABOARD A BRITISH AIRCRAFT CARRIER, in Northern Waters (Delayed) (AP — Planes from a British naval task force gliding through Norwegian coastal waters today dive-bombed and strafed a convoy of three German merchantmen aggregating 20,000 tons, leaving all smoking and burning furiously.

The aerial strike was made against a convoy protected by four flak ships heading down the Stadlandet Peninsula midway between Trondheim and Bergen and presumably laden with a cargo of ores and fish oils from Narvik.

Within fifteen minutes after the first Barracudas dived and dumped their bombs the largest merchantman of 10,000 tons was seen smoking badly and listing at the stern. Another merchantman of an estimated 5,000 tons was at right angles to her original course and making for the shore, and a third, also of 5,000 tons, was blazing vigorously. The flak ships were burning and firing only sporadically when the last of the fighters pulled out after strafing the decks at near mast height.

Two planes are missing from the striking force of Barracudas and American-built Corsairs and Hellcats that flew off into the brilliant Arctic sunlight and headed for the target after circling the horizon briefly.

One of these planes was seen to go down in flames, and the pilot of the second reported calmly that he had been hit and was going down. Flak wounded one pilot, but he managed to return to the carrier safely.

Thousands of pounds of bombs were dumped on the three ships during the brief strike.

The amazing part of the operation was the impunity with which the task force, under Vice Admiral Sir Henry Moore, second in command of the Home Fleet, steamed safely through waters that the Germans claimed their U-boats dominated.

The pilots were briefed only minutes before the first planes were due off after a late reconnaissance reported that the convoy had altered course.

Soon after the bombers and fighters went aloft the chatter from the pilots began. From one fighter came the order, "Sand by brothers." Then another, above the heavy static, said, "This is top cover. Are you all clear?" At 10 P. M. came the signal we were all waiting for—that the strike was successful.

Lieut. Comdr. John Lister, who led the second wave of Barracudas, said:

"We dived down before dumping bombs on the largest merchantman which was already smoking from the first wave of bombs. We were followed immediately by more fighters which darted in at mast height to strafe the decks. Other fighters and bombers were blasting flak ships which, although smoking, were still putting up some spasmodic flak. We saw no fighters."

R. A. F. Rockets Blast Nazi Ships

Cairo, June 3 (A. P.).—Rocket-firing R. A. F. Beaufighters have been taking a deadly toll of German shipping in the Aegean for the last six months, the Middle East Air Force disclosed today in announcing a successful attack Thursday on an eleven-ship convoy in which the pilots reported many direct hits.

The rocket projectiles "have the hitting power of a six-inch naval gun" when fired from low altitudes, one pilot said. Many Middle East flyers regard the projectiles as more deadly than bombs.

Scores of enemy vessels slinking beneath overhanging cliffs in small coves and tiny island harbors have been hit by the rocket-equipped Beaufighters, which have also used the new weapon to attack enemy land installations.

Enemy opposition was slight. One bomber was lost and one fighter is still outstanding.

"The Red Air Force co-operated by attacking enemy airdromes on the route of the Allied strategic force and providing area fighter support."

The American flyers were greeted by beaming Russian and American ground crews as well as an official welcoming group which included United States Ambassador W. Averell Harriman, his daughter Kathleen, and Major-Gen. John R. Deane, head of the American Military Mission to Russia.

jectives in Romania," adding that a part of these planes landed on bases in Soviet territory.

Another Russian announcement declared: "The westward advance of the Red Army has brought the area of operations within the range of the Air Forces of the United States of America and Great Britain.

In order to insure that efforts of the combined air forces shall be concentrated on the most important objectives for the United Nations, direct contact has been established between the headquarters concerned.]

Reveals Big U. S. Air Bases in Russia

Shuttle Raid Across Romania Also Brings Disclosure That New American Air Force Command Is Activated.

Eastern Command, United States Strategic Air Force, Somewhere in Russia, June 3 (A. P.).—Strong formations of American Flying Fortresses and Mustang fighter escorts have landed at secretly prepared American bases in Russia after bombing Romanian targets, accomplishing west-east bombing of Hitler's fortress for the first time and establishing joint offensive operations with the Red Air Force.

The historic operation, completed yesterday, was disclosed to be the fruition of a long-range American-Russian-British air plan through which the three Powers, in intimate collaboration, brought the most far-flung portions of the Nazi domain under precision bombing.

[Late last night the Budapest radio went off the air, a possibility that the second phase of the shuttle operation might be under way.]

One Bomber is Lost.

The dramatic arrival of American bombers and fighters on Russian soil, presumably from Italy, evoked this first communique from ECUSSAF (Eastern Command, United States Strategic Air Force):

"A large force of strategic bombers and fighters today attacked Romanian targets selected by our Russian Ally and then continued to Russian bases.

In an enthusiastic celebration, the American Legion of Merit, which the flyers had brought, was presented to Soviet Lieut.-Gen. Alexander R. Perminov, in charge of Russian facilities for the Americans.

"It was a brief but happy celebration before servicing the aircraft with fuel and ammunition for another call on the Axis en route to their home bases in England, Italy and Africa," said Gen. Deane.

"The operations carried out today mark the first large-scale physical co-operation of the air forces of Britain, Russia and America."

Gen. Deane explained that without British aid the American planes could not have taken off from their original bases.

[The Moscow radio broadcast an official announcement that "a considerable force of American bombers and fighters dealt a blow against enemy ob-

The American airmen, unable to speak Russian, heartily greeted the Russians as "Ivan." The Soviet mechanics replied appropriately. They had worked for months with American ground crews to get the bases ready.

While the idea of the west-east shuttle bombing was said to have originated with Gen. H. H. Arnold, commander of the United States Army Air Forces, the project was first decided on at United States Secretary of State Hull's Moscow conferences last fall, and got under way last February after it had been discussed at the Teheran conferences of President Roosevelt, Marshal Stalin and Prime Minister Churchill.

YANK FLYERS IMPRESS REDS

Shuttle Bombing Established With Clocklike Precision

Moscow, June 3 (AP) — American shuttle bombing between Russian and Allied bases was established with clockwork precision, it was learned tonight, giving Russians an impressive view of the United States' efficiency of which they have heard so much.

W. Averell Harriman, United States Ambassador, and Maj. Gen. John R. Deane, head of the American military mission to Russia, returned to Moscow today from the dramatic first American landing yesterday at a Russian base. The newspaper Izvestia located the base in the Ukraine.

Russians Visibly Impressed

They were delighted with the smoothness with which this initial operation was carried out, and a large Russian military delegation, which witnessed the action, also was understood to have been visibly impressed by the modern equipment at the base and the perfect organization of the flight.

The landing was executed with the same neatness as on American bases in England and Italy, scores of Flying Fortresses roaring over in formation.

They were called in by the control tower and refueled immediately for the return flight.

Two Little Incidents

There was only one minor incident. A Fort blew a tire while landing and swerved across the runway, blocking the path for others. It was hauled away quickly and the landings were completed without a flurry.

The night before the landings there was a concert for American and Russian troops which produced a minor incident of the kind that always occur when soldiers of two countries get together.

The Americans whistled after the Russian performance. Russians scowled. Then Lieut. Gen. Alexander R. Perminov, in charge of Russian facilities for the Americans, jumped to the stage to explain that the whistling which means disapproval in Russia means approval by Americans. That straightened out the matter.

A Citation From Roosevelt

After the landing, General Deane spoke through a microphone to express appreciation for Soviet cooperation, asserting that this cooperation had destroyed German hopes of a split among the Allies.

The flyers brought the American Legion of Merit which was presented to General Perminov with a citation from President Roosevelt, saying:

"For performance of outstanding services in an exceptionally meritorious manner. He has been of marked assistance to the Allied war effort and set a pattern of cooperation and friendliness between the armed forces of the Soviet Union and those of the United States."

Yank Technicians Sent Secretly Into Russia

London, June 3 (AP)—American soldier technicians slipped secretly into Russia to build, with Soviet help, the air fields on which American Flying Fortresses and Mustang fighters landed yesterday to inaugurate shuttle-bombing raids deep inside Fortress Europe, it was announced tonight.

The detachment, now known as the Eastern Command of the United States Strategic Air Forces in Europe, was created immediately after the Teheran conference, said an announcement of the Air Service Command of the USSAFE.

Didn't Know Destination

At repair depots and bomber stations all over England men were handed secret shipping orders, given only a few hours to pack and were hustled off to an isolated camp with guards and quarantine signs to keep the curious away. Russian-speaking soldiers were given the preference.

The men had no idea where they were going until they were told en route after receiving special inoculations and clothing.

The over-all planning for men and supplies was handled by Maj. Gen. Hugh J. Knerr, commander of the Air Service Command, and the plans were put into action by Col. William P. Youngs, Los Angeles, and Col. J. S. Griffith, Seattle.

Yank-Russ Cooperation

Hand in hand, Americans and Russian men and women started building the air fields. Russian technicians were taught how to repair American planes. Ground crews were already familiar with American fighter planes, but they had to be trained to handle heavy bombers.

Most of the Americans now in Russia are specialists and direct the Russian workers. Russian cooks run American messes. The men live in tents they took with them and are paid Russian rubles.

The Moscow radio said the planes, whose crews were welcomed "by the population and Soviet airmen, their comrades-in-arms," flew from bases "in Italy, England or northern Africa, and maybe from all of these points simultaneously."

Nazis Try To Belittle It

A special communique by the Supreme Allied Command in the Mediterranean said a force of strategic bombers and fighters landed in Russia Friday, and the fact that a detailed story from AP Correspondent Joseph Morton was held up by censorship there indicated at least part of the force flew from bases in Italy.

DNB in a Nazi propaganda broadcast recorded by United States Government monitors attempted to belittle the operation, asserting that "the difficulties involved in these flights are so great that one can hardly call them more than prestige flights." It indicated some concern, however, but insisted that Nazi air defenses were "strong in all directions."

JERSEYMAN HEADS U. S. RUSSIAN BASE

Moscow, June 3 (A. P.).—Col. Alfred Kessler Jr., of Passaic, N. J., is commander of one of the new American air bases in Russia.

He was graduated from West Point in 1922, had command of an operational wing in England and served on numerous combat missions before coming to Russia. Tall, slender, smiling, the 45-year-old Colonel is said by his men to be as "tough as Jersey rocks."

Foe Makes 2 Dents In Russian Lines

London, June 3 (AP)—Nazi troops have succeeded in carving two wedges in Russian lines northwest of the Romanian city of Iasi after four days of battle, but at a heavy cost in manpower and equipment, Moscow announced today.

One was achieved Tuesday, the first day of the action that broke a six weeks' lull on the eastern front, and the second yesterday. The Russians described both as "insignificant."

Heavy Toll Taken

The Nazis employed large forces of tanks and infantry in making their newest gain, but vigorous resistance by the Soviet troops took a heavy toll, Moscow said. Describing the battle, the broadcast communique said:

"Met by powerful fire, the Germans were forced to wheel back without reaching the Soviet positions. Only in the second half of the day did the enemy, at a price of heavy losses, succeed in driving an insignificant wedge into our defenses northwest of Iasi.

"North of Iasi, all German attacks were beaten off."

Berlin broadcasts declared at least 1,000 Nazi planes were in action on the Romanian front, but Moscow made no mention of air activity.

REDS REPULSE NAZI ATTACKS

Say Reinforced Drive For Hill In Romania Failed

London, Sunday, June 4 (AP)—German forces fighting for a strategic hill position near Stanca, north of Iasi in Romania, brought up reinforcements and attacked incessantly yesterday for the fifth consecutive day, but were repulsed in every thrust, Moscow said early today.

The broadcast supplement to the Russian communique declared that Soviet troops "by powerful fire from all types of arms" checked the enemy and inflicted heavy damage.

Regiment Wiped Out

In the day's savage fighting the Russians "wiped out up to a regiment of German infantry and burned out and disabled 17 enemy tanks and self-propelled guns as well as eight armored troop carriers and three armored cars," Moscow stated.

Continuous air battles were fought in the Iasi area in support of the struggle on the ground, the supplement said.

Berlin said the hill feature, "enabling the Germans to overlook the entire Soviet assembly area," was captured and held despite repeated Russian counterattacks, while Moscow said repeated German tank and infantry assaults had failed to take the hill.

Nazis Continue Attacks

The German attacks continued today for the fifth straight day, Moscow announced tonight, but said all were beaten off.

The broadcast Soviet communique stated that "according to verified data in the fighting June 2 in this area our troops destroyed 48 German tanks" and added "in air combat or by anti-aircraft fire 24 enemy planes were brought down."

There were no changes on other sectors of the front, Moscow said.

The Stanca region rises above the marshland between the rivers Jijia and Prut, and has been bitterly fought for ever since the beginning of the German offensive five days ago.

Germans Claim Gains

The German radio said: "To regain lost territory the Russians threw in reserves supported by strong tank formations, and 2?

Russian tanks were destroyed. Romanian and German troops attacked the Russians from the northwest, gaining some ground on the heights. German aircraft were especially active in the Iasi area, where 22 Soviet planes were shot down."

Col. Ernst von Hammer, German commentator, reported that at one point the Russians made a "temporary breach" in German hill defenses, but "a Romanian division restored the heights to German hands."

In its supplement Moscow said that Red units dispersed an infantry company and six tanks attempting reconnaissance southeast of Stanislawow.

Southeast of Vitebsk the Russians broke into German trenches killing at least 40 of the enemy.

Thirty German bombers supported by fighters tried to bomb Russian targets in the Narva bay, the supplement added, but were driven off after losing five planes.

Johnston Guest Of Red Commissar At Banquet

Moscow, June 3 (AP)—Eric Johnston, president of the United States Chmaber of Commerce, was the honored guest today at a formal luncheon of Russian trade officials at which Anastas I. Mikoyan, Soviet Commissar of Foreign Trade, was the host.

Johnston, whose arrival in Moscow yesterday was announced prominently in today's press, began business talks with Soviet officials today, including Alexey D. Krutikov, Vice-Commissar of Foreign Trade.

American Ambassador W. Averell Harriman and officials of the United States Embassy and military mission were also guests at the luncheon.

C. Of C. Man Begins His Moscow Talks

Moscow, June 3 (AP)—Eric Johnston, president of the United States Chamber of Commerce, began business talks with Soviet officials today.

He had appointments with the chairman of the All-Union Chamber of Commerce, and Alexey D. Krutikov, vice-commissar of foreign trade.

Johnston's arrival yesterday was announced prominently in today's press.

SHAW GIVES HOUSE TO CITY

Says Britain Confiscates Rent, So Carlow in Eire Gets Title

LONDON, June 3 (AP)—George Bernard Shaw has given to the city of Carlow a house he owns in that community near Dublin. The playwright declared the small rent he received from it was "sent to England, where it is confiscated by the British Government to defray the expenses of military operations, and clearly Carlow loses by such an arrangement."

Shaw wrote the Carlow Council that he had inherited the property as "a bundle of mortgages," but now was giving it debt free to the city "for the common welfare," rather than to "some relative who might, like my grandfather, mortgage it to the last farthing and leave it in ruinous condition."

4,750,000 Tons Of Food Shipped To Britain

London, June 3 (AP)—Food shipments from the United States to Britain under lend-lease now total 4,750,000 tons, valued at about $2,695,966,204, Food Administrator J. J. Llewellin announced today.

Principal items were canned meat and fish, 500,000 tons; lard, 500,000; bacon, 333,000; cheese, 250,000; dried fruit, 333,000; dried eggs, 150,000; canned milk, 100,000.

Sky Clear Over Channel

Haze at Sea Level, Wind Goes Down Before Nightfall

DOVER, England, June 3 (AP).—The sky was clear over the Dover Strait tonight except for a few patches of high cloud. A fresh southwesterly wind moderated before nightfall. There was some haze at sea level.

Many hours of sunshine during the day raised the temperature to 74 degrees in the shade at 3 p. m., but it fell to 59 at 9:30 p. m.

High tides at Dover will be at 11:40 a. m. and 11:53 p. m. Sunday (5:40 a. m. and 5:53 p. m. New York time), and at Calais, France, at 11:52 a. m. Sunday and 12:06 a. m. Monday (5:52 a. m. and 6:06 p. m. Sunday, New York time).

Invasion Nowhere Near,' Asserts German Radio

Berlin Declares Roosevelt Called It Off Last Week

LONDON, June 3 (UP)—The Berlin radio tonight began broadcasting reports that the invasion is "nowhere near." Berlin asserted that "D-Day" had been fixed for a few days before Whitsunday (May 28) but was "called off by Roosevelt." But, according to Stockholm reports the German press was warning the people that "exceptional circumstances" might cause a stoppage of all private telegraph traffic.

Dispatches from Europe said the Nazis were strengthening their fortifications along the Spanish frontier and were transferring thousands of engineers from the eastern front to repair bomb-shattered rail lines in France.

Here in Great Britain General Dwight D. Eisenhower sent a message to a "Salute the Soldier Week" fathering saying: "Never in the history of the United Nations has it been more vital that every single one of us, whether in civil life or the armed forces, should make his greatest effort now in the name of peace and freedom."

GERMANS BOLSTER PYRENEES BORDER

Reported Extending Atlantic Wall To Mediterranean

London, June 3 (AP)—The Germans were reported today to have fortified the Pyrenees border between Spain and France in an extension of the Atlantic Wall to join with Mediterranean defenses.

German newspapers boasted of defense techniques against invasion with pictures of a "one-man bunker system" along the Atlantic Wall, describing it as a network of single-soldier foxholes each fitted with machine guns throughout the depth of the coastal defenses.

28 French Hostages Executed

Tension was heightened as the Nazis intensified their campaign against civilians to throttle resistance in the occupied countries. The French radio, at Brazzaville, North Africa, reported that 28 hostages had been executed in St. Quentin, France, after the killing of a Vichy military leader.

The report of the Pyrenees border fortifications was a Berlin dispatch in the Stockholm newspaper Morgotidningen quoting a "front correspondent of a small German newspaper."

Henriot Called To Berlin

Amid reports of mounting sabotage in France, Hitler apparently has summoned Philippe Henriot Vichy Propaganda Minister, to Berlin. The Vichy radio said Henriot left for Germany today and would have the opportunity to meet some "high German personalities."

The Algiers radio said that in France the Germans, goaded by increasing sabotage, were arresting Frenchmen at the rate of 1,000 a week. One report from France said 200 railway targets were the objects of one week's sabotage.

Pyrenees Said To Be Fortified

Stockholm, June 3 (AP)—A dispatch from Berlin to the Morgontidningen said today the Pyrenees border between France and Spain has been heavily fortified by the Germans in an extension of the Atlantic Wall linking up with Mediterranean defense. The story was attributed to "the front correspondent of a small German newspaper."

De Gaulle May Ask Eisenhower Okay

London, June 3 (AP)—General De Gaulle was expected in some quarters today to ask General Eisenhower soon after his arrival here for clear-cut recognition of the National Liberation Committee as sole authority for the French in order to prevent conflict and confusion after D-day.

Lack of American plans to participate in his coming conferences with the British apparently left De Gaulle no alternative but to take his case directly to the supreme commander if he is to attain the degree of recognition which his supporters say is essential.

British Support Seen

The London Times diplomatic correspondent said that if the United States Government does not participate "other ways of establishing agreement on civil administration would have to be found, not only for the sake of the French but for the sake of the Allied commander in chief."

While official quarters declined comment, it was regarded as highly possible that the British would support direct action by Eisenhower on grounds of military security—an argument which could be advanced without contradicting the reasons Prime Minister Churchill advanced before Commons May 24 for withholding recognition.

Meanwhile, the usually conservative Spectator said "the fullest use should be made of the committee's cooperation till France is freed. What happens after that is not our business and not America's, but France's."

Press Asks Parley

Meanwhile the British press, criticizing what it terms the apparent failure of the United States to adopt a joint policy toward France and Spain, is urging an early meeting between President Roosevelt and Prime Minister Churchill.

An Evening News editorial said Churchill's praise of Spain's General Franco last week was a "riddle" whose answer "at present is elusive." It added that "just as puzzling and more urgent is the matter of General de Gaulle, and on that America's policy is even more obscure than ours."

A new meeting between Churchill and Roosevelt would be welcomed, declared the London Star, and "indeed the sooner it comes, the better."

Muscatelli Is Removed As Prefect in Algiers

Ouster Follows Council's Censure of Liberation Committee

ALGIERS, June 3 (AP).—The French Committee of National Liberation today ousted Leon Muscatelli, Algiers Departmental Prefect, and replaced him with Louis Oerillier, formerly Prefect of Constantine.

No reason was given officially for Muscatelli's dismissal, which coincided with the arrest here of Senator Andre Mallarme on a "purge commission's" recommendation. A committee spokesman said Mallarme had been pro-Petain and pro-Axis.

In Liberation Committee circles it was understod that Muscatelli's ouster was an aftermath to the passage on May 23 by the Algerian Council General of a resolution censuring the committee on the question of re-establishing the French Republic.

U. S. Blacklists 84 Finn Firms, 53 in Sweden

Two Headed by Helsinki Ministers; Action Is Blow to Post-War Recovery

By The Associated Press

WASHINGTON, June 3.—The United States, seeking to force Finland to break its alliance with Germany, tonight blacklisted eighty-four Finnish companies, including two headed by members of the Helsinki Cabinet.

The action, the most drastic taken against Finland in many months, means the Finns will suffer economic penalties after as well as during the war under the new policy of conducting the blacklist in operation in the post-war period. The companies are the first to be placed on the American blacklist.

One of the concerns listed bore the name of Bruno Procope, identified in official quarters as the cousin of the Finnish Minister here Hjalmar J. Procope. The minister, when asked about it, however, disclaimed any relationship.

The two Cabinet officers involved in the blacklisting operation are Henrick Ramsay, Foreign Minister, and General Rudolf Walden, Minister of Defense.

Ramsay was named in official quarters as chairman of the board of Finland-Hamburg Befraktningskontor, which was described here as a shipping agency and center of Nazi propaganda in Finland. Walden was described as owner of a paper and carton company called Paperituote.

The same blacklist supplement issued tonight also listed fifty-three Swedish concerns. It was announced several days ago that thirty-eight Swedish companies would be on the list. The additional fifteen, it was learned, consist of eight previously put on the British blacklist but not on the American list and seven others described here as among the important business organizations in Sweden. Americans are forbidden to deal with blacklist companies.

Strong Hand With Sweden

It was thus brought out that the United States in the last few days has reinforced its policy of playing a strong economic hand with the Stockholm government and business interests in an effort to induce the Swedes to halt all ball-bearing shipments to Germany.

The seven big Swedish concerns blacklisted tonight for the first time are Allkopia-Kopieringsanstalt; Halfdan Burman A/B, Vintervagen 19/21, Stockholm; Kallforsaljnings A/B, Osterhamngatan, Goteborg; Lindbland and Persson A/B, Surbrunnsgatan 6, Goteborg; Lindeen, Soren; Sandstrom A/B, A-St. Nygatan 31, Goteborg; Lindbland and Persson A/B, Surbrunnsgatan 6, Goteborg; Lindeen, Soren; Sandstrom A/B, A-St. Nygatan 31, Goteborg; Svenska Raskinnauktioner A/B. (A/B, literally translated, means "share company," or "incororated").

[SKF, the ball bearing trust of Sweden, was not on the blacklist. The names of seventeen Swiss companies and individuals appeared on the list, however, despite the fact that Switzerland made a substantial cut it its shipments of ball bearings and precision instruments to Germany in the last seven month.]

The effect of the action was viewed here as an economic knife slashing into the vitals of Finland's early post-war recovery and trade prospects. The concerns listed are among the most important in the Scandinavian country and they include among their officers and directors many leaders in political and financial circles.

Two companies appearing on the list—Crichton Vulcan A/B, O/Y and Hietalahden Telakka—are shipbuilding industries which, according to Allied investigations have repaired German submarine and other war vessels. (O/Y likewise means, in Finnish, "corporation.")

Structure Based On New Order

Its structure is said to have been based on conditions in the new Europe of German domination and the firm handled many Finnish transactions with occupied countries.

Another industry listed is Vuoksenniska A/B. O/Y, which is the only steel rolling mill in Finland and exports cobalt and molybdenum to Germany.

It is largely to force a halt in the supply of iron alloys to Germany that the United States has been pressing for several months to get Finland out of the war. Beyond this is the advantage of a break in the German satellite front.

Makes Collapsible Houses

A firm listed as Puutalo O/Y of Alexanderinkatu 40, Helsinki, was described as having been especially organized in 1941 to handle the sale and export of collapsible wooden dwellings such as might be required in bombed-out cities. Tremendous quantities were sold to the Axis in 1942 and 1943.

30. 24 — 15897

For the rest, the Finnish list apparently covered a cross section of the country's economic life ranging from the great shipbuilding forestry and other industries to an individual listing for Eric Frenskell, described as a book publisher and financial director of the city of Helsinki.

Some of the companies apparently had been set up for the special purpose of dealing with the Nazis. One bears the name Osuukunta Kompensation Komp. It is located in Helsinki and is a cooperative of foreign traders created to facilitate their import and export operations.

Recently Made Warning

Only recently this country joined with Britain and Russia in a warning to Finland and the Balkan satellites that they must get out now in order to retain any hope for modified armistice terms.

Meanwhile, the United States continues to maintain diplomatic relations with Finland and has its legation in Helsinki although no Minister has been on active duty for many months. The question of breaking relations has come up for consideration on one or two occasions but the decision has been negative in the hope that by continuing to remain friendly with Finland the United States might be able to pry her loose from Germany.

Yugoslav Refugees Safe In Switzerland

New York, June 3 (AP) — The American Joint Distribution Committee, major American agency for aid to Jews overseas, today announced 2,000 refugees from Yugoslavia, most of them Jews, are now safe in Switzerland.

The committee has allocated $1,840,000 for aid to refugees in Switzerland in 1944, the announcement said. The funds were raised by the United Jewish Appeal for Refugees.

Allied Raids Help Tito.

Allied Headquarters, Naples, June 3 (A. P.).—Intensified Allied air support of the Yugoslav partisans in the last few days in the form of raids on German troop concentrations, convoys and other targets has been acknowledged in a message of thanks to the Mediterranean Allied Air Force, it was announced today.

GREEKS WRECK BRIDGE

Istanbul, Turkey, June 1 (Delayed)—(A. P.).—Greek guerrillas have blown up a bridge on the Istanbul-Sofia Railway, a vital link between Turkey and the Balkans, passengers arriving here today said.

The bridge is on Bulgarian territory between Edirne (Adrianople), Turkey, and the village of Svilengrad. The passengers said they were forced to change trains where the single track rail line crosses the bridge. It was assumed that most freight shipments had been blocked.

First Visa Issued Since Exclusion Act Repeal

Kunming, China, June 3 (AP)—Dr. J. Lossing Buck, American expert on Chinese economy, and his Chinese wife and child left today for the United States with the first immigration visa issued in China since repeal of the Chinese Exclusion Act by the United States Congress.

The visa was for Dr. Buck's wife, Lo-mei. Neither Buck, former husband of Pearl Buck, nor the 4½-month-old daughter required visas.

Dr. Buck has been a professor in the combined Chinese universities at Chengtu.

ALLIES CLOSE ON JAP BASE

Air Rockets Batter Foe at Myitkyina.

Southeast Asia Command Headquarters, Kandy, Ceylon, June 3 (A. P.).—American forces closing in on the besieged Burma Japanese base of Myitkyina from the north have fought their way to the city's outskirts while a Chinese-American column battling within the southern section of the city has made new gains near the railroad station, headquarters announced today.

Delayed front line reports said that Japanese attempts to relieve Myitkyina and Kamaing were crumbling under attacks from rocket-firing Allied planes which were spreading destruction among enemy ground targets.

Kamaing, another important enemy base forty miles west of Myitkyina, has been cut off both from the north and south by Chinese units under Lieut.-Gen. Joseph W. Stilwell's command, a communique said.

Large quantities of ammunition and supplies were reported to have been captured by the American force striking into Myitkyina.

[Still another force, a column of Chindits, was reported in a Chinese announcement to be threatening Myitkyina from the southeast, the column was attacking the village of Waingmaw, just across the curving Irrawaddy River from Myitkyina.]

The announcement added there was no material change in the Imphal sector of the Indo-Burma front.

YANKS AT RIM OF MYITKYINA

Gain North Of Burma Base As Chinese Approach Station

Southeast Asia Command Headquarters, Ceylon, June 3 (AP)—American troops are battering at the northern outskirts of the besieged North Burma Japanese stronghold of Myitkyina, and from the south, near the city's railway station, Chinese and Americans slugged steadily forward, an Allied communique announced today.

For the first time it is permissible to reveal the presence in this theater of air-borne bazookas, which are proving effective against Japanese ground and warter-borne targets along blasted lines of communication on which the enemy is trying to effect a rescue of his entrapped North Burma units.

Flying Rocket Batteries

Fighters mounted with flying rocket batteries as well as bombers are taking over the major role in stopping the Japanese northern movement toward Allied Mogaung Valley and Myitkyina forces, smashing at trains and other substantial targets along the Mandalay-Myitkyina railway, which has been blown up by ground forces southwest of Mogaung.

Large quantities of supplies and ammunition were captured in the American attack on the northern rim of the base, the communique said.

Hand-to-hand fighting raged near the Myitkyina railway station, said a press dispatch from Lieut. Gen. Joseph W. Stilwell's headquarters. Yesterday a communique from Allied headquarters reported the column driving on Myitkyina from the north had gained 1,500 yards despite stiff resistance that cost the Japanese many casualties, while the southern column gained an additional 400 yards.

Report Some Progress

No material changes were reported on the Indo-Burma front. In the Imphal sector, Allied troops made "some progress" in the Bishenpur area, the communique said.

Enemy positions in the neighborhood of Kohima, Moirang, Jessami and Bishenpur were attacked by RAF and IAF fighter-bombers of the Third Tactical Air Force yesterday and the day before, and American fighter bombers "effectively supported ground troops" at Myitkyina on Thursday, the communique said.

JAPS GAIN 12 MILES IN CHANGSHA PUSH

Chinese Admit New Setback In Hunan Province

Chungking, June 3 (AP)—Japanese troops driving down the eastern side of the Canton-Hankow railway have lunged an additional 12 miles toward Changsha, their major goal in the renewed Hunan province offensive, a Chinese communique admitted tonight as announcement was made that American planes have been thrown into the fight.

Striking south from Changshouchieh, 25 miles east of the captured town of Pingkiang, the enemy now was within some 35 miles of Changsha, which Japanese press reports said was the target of fresh attacks by Japanese planes.

Another Column Halted

At last reports another enemy column in the many-faceted drive was halted immediately west of the Canton-Hankow route at Kweiyi, about 40 miles north of Changsha.

The Chinese high command also admitted the invaders made fresh landings on the southern shore of Tungting lake and were driving down the western side of the railway toward their objective.

A communique said fighter-bombers of the Fourteenth Air Force attacked Japanese installations at Kweiyi "with bombs well-centered in the target," while fighters lashed at troop concentrations along the Milo river, where the enemy has been storming the southern bank at many points. Warhawks also attacked the Japanese-held town of Pingkiang on the Milo, starting many fires, the communique of Lieut. Gen. Joseph W. Stilwell's headquarters said.

Continual Attacks

The Chinese communique reported continual attacks by the invaders from Pingkiang against the Chinese positions to the south yesterday, but said all attacks were repulsed there and the enemy made no progress.

To the west, where the Japanese for the second time in the war poised a threat at the rice-bowl city of Changteh, about 80 miles from the Canton-Hankow railway battle area, enemy troops from occupied Ansiang struck at Nanchushu last night and fighting was in progress there, said the communique.

Ansiang previously was reported occupied by one of several enemy columns which drove into Hunan from Hupeh province to the north. The town is about 40 miles north east of Changteh.

Chiatou Menaced

On the Yunnan province front near the Burma border, Chinese troops in the Salween river area north of the Burma road have reached the outskirts of Chiatou "where fierce fighting is now in progress," a communique of General Stilwell's headquarters said, and other Chinese are driving slowly eastward toward Watien, strategically important town about six miles to the southwest.

North of the Japanese Yunnan base of Tengchung, at Peichakungfang, beleaguered Japanese counterattacked but were thrown back with losses, the bulletin said.

Chinese Near Chiaotou

Chungking, June 3 (AP)—Despite heavy rains that impeded operations, Chinese troops in the Salween river area north of the Burma road have gained the outskirts of Chiaotou, "where fierce fighting is now in progress," a communique from Lieut. Gen. Joseph W. Stilwell's headquarters said today.

Other Chinese forces are forging slowly eastward toward Watien, strategically important town about six miles southwest of Chiaotou, the communique said.

Beleaguered Japanese in Peichakungfang, north of Tengchung, counterattacked but were thrown back with losses, the communique added.

2 Strong Points Captured

In their Hunan offensive, the Japanese have captured two strong points, east of Changteh and northeast of Changsha, and new battles were developing for those two enemy objectives, the Chinese high command announced.

Pingkiang, Chinese bastion 50 miles northeast of Changsha, fell to the Japanese striking along the Milo river, while to the west, about 100 miles northwest of Changsha, the Japanese seized Ansiang and drove south to within nine and a half miles of Shanshow, where they were stopped, the high command said.

Attacks Repulsed

Today's Chinese communique said continual Japanese attacks in the direction of Changsha from Pingkiang had been repulsed. It acknowledged, however, that Japanese striking south from Changhouchieh, 25 miles east of Pingkiang, had advanced 12 miles. Meanwhile, the invaders made fresh landings on the southern shore of Tungting Lake, increasing the menace to Changsha.

Press reports said Japanese planes again raided Changsha and other strategic points.

YANKS CAPTURE 2 MORE ISLANDS

NIGHT JUN 1 1944

Troops Occupy Woendi, Owi South of Biak Without Opposition.

EUNSON

ADVANCED ALLIED HEADQUARTERS, New Guinea, Sunday, June 4.—(AP) American troops slipped across to Owi and Woendi atolls, south of Biak island in the Schouten group, Friday and occupied both coral-necklaced islets without opposition, headquarters announced today.

On the same day, Australian forces—relentlessly pushing up New Guinea's north coast towards trapped Wewak—occupied Karkar island, northeast of Madang and more than 600 miles southeast of the Schouten area.

A spokesman for Gen. Douglas MacArthur said all three landings were made to consolidate Allied positions and guard supply lines.

Small forces effected the successful action on Owi, five miles south of Bosnek, and Woendi, ten miles south. Both islets are within artillery range of Biak, where a week-old campaign was still underway for airfields which would place the Allies within bomber range of the southern Philippines and fighter range of Palau, the Philippines' eastern guardian.

On Biak reinforced Yankee veterans of other jungle campaigns were pushing over the hills north of their original beachhead at Bosnek, occupied May 27. The Yanks have taken all the open ground north of Bosnek.

The Japanese counter attacked Thursday, supported by machine guns and mortars, but were hurled back with 80 enemy troops killed in action. Additional 100 Japanese were found in a captured cave. American field officers reported they committed suicide.

This brings to nearly 900 the known Japanese dead during the Biak campaign.

Units of Vice Admiral Thomas C. Kinkaid's seventh fleet continued to blast enemy positions heavily near the Mokmer airstrip, first main Allied objective.

American naval units also sank three troop-laden Japanese barges along the coast east of Bosnek. Presumably this was an attempt to land behind the American lines.

A flight of Liberator bombers pounded the hills above the Bosnek-Mokmer road Friday.

Seven of 15 Japanese bombers raiding Biak Friday were shot down by Allied anti-aircraft fire. This was the most concentrated Japanese aerial opposition yet reported over the American foothold on this main Schouten island, 880 miles southeast of the Philippines.

Oust Japs From Open Ground

Japanese forces have been driven from open ground north of Bosnek village, the original landing point on Biak. One hundred of the enemy were found to have committeed suicide after another Japanese counter attack was repulsed.

Saturday's communique reported mopping up operations among Japanese forces holding a ridge which dominates the main road and the beach leading from Bosnek to Mokmer airdrome, several miles westward, one of the main objectives on Biak.

A lone Liberator bomber, staging a surprise raid on the airdrome at Voleai atoll, in the western Caroline Islands, killed and wounded 500 Japanese. Truk and Puluwat in the Carolinas also were bombed.

Destroy Ships At Timor

Allied planes striking at Timor, northwest of New Guinea, destroyed a 1,000-ton Japanese merchant ship.

A coastal vessel also was destroyed in the Timor strike, which was part of the most comprehensive aerial assaults reported in some time over the Banda Sea north of Australia.

At least seven objectives in the Banda Sea were hit, including two airdromes on Amboina Island. Other bombers assaulted Timika, important Japanese base on New Guinea's southwest coast, facing the sea.

CLEAN UP JAPS ON BIAK RIDGE

JUN 1 1944 DAY

American Troops Scaling Cliffs to Oust Foe.

SPENCER

Advanced Allied Headquarters, New Guinea, June 3 (A. P.).—Mop-up squads of cliff-scaling Yanks ferreted Japanese snipers from limestone caves and hunted down machine-gun nests on wooded ridgetops as the week-old invasion of Biak Island, stalemated since Monday, moved back into high gear today.

A big push by reinforced Sixth Army units toward three airfields—potential bases for bombing the Philippines—was pointed along a coastal road, hitherto a death trap because of murderous fire poured down from the ridges.

Biak, main island in the Schoutens 880 miles southeast of the Philippines, was invaded in Dutch New Guinea's Geelvink Bay last Saturday. The Japanese pulled out of Bosnek Village on the southeast coast, allowed the Yanks to move west along a shore road to within half a mile of Mokmer, then cut loose with withering blasts which forced the invaders back a mile and a half.

While reinforcements were landed, Yank units fought their way to ridgetops and a spokesman said today, "We now are mopping up." In co-ordination, Liberators and Mitchells skimmed the ridges to spill eighty tons of explosives on Japanese there and at Mokmer.

Jap Planes Hit At Night

Headquarters reported that small groups of Japanese planes were attacking the Bosnek beachhead at night, losing one in the latest effort to anti-aircraft gunners.

American warships remained in the Biak area. A destroyer wiped out three enemy barges and 25 Japanese 10 miles of Bosnek.

[This might indicate an attempt of the Japanese to get in behind the invaders as a previous communique said all enemy resistance in that area had collapsed.]

At another invasion beachhead more than 450 miles southeast near Aitape, British New Guinea, headquarters reported today that Japanese had ambushed a patrol, killing nine Americans and six natives.

Army Plane Crashed at Sea After Raid on Ponape

SEVENTH ARMY AIR FORCE HEADQUARTERS, Central Pacific, June 3 (AP).—Four crewmen of a Mitchell bomber which crashed in thee sea only twenty miles from Japan's eastern Carolines base of Ponape were rescued by a Navy destroyer after two days on a raft. Other Mitchells flew over over the raft for twenty hours.

Engine trouble forced the crash landing soon after the plane dropped bombs on Ponape. One crew member was killed. Another died soon after the crash.

JAPANESE-ELOWN P-38 DOWNED IN AN ATTACK

Captive Plane Causes Casualties in U. S. Ship Off New Guinea

WASHINGTON, June 3 (AP)—An American Liberty ship came off battle-scarred but victorious in a duel with a former American Lightning P-38 fighter-bomber that had been salvaged by the Japanese, the War Shipping Administration said today.

An Army officer was killed and wounds were suffered by twenty-two soldiers, a Navy gunner and a merchant seaman in the enemy-flown plane's attack.

Crew doubts as to the plane's identity were cleared up when it roared in low and released a bomb ovr the ship Stephen Crane in a New Guinea harbor a few weeks ago.

The missle glanced off the smokestack and fell into the water, where it exploded, hurling shrapnel and water over the deck.

The Navy guard aboard the ship quickly brought the plane down in flames.

U. S. PLANE WREAKS HAVOC ON TRUK

DAY

Washington, June 3 (A. P.).—Staging a single-handed attack on Truk Island, in the South Pacific, a naval search plane sank or damaged three Japanese vessels, strafed a number of others, poured bombs and bullets onto airplane runways, ignited supply dumps and returned to its base.

Teh plane straddled a medium cargo vessel with 1,000-pound bombs and laid two others of the same size directly on her decks. She "was believed sunk," the Navy said.

Then the plane strafed "a number of small cargo vessels," roared over the seaplane base on Dublon and the air strips on Eten Islands in the Truk lagoon. Two small vessels struck by the pounding plane were set on fire. Other fires were started on Dublon and Eten Island. An ammunition dump was blown up.

Lone Navy Plane Hits Three Ships At Truk

JUN 1 1944

Pacific Fleet Headquarters, Pearl Harbor, June 3 (AP)—A one plant attack on the Japanese base at Truk, in the Caroline islands, was reported by the United States navy today.

NIGHT

A lone navy search plane, making an audacious low-level lunge at the Nippon stronghold last Thursday night, rained bombs and bullets on three Japanese ships, blasted airplane runways and blew up an ammunition dump.

Jap Refuses Fight

The plane then returned to its base after a single Japanese pursuit ship followed it but failed to challenge for a fight.

The pilot of the lone Truk bomber was not identified. He brought his plane in under cover of darkness and unloaded four 1,000-pound bombs on a medium-sized cargo ship. Two of the bombs scored direct hits, while the others straddled the vessel. It probably was sunk, the navy said.

The pilot then brought his bomber to low-level and his gunners strafed a number of small cargo vessels, setting two of them afire. Then they strafed the Dublon Island seaplane center and the Eten Island airstrips, starting fires at both points in the Truk lagoon.

Only Moderate Flak

The plane met only moderate anti-aircraft fire over its targets.

Far to the north army and navy bombers hit the Kuriles before dawn Thursday. Two 11th AAF Liberators blasted Shimushiri, about 400 miles from the Japanese mainland. They met no opposition over the southern Kuriles base.

Venturas of Fleet Air Wing Four started fires in bombing strikes against Paramushiro and Shumushu, in the northern Kuriles. Anti-aircraft fire was light and inaccurate.

Flyers Find Strange Illusions In Riding Pacific Air Lanes

NIGHT JUN 1 1944

United States Seventh AAF Headquarters, Central Pacific, June 3 (AP)—The tropical night produces strang illusions. The morning star, anti-aircraft bursts and heavy cloud formations all have become targets of Seventh Army Air Force gunners over the Central Pacific.

"Sometimes you feel silly about the whole thing," one gunner admitted, "but when you're up there trying to look out into the night and get about the same results as you would looking through a piece of black velvet, nobody takes chances."

They shoot first and investigate later.

Were Fighting Morning Star

A Liberator bomber crew returning from Truk sighted a light off the wing. Three gunners opened fire with .50-caliber machine guns. The pilot tried evasive action. The light stayed with the Liberator, but fired no return shots.

At the navigator's suggestion the plane made a complete circle. The light remained stationary. The navigator explained the crew had been fighting the morning star, which, through an optical illusion, had appeared to ride along with the wing.

Another crew was startled when the top turret gunner fired a long burst. They jammed the interphone with queries.

"Sorry, fellows," the gunner apologized, "I guess I took a shot at a shooting star."

Zero Pops From Shadow

Another top turret gunner, lulled to sleep by the drone of the engines on the long flight from Truk, awakened to see a stream of sparks flowing from an outboard engine.

"Tracer!" he shouted. "Tracers at twelve o'clock!"

The other gunners joined him in firing into the darkness.

A heavy cloud rode the rear of one returning bomber formation. A tail gunner noticed a dark shape in the shadow of the cloud. He paid no particular attention to it until he made out the contour of a plane moving in to the formation.

"Hey," he shouted, "that's a single engine job. Zero at five o'clock!"

The gunner opened up. The Japanese fighter swung out of the Yank bomber formation with tracers cutting the air around him.

Jap General Katagiri Killed In New Guinea

New York, June 3 (AP)—The Japanese Domei agency reported today in a broadcast dispatch that Lieut. Gen. Shigeru Katagiri had been killed in action April 8 while directing operations in the Madang sector of New Guinea.

In the broadcast, recorded by United States Government monitors, Domei said Katagiri had commanded Japanese troops sent to intercept an Allied invasion force that landed north of Finschhafen, New Guinea, September 22, 1943, and that he was in command at Madang when Allied troops landed behind the Japanese lines in the Finschhafen and Kalaka sectors early this year.

TOKYO FRANK IN PROPAGANDA

Japanese Capitalize On People's Pride In Sacrifice

30. 24— 15899

By RUSSELL BRINES

San Francisco, June 3 (AP)—Japanese propagandists have adopted amazing candor in attempting to prepare their people for grim days ahead, but surprising as this may seem, it is part of a well-planned program appealing to a strange quirk of mind of the Japanese.

The war lords do not want their people to be surprised again, as they were when Tokyo was raided the first time, and by being frank they can prevent this and also play upon the Japanese traditional pride in being able to carry on in the face of calamity.

Revealed In Broadcasts

Recent domestic and overseas Tokyo radio broadcasts, heard by United States Government monitors, reveal this new phase of the Government's long and concerted effort to weld the country into a "single fighting unit."

As part of this campaign, the recent Allied raid on Marcus Island—first announced by Tokyo—was a "surprise attack" made possible by the "numerical strength and speed" of American naval units.

Another broadcast said the "enemy's plan for the counter-offensive is growing stronger." Capt. Etsuzo Kurihara, chief of the imperial headquarters naval press section, clinched the current argument with the blunt statement that American raids on the Kuriles have "already set fire, so to speak, to one end of Japan and (are) truly about to reduce Japan to ashes."

Exaggerate U. S. Losses

The sole comforting item fed to the Japanese people is an exaggerated analysis of American losses sustained in these activities.

This is strong stuff for residents of a capital which, next to Washington, is the least war-scarred of any major belligerent. Its surprising frankness is emphasized by the tight control of press and radio, which permits publication of only censored materials. In practice that means that the underlying idea also usually comes from the Government.

The campaign does not indicate any unusual Japanese "jitters" over prospective raids on their wooden cities; nor does it show their belief that sustained raids on Japan are possible within a matter of weeks.

This is part of the thorough psychological preparation which Japanese propagandists have made well in advance of foreseeable events during the past seven years of war. The 1942 Doolittle raid was a surprise. The Government has begun early to prevent an unpredicted duplication.

One Of Unifying Factors

Furthermore, adversity has become one of the most unifying factors in Japan's essentially clannish national life. Generations of heavy losses from natural calamities—earthquakes and storms—as well as disastrous fires have given the people a grim satisfaction in their ability to withstand hardship.

The Government is capitalizing heavily upon this strange trait. Instead of showing the people any of their newly acquired wealth or promising them future rewards, the underlying motif of Tokoy's current propaganda is sacrifice—and more sacrifice.

Japanese commoners, whose privation and suffering have grown heavier even while the empire was rich, will be given no chance to relax, before war comes to their front gates.

Japs' New Guinea Plans Watched

JUN 1 1944

By Harold Streeter

Washington, June 1 (AP)—The thing to watch in evaluating the battle for Biak in the Schoutens off north Dutch New Guinea is for any sign of Japanese reinforcements.

If that develops, the Japanese have elected to join the issue for the Philipppines far below those conquered islands. If it does not, then Biak will fall; the Japanese have written off New Guinea as a bad investment, and they prefer to fight for the Philippines at such closer points as Halmahera and Palau, if not on Mindanao itself.

Pushed Back By Not Reinforcing

By repeated failures to reinforce, Japan has been pushed back in the Central and Southwest Pacific. Japan hasn't reinforced a base under attack since last November, when a limited and unsuccessful effort was made on Bougainville to strengthen a garrison opposing American invaders of Empress Augusta Bay.

Somewhere along the way Gen. Douglas MacArthur is moving. Japan may be forced to risk it on a large scale. Inasmuch as Lieut. Gen. George C. Kenney's Air Force has mastery of the sky, reinforcement by air transport — MacArthur's long successful method—is unlikely.

Navy Needed To Block Path

If Japan wants to throw a gigantic road block against the Philippines-bound Yanks, its navy must come out.

Spencer Davis, the Associated Press war correspondent who stayed on Biak after the battle grew in ferocity, makes clear that the Japanese prize the island. They manned it with seasoned fighters from North China. They were busy fortifying every cave when MacArthur hit sooner than they had expected.

But it is unlikely Biak can hold out if its defenders are not increased. For American reinforcements likely are moving ashore from ships now on the consolidated beachhead at Bosnek village.

Mokmer Airfield Turning Point

Once Mokmer airfield falls, mancrowded air transports will pour in.

The first sign of Japanese reinforcement marks the point on the map for the approaching showdown From the viewpoint of Japanese admirals, relying on the navy to guard Japan, far-away Biak probably is not the spot.

Batista Praised For Conduct Of Election DAY

FRED L STROZIER

Havana, June 3 (AP)—Dr. Ramon Grau San Martin, Opposition candidate for President, won a clear-cut victory over Dr. Carlos Saladrigas in Tuesday's vote, but despite the defeat of his candidate, President Fulgencio Batista emerged today with enhanced prestige for his fair conduct of the elections.

All factions gave unstinted praise to Batista for having conducted the fairest elections in many years of Cuban politics, and he received the greatest ovation from the people in his decade of power as President.

Thousands Cheer Bastista

Minutes after the results of the race became known, thousands gathered before the palace with shouts of "Viva Batista," and would not leave until Batista had made four appearances.

Saladrigas, former Prime Minister, conceded defeat by Grau when only one fourth of the votes had been counted.

Francisco Batista, 33-year-old brother of the President, was defeated for Mayor of suburban Mariano on the basis of incomplete unofficial returns. The nominee of his four parties for Mayor of Havana conceded election of his opponent. And apparently both House and Senate were won by Dr. Grau San Martin's parties — the authentic Revolutionaries and Republicans.

At Miami Dr. Emil Ludwig, historian and biographer, returning from a lecture tour in Cuba, reported that President Roosevelt brushed aside formalities to telephone his congratulations to Dr. Grau San Martin.

Final election results may not be known until next week. Celebration of Grau's election kept members of the Electoral Tribunal from returning to work until noon today because of an almost complete tie-up in public transportation.

Mexico Postpones Naval Maneuvers In Gulf

Mexico City, June 3 (AP)—Mexican naval maneuvers in the Gulf of Mexico were postponed because the Panama Canal was so busy that units of the Mexican fleet could not pass to take part, Navy Ministry officials said today.

The maneuvers were to have started tomorrow. The Navy Ministry said they might be held later.

Brazilian Warns U. S. On Post-War Business

JUN 1 1944

Says Germany May Attract Trade by Better Terms

WASHINGTON, June 3 (AP).—Brazilian business men after the war will buy from Germany rather than the United States if they can get better prices and better terms, Mariano Ferraz, special assistant in the Brazilian office of the Coordinator of Economic Mobilization, declared today.

Here to discuss price-control measures with Office of Price Administration officials, Ferraz said at a press conference he was warning American business men that they will lose the Brazilian market after the war unless they change their methods.

Ferraz, a constructor of freight cars before entering war-time Brazilian government service, said: "I used to buy from Germany and I'll go back if I can get better terms and better prices. We appreciate everything you are doing for us now, but after all business is another matter."

"Cash and carry," Ferraz continued, "is the cheapest way of doing business, but that's all right for rich people like yourself, but not for us. If you folks won't give us credit you will lose the post-war business in Brazil."

To Create $10 Bond For Armed Services

Washington, June 3 (A. P.).—The Treasury decided today to create a GI War Bond—costing $7.50 and paying off at $10—for sale to men and women of the armed services.

Treasury officials said that the new Bonds would be available only to members of the Army, Navy, Marines, Coast Guard and Maritime Service. DAY

$1,000 a Minute Is Cost of Navy Air Operations

Admiral Young Discloses $1,500,000 Spent Daily to Keep Planes in Air

WASHINGTON, June 3 (AP).—The Navy is spending more than $1,000 a minute to keep its planes in the air knocking down enemy flyers, bombing enemy bases and moving supplies and men about the world.

This was disclosed today in a compilation of statistics by Rear Admiral William Brent Young, chief of the Bureau of Supplies and Accounts.

"We are spending $1,500,000 a day to keep Navy planes flying," he said. The Admiral reported that Navy fuel purchases for all purposes, including aviation, amount to nearly $2,000,000,000 a year.

Admiral Young, addressing employees of the bureau which handles most purchases of naval supplies, also reported that each week the Navy spends $11,500,000 for clothing. Other statistics disclosed by the supplies and accounts chief:

Food purchases increased 450 per cent, but "so controlled that Navy men boast of the best food in the world, without seriously disrupting the supplies for the general public."

Navy freight costs $40,000,000 a month.

Family allowances paid in the last two years total more than $500,000,000.

Sales of war bonds to naval personnel aggregate more than $500,000,000.

Frank Knox Assistant Resigns Navy Post

Washington, June 3 (AP)—The navy announced today the resignation of Adlai Stevenson, Chicago attorney, who was special assistant and legal adviser to the late Secretary of the Navy Frank Knox.

Stevenson came to Washington with Knox in 1941. The navy said his future plans had not been made.

'Search Plane' Label Is Explained By Navy

Washington, June 3 (AP)—Those big four-engined Liberator bombers now flying aerial patrol for the navy are too hard-hitting and aggressive for the time-honored designation "patrol plane."

The navy gave that explanation today for the new term "search plane" appearing in reports of bombing attacks on Japanese bases throughout the Pacific.

Formerly relatively slow and vulnerable Catalina flying boats handled the aerial patrol work, but were easy victims for speedier Japanese planes.

Surplus Of High Army Officers Is Denied

JUN 1 1944

Washington, June 3 (AP)—War Department figures showing that general officers in the United States Army have greater personnel responsibilities than those of any other fighting army in the world were cited today by Representative Brooks (D., La.).

Brooks put into the Congressional Record a table showing the average general officer in the United States Army has 6,278 men in his command, compared with 5,000 for German generals, 2,528 for British and 2,400 for Japanese.

Commands Average 2,558 Men

The figures, he explained, were based on an army of 7,590,000 on Feburary 29, 1944, and 1,209 general officers. On June 30, 1940, there were 104 generals, each having an average of 2,558 men in his command.

Brooks said "he requested the data from the War Department because of frequent assertions in Congress that the army is overstaffed" and "has more lieutenant generals than heretofore existed in the entire history of this country."

"The impression has been given," he added, "that we were getting in the position of having more officers, especially high-ranking officers, than we have privates in the army. Such inferences are ridiculous."

BAN WRITTEN INTO LEND-LEASE BILL

DAY

Washington, June 3 (A. P.).—The House tentatively wrote into the $3,920,070,000 lend-lease-UNRRA appropriation bill today a ban against use of any lend-lease funds for "any nation whose troops have not been engaged in actual battle participation in the present war."

The ban was contained in an amendment offered by Representative Calvin Johnson (R.-Ill), who said it was aimed at the expenditure of United States funds on some South American republics who, although they have declared war against the Axis, have furnished no troops for actual fighting. It was adopted by a teller vote of 82 to 14, with most Democrats not voting, on the apparent assumption they would be able to defeat the amendment later on a roll-call vote.

4½ Million Gallons of Rum Coming to U.S. in 90 Days

JUN 1 1944

French West Indies Imports Get W. P. B. Approval

WASHINGTON, June 3 (AP).—The War Production Board announced today it is preparing authorizations for the importation of 4,480,000 gallons of rum from the French West Indies. The supply should begin to arrive in this country within ninety days, a spokesman said.

Agreements with the French Committee of National Liberation call for the importation of 1,480,000 proof gallons of rum under three years of age and 3,000,000 proof gallons three years or older. This is the full quota for 1944.

All of the young rum, W. P. B. said, will be allocated on a historical basis to those who imported or purchased for import in the French West Indies from the time the islands joined the French Liberation movement to March 15, 1944, when W. P. B.'s order regulating the importation of cane beverage spirits went into effect.

Of the 3,000,000 gallons of aged rum, half will be allocated on a historical basis to thoes who imported during the same period. The remaining 1,500,000 gallons will be distributed to importers holding alcohol-tax-unit-import permits who have made application for import authorizations.

O. W. I. Finds Veterans Don't Want Old Jobs

Radio Engineering First Choice in Courses, W. M. C. Reports

WASHINGTON, June 2 (AP).—Three-fourths of the discharged veterans of this war are seeking jobs different from those they held before entering the services, the Office of War Information said today.

The veterans are entering industry at the rate of 70,000 a month, the majority going into war production jobs.

The War Man Power Commission reported that radio engineering is most popular with veterans enrolling for vocational training, with next preferences being electrical engineering accounting, aircraft, business administration and drafting.

Industry is hiring and asking for veterans, including the physically handicapped, O. W. I. reported. The W. M. C. said that in one case where a Guadalcanal veteran who had lost a leg took over exist interviews the percentages of quits was cut down appreciably.

Manpower Plan Will Undergo Rigid Test

Washington, June 3 (AP)—Voluntary manpower controls which are to go into effect July 1 as an iron-hand-velvet-glove attempt to bring new thousands of men into war industry, probably will be put to an exhaustive test within the next few months.

The effectiveness of the plan, say War Manpower Commission officials, will be shown as production cutbacks increase and war workers are released in greater numbers. It is aimed at steering into other war plants workers displaced by such contract terminations as that in the Brewster Aeronautical Corporation plants and preventing war workers from returning to peacetime employment while a critical war-plant shortage still exists.

To Confer With Senators

The plan requires all men, except farm workers, to clear through the United States Employment Service in seeking jobs. Applicants will be assigned to plants most in need of workers and, if necessary, they will be asked to move to a new area. While an applicant cannot be compelled to accept a job there will be pressure on him to do so since employers are directed to hire only workers referred by the uses.

Today War Manpower Commissioner McNutt is to confer with several Senators to discuss the operation of the job-referral plan. Some have praised the plan, such as Senator Johnson (D., Col.), who hailed it with the statement that "Paul McNutt is on the beam with his new regulations."

Skepticism Expressed

But some skepticism is expressed by others. Senator Wallgren (D., Wash.), a member of the Truman War Investigating Committee, says he can't see the necessity for such a step. "I'm not sure," he added, "that we have the manpower emergency to justify it."

Chairman George (D., Ga.) of the Senate Post-War Planning Committee feels it may accomplish "some good," but adds that "it is likely to prove troublesome to administer."

McNutt said that so many workers, in the belief that the end of war is near, are obtaining peacetime employment, and the draining of the war-worker supply is making it difficult to recruit workers for military production.

"Threat To War Effort"

"This attitude is already alarming in certain areas," he said. "If it persists, it will become the gravest sort of threat to the war effort."

He said today that one of the principal tasks will be to persuade such workers to move where the jobs are.

The problem can be solved," said McNutt, "only if workers and the people generally can be brought to see the critical shortage in a given industry or area for what it is—a national shortage."

LABOR-STRIFE CASES DWINDLE

Scattered Disputes Now Said To Keep Only 10,000 Idle

Washington, June 3 (AP)—The number of idle in scattered labor disputes dwindled today to 10,000, one fifth of the midweek total.

Four hundred bakery drivers and supervisors, whose six-day-old strike had halted bread deliveries to retailers in Cincinnati, voted to suspend their walkout "for a reasonable time" to permit action by the War Labor Board on an appeal by 13 bakeries against a wage-increase order.

At Lackawanna, N. Y., 140 electrical workers went back to their jobs at the Bethlehem Steel Company plant in the wake of a two-day stoppage which union leaders termed unauthorized.

Illinois Ordnance Trouble

A Federal labor conciliator sought to settle a strike of 60 truck drivers which kept 800 production employes off duty at the Illinois ordnance plant in Carbondale, Ill.

The Central States Drivers Council announced in Chicago a strike vote would be conducted next Saturday and Sunday among AFL over-the-road truck drivers in 12 mid-Western States. Dexter L. Lewis, director of the organization, said the result of the poll would affect more than 40,000 drivers in Michigan, Ohio, Indiana, Illinois, Wisconsin, Minnesota, Iowa, Missouri, North Dakota, South Dakota, Nebraska and Kansas, and several thousand others in adjoining areas. He asserted the operators had refused to put into effect a pay hike of 7 cents an hour granted by the WLB. The managements made n ocomment.

St. Louis Arbitration Panel Meets

St. Louis, June 3 (AP)—A three-man arbitration panel met in secret session today to settle a controversy which brought about an unauthorized strike of 3,500 employes of the St. Louis Public Service Company and deprived some 600,000 workers of mass transportation for 37 hours.

The striking motormen and bus drivers voted yesterday afternoon to return to work after Paul Nachtman, Regional War Labor Board director, union officials and city officials pleaded for an end to the transportation tieup.

The first vehicles began operation within an hour after the strike ended.

The controversy involves interpretation of a contract clause regarding payment for split period work.

Fist Fights Close Plant

Detroit, June 3 (AP)—Fist fights between union members and supervisors resulted in a shutdown of the Continental Motors plant here today, but this afternoon company and union announced the dispute settled and requested all employes to return to work on their regular shifts.

This version of the affair was given to a Government investigator:

An employe said to have been drinking engaged in a fist fight with a foreman in the screw machine department shortly after 1 A. M., and another foreman and another worker joined in. Later three stewards of the United Automobile Workers (CIO) Local 280, made a complaint to the plant supervisory office and more fighting resulted. After plant protection officers restored order, the stewards were suspended. Some 1,500 night-shift employes then stopped work, and day-shift employes also refused to start work. The plant was closed in mid-morning.

Tampa's Two Strikes End

Tampa, Fla., June 3 (AP)—Two local strikes that had tied up city-wide streetcar transportation and office work at the shipyards of McCloskey & Conway since Wednesday, were ended today.

Streetcar operatives returned to their platforms this morning after a labor conciliator told them the question of a bargaining agency still was in the hands of the National Labor Relations Board. They had struck for a union contract, spokesmen said.

Some of the 350 members of the office employes union this afternoon returned to the shipyard offices to prepare records for the new week after all had voted to return Monday. The vote was taken upon receipt of a telegram from M. H. McCloskey, Jr., president, temporarily in Philadelphia, that he would adjust all grievances immediately upon his return. Union leaders said the office workers' strike was unauthorized.

GOVERNMENT TO PUSH FIGHT ON WARD SUITS

Will Ask Voiding on Basis of Ban on Review of WLB Orders

WASHINGTON, June 3 (AP)—A spokesman said today that the Justice Department would ask dismissal of suits brought by Montgomery Ward & Co. to enjoin enforcement of War Labor Board orders against it.

The Circuit Court of Appeals ruled yesterday in another case that the statutes do not authorize court reviews of WLB orders and this will be the basis of the Justice Department action. It will renew in the District Court a motion which was denied in one of the Ward cases and which went, on Government petition, to the Circuit Court. The Government asked that it be allowed to appeal the District Court decision without a hearing on the merits of the case. The appeals court rejected the petition yesterday.

Montgomery Ward has five suits pending, involving as many WLB orders in connection with various of its stores and interests.

The Justice Department spokesman said it had not been decided when the new motion would be filed.

Women Voters Outnumber Men In U. S. by a Margin of 600,000

WASHINGTON, June 3 (AP).—For the first time this country has more women than men of voting age—600,000 more.

The Census Bureau passed the word along today with these estimates as of Jan 1:

Men of voting age—44,043,669.

Women of voting age—44,622,886.

Total—88,666,555.

Of the men over twenty-one years old, an estimated 7,860,000 are in the armed forces.

The bureau worked up the figures in considering the possible number of votes to be cast in the Presidential election this year.

Census Director J. C. Capt said the bureau has no way of estimating how many men in the armed forces will vote, nor how many war workers have lost their voting franchises temporarily by migrating to new areas.

At the time of the 1940 Presidential election, the bureau said the total number of potential voters (citizens of twenty-one and over) was 79,863,451—40,111,436 men and 39,752,016 women.

The actual number of ballots cast was 49,815,312, or 62.4 per cent.

Because of the uncertainties this year, the bureau made up three alternate estimates from which, it said, political forecasters may take their choice:

1. If 75 per cent of male civilians, 60 per cent of the women and 10 per cent of the men in the armed forces vote, the total vote this fall would be 54,697,484.

2. If 65 per cent of male civilians, 60 per cent of the women and 30 per cent of men in the armed forces vote, the total would be 52,651,117.

3. If 65 per cent of male civilians, 50 per cent of the women and 30 per cent of men in the armed forces vote, the total would be 48,188,828.

Gen. Wilson Gets Air Post

He Is Appointed Deputy Chief of Staff, Succeeding Vandenberg

WASHINGTON, June 3 (AP).—Appointment of Brigadier General Donald Wilson to be deputy chief of air staff was announced today by the War Department. He succeeds Brigadier General Hoyt S. Vandenberg, now deputy commander in chief of the Allied Expeditonary Air Force in England.

General Wilson, fifty-one-year-old native of Hiner, W. Va., had been chief of staff of Allied Air Forces in the Southwest Pacific theater since September, 1942.

Vice-Admiral Mitscher Adds Gold Star To DSM

Washington, June 3 (AP)—The navy announced today the award of a Gold Star in lieu of a second Distinguished Service Medal to Vice-Admiral Mark A. Mitscher, 57, of Oklahoma City.

Mitscher was decorated for his direction of air attacks against the Marshall Islands, Truk and the Tinian-Saipan Islands.

Born in Hillsboro, Wis., Mitscher was commanding officer of the aircraft carrier Hornet when she carried army bombers into Japanese territory to bomb Tokyo in April, 1942. His wife, Mrs. Frances Mitscher, lives in Oklahoma City.

Superior, Wis., June 3 (A. P.)—Marjorie Vattendahl today wore an engagement ring given her by Major Richard I. Bong of Poplar, Wis., the Army's ace of aces, who is home from the South Pacific on a furlough. Miss Vattendahl and Major Bong were schoolmates at Superior State Teachers College.

Miss Vattendahl told reporters she was "so thrilled and happy—and surprised." She did not disclose the wedding date.

Socialists Call For Immediate Peace Offensive

Will Take Steps for a Third Party; Thomas Not Sure He'll Run a Fifth Time

READING, Pa., June 3 (AP).—The Socialist party's national convention went into a night session tonight to complete its platform after upholding the Norman Thomas forces in two major tests by:

Approving, 83 to 42, a platform plank calling for "an immediate political peace offensive" by Allied peoples and governments rather than a minority substitute relying entirely on "popular pressure" to bring an end to the war.

Adopting by voice vote a party constitution amendment which would permit the party to collaborate with other groups of like mind to form a new third party realignment. Opponents expressed fear the Socialist party might lose its identity in any merger.

Mr. Thomas, four times Socialist party candidate for President and chairman of the platform committe at this convention, had told reporters that he would not make up his mind whether to accept another nomination until the fights on the peace plank and third party proposals were out of the way and he saw what the platform looked like.

The party will name its Presidential ticket tomorrow at a concluding session. The convention had not finished debate on the last of four big topics covered in the platform—improving the techniques of political action—when it recessed for dinner.

Besides adopting the peace plank as reported by the platform committee, the convention approved before the recess two other planks in the work platform, one on "economic security with liberty" urged among other things that government war plants be used "in the struggle against unemployment and not handed over to big business."

The other—covering "equality and fraternity of races"—condemned anti-Semitism, Jim Crowism and other forces of "race discrimination" and urged passage of anti-lynching and anti-poll-tav measures and legislation creating a permanent fair-employment practice committee.

Socialists Denounce Labor 'Conscription'

Reading, Pa., June 3 (AP)—While waiting for its platform committee to report, the Socialist party national convention today adopted a resolution denouncing all forms of military and labor "conscription" including the "assumption by the War Manpower Commission of complete power over all American males over 17."

The resolution also opposed the May bill for "peace-time military conscription after the war" and the "Presidential proposal for national labor slavery under the more palatable name of National Service Act."

It called for a constitutional amendment forbidding Congress to adopt any form of conscription without first submitting the question to a referendum of the people.

Would End Political Laws

Other resolutions adopted called for:

1. Abolition of all restrictions in State laws governing the qualification of minority parties to get on the ballot and petitioning Congress to adopt a Federal ballot for servicemen to permit them to vote for President and Vice-President in States where they are temporarily stationed.
2. Extension of the food-for-Europe program to all countries needing help after citing aid to Greece as not involving aid to the enemy.
3. Urging liberalization of the California law to make it easier for the Socialist and other parties to get on the ballot.
4. Calling on Gov. Thomas E. Dewey and Mayor Fiorello LaGuardia to press for action to solve the death last year of Carlo Tresca, New York editor of an Italian-language anti-Fascist newspaper, and calling on the Federal Government for aid if necessary.

~~TWO MILES CLOSER TO ROME THAN VALMONTONE.~~ NAPLES (FEDER)-ADD XX VALMONT

AS FOR ROME ITSELF, THE GERMAN PROPAGANDA AGENCY TRANSOCEAN TODAY QUOTED A FOREIGN OFFICE SPOKESMAN IN BERLING AS SAYING THE CITY WAS "FREE OF ARMED FORCES," ALTHOUGH ALLIED COMMANDERS ARE CONSIDERING THE POSSIBILITY THAT THE NAZIS MAY PUT UP A FIGHT RIGHT TO THE GATES OF THE CAPITAL IF THEY ARE UNABLE TO WITHDRAW THEIR TROOPS FROM THE PATH OF THE FIFTH ARMY STEAMROLLER.

AT THE SAME TIME THE ALLIED HIGH COMMAND WARNED THE GERMANS FLATLY TODAY THAT IF THEY CHOSE TO FIGHT IT OUT IN ROME, THE ALLIES WILL BE "OBLIGED TO TAKE APPROPRIATE MILITARY MEASURES TO EJECT THEM."

ANOTHER SLASHING AMERICAN SPEARHEAD POKED A STRONG, DEEP SALIENT NORTHWARD TOWARD CAVE, THREE MILES ABOVE VALMONTONE ON THE ROAD PARALLELING HIGHWAY SIX AND AT THE EDGE OF THE HILLS THROUGH WHICH THE ENEMY MAY BE FORCED TO WITHDRAW.

TO THE EAST, IN A 12-MILE STRETCH BETWEEN CAVE AND ANAGNI, WHICH THE BRITISH PLUNGING UP FROM FERENTINO REACHED TODAY, THERE WERE REMNANTS OF FOUR GERMAN DIVISIONS--THE 15TH, 26TH, 29TH PANZERS AND THE 305TH INFANTRY. THIS PORTION OF A DOZEN ENEMY DIVISIONS WHICH STARTED AN OFFENSIVE ON THE LOWER SECTOR OF THE FRONT 23 DAYS AGO, STILL WAS TRYING DESPERATELY TO SCRAMBLE OUT OF THE SACCO AND COSA VALLEY AREAS NORTHWARD, BEFORE THE ALLIES PULL THE STRING CLOSING THE BAG ON THE REMAINING NAZIS NOT YET ABLE TO GET TO SAFETY.

WHILE THE MOUNTAIN CONQUERORS UNDER LT.GEN.MARK W.CLARK SWEPT INTO POSSESSION OF CLOUD-STABBING MONTE CASTELLACCIO, FOUR AND ONE-HALF MILES EAST SOUTHEAST OF FRASCATI AND JUST BELOW ROCCA PRIORA, FRONTLINE REPORTS SAID OTHER AMERICANS WERE STRIKING VIGOROUSLY TOWARD ROME ALONG THE VIA CASILINA FROM CAPTURED VALMONTONE -- NORTHERN BUTTRESS OF THE NAZIS AND THEIR FORTRESS WALL.

THE ALLIES EARLIER THIS WEEK REACHED A POINT 14 MILES FROM ROME ALONG THE APPIAN WAY.

REPORTS FROM THE FIGHTING FRONT SAID THAT AN EASTERN FORCE WAS HEADED DOWN VIA CASILINA, TRAINING THEIR SIGHTS ON A JUNCTION WITH THE FRENCH AND BRITISH, TO CLOSE A TRAP ON REMNANTS OF NAZI DIVISIONS NOT YET ABLE TO PULL OUT THROUGH THE MOUNTAINS NORTH OF THE COSA AND SACCO VALLEYS.

THE NECK OF THIS BAG WAS SQUEEZING TIGHTER AS AMERICANS FROM VALMONTONE MARCHED EAST AND THE FRENCH NORTH TOWARD COLLE FERRO, ONLY FIVE MILES EAST OF VALMONTONE, AND TOWARD SGURGOLA, A MERE FOUR MILES SOUTH OF HIGHWAY SIX AND SEVEN AND ONE-HALF MILES EAST OF COLLE FERRO. AT THE SAME TIME THE BRITISH ASTRIDE THE HIGHWAY SWEPT WESTWARD FROM FERENTINO, INTENT ON SHUTTING THE 18-MILE EXIT GAP ON THE REMAINS OF WHAT STARTED OUT AS A DOZEN GERMAN DIVISIONS AT THE BEGINNING OF THE CAMPAIGN, CUT ALREADY TO NINE BY ALLIED SMASHES IN THE LAST 23 DAYS.

WITH THE FIFTH ARMY SOUTH OF ROME, ~~MAY~~ June 3-(AP)-THE GERMANS WERE IN RETREAT SOUTH OF ROME TONIGHT AND THE SKYLINE OF THE ETERNAL CITY--CROWNED BY THE DOME OF ST.PETER'S--STOOD OUT CLEARLY DESPITE THE SMOKE AND DUST OF BATTLE.

THE GERMAN DEFENSES WERE CRUMBLING UNDER THE BLOWS OF THE FIFTH ARMY AND AMERICAN ARMOR AND THE ENEMY FELL BACK, DESPOILING THE COUNTRYSIDE AND PILLAGING HOMES IN HIS RETREAT.

AS I ADVANCED WITH THE FORWARD TROOPS THERE STILL WERE MANY GERMAN POCKETS OF RESISTANCE BEHIND US AND THEY RAKED THE ROAD WITH MACHINE GUN AND SHELL FIRE. THESE POCKETS WERE BEING MOPPED UP.

GERMAN RESISTANCE, THOUGH FIERCE IN PLACES, WAS LIMITED TO DELAYING STANDS TO COVER WITHDRAWAL OF MAJOR FORMATIONS AND ARTILLERY BATTERIES.

THE CASILIAN WAY WAS LITTERED WITH WRECKED GERMAN GUNS, TANKS AND TRUCKS AND STREWN WITH THE BODIES OF GERMANS SO RECENTLY KILLED THAT THEY LOOKED LIKE MEN SLEEPING BY THE ROADSIDE.

IN THE COUNTRYSIDE BETWEEN THE APPIAN AND CASILIAN WAYS AMERICAN INFANTRY UNITS WERE PUSHING AHEAD, RACING WITH ONE ANOTHER TO LEAD THE CHASE.

THEY WERE OUTSTRIPPED, HOWEVER, BY AMORED UNITS ON HIGHWAXPGY.

GERMAN OPPOSITION CAME IN SPURTS AS POCKETS OPENED UP ON ADVANCING TANKS WITH ANTI-TANK GUNS, AND SMALL ARMS FIRE UNTIL WIPED OUT.

ONE LARGE POCKET WHICH DELAYED AMERICAN ARMOR FOR SOME TIME FINALLY WAS ANNIHILAT

JUN 4 1944

THEY WERE OUTSTRIPPED, HOWEVER, BY AMORED UNITS ON HIGHWAY 6.

GERMAN OPPOSITION CAME IN SPURTS AS POCKETS OPENED UP ON ADVANCING TANKS WITH ANTI-TANK GUNS, AND SMALL ARMS FIRE UNTIL WIPED OUT.

ONE LARGE POCKET WHICH DELAYED AMERICAN ARMOR FOR SOME TIME FINALLY WAS ANNIHILATED WHEN SIX BATTERIES OF ARTILLERY WERE TURNED ON IT.

THE GERMANS ALSO LEFT MANY SNIPERS BEHIND. SOME WERE CONCEALED IN TREES, OTHERS IN CORN FIELDS.

THE ARMORED FORMATION WHICH PACED THE ATTACK ON HIGHWAY SIX SWEPT ON TO LABICO AND THEN BEYOND.

THE BATTALION SPEARHEADING THIS ARMORED ATTACK WAS COMMANDED BY LT.COL. BOGARDUS S.CAIRNS, DECATUR, GA., AND THE COMPANY IN THE LEAD WAS UNDER CAPT. GEORGE DEMPSEY, OSHKOSH, WIS.

WHEN THE TRANSMITTER FAILED ON DEMPSEY'S TANK HE JOINED THE CREW OF A TANK UNDER MAJ. HAROLD L. BLODGETT, DENTON, TEX., AND DIRECTED HIS COMPANY FROM THE TURRET OF THAT TANK WHILE BLODGETT FED SHELLS TO ITS CANNON.

THE COUNTRY FOLK CHEERED THE AMERICANS IN THE NEWLY LIBERATED TERRITORY BUT THEY HAD SUFFERED TOO MUCH IN RECENT DAYS TO BE VERY HAPPY.

GERMANS HAD ENTERED THE FARM HOUSES AND CARRIED OFF WINE, FOOD, FURNITURE, BEDS AND EVEN TRINKETS AND HAD DESTROYED MUCH OF WHAT THEY COULD NOT CART AWAY, PEASANTS REPORTED.

"THEY CAME IN WITH PISTOLS AND TOOK EVERYTHING, EVEN MY RAZOR," SAID ONE MAN. "THEY HAVE BEEN STEALING EVERYTHING. THERE IS NOTHING LEFT TO EAT IN ALL THIS COUNTRYSIDE."

HE OFFERED SOLDIERS A BOTTLE OF WINE WHICH HE SAID HE HAD HIDDEN FROM THE GERMANS BY BURYING IT AND HE ASKED FOR FOOD.

Rome Falls to Allies. City Damaged in Part By Nazis Who Flee North Under Air Blows; Victors Forced to Fight Way Nearly to Forum

4-Hour Battle Is Fought in Rome Suburb

Anzio Beachhead Force Fights Tanks, Snipers Up to Trajan's Column

Clark Is Under Fire As He Enters City

Nazis Loot as They Flee, Columns Block Roads 40 Miles to Northwest

By The Associated Press

ROME, June 4.—Rome, the Eternal City, was liberated tonight by tanks and infantry troops of the Allied 5th Army which battled German rear guards to the edge of the ancient Forum.

A force from the old Anzio beachhead completed the mop-up of Nazi forces at 9:15 p. m. (3:15 p. m., Eastern war time) by knocking out an enemy scout car in front of the Bank of Italy, almost within the shadow of the column erected to Emperor Trajan, who ruled the Romans from A. D. 98 to 117.

The 5th Army force fought its way into the heart of the city after a four-hour battle against German armor in the suburbs of the ancient capital.

First Axis Capital to Fall

The City of Seven Hills was the first Axis capital to fall to Allied troops who were pursuing the Germans north of Rome with the aid of swarms of Allied planes battering at Nazi transport columns.

[The Germans are forming a new defensive line at Palestrina, about twenty miles beyond Rome, the B. B. C. reported in a news broadcast monitored last night by N.B.C.]

Soon after 3:30 p. m. the Germans began systematic demolitions inside Rome in earnest. Huge clouds of smoke plumed above the city.

In a dawn dash from Borgata Finocchio, 13 miles distant on the Via Casilina, a spearhead of 2[illegible] Sherman tanks, eight armored cars and 150 U. S. and Canadian infantrymen pushed beyond suburban Torre Spaccata before they ran headlong into a German roadblock.

Old men and young girls and toddling children were waving the Americans on when the fire of German 88-millimeter guns knocked out the leading tank and snipers started pouring machine-gun fire from hideouts next to a white church whose bells were ringing for early mass.

An Italian partisan, who said the Fascists had put out his left eye in torturing him, kissed me on the cheek and volunteered the information that he was leading an armed band of civilians back into Rome "to kill Germans."

Smiling, brown-eyed girls brought bouquets of flowers to dust-covered riflemen who were crawling up a sloping field of wild barley and poppies to scout German positions flanking the heavily-mined airport at Centocelle.

A bald clerk, carrying an empty wine flagon, showed soldiers bruises on his face and explained that the Germans had beaten him as he walked into the suburbs looking for milk for his five children.

"The enemy blew up Rome's water, gas and electric works yesterday," he said. "There is nothing to eat. For four months there has been no meat, and for two months not a single egg. There is great confusion. All the big Fascists are fleeing."

The historic Via Casilina probably never has witnessed a more thundering military spectacle than that of the past 24 hours in which the onrushing Allies broke through the German lines in the Sacco Valley and into the green campagna facing Rome's seven hills.

Tanks led by Lt. Col. Bogardus Cairns of Decatur, Ga., and infantry units including those commanded by Lt. Col. Frank Izenour of LosAngelps and Lt. Col. Joseph Crawford of Humboldt, Kans., were in the forefront of the spectacular drive from the area of fallen Valmontone.

Straight up the Via Casilina they came, bowling over opposition put up by mobile 88-millimeter armored self-propelled guns. I found that keeping up with the scout cars of Capt. Roy Manley of International Falls, Minn., was a fantastic job. Half of Saturday afternoon I spent jumping into various ditches while snipers' bullets and mortar shells came far too close. It has been an armored war all the way, with some of our tanks left behind as burning, tragic milestones on the victory road.

Major Harold Blodgett, of Denton, Tex., sitting in the tank Tactless Texan, below the smoking hilltop town of Colonna, apologized yesterday because, "We've only made five thousand yards in five hours, we keep bumping into those damned self-propelled guns."

I slept last night at Borgata Finocchio near a smashed German horse-drawn baggage train. Two bombings and one strafing by German planes tumbled me off the wooden bench that was my bed. The bodies of three Germans lay beside the road outside my window.

"I hope I can visit St. Peter's Sunday," remarked Infantry Chaplain Lieutenant John T. Beyenka, of Chicago.

With the first light today a column of Sherman tanks commanded by Captain John Beale, of Rockford, Ill., and Lieutenant William E. Kennel, of Kirkwood, Mo., started on the last lap into Rome. Perched on the tanks were infantry led by Captains Gus Heilman, of Charlottesville, Va., and Jack Jennings, of Toronto, Ont.

Mine and two other press jeeps inadvertently got ahead of the procession and at a lonely highway intersection we suddenly saw a German armored car approaching. It stopped within a hundred yards of us before we could turn to flee. Four Germans jumped from the car and took cover in a field, leaving their machine gun behind.

Coming back up the road again behind two American tanks I saw a German Volkswagen swing into the highway. Its two startled occupants surrendered. They were followed by a three-ton German truck from which eight German riflemen dismounted.

I yelled, "Haende Hoch!" (hands up), and they obeyed, staring at our tanks as if stupefied.

Then we ran into the German roadblock, and the advance stopped as quickly as it had begun. The first German shell killed the driver and assistant driver of the lead tank. Corporal Roe Rapp, of Renick, W. Va., infantryman, who was riding on the exposed after deck of the tank, was not touched.

Our artillery came up and has been punching back at the enemy, but the persistent German snipers still make it necessary that I sit behind a roadside embankment to type this dispatch. I am about a block from a blue and white city limits sign that reads "Roma."

Clark's Forces In Axis Capital

Mopping Up Operations Completed Quickly; Citizens, Hysterical with Joy, Greet Anzio Forces After Last Resistance Is Routed.

ALLIED HEADQUARTERS, Naples, June 4.—(AP) Allied Fifth army troops from the old Anzio beachhead captured historic Rome today after a fierce battle through suburbs of the Eternal City.

The mopup of the heart of Rome—the first European capital to fall to Allied troops—was completed at 9:15 p. m. (3:15 p. m., Eastern War Time) as an Allied force knocked out the last German rearguard unit in front of the Bank of Italy, almost within the shadow of Trajan's column.

To the north of the city warplanes battered at fleeing German transports, wrecking or damaging at least 600 motor vehicles, as the Allied forces sought to annihilate the remaining Nazi divisions in Italy.

The huge air-wreaked toll of Nazi transports on congested roads above Rome indicated the enemy intended no major stand in the ancient city.

Citizens Overjoyed

Hysterical with joy, Roman citizens at the city's outskirts amid kisses and tears waved on U. S. and Canadian tanks and infantrymen dashing up the Via Casilina and then battering into German defenders holding the suburbs, a front distpatch from Associated Press Correspondent Daniel de Luce said.

Opposition appeared to be tapering off.

Headquarters did not identify the first troops entering Rome.

The enemy made it a battle every foot of the way through the suburbs into Rome. The Germans hurled all they had—tanks, armor and artillery—into fierce fighting to block the Fifth Army steamroller at least until they could pull out more of their own menaced forces.

"Troops of the Fifth Army entered the city limits of Rome today. Sporadic resistance continues," the brief Allied announcement said.

Taken in 24 Day Drive

This break into Rome, center of Catholicism and once the seat of the ancient Roman Empire, came 24 days after the Allies unleashed a powerful combined offensive of the Fifth and Eighth armies, and 12 days fater Fifth Army men on the Anzio beachhead hurled forth their power drive aimed at the capital.

Lashing at the Nazi columns retreating from Rome, Allied fighter-bombers destroyed or damaged at least 600 motor vehicles, finding "excellent targets in congested traffic" above the city to Viterbo, Lake Bracciano and Lake Bolsena, headquarters said.

Other planes struck troop concentrations and gun positions.

U. S. heavy bombers 500 to 750 strong smashed meanwhile at targets on two main rail lines on the French-Italian frontier.

The fighter-bombers found the Nazi columns retreating as far north as Viterbo, 38 miles above Rome, and Lake Bracciano, 50 miles from the capital.

15,000 Prisoners Taken

The great roundup of prisoners continued—with more than 15,000 now taken by the Fifth Army alone. The Eighth Army has captured at least 6,000. Five of the 18 German divisions engaged in Italy already had been virtually annihilated. Thus the Allies were well along in their avowed purpose of this offensive to crush the Nazi legions.

Battlefields were strewn with vast amounts of wrecked Nazi equipment, losses which would necessitate large-scale rearming of many of the retreating enemy.

The blistering drive to Rome started early this morning with several Fifth Army spearheads pushing westward from the neighborhood of fallen Valmontone, 20 miles from the capital. Then the Allies ran into bitter opposition, fighting it out inch by inch at first through the suburbs. But the pressure apparently began to tell on the Germans, and tonight resistance fell off.

Headquarters earlier, before the Rome announcement, had reported the Germans resisting between the Alban hills, where new heights were seized, and the Tiber flowing into the sea 16 miles from Rome.

Battlefront dispatches from Associated Press Correspondents Edward Kennedy and Daniel Luce, both with American units, said fighting raged throughout the morning in Rome's suburbs.

A headquarters announcement said "throughout the day Fifth Army troops have been engaged in heavy fighting in the outskirts of Rome where the enemy continues to resist, and also between the Colli Laziali (Alban Hills) and the Tiber."

Eighth Army Advances

While the Fifth fought the enemy at the gates of Rome, the British Eighth army to the southeast continued its advance after its junction with other American and French troops below Valmontone.

With Rome's capture so imminent, the Allied command called on Romans to save the historic metropolis from destruction, and to keep highways open so the Allies could push on through "without delay in order to continue the destruction of the German armies farther north."

This followed headquarter's pledge to take every precaution to spare the city, coupled with the warning that the enemy would be thrown out by force if he made a stand in the city.

(A Berlin broadcast said "for the time being no reports have arrived yet whether the open town of Rome will now today move into the direct sphere of operations."

(The German high command acknowledged its "barrage front" had been pushed back into the area six miles east of Rome, and declared that west of the Alban hills—"our troops detached themselves towards the Tiber.")

Besides seizing new strongholds in the Alban Hills the Fifth Army also advanced north of Via Casilina toward Highway 5, strategic lateral road running eastward from Rome to the Adriatic coast.

On their way to the capital's gates, Allied troops in the Alban hills swept through the town of Nemi near Lake Nemi, swarmed over the high peaks of Mt. Ceraso and Mt. Colletano, and pushed on toward the town of Rocca di Papa, 12 miles southeast of Rome.

Allied planes continued the hail of bombs and cannon and machine-gun fire in support, and in an attempt to trap the fleeing Germans, Wellingtons and Liberators bombed a bridge over the Tiber, at a key spot on one of the few good roads for enemy retreat northwestward. The bridge connects the main road running parallel with the Tiber from Rome to the sea. Hits were scored at or near road junctions at both ends of the span.

Trail of Nazi Dead

Front dispatches described a trail of German dead, wrecked tanks, guns, trucks, along the Via Casilina, billowing clouds of dust, and thorough Nazi pillage by seizing or destroying foodstuffs, livestock, and small personal possessions of the populace, apparently with intent of giving the Allies the severest possible relief problem.

The swift punches on the last lap to Rome left behind some enemy pockets that had to be mopped up.

The Allied message to Romans, besides enlisting citizen help in speeding a pursuit of Germans beyond Rome, told them to "do all in your power to prevent the destruction of your city." It asked them to prevent the Germans from blowing up important buildings and bridges, to guard all utilities, to hide foodstocks, to note locations of booby traps and mines, and to remove all barricades and obstructions from the streets.

Southeast of the Rome front, Frenchmen captured Colleferro three miles east of Valmontone. French troops also swarmed through Sgurgola, on a road leading north to the Via Casilina, pushed through Segnix and took Colle Piso.

New Zealanders advancing north and west of Frosinone seized Alatri on the Via Macerosa, and Canadians made contact with the right wing of British forces.

Pummeling enemy withdrawals, bomber crewmen today reported large fires near Lido di Roma.

Medium, light and fighter-bombers battered other dumps and roads, destroying 100 motor vehicles and damaging 127. Hurricanes sank or damaged 10 small vessels in the Livorno (Leghorn) and Piombino area.

The German air force tried to slow the Allied drive west of Velletri, but ran into fierce antiaircraft fire, losing two of their eight bombers.

The Allies lost six planes Saturday.

Hitler Ordered Troops Out to Save Rome, Germans Assert

ENEMY PLEA BARED

Kesselring Made Last-Minute Renewal of Open-City Offer

By The Associated Press.

LONDON, June 4—The Germans announced tonight in a special communiqué—broadcast after the Allies had liberated Rome—the withdrawal of German troops to the northwest of the city and said that the Allies had received a plan whereby Rome would have been regarded as an "open city."

The open-city proposals were said to have been advanced at 11 P. M. on Saturday, less than twenty-four hours before Rome changed hands. The first word from Adolf Hitler's headquarters in several days asserted that the fight in Italy would continue and that measures were being taken "to force final victory for Germany and her allies." The communiqué said:

"As the front line, in the course of the present fighting in Italy, was gradually approaching nearer and nearer to the city of Rome, there was danger that Rome, one of the oldest cultural centers of the world, would be directly involved in the present fighting. Hitler has ordered the withdrawal of German troops to the northwest of Rome to prevent the destruction of Rome.

"The struggle in Italy will be continued with unshakable determination to break the enemy attacks and to force final victory for Germany and her allies. The necessary measures for an eventual German victory are being taken in close collaboration with fascist Italy and other allied powers.

"The year of invasion will bring Germany's enemies an annihilating defeat at the most decisive moment."

CLAIMS CITY 'OPEN'

German Radio Commentators Try to Minimize Loss of City to Allies

LONDON, June 4—(AP) Hitler announced tonight in two special communiques—broadcast after Allied troops had liberated Rome—the withdrawal of German troops to the northwest of the city and said the Allies had been offered a plan whereby Rome would be regarded as an "open city."

In the first word from the Fuehrer's headquarters in several days, it was asserted the fight in Italy would continue and that measures were being taken "to force final victory for Germany and her allies."

Predict Allied Defeat

"The year of the invasion," one communique said, "will bring Germany's enemies an annihilating defeat at the most decisive moment."

The order to evacuate German troops from the city, it was said, was intended "to prevent the destruction of Rome."

The German radio said Field Marshal Gen. Albert Kesselring had submitted to the Vatican proposals to make Rome an open city with a request that they be conveyed to the Allies, but that "so far no reply has been received from the Anglo-American high command."

The proposals were said to have been advanced at 11 p. m. Saturday. This was less than 24 hours before Rome changed hands.

(Field dispatches from Rome reported Allied troops met fierce resistance from German armor and snipers in street to street fighting before final Nazi opposition was crushed.)

German radio commentators immediately began a campaign to minimize the fall of Rome. A typical attitude was voiced by Karl Praegner, who said:

"Abandonment of Rome is a considerable gain from a military point of view. All other considerations apart, supply of the town with its million inhabitants, to which some 30,000 to 40,000 refugees must be added, would be a very heavy strain on the German army. The Allied high command will now have to take charge of the supply of the Roman population."

The German broadcasts said Kesselring's proposals "confirmed recognition of Rome as an open city and these proposals read as follows:

"1—That the belligerents recognize Rome as an open city.

"2—Limits of the open city shall be as follows—from San Paolo except for a railway line to the north up to Piazza Maggiore, then from Piazza Maggiore following the railway line and the station Tiburtina to the east of the Villa Chigi.

"3—The railway line and Tiburtina station shall be outside the open city area from Villa Chigi up to the Tiber bend one and a half kilometers (nine-tenths of a mile) south southwest of the race course of the Torres Des Quinto, from where the line shall run south of the Tiber to Ponte Milvio, which shall be inside the open area.

"4—The line shall then run from the western tip of the Vatican city to Porta San Pancrazion and the Travestere railway station.

No Military Installations

"The German high command undertakes to keep no military installations or troops within the confines of the open city.

"Furthermore the German high command undertakes to carry out no troop movements in Rome.

Excepted from this condition are those authorities and police forces necessary for the maintenance of law and order and for supply of the town.

"No destruction shall be carried out inside the area of the open town.

"Stores of supply goods shall be put at the disposal of the civilian population.

"After the evacuation of the town by the German troops Rome shall be supplied with water and electricity from supply installations used so far provided they are in possession of the Wehrmacht.

"A condition for acceptance of these proposals is the full assurance that they will be mutually observed. The Supreme German commander, moreover, has suggested to ask the Vatican to make arrangements for the appropriate control of observation of the above points of the agreement.

"So far no reply has been received from the Anglo-American high command concerning these proposals.

"Instead General Alexander has asked the citizens of Rome to offer armed resistance to German troops.

Yanks Blast Invasion Coast, Smash Rail Lines in Italy

HERCHER JUN 5 1944 NIGHT

Over 1,200 Heavy Bombers Drop 1,500 Tons of Bombs on Boulogne; Rail Centers at Turin, Genoa and Riviera Hit with Light Allied Losses.

LONDON, June 4—(AP) Upward of 1,200 American heavy bombers struck Europe again today—some 500 pounding German strongholds along the invasion coast while their comrades from the Mediterranean made a strong attempt to sever two main rail lines between France and Italy.

Swarms of medium bombers and fighter bombers from Britain kept the thunderous assaults going as for the second straight day the Fortresses and Liberators returned from France without loss after saturating defenses around Boulogne with 1,500 tons of bombs.

Enemy Installations Hit

Spitfire bombers and fighters hammered enemy radio installations along the northern coast of France this evening and the Air Ministry announced that more lin[illegible] the Nazi radio chain had been broken.

The German radio broadcast warnings in the night that "nuisance" raiders were over western Germany.

Between 500 and 750 Fifteenth Air force heavy bombers swept up from southern Italy to attack such vital rail centers as Turin and Genoa.

One force hit the Turin yards, the double-track Mount Cenis railroad leading west from Turin to Lyon, France, the Gad bridge on the Italian side of the Modane tunnel through the Alps, and tracks near St. Michael on the French side.

Other bombers singled out the Riviera line, bombing a viaduct southwest, of Cannes and the Var river bridge, southwest of Nice, while other formations hit the Genoa railyards and the Recco viaduct to the east.

Yards at Novi Legure, 25 miles north of Genoa, and the harbor at Savona, 25 miles west of Genoa, also were targets.

17th Day of Attack

In this seventeenth successive day of attack for American light and medium bombers, more than 250 of them ranged along 200 miles of French coast line. A section of one bridge, representing about one-quarter of its length, was tumbled into the Seine river.

The Paris radio reported tonight an Allied air attack on the eastern and southeastern suburbs of Paris and said it was opposed "furiously" by anti-aircraft.

Indicating another attack by Allied Mediterranean air forces in the Balkans, the Budapest radio began transmitting air raid warnings.

(The United Nations radio at Algiers also said Allied planes had raided a Nazi airfield at Zara, on Yugoslavia's Adriatic coast, and had pounded German communication lines between Sinj and Knin, as well as targets on the Mostar-Sarajevo railway line).

Thunderbolt fighter-bombers of the Ninth Air force attacked two bridges over the Seine at Rouen and railroad tracks and junctions at Creil, Crepy and other parts of the Oise valley. Mustang fighter bombers swept south of Paris, strafed railway junctions and destroyed an enemy training plane.

Good Hits Reported

Col. Gilbert Meyers, Milford, Ia., led the attack on the bridges and reported good hits. He said one bridge was destroyed and the other substantially weakened.

There were three separate attacks on Nazi-held France by the British-based American heavy bombers, the U. S. Air forces communique announced.

During the morning Fortresses and Liberators escorted by Thunderbolts and Mustangs of the Eighth Air force blasted targets in the vicinity of Boulogne. Later in the day another force, escorted by Mustangs, returned to the same area for another blow at enemy installations.

The heavies struck the third time during the evening, ranging deep into France and attacking enemy transport facilities and airdromes in the Paris area.

The communique reported little enemy opposition, with flak moderate to heavy over some targets.

It was the third day in a row that the four-engined bombers had aimed two blows within a single day at the belt of fortifications which Hitler has thrown up against the coming assault from the west.

The targets of the Fortresses and Liberators—which with their escort flew out perhaps 1,000 strong—lay only 26 miles from the English coast.

Skies Overcast

Skies over the strait were overcast as the daylight formations thundered out to follow up Royal Air Force bombers who by night attacked the big chemical center of Ludwigshafen in Germany, objectives along the French coast, and scattered mines in enemy waters without the loss of an aircraft.

Military objectives along the coast of France also were bombed by Ninth Air force Marauders and Havocs under a screen of Mustangs and Thunderbolts, one group hitting a highway bridge at Courcelles-Sursein, 40 miles northwest of Paris.

Squadrons of Thunderbolt fighter-bombers kept the attack rolling with sorties against bridges, railroad tracks and military rolling stock in the Oise river valley running from Lecateau southwestward to Montmorency, northwest of Paris.

The first attack on the Boulogne area by American heavies—a type of operation in which the bomb bays open almost before the British coast is left behind—was executed in the morning under the protection of Eighth Air force Thunderbolts and Mustangs.

A similar force under a Mustang escort paid a return visit later in the day.

No Enemy Fighters

Both forces, bombing through the clouds, met no interference from enemy fighters and were undisturbed by the small amount of flak thrown up.

Tech. Sgt. Charles Thompson, 224 Seaside avenue, Bridgeport, Conn., bombardier, reported visibility was good, flak only moderate "and we saw no enemy aircraft."

Marauders did not meet any enemy fighters but anti-aircraft fire ranged from meager to intense. Over some targets the twin-engined ships bounced like corks in a rough sea and some came home with shell holes and cracked windshields.

In the last 60 hours an estimated 10,000 tons of bombs have fallen on the heavily fortified Pas de Calais area and back along 145 miles of communication lines to the Paris district.

If as many as 500 planes participated in the British night forays, it is likely that with the daylight attacks another 2,240 tons of high explosives fell on the continent.

A DNB broadcast from Berlin said British and American fighters attempted to attack a German island strong point in the channel Saturday but declared the raiders were beaten off with five out of 20 attackers shot down.

At sunset the sky reverberated with the thunder of additional fleets of bombers winging toward Calais and Boulogne, and explosions could be heard in Britain.

The Paris radio reported that "important damage" was caused by Saturday night's raid on Boulogne.

Nazi Oil Output Cut

The United States strategic air force issued a glowing report on results of the recent bombing of eight factories producing about 50 per cent of Germany's synthetic oil, asserting the attacks "seriously curtailed" the output.

The principal attacks were made May 12, 28 and 29, and the hardest hit, the announcement said, were refineries at Zeitz, about twenty miles south of Leipzig, at the Stettin suburb of Politz, and at Brux in the Czech Sudetenland.

"The Zeitz factory is believed to be out of commission indefinitely," the report said, "while fires and explosions were so extensive at Politz and Brux that it is problematical how they can get back in production."

Brux was "one of the largest synthetic oil plants," the report said. Other factories hit were at Merseburg, Lutzkendorf, near Leipzig; Magdeburg, Bohlen, near Leipzig, and Ruhland, north of Dresden.

A measure of the Nazis' desperate attempt to try to defend the plants was their loss of 150 planes in aerial combats against the American bombers and fighters May 12, and 93 on May 28. In these two raids the Americans lost 76 bombers and 22 fighters.

The latest estimate on the tonnage poured on all European targets by all Allied air forces last month rose to more than 147,000 tons. Of this total, nearly 100,000 tons was carried from British bases and 48,000 from the Mediterranean.

VITAL PROBLEMS CONFRONT ALLIES

Food Supplies, Reorganization of Government Pressing Needs in Rome.

WASHINGTON, June 4. — (AP) Capture of Rome confronted the Allies today with two immediate problems—the delivery of food and relief supplies in huge quantities and the re-organization of the Italian government.

Both problems have been under study here as well as in London and at headquarters in Italy and officials were confident they would be tackled with all possible speed. Diplomatic and military officials here had expected the liberation of the city for several days and while obviously delighted that it had been achieved, they had no immediate comment.

Promised Retirement

The first step in re-organization of the Italian government will be the retirement of King Vittorio Emanuele. He promised several weeks ago that upon the liberation of the Italian capital he would move into the background and appoint as his successor, Crown Prince Umberto.

American officials have accepted that promise quite literally and believe the king's fulfillment of it should be forthcoming soon.

Once Umberto takes office, exports on Italian political affairs here said, Premier Marshal Pietro Badoglio and his cabinet will resign. Umberto is expected to reappoint him and his coalition government.

Badoglio's task then will be to seek recruits among the political parties in Rome. The assumption here has been that the liberation of Rome would mark a new period in Italian political affairs, the southern section of the country being traditionally apathetic toward politics, whereas the area from Rome north has always been politically active.

Whether Badoglio will long survive as premier may depend on the kind of support he will get in Rome. It will also depend to some extent on the effectiveness with which we re-organize local governments over liberated Italy and rids them of leftover minor Fascist officials.

Food Problem Acute

The problem of relieving Rome's hunger and need of all kinds of supplies became acute in the Washington view, as soon as the city was liberated.

The Germans were reported several days ago to have stripped the city of most of its food and medical supplies. The Allies are especially sensitive about the supply job in Rome because the eyes of all occupied Europe will be watching what happens there as an indication of what may happen elsewhere on the continent as the liberating Allied armies drive forward.

Over 9,600 Americans Killed in Italy Battles

Casualties Up to May 28 Totaled 55,150

WASHINGTON, June 4 (AP).—The battle for Rome, from the time the Allies swept across the Messina Strait onto the Italian Peninsula last Sept. 3, cost the lives of 9,600 Americans.

Secretary of War Henry L. Stimson announced last Thursday that American casualties in the Italian campaign from the date of the landing to May 28 totaled 55,150, including 9,686 killed, 36,910 wounded and 8,554 missing.

Many other Americans have been killed, wounded or lost in battle since then. Thousands died in North Africa and in Sicily to pave the way for the direct attack on Italy.

Yanks in Nazi Camp

Stockholm, June 4 (AP).—American prisoners of war in a German camp east of Berlin have their own 21-piece jazz band, print their own monthly newspaper, "Overseas Kid," and since May 1 have been playing baseball regularly.

Accounts published today of a visit under German auspices made by the newspaper Allehanda's special Berlin correspondent, Tanya Binaco-Pravitz, described the camp orchestra as "fantastic," and said it was good enough to play at any leading hotel.

135 Germans Mutiny, Shoot Officers, Give Up

WITH THE 5TH ARMY IN THE SUBURBS OF ROME, June 4 (AP).—One hundred and thirty-five German soldiers mutinied, shot two officers and surrendered to an American infantry company west of Lanuvio, as the final drive toward Rome got under way, it was reported today.

The Germans were said to have explained that their act was provoked when the officers shot two privates who were trying to desert.

FRAU HESS SEEKS DIVORCE

Charges Husband With 'Desertion' for Flight to Scotland

JUN 1944

LONDON, June 4 (AP) — The Reynolds News, London Sunday newspaper, said today it had learned Mrs. Rudolf Hess had sued her husband, the former deputy Nazi Fuehrer, for divorce "on grounds of desertion and insanity."

The newspaper said the case would be heard privately in Leipzig, and that Hess, a prisoner of war in the United Kingdom, would be notified of the petition through the Red Cross.

The newspaper added: "According to German divorce laws, a spouse can sue on grounds of insanity if it is officially certified the insanity is incurable, and Frau Hess' petition cites the official German communiqué issued in May, 1941, which stated Hess was suffering from delusions and was insane at the time he flew to Scotland."

R. A. F. Scores on Shipping

CAIRO, June 4 (AP).—Royal Air Force planes based in the Middle East destroyed seventeen enemy supply vessels and damaged twenty-five in day and night attacks last month, ranging from the coasts of Greece to the eastern waters of the Aegean, it was announced officially today.

Skelton's Plane Bags 6 Ships

LONDON, June 4 (AP)—A plane named "We Will Do," given to the Red Army by Red Skelton, American movie and radio comedian, has sunk six Nazi vessels totaling 26,500 tons during the past year in the Gulfs of Finland and of Riga and the Baltic Sea, the Moscow radio said today.

Marauder Makes 100th Trip

A U. S. MEDIUM BOMBER BASE in Britain, June 4 (AP)—The Marauder bomber "Impatient Virgin" returned from a damaging attack on a bridge in northern France today and became the fourth bomber of the United States Ninth Air Force to complete 100 missions. Lieut. Robert Coseo of Watertown, N. Y., was the pilot on the century trip.

AMERICAN FLIERS RECEIVE WELCOME

AT RED AIR BASE

NIGHT

Corp. Ike Katzman of Ansonia Among Group in Daring Flight.

GILMORE

A U. S. AIR BASE SOMEWHERE IN THE SOVIET UNION, June 4—(AP) Russians gave an opened-armed welcome to men of the U. S. 5th Air force—the first Allied fliers to land in the U.S.S.R. while on actual military operations—when they set their heavy bombers down at this American airfield deep in Russia Friday.

The arriving American fliers included: Corp. Ike Katzman, 9 Maple street, Ansonia, Conn.

Enroute to the air base from Italy, the Americans had bombed freight yards and locomotive shops at Debrecen, a communications junction in Romania for the Axis front facing Russia.

Russian officers and soldiers, who with the Americans at this base helped make this mission possible, rushed forward to greet the fliers as they alighted.

"Why, they are just like us," said one Red army sergeant. "Look how they laugh and act."

After reporting to intelligence officers, these men—whose bombs blasted yards where stood more than 900 cars loaded with Axis military equipment—marched across the field to living quarters.

A small boy, not over 10, timidly walked toward the first group and handed Sgt. William L. Steadman, 89, Newberg, N. C., a former Atlanta, Ga., radio commentator, a bunch of flowers.

"For the American," the youngster said with a broad grin.

Lt. Col. William Jackson, from South Pittsburg, Tenn., who is in charge of the base hospital, escorted the fliers to the nearest village.

A whole crowd had gathered and all kinds of comments were arising from the peasants;

"Americans, where did they come from? What a world. They have flown from America. How like Russians they are. There is one who looks like my Sasha. Here take this basket, I want you to have it. We will take no money from the Americans."

A Russian who spoke English addressed the crowd:

"These boys are American fliers. They have just landed here after dropping bombs on some of Hitler's trains. They just want to buy a few things for souvenirs."

An American officer told us: "We asked the Russians what targets they wanted us to bomb. They told us. We did it and they liked it."

Red Army Paper Cites Aim in U. S. Shuttle Operations—Carpathian Junction Hit

CASSIDY

JUN 3 1944

MOSCOW, June 4 (AP)—The Russian Army newspaper Red Star complimented highly today the first American fliers to land on a Russian base and declared the first shuttle bombing of German targets "will be followed by a second, third, etc."

A dispatch by Lieut. Col. Leonid Vysokostrovsky from the base where the Flying Fortresses landed Friday said "a multitude of heavy bombers passed overhead in ranks as though on parade."

He reported that a particularly heavy blow was struck by the bombers at a large railway junction in Rumania, among the targets hit en route to Russia.

"American pilots made a very pleasant impression on Soviet officers," Lieut. Col. Vysokostrovsky wrote. "These young, strong persons are skillful in everything they do. When they clean up a plane they do it together quickly. When they work in camp they do it accurately and zealously."

Germans Throw in Large Forces as Russians Hold Line in Romania Battle

LANDSTROM

LONDON, June 5 (Monday) (AP).—The Russians announced early today that more than 1,100 Germans were killed and thirty enemy tanks knocked out yesterday north of Iasi in Romania, where the Germans have been attacking for a week without making any appreciable headway.

The midnight Russian communique, broadcast by the Moscow radio, indicated no slackening of the fighting. The Germans continued to throw in large forces of tanks and infantry despite heavy losses in an apparent attempt to knock the Russians off balance before the big Red Army drive in the east.

The Nazi air force supported the German assault and Russian fighters reported shooting down six invader planes during the day. The communique said a large German transport was sunk in the Gulf of Finland by a Soviet torpedo plane.

Earlier, a Moscow broadcast declared the Germans were unable to make an inch of progress in the Iasi sector, and said the Red army launched a number of successful counterattacks.

Berlin news reports said the Soviets' counterblows had strong air support, but made no headway, while a DNB commentator declared German-Romanian troops had "extended their successes" of Saturday.

Both sides pictured the rest of the long front as quiet.

The Moscow communique said 29 German tanks and 24 planes were destroyed northwest and west of Iasi yesterday.

Moscow radio, quoting Ankara reports, also said the Germans had moved five infantry divisions and one motorized division to Bulgaria, placing them chiefly along the Black Sea coast.

"A large part of Bulgaria's 16 mobilized divisions is now gathered in northern Bulgaria or on the Romanian border," it added.

Johnston Talks Turkey to Reds

Moscow, June 4 (AP).—Eric Johnston, president of the Chamber of Commerce of the United States, in an address to Soviet trade leaders yesterday (released today) urged that Russians and Americans reconcile themselves to different economic systems, and carry on a flourishing business.

The speech, probably the frankest and most provocative ever made in Moscow by a private individual, was at a luncheon given by Anastas I. Mikoyan, Soviet Trade Commissar, and issued by Jonston today at a press conference.

NIGHT

Johnston prefaced his speech by warning the Russians, "I am going to tell you direct, harsh business facts."

"In economic ideology, the practice of my country is different from yours," he said. "You are state-minded, collective-minded. We are most private-minded, most individual-minded and gentlemen, make no mistake, we are determined to remain so or even to become more so."

He told the Russians to "realize how completely our American Communists have been wasting their time."

In a recent poll, he said, most organized workers answering a question as to their social class replied "middle class."

"So perhaps in a way you cannot blame our American Communists for their failure," he said. "If I may put it frankly, how can they make a proletarian revolution among workers who do not even know they are proletarians?"

Pravda Accuses Poles At Buffalo of Fascism

By The Associated Press.

MOSCOW, June 4.—The recent Polish-American Congress at Buffalo, N. Y., was denounced today by Pravda, Communist party newspaper, as "a comedy of Polish Fascists."

The article said the Congress had urged President Roosevelt to support the claims of the Polish government in London, but "screams of a buffoon Congress cannot halt the Polish people in their desire for active military leadership."

"It is hopeless to expect Hitler's Polish agency to correct itself," the article added.

New York, June 4 (AP).—The Stockholm newspaper Aftonbladet, in an article reported today by the Office of War Information, said that the staff of the Bulgarian Legation in Moscow had been recalled and that "the new Bulgarian government is taking the initiative in severing relations with the Soviets."

TROOPS SEEKING TITO SUFFER HEAVY LOSS

Trapped and Many Slain, Says Report of Partisans

LONDON, June 4 (AP)—The Free Yugoslav radio in the first headquarters account of a German attempt to capture Marshal Tito and his headquarters, said today the Nazi air-borne troops were surrounded in Drvar and half of them annihilated.

The Free Yugoslav radio said the Germans had counted on the element of surprise but never were able to move or concentrate troops in Yugoslavia without Partisan headquarters being "in the picture."

[A delayed dispatch from Bari, Italy, yesterday, quoted Partisans as having said that Marshal Erwin Rommel himself had directed the capture by parachutists on May 25 of Marshal Tito's headquarters at Drvar but failed to catch the Partisan leader.]

Marshal Tito's headquarters communique said the Germans were continuing their offensive in western Bosnia with strong motorized units operating under an air cover and were suffering "appreciable losses."

JUN 3 1944

Partisan units on other fronts continued to attack enemy garrisons, columns and lines of communication, the war bulletin said.

DE GAULLE EXPECTED TO VISIT CHURCHILL

WASHINGTON, June 2—(AP) Gen. Charles De Gaulle is expected here to carry through his acceptance of Prime Minister Churchill's invitation to visit London even though no top American official from Washington joins in.

Both United States and French diplomatic officials said today that De Gaulle unquestionably would make the trip despite protests from his Algiers headquarters that he might refuse to go unless assured of American representation.

The general, it was learned, accepted the invitation just as Mr. Churchill extended it — without strings as to United States participation.

ALLIES OPTIMISTIC ON BURMA BATTLES

Review of Campaign Says Foe Must Already See Dangers as Offensive Grows

JUN 6 1944

NIGHT

SOUTHEAST ASIA COMMAND HEADQUARTERS, Kandy, Ceylon, June 4 (AP)—Results thus far of the Allied Indo-Burma campaigns "can be regarded with satisfaction, though not with complacence," an official headquarters summary said today.

Expressing guarded optimism, the review reported that the arrival of the monsoon rains brought little slackening of aerial and ground operations, and added:

"To the Japanese, Burma shows signs which must appear ominous of becoming a dangerous running sore, draining away men and supplies, whose reinforcement and replacement will grow more costly and difficult as Allied pressure increases."

All operations, including those in Arakan, and those of Lieut. Gen. Joseph W. Stilwell's Americans, Chinese and Chindits, and the Japanese thrust in Assam, "have proved that now in equipment, training, toughness and endurance the troops of the United Nations are more than a match for the Japanese," the summary declared.

"Overwhelming air superiority all over the theatre, and the absence of any challenge at sea, in the Bay of Bengal and the Indian Ocean, have been powerful factors in our favor against the Japanese."

Japanese Increase Threat to Changsha; Drive Advances 6 Miles in Encircling Move

MOOSA

DAY

CHUNGKING, China, June 4 (AP)—Japanese troops have stabbed six miles beyond Sinshih toward Changsha, while another column in the many-sided Hunan Province offensive has attempted an assault toward Liuyang to the east for an encircling movement against Changsha, the major objective, a Chinese communiqué announced tonight.

Liuyang is thirty miles east of Changsha and its possession would enable the invaders to attack the city directly from the east over flat country. The column struck southward yesterday from the Pingkiang area toward Liuyang and tried to cross the hilly region twenty miles to the northeast, but were stopped there by the Chinese, the communiqué said. Fighting was in progress there.

At the same time heavy fighting raged south of the Milo River along a thirty-mile front as enemy columns east of the Canton-Hankow railway continued to drive slowly down the route. Sharp encounters also were reported southwest of Pingkiang, where the enemy split into two columns, one for the drive on Liuyang, the other aimed directly southwest toward Changsha, fifty miles from Pingkiang. This line extended from a point six miles west of Pingkiang to twelve miles south of the town.

The new strategy placed the left wing of the invader's main body now forty miles northeast of Changsha, braced for its fourth battle of the war, field dispatches said, while directly from the north the Japanese pushed to a point within thirty-five miles of the objective.

The Japanese right wing advancing in the Hupeh-based drive into the north of Hunan Province were repulsed in an attempt to take Hanshow, twenty miles east-southeast of Changteh, 100 miles northwest of Changsha, the communiqué said.

In Honan Province, 400 miles to the north of the Hunan battle area, the Chinese war bulletin said that the enemy was being pursued northward, after recapture of Sunghsien. The city is forty-five miles southwest of Loyang, northern citadel now occupied by the Japanese. The bulletin claimed other successes in Honan counter-attacks, stating that points were retaken along the Lo and Yi Rivers, which converge southeast of Loyang to flow into the Yellow River.

Truk Hit Hard in Far-Flung Attacks—U. S. Forces Extend Hold on Bougainville

SPENCER

ALLIED HEADQUARTERS IN NEW GUINEA, Monday, June 5 (AP)—American forces on Biak Island, in the Schouten group, have started a new push on the three airdromes, their main objectives, headquarters announced today.

Two American columns were advancing slowly toward Mokmer airdrome, the nearest objective. They were proceeding along the coast and on an overlooking ridge.

Japanese snipers and mortar crews had been cleaned from the ridge, from which they had dominated the road and held up the original American advance with vicious fire since May 28.

Thirty Japanese planes were destroyed in far-flung air battles, swirling over Biak, Babo on Netherland New Guinea and Truk Atoll in the Carolines. American raiders dropped thirty tons of bombs Friday on Dublon Island, one of the main fortified points in the Truk group.

Clashes on New Guinea Coast

Patrol clashes in the Maffin Bay and Hollandia areas on Netherland New Guinea resulted in 341 more Japanese killed. More than 4,000 Japanese dead in these regions had been announced previously.

On Bougainville Island, in the northern Solomons, American forces occupied the mouth of the Jaba River without opposition Friday. This point is twelve miles southeast of Torokina where the original beachhead was made last November and about five miles south of the Tekessi River mouth, occupied by an American landing force May 27.

Both of these operations were encircling movements to isolate further some of the thousands of Japanese still resisting on Bougainville.

In the air battles, which indicated a marked resumption of Japanese fighter opposition to Allied raiders, eleven Zeros were shot down over Babo. Another nine Zeros were destroyed over Biak and ten were shot down over Truk.

Ten Planes Downed Over Truk

Thirty Japanese planes unsuccessfully attempted to break an American bomber formation over Truk, losing a third of their force, with three more probables. After bombs caused explosions and large fires on the naval center, all American planes returned safely to their Admiralty Island bases, although several were damaged.

The Biak toll resulted when twenty Japanese fighters attempted to divebomb the American beachhead at Bosnek and near-by shipping. Intercepting air patrols accounted for eight, and anti-aircraft fire shot down the ninth.

In a third major aerial crash, over Babo, American fighters tangled with twenty enemy planes. The announced total of eleven shot down was definite, with four more probables. American forces lost one.

With reports of patrol clashes in two resistance pockets on the Netherland New Guinea coast, the known Japanese dead and captured totaled 5,619. The aggregate Japanese loss in the Sarmi-Maffin area, 200 miles southeast of the Schoutens, was 1,534, after seventy-two were killed in patrol fighting.

Farther down the coast, clashes around Hollandia and Aitape resulted in an additional 269 enemy killed, bringing the total to 3,495 killed and 590 prisoners, in that area.

Many additional abandoned enemy bodies, dead of starvation and disease, have been found on the trails.

Bombers from Fleet Blast Kuriles Again

U. S. PACIFIC FLEET HEADQUARTERS, Pearl Harbor, June 4.—(AP) American bombers attacked the Kurile islands on the northern approaches to Tokyo and Truk in the central Pacific for the fifth consecutive day, Admiral Chester W. Nimitz announced today.

Three separate smashes were made before dawn Friday at the Kuriles. Two fires were started on Shumushu, northern most of the island chain. Paramushiro and Matsuwa were also hit.

Fires and explosions were started Saturday on Truk, major target in a two-way aerial offensive against the Carolines by central and south Pacific air forces. Ponape, eastern stronghold of the Carolines, was bombed Thursday from the north. Bombers from the south hit Friday at Truk, Nomoi, Puluwat and Woleai in the central and western Carolines.

Navy and Marine planes smashed at by-passed Marshall Islands Wednesday, Thursday and Friday. Naaru, phosphate island southeast of the Carolines was raided Friday.

In all attacks, Nimitz said, Japanese anticraft fire ranged from moderate to none at all.

Kurile Raids Hint Invasion

By the Associated Press

Five consecutive days of bombing attacks on the North Pacific Kurile islands by Aleutian-based American planes prompted renewed speculation yesterday on the possibility that an invasion blow toward the Japanese homeland by that route may be impending.

No one questions that in the final encirclement sure to come before Japan is conquered the Kuriles chain of stepping stones from Russian Kamchatka to the main Nipponese islands will play an important part.

But whether the current raids—against Shumushu and Paramushiro at the north, Matsuwa farther down the line, and Shimushiri nearly half way to Hokkaido—represent actual softening up ahead of landing forces is not fully apparent.

have credited submarines with destruction of 21 enemy tankers.

Adding to Japan's woes, British submarines since January have chalked up 19 successful attacks on Japanese shipping, mostly on the Burma supply route.

The total wartime "catch" in far eastern and Pacific waters of United Nations' submarines, other than American, is upward of 50 enemy vessels, including at least six warships.

Most observers believe the present rate of sinking more than one enemy ship daily reflects mounting skill and experience of U. S. Naval personnel in waging offensive underseas warfare, plus the rapid wartime growth of the submarine fleet.

While the daily average has not attained the spectacular three-ship-a-day record compiled by Axis U-boats in the battle of the Atlantic early in 1942, it has been achieved against relatively fewer targets in ocean spaces several times larger than the Atlantic.

Naval sources have credited American submarines with the destruction of 2,500,000 tons of Japanese shipping. Against this record, announced losses since Pearl Harbor have been 23 U. S. underseas craft.

American Submarines Sink 187 Jap Ships in 5 Months

NEW YORK, June 4—(AP) American submarines are hitting at least four times as hard at enemy shipping as in 1942, a study of Navy communiques indicated today.

Announcements in the past five months list 187 Japanese vessels sunk by U. S. submarines, an average monthly toll of 37.4 ships.

By contrast, the average monthly rate of destruction in 1942 was approximately nine Japanese ships and in 1943 was about 23 ships.

In the American underseas raiders' "bag" of 573 enemy ships in two and one-half years of war were 47 warships, including at least five cruisers and 20 destroyers.

The fact that since January the Japanese have lost four destroyers and a cruiser through submarine attack may indicate an attempt by Nippon to stem the American underwater threat by convoy operations.

Lending emphasis to the disabling effect of the submarine campaign on Japan's ability to supply her overseas bases, naval communiques in the past five months have credited submarines with de-

Dutch Troops in Pacific

Sydney, June 4(AP).—The first contingent of Dutch West Indies ground forces, well-equipped volunteer tank and jungle fighters trained in the Caribbean area, has reached Australia to participate in the Pacific war.

A Netherlands government statement says it is the spearhead of a force from Free Dutch territory which will join in the fight against Japan. The force comprises members of the permanent Dutch army and conscripts from the Dutch West Indies army in Surinam, Dutch Guiana, and the Caribbean island of Curacao off Venezuela.

LECTURER CALLED FRAUD

Army Says Story of Atrocities in Philippines Is 'Fabrication'

ANCHORAGE, Alaska, June 4 (AP)—The story related by Stephen O. Whitman, who lectured here on atrocities committed by the Japanese while he supposedly was a prisoner in the Philippines, was termed a "fabrication" today in an announcement from the headquarters of the army's Alaskan department. The announcement follows:

"Stephen O. Whitman, who recently appeared at several public gatherings in Anchorage, represented he was held prisoner by Japs in the Philippines and related atrocious stories about various acts committed by the Japanese on civilians, has admitted to military intelligence officers of the Alaskan Department stationed at Fairbanks that he never was in the Philippines and that the entire story of his capture by the Japs was fabrication."

ATROCITY 'WITNESS' TERMED FAKE BY ARMY

ANCHORAGE, Alaska, June 4—(AP) Stories related by Stephen O. Whitman, who lectured here on atrocities committed by the Japanese while he supposedly was a prisoner in the Philippines, were termed as "fabrication" today in an announcement from the headquarters of the army's Alaskan department.

"Stephen O. Whitman, who recently appeared at severeal public gatherings in Anchorage," the announcement said, "represented he was held prisoner by Japs in the Philippines and related atrocious stories about various acts committed by the Japanese on civilians, has admitted to military intelligence officers of the Alaskan department stationed at Fairbanks that he never was in the Philippines and that the entire story of his capture by the Japs was fabrication."

Whitman, who said he was a Baptist missionary, carried bona fide appearing credentials purportedly from high places in Washington, D. C., addressed the Rotary Club, the American Legion, the Presbyterian church and the Church of the Open Door here.

RED CROSS SPENDS OVER 42 MILLION FOR SERVICE MEN

WASHINGTON, June 4—(AP) The first full fiscal year of war sent Red Cross aid to 2,409,220 members of the armed forces and nearly quadrupled the cost of help for service personnel, their dependents, and disabled veterans, the Red Cross reported today.

The annual report, through June 30, 1943, was delayed by the great volume of operations and joint audits with the Army and Navy on shared enterprises.

Expansion of Red Cross work was emphasized by the report of $42,391,000 expended for services to men and women in the armed forces, their families and war casualties. That was an increase of 296 per cent over the $10,712,000 spent for such work in the previous year, during nearly half of which the United States was at peace.

Other indications of the heavier burden:

Aids of various kinds to 1,545,692 families of servicemen, an increase of 313 per cent from the previous fiscal year.

A rise from 291 to 734 in the daily average of communications received at headquarters for transmission between service people and anxious families.

Expansion of the armed forces service staff from 3,088 to 9,636.

A special section of the report showed more than $17,000,000 in relief supplies shipped for United Nations prisoners of war in Europe and the Far East from Jan. 1, 1941, to June 30, 1943. During that period 3,337,954 standard food packages were dispatched, of which 155,952 went to American nationals.

Recounting difficulties in getting prisoner relief supplies through the Japanese blockade to the far east, the Red Cross said it had set up cash funds through the International Red Cross, from which $215,944 had been made available to help war prisoners and internees.

Domestically, the report showed expenditures of $1,921,780.94 for relief of 119,295 persons in 178 disasters during the fiscal period.

Roosevelt Will Speak Tonight on Rome's Fall

WASHINGTON, June 4 (AP).—President Roosevelt tomorrow night will talk to the people of the United States on the fall of Rome, the White House announced tonight.

The fifteen-minute broadcast will be carried over the four major networks between 8:30 and 8:45 p. m.

Britt to Receive Medal

FAYETTEVILLE, Ark., June 4 (AP)—Capt. Maurice L. Britt, former University of Arkansas football star, came back to his alma mater today to receive the Congressional Medal of Honor.

Britt, who starred with the Detroit Lions after his college career closed, will receive the decoration at formal exercises tomorrow from Maj. Gen. Harry J. Collins, commander of the Rainbow Division.

He was flown here with his wife from Lawson General Hospital near Atlanta, where he has been receiving treatment for the loss of his right arm and other injuries. These he suffered in an engagement at Monte Rotundo, where with fifty-eight men he stopped a German assault, freed captured Americans, saved his company from annihilation and prevented the Nazis from cutting off an American battalion.

Hershey, Pa., June 3 (AP).—Secretary of State Cordell Hull arrived yesterday at the Hershey Hotel where the National Convention of Governors concluded its annual meeting earlier this week. The secretary is understood to be vacationing here.

SOCIALISTS NAME NORMAN THOMAS TO HEAD TICKET

READING, Pa., June 4—(AP) The Socialist party today unanimously selected Norman Thomas, 59-year old New York lecturer and writer, and Darlington Hoopes, 47-year-old Reading attorney and former state legislator, as its 1944 presidential and vice-presidential nominees.

It is Thomas' fifth straight nomination; the first for Hoopes. The latter replaces Maynard C. Krueger, 39, Chicago University economics teacher, who was Thomas' 1940 running mate but who refused to run this year because he is considering entering the race for Congress from the Second Illinois district.

Krueger was reelected national chairman of the party at a session of the Socialists' 24th national convention last night.

Thomas said he would carry on a vigorous campaign, centering attention on states in which the party can qualify for a place on the ballot.

In his acceptance speech, he assailed plans of the Allied leaders for the postwar peace and for conquering unemployment and called instead for "an immediate political peace offensive" through the offer of an armistice and socialization of American industry, including government war plants.

Hoopes accepted with a declaration that: "Unlike the Republican and Democratic candidates, we are not primarily office-seekers. Ours is more a crusade than a campaign.

He said fear of insecurity in this country could be banished forever "if only we plan and produce for use as we have for war," with "common good, not profit for a few," the mainspring.

Thomas was placed in nomination by Krueger,. while Mark Brown, of Reading, put Hoopes name before the convention.

"Year by year, in state after state," Thomas told the cheering delegates, "Democrats and Republicans tighten their monoply of the ballot. Even the Communists, recognizing that fact, have decided to bore from within.

"We shall offer about the only articulate and organized opposition to this old party monoply in any considerable number of states.

The campaign will be bitter. Emotions will be roused more or less along class lines. Democrats and Republicans will vie in calling each other fascists."

rol to determine the strength of a German unit facing the Americans.

Conditions were against the patrol. The weather was clear, there was almost no cover and the enemy had good observation positions.

Corporal Huff and his men chose a shallow draw as the only feasible route of approach. But the draw was mined and covered by three machine guns and a 20-millimeter gun. When the patrol was 350 yards off the guns opened fire and mortar shells were added. Huff ordered his men to take advantage of what cover existed. He went forward alone.

He crawled another seventy-five yards, under direct fire, to a point behind the first German gun. There he opened fire with his submachine gun, killing the entire crew. He then fired from a kneeling position in a deliberate effort to draw fire and learn the strength and position of the other Germans.

Four hours after the patrol set out it returned without a casualty. The information Corporal Huff brought back resulted in the killing of twenty-seven Germans, the capture of twenty-one and routing of the entire enemy unit of 125 at a cost of two American dead and one wounded.

Alvin York Region Produces Another Hero; Infantryman in Italy Wins Medal of Honor

WASHINGTON, June 4 (AP)—Corp. Paul B. Huff, whose home is the Tennessee hill country which sent Alvin York to the first World War, is the newest winner of the Congressional Medal of Honor.

The 25-year-old ex-railroad man will receive the medal at a ceremony overseas.

HE ENDED UP IN THE SOVIET UNION WITH AN OPERATION IN ONE OF THE FINEST FIELD HOSPITALS THE AMERICANS HAVE ESTABLISHED. HE IS DOING SO WELL HE WILL TAKE HIS PLACE IN THE NEXT REGULAR SCHEDULE.

THE HOSPITAL, HEADED BY LT.COL.WILLIAM M.JACKSON OF SOUTH PITTSBURG, TENN., HAS EVERYTHING A TIRED, WOUNDED OR SICK FLIER CAN NEED--INCLUDING EVEN THE SMILES OF AMERICAN NURSES.

IT INCLUDES A REST HOME IN THE COUNTRY WHERE AMERICAN AND RUSSIAN FLIERS. IF THEY WISH, MAY HUNT, FISH AND SWIM.

ALIED HEADQUARTERS, NAPLES, JUNE 4-(AP)-FIFTH ARMY TROOPS CAPTURED ANCIENT ROME TONIGHT, SMASHING GERMAN RESISTANCE IN THE HEART OF THE ETERNAL CITY AND SWEEPING ON NORTHWARD IN PURSUIT OF BATTERED GERMAN FORCES WHICH HAD DYNAMITED SOME INSTALLATIONS.

THE MOPUP OF THE CENTER OF ROME--THE FIRST AXIS EUROPEAN CAPITAL TO FALL TO ALLIED TROOPS--WAS COMPLETED AT 9:15 P.M. (3:15 P.M., EASTERN WAR TIME) BY AMERICANS AND CANADIANS UNDER LT.GEN.MARK W.CLARK.

HOW MUCH OF THE CITY WAS RAZED BY THE BEATEN GERMAN GARRISON WAS NOT IMMEDIATELY LEARNED, BUT MOST OF THE BITTER ALL-DAY FIGHTING OCCURRED IN THE SUBURBAN AREAS.

A171

THE LAST GERMAN REARGUARD UNIT WAS CRUSHED BY ALLIED GUNNERS IN FRONT OF THE BANK OF ITALY, ALMOST WITHIN THE SHADOW OF TRAJAN'S COLUMN.

A SMOKE PALL HUNG OVER PARTS OF THE CITY WHERE THE GERMANS BEGAN THEIR DEMOLITIONS SHORTLY AFTER 3:30 P.M. (THE BBC IN A BROADCAST RECORDED BY NBC SAID THIS INDICATED THE GERMANS HAD "PROBABLY DESTROYED THE BRIDGES OVER THE TIBER" RIVER, WHICH RUNS SOUTHWARD THROUGH THE CITY AND THEN SOUTHWEST TO THE TYRRHENIAN SEA. ACROSS THE TIBER LIES VATICAN CITY).

NORTH OF THE CITY ALLIED WARPLANES SHOT UP FLEEING GERMAN TRANSPORTS, WRECKING OR DAMAGING AT LEAST 600MOTOR VEHICLES ALONG THE CLOGGED RETREAT ROADS. THESE "EXCELLENT TARGETS" WERE ENCOUNTERED AS FAR AS LAKE BOLSENA, 50 MILES ABOVE ROME, AN INDICATION THAT THE NEXT MAIN GERMAN DEFENSE LINE MAY BE IN THAT AREA.

EAST OF ROME THE GERMANS HAD WITHDRAWN INTO THE SAVINE MOUNTAINS NORTHEAST OF VALMONTONE IN THE AREA ABOVE PALESTRINA, ABOUT 25 MILES EAST-SOUTHEAST OF ROME. THE ALLIED EIGHTH ARMY WAS ATTACKING IN THAT SECTOR.

(AFTER FRONT DISPATCHES HAD DISCLOSED THE ALLIED LIBERATION OF ROME, THE GERMAN HIGH COMMAND UNDER ADOLF HITLER ISSUED A BULLETIN SAYING THE GERMANS HAD WITHDRAWN NORTHWEST OF THE CITY--THAT IS ACROSS THE TIBER RIVER.

(ANOTHER BERLIN COMMUNIQUE SAID THE AXIS COMMANDER, FIELD MARSHAL GEN.ALBERT KESSELRING, AT 11 P.M. SATURDAY NIGHT HAD SUBMITTED TO VATICAN CITY FOR TRANSMISSION TO THE ALLIED COMMAND A SERIES OF PROPOSALS WHEREBY ROME WOULD BE MADE AN "OPEN CITY."

(A MADRID DISPATCH TO THE LONDON DAILY MAIL SAID POPE PIUS XII HAD HELD URGENT CONSULTATIONS SUNDAY WITH THE PAPAL SECRETARY OF STATE, LUIGI CARDINAL MAGLIONE, AND HAD PRAYED IN HIS PRIVATE CHAPEL. VATICAN CITY ITSELF WAS REPORTED SEALED OFF FROM ROME BEHIND A DOUBLED SWISS GUARD.

(THE POPE DECLARED IN A SPEECH LAST FRIDAY THAT "WHOEVER WOULD DARE LIFT A HAND AGAINST ROME WOULD BE GUILTY OF MATRICIDE." THE POPE AND HIS ADMINISTRATIVE SEAT OF THE ROMAN CATHOLIC CHURCH HAD BEEN RINGED BY GERMAN TROOPS EVER SINCE THE ALLIED OFFENSIVE GOT UNDER WAY IN SOUTHERN ITALY IN SEPTEMBER, 1943).

FRONT DISPATCHES FROM EDWARD KENNEDY AND DANIEL DE LUCE, ASSOCIATED PRESS CORRESPONDENTS WHO ENTERED ROME WITH THE ALLIED TROOPS, SAID THE FINAL DRIVE FROM THE SUBURBS BEGAN AFTER GENERAL CLARK APPEARED IN THE FIGHTING AREA, WHERE BULLETS WHIZZED ABOUT HIS HEAD.

THE GERMANS HAD THROWN UP ROAD BLOCKS OF WRECKED VEHICLES AND OTHER MATERIAL, AND SHELLED IMPORTANT ROAD INTERSECTIONS WITH 88-MM SELF-PROPELLED GUNS. THIS SLOWED THE ALLIED DRIVE BY TROOPS OF THE OLD ANZIO BEACHHEAD, AND THE FIGHTING CONTINUED TO THE EDGE OF THE ANCIENT FORUM IN THE CENTER OF ROME.

(GERMAN TROOPS SOUTHWEST OF ROME BETWEEN THE CITY AND THE MEDITERRANEAN APPARENTLY HAD WITHDRAWN ACROSS THE TIBER RIVER TO AVOID ENCIRCLEMENT. BERLIN BROADCASTS SAID THEY HAD BEEN ORDERED TO FALL BACK TO THE TIBER IN THEIR FIGHTING RETREAT).

THE ALLIES WERE CAPTURING PRISONERS AT A 1,000-A-DAY CLIP, AND THE TOTAL NOW IS 21,000 OR MORE. THE EXTENT OF THE GERMAN KILLED AND WOUNDED HAS NOT BEEN GIVEN BY THE ALLIED COMMAND.

ABANDONED TANKS, GUNS, AMMUNITION AND OTHER STORES OF GERMAN EQUIPMENT IS BEING SWEPT UP BY THE HARD-DRIVING ALLIED TROOPS.

ABANDONED TANKS, GUNS, AMMUNITION AND OTHER STORES OF GERMAN EQUIPMENT IS BEING SWEPT UP BY THE HARD-DRIVING ALLIED TROOPS.

A FRONT DISPATCH FROM DE LUCE SAID U.S. TANK TROOPS LED BY A KANSAN, A GEORGIAN, AND A CALIFORNIAN, SPEARHEADED THE DRIVE INTO THE PRIZE CITY ALONG THE VIA CASILINA FROM THE FALLEN FORTRESS TOWN OF VALMONTONE, 20 MILES SOUTHEAST OF ROME.

FIERCE KNOTS OF GERMAN REARGUARDS FOUGHT THEM ALL THE WAY. AT EVERY OBSTACLE THE INFANTRYMEN WOULD DEPLOY AROUND THE NESTS WHILE TANK GUNNERS TURNED THEIR HEAVY WEAPONS ON THE ENEMY.

ONCE INSIDE THE TOWN THE ALLIES SPED THROUGH THE HEART OF ROME'S GOVERNMENTAL DISTRICT WHERE THE NOW FALLEN MUSSOLINI ON JUNE 10, 1940, ISSUED HIS HISTORIC DECLARATION OF WAR AGAINST A FRANCE THEN COLLAPSING UNDER THE GERMAN INVASION.

THE SMASH INTO THE ANCIENT CAPITAL OF THE CAESARS CAME 24 DAYS AFTER THE ALLIES HAD UNLEASHED A POWERFUL COMBINED OFFENSIVE OF THE FIFTH AND EIGHT ARMIES, AND 12 DAYS AFTER FIFTH ARMY MEN ON THE ANZIO BEACHHEAD HAD GONE INTO THEIR COORDINATED ACTION.

SINCE THE INVASION OF ITALY BEGAN SEPT. 3, 1943, THE ALLIED ARMIES HAVE DRIVEN AHEAD 350 MILES THROUGH FORMIDABLE MOUNTAINS OF SOUTHERN ITALY--AND NOW ARE HALF-WAY ALONG THE PENINSULA WHICH LEADS TO FRANCE AND GERMANY.

(A CONTINUING SERIES OF HILLS AND MOUNTAINS WILL BE ENCOUNTERED ALONG THE SPINE OF THE PENINSULA, BUT FOR MORE THAN 150 MILES ALONG THE TYRRHENIAN COAST ABOVE ROME THERE ARE PLAINS ON WHICH THE ALLIES

CAN BRING THEIR HEAVY ARMORED FORCES INTO THE OPEN. THESE COASTAL AREAS, AS FAR NORTH AS LIVERNO AND LA SPEZIA, IT IS EXPECTED, WILL BE HARD FOR THE GERMANS TO DEFEND.

(THE FALL OF ROME WILL NOT NECESSARILY MEAN A GENERAL GERMAN RETIREMENT ALONG THE ADRIATIC. THE GERMANS STILL HOLD A STRONG SERIES OF POSITIONS IN THE SECTOR BELOW PESCARA, 100 MILES NORTHEAST OF ROME ON THE ADRIATIC. THE PRESENT ALLIED OFFENSIVE THUS FAR HAS NOT EXTENDED TO THE MOUNTAINOUS CENTER OF THE ITALIAN PENINSULA OR THE ADRIATIC SIDE.)

HEADQUARTERS SAID THERE STILL WAS BRISTLING GERMAN RESISTANCE IN THE ALBAN HILLS. ONE GERMAN BATTALION LOST 120 MEN KILLED AND 60 CAPTURED IN ONE FIERCE ENGAGEMENT IN THAT MOUNTAIN MASS.

POUNDING NORTH OF VALMONTONE ON THE VIA CASILINA, OTHER DOUGHBOYS SEIZED CAVE ON A ROAD PARALLELING THAT HIGHWAY. THIS CLOSED A "BACK DOOR" FOR THE GERMANS, AND WON A HILLSIDE REPORTED AS A SITE OF GREAT AMMUNITION AND GASOLINE DUMPS.

THE GERMANS STILL WERE SUFFERING HUGE LOSSES OF MEN AND EQUIPMENT, AND FOR THE SECOND DAY 1,000 PRISONERS WERE TAKEN, SWELLING THE FIFTH ARMY TOTAL ALONE TO 15,000 IN THE 24 DAYS OF THE CAMPAIGN. BOTH ARMIES TOGETHER HAVE TAKEN MORE THAN 20,000.

IT WAS THE FIRST MEETING BETWEEN BEACHHEAD TROOPS AND THE FRENCH CORPS AND IT TOOK PLACE NEARER TO ROME THAN TO ANZIO.

A FAMOUS UNIT OF NORTH AMERICAN RAIDERS WHICH CROSSED THE LEPINI MOUNTAINS AND SWOOPED INTO COLLEFERRO (THE IRON HILL) AT NOON GRABBED MORE THAN 300 GERMAN REAR GUARDS.

TWO HOURS LATER A JOLLY FRENCH COLONEL ARRIVED AND FIGURATIVELY RECEIVED THE KEYS TO THE TOWN THAT ONCE BOASTED 29,000 POPULATION BUT NOW HAS 5,000.

CAPT.GEORGE N.MCCALL, OF SALT LAKE CITY,UTAH, WHO HELPED ROUND UP SCORES OF GERMANS HIDING IN THE TUNNELS, REPORTED AN ENEMY ARMORED CAR CARRYING AN ADDING MACHINE AND HEADQUARTERS EQUIPMENT UNWITTINGLY ENTERED THE TOWN AFTER NOONDAY AND PROMPTLY WAS CAPTURED FOR AMERICAN USE.

THE GERMANS WAITED FOR THE MOMENT OF FRENCH-AMERICAN FRATERNIZATION TO BEGIN A BARRAGE WHICH STILL IS CONTINUING.

LT.HENRY L.SMITHERS, 74 DURAND ROAD, MAPLEWOOD,N.J., DEPLOYED HIS MOBILE GUNS AROUND THE TOWN AND PUT UP A COUNTER-FIRE.

SGT.LEWIS HERRIM, 936 EAST 29TH ST., BROOKLYN,N.Y., WHO IS A HEADQUARTERS CLERK BY TRADE AND A PHOTOGRAPHER BY HOBBY, HAD THE NARROWEST ESCAPE OF THE DAY. HE WAS TAKING PICTURES OF HIS FRENCH ALLIES WHEN A SHELL KILLED SEVEN OF THEM.

THERE WAS NO MENTION IN THE COMMUNIQUE OF THE SITUATION DIRECTLY WEST OF THE RAILWAY, WHERE THE CHINESE WERE LAST REPORTED TO HAVE HALTED THE INVADER AT KWEIYI, ABOUT 40 MILES NORTH OF CHANGSHA.

TONIGHT THE CHINESE HIGH COMMAND, IN A SPECIAL COMMUNIQUE, ANNOUNCED RECAPTURE OF ANSIANG, ON THE NORTHWESTERN SHORE OF TUNGTING LAKE AND 55 MILES WEST OF YOCHOW, JAPANESE BASE IN NORTHERN HUNAN. AFTER ANNIHILATING MORE THAN HALF THE JAPANESE GARRISON THE CHINESE TOOK FULL POSSESSION OF THE CITY AND CAPTURED LARGE QUANTITIES OF WAR MATERIALS, THE ANNOUNCEMENT SAID. THE REMAINING JAPANESE WERE REPORTED TO HAVE FLED WESTWARD. EARLIER THE CHINESE REPORTED THEY HAD DEFEATED THE ENEMY ADVANCING WESTWARD TOWARD CHANGTEH FROM ANSIANG.

THESE, HOWEVER, APPEARED TO BE RELATIVELY MINOR SUCCESSES FOR THE DEFENDERS, UNLIKELY TO INFLUENCE THE MAIN BATTLE.

ON THE SALWEEN RIVER FRONT IN YUNNAN PROVINCE, THE CHINESE BULLETIN SAID A MOUNTAIN CREST 18 MILES NORTHEAST OF THE JAPANESE BASE OF TENGCHUNG HAS BEEN CAPTURED, AND THAT AN ENEMY STRONG POINT 25 MILES NORTHEAST OF THE BASE WAS SURROUNDED.

A LATER BULLETIN SAID CHINESE FORCES HAD CROSSED THE SHWELI RIVER AND PUSHED TO WITHIN 12 MILES OF TENGCHUNG, CUTTING THE MAIN ENEMY SUPPLY ARTERY TO THE NORTH.

ADVANCED ALLIED HEADQUARTERS, NEW GUINEA, MONDAY, JUNE 5-
-(AP)-AMERICAN TGOOPS, PUSHING IN TWO COLUMNS, ARE ADVANCING SLOWLY TOWARD MOKMER AIRDROME ON BIAK ISLAND, IN FACE OF INTENSE JAPANESE MORTAR, MACHINE GUN AND RIFLE FIRE, HEADQUARTERS REPORTED TODAY.

THE AIR WAR SIMULTANEOUSLY FLARED ANEW IN FARFLUNG BATTLE ZONES, WITH THE JAPANESE OFFERING INTENSIFIED RESISTANCE AND AMERICANS BAGGING THEIR BIGGEST TOLL OF PLANES IN SOME TIME. IN BATTLES INVOLVING 70 JAPANESE PLANES, 30 WERE SHOT DOWN AND SEVERAL DESTROYED ON THE GROUND, TOGETHER WITH NINE MORE PROBABLES. THE AMERICANS LOST ONE PLANE.

THE POSITION OF FORWARD AMERICAN COLUMNS ON BIAK WAS INDEFINITE BUT THE LATEST AVAILABLE REPORTS PLACED THEM WITHIN TWO AND ONE-HALF MILES OF MOKMER, FIRST OF THREE AIRDROMES ON THIS MAIN ISLAND IN THE SCHOUTEN GROUP, OFF THE NORTH DUTCH NEW GUINEA COAST.

(THAT REPORT GIVES EVIDENCE THE AMERICAN WITHDRAWAL WAS DEEPER THAN OFFICIAL REPORTS INDICATED, AFTER THE FIRST THRUST WAS REPELLED BY INTENSE JAPANESE FIRE BEGINNING MAY 28. THE AMERICANS WERE WITHIN 1,000 YARDS OF MOKMER WHEN A SERIES OF JAPANESE COUNTER ATTACKS BEGAN.)

THE NEW ADVANCE BY REINFORCED YANKS BEGAN FRIDAY MORNING, AFTER SMALL ISOLATED POCKETS OF JAPANESE WERE CLEARED FROM THE MAIN COLUMNS' FLANKS. PROGRESS HAD BEEN HALTED FOR NEARLY A WEEK, WHILE WEARY INFANTRYMEN MOPPED UP THESE SNIPER AND MORTAR CREW NESTS WHICH DOMINATED THE MAIN ROAD FROM STRATEGICALLY VALUABLE RIDGES.

A SPOKESMAN SAID THE ROUTE ALONG THESE RIDGES WAS "INCREDIBLY DIFFICULT."

PATROL CLASHES IN THE MAFFIN BAY AND HOLLANDIA AREAS SOUTHEAST OF THE SCHOUTENS RESULTED ON 341 MORE JAPANESE KILLED.

TWO OTHER MAJOR POSSIBILITIES APPEAR IN EXPLANATION OF THE INTENSIFIED NORTH PACIFIC AIR ACTION:

1. THE ASSAULTS MAY MEAN ONLY THAT THE AIR FORCES BASED IN THE ALEUTIANS ARE TAKING ADVANTAGE OF A BREAK IN THE ORDINARILY BAD WEATHER OF THE NORTH PACIFIC TO HARASS THE ENEMY BASES SET UP AS PART OF JAPAN'S DREAM OF MOVING TO NORTH AMERICA ALONG THE NORTHERN ROUTE.

2. THE ATTACKS MAY BE PART OF THE BROAD GENERAL CAMPAIGN TO FORCE THE JAPANESE BACK FROM THEIR BASES THROUGHOUT THE PACIFIC.

IT COULD BE THAT ANY ACTION AGAINST THE KURILES WILL BE COORDINATED WITH A DRIVE TO CUT DEEPER INTO ENEMY-HELD TERRITORY IN THE SOUTH PACIFIC, POSSIBLY WITH AN INVASION OF HALMAHERA, JUST SOUTH OF THE PHILIPPINES, A POINT FROM WHICH CAMPAIGNS COULD BE LAUNCHED NOT ONLY TO LIBERATE THE PHILIPPINES, BUT TO CUT OFF JAPAN FROM CONQUERED OIL FIELDS IN THE NETHERLAND INDIES.

SUPREME HEADQUARTERS, ALLIED EXPEDITIONARY FORCE, Tuesday, June 6.—American, British and Canadian troops landed in northern France this morning, launching the greatest overseas military operation in history with word from their supreme commander, General Dwight D. Eisenhower, that "we will accept nothing except full victory" over the German masters of the Continent.

JUN 6 1944

Text of the communique:

"Under the command of General Eisenhower Allied naval forces, supported by strong air forces, began landing Allied armies this morning on the northern coast of France."

The Germans said the landings extended between Le Havre and Cherbourg along the south side of the Bay of the Seine and along the northern Normandy coast.

Parachute troops descended in Normandy, Berlin said.

First Told by Berlin

Berlin first announced the landings in a series of flashes that began about 6:30 a. m. (2:30 a. m. Eastern War-Time).

The Allied communique was read over a trans-Atlantic hookup direct from General Eisenhower's headquarters at 3:32 E. W. T., designated "Communique No. 1."

A second announcement by S.H.A.E.F. said that "it is announced that General Sir Bernard L. Montgomery is in command of the army group carrying out the assault. This army group includes British, Canadian and United States forces."

The Allied bulletin did not say exactly where the invasion was taking place, but Berlin earlier gave these details:

Allied naval forcs, including heavy warships, are shelling Le Havre. "It is a terriffic bombardment," Berlin said.

Other Allied units were streaming ashore into Normandy from landing barges.

Eisenhower's Order

[General Eisenhower, in his first order of the day, as monitored by N. B. C., in New York, read as follows

"You are about to embark on a great crusade.

"The eyes of the world are upon you and the hopes and prayers of all liberty loving peoples go with you.

"You go with superior arms, security from the air, and incontestable right on your side.

"The enemy will fight hard and well. He will fight savagely in this year of 1944. You have air superiority, fine weapons.

JUN 7 1944

Then followed a promise of victory and the order, read to all the troops by their commanding officers as they embarked, concluded as follows:

"We will be victorious. Good luck, and may the blessings of God go with you."

Berlin said the "center of gravity" of the fierce fighting was at Caen, thirty miles southwest of Le Harve and sixty-five miles southeast of Cherbourg.

Caen is ten miles inland from the sea, at the base of the seventy-five-mile wide

Nazis Report 'Invasion On,' Say Troops Attack Le Havre

JUN 7 1944

LONDON, Tuesday, June 6—(AP) The German news agency Transocean reported in a broadcast early today that Allied troops had begun landing near Le Havre at the mouth of the Seine river in France and termed this blow the beginning of "invasion operations."

Allied parachute troops also dropped "on the northern tip of the Normandy peninsula," the broadcast said.

NIGHT

There was no immediate Allied confirmation.

Allied naval forces also began shelling the Le Havre area, 80 miles across the channel from the British coast, the Germans said.

German shock troops went into action promptly, and Nazi naval forces also engaged enemy landing craft off the coast, Berlin said.

"The long expected Anglo-American invasion appears to have begun," said the German broadcast.

"It is believed that these paratroops," said the German broadcast, "have been given the task of capturing airfields in order to facilitate the landing of further paratroops.

"The harbor of Le Havre is at the moment being bombarded.

"German naval forces have engaged enemy landing craft off the coast," transocean continued.

Le Havre, one of the great French ports on the Atlantic, is only 100 miles northwest of Paris on the main rail line leading from the French capital through Rouen.

A crippled German air force has been held for use against just such a contingency as Transocean has said now is occurring.

The Transocean broadcast which told of the landing near the mouth of the Eeine, added:

"Early this (Tuesday) morning numerous landing craft and light warships were observed in the area between the mouth of the Seine and the eastern coast of Normandy.

"At the same time paratroops were dropped from numerous aircraft on the northern tip of the Normandy peninsula.

"It is believed that these paratroops have been given the task of capturing airfields in order to facilitate the landing of further paratroops.

"The harbor of Le Havre is at the moment being bombarded.

"German naval forces have engaged enemy landing craft off the coast.

(A half hour after the German broadcast Allied headquarters had failed to confirm the German report.

(The War department in Washington said it had no information on any invasion).

Allied broadcasts have warned for months past that the Germans might launch a false announcement of Allied invasion operations in an effort to bring patriot French forces out into the open for annihilation.

There also was the possibility that if the announcement is true, it could be only a diversion, or large-scale raid.

At 7 a. m. (1 a. m. E.W.T.) the Transocean broadcast was followed by this broadcast by DNB, official German news agency. It said:

"The invasion started in the first hours of the morning of June 6 with parachute troops landing in the mouth of the Seine area (Le Havre).

The enemy broadcasts recorded by the Associated Press were prefaced and ended with the line "special bulletin."

Normandy peninsula.

Heavy fighting also was reported between Caen and Trouville.

One of Berlin's first claims was that the first British parachute division was badly mauled.

No other Allied commanders were announced, for the thousands of battle-trained Allied troops, although Lieut. Gen. Omar Bradley has been in command of American ground forces in England for several months.

1944

Bradley participated in the Tunisian victory.

Thousands of battle-trained American, British and Canadian troops hurled themselves at Hitler's western defenses after months of preparation.

Huge troopship armadas slipped out of English ports in the darkness and sped toward Europe where four years ago almost to the day Britain brought back the last battle-worn defenders of Dunkerque.

The Germans also declared that Calais and Dunkerque, immediately across the English Channel from Britain, were under heavy air attack.

The German radio gave the first reports of the invasion while correspondents were hurriedly summoned from bed to supreme press headquarters and locked in a press conference room until the communique was released several hours after the landings were made.

It was made known at Shaef that the supreme command felt it necessary to yield the initiative in the war of words to the Germans in order to retain the initiative on land and keep the German high command in the dark as long as possible.

The great Allied armadas dwarfed anything yet seen on the sea.

Berlin said that masses of Allied parachute troops bailed out over Normandy, trying to seize airfields.

[An invasion armada covering sixty-four square miles of sea was described by Herbert Clark in a broadcast from the flagship of the invasion fleet beamed to the United States, heard by the National Broadcasting Company.

[Clark said: "I can see twenty-three square miles of invasion boats from where I stand on the deck of the flagship of the Allied invasion fleet. If you double that figure you will approximate the size of the invasion fleet now bearing down on the enemy coastline."]

Just before taking off in the darkness the paratroops were wished Godspeed by the lanky Kansas supreme commander, General Eisenhower.

He was accompanied by several other of his commanders and his face was tense but confident as he strode down the long lines of fighting men.

All night long London and England resounded to the roar of thousands of airplanes, some carrying bombs, some carrying men. Returning R. A. F. bombers met big fleets of flying fortresses on their way out.

The forces thrown into operation were by far the greatest ever used in an amphibious operation. They had to be. An estimated millon German troops waited in their fortifications for the great onslaught under crack Nazi field marshals, Runstedt and Rommel.

It was reported earlier this week that Adolf Hitler himself had a special train ready to rush him to France to take over personal command as he did on the east front.

Despite these reports Allied military men expected Rommel to be the main tactician on German defense but on the Allied side were the team of Eisenhower and Montgomery—the men who chased Rommel from Africa.

Although amphibious attacks are the most difficult in war, a quiet feeling of confidence characterized the Allied generals.

Just what element of surprise, if any, the landing troops achieved was not immediately announced by supreme headquarters. There was no chance to hide the great convoys with only about five hours darkness on the Channel.

Nazis Report Invasion

By The Associated Press

LONDON, Tuesday, June 6.—Three German news agencies tonight flashed word to the world that an Allied invasion of western France had begun with Allied parachute troops spilling out of the dawn skies over the Normandy Peninsula and sea-borne forces landing in the Le Havre area.

An hour and a half after the first German bulletin there was no confirmation from General Eisenhower's Supreme Headquarters.

The Germans also said that Allied warships were furiously bombarding the big German-held French port of Le Havre at the mouth of the Seine River, 100 miles west of Paris.

[Shortly before 7 a. m. (BDST) (1 a. m. EWT) the BBC broadcast Allied High Command urgent instructions to Holland advising all people living within thirty-five kilometers (about twenty-two miles) of the coast to leave their homes immediately and also keep off roads, railways and bridges.]

[A B. B. C. broadcast recorded this morning in New York by the Blue Network warned residents of France that a new phase of the air war against the Continent had begun, and told them to stand by for further instructions that would be dropped by leaflet.]

German shock troops also were hurled against Allied troops rushing ashore from landing barges, the broadcasts said.

Le Havre lies eighty miles across the Channel from the British coast.

The broadcast was recorded shortly after 6:30 a. m. [12:30 a. m. Eastern war time].

Report Air Troops First

The German agency said the Allied "invasion operations" began with the landing of air-borne troops in the area of the mouth of the Seine River.

The Seine River empties into the Atlantic at Le Havre after winding northwestward through France from the capital at Paris.

The Germans have been predicting that the Allies would strike as soon as the Allied campaign in Italy showed good progress—as it has done with the capture of Rome.

Le Havre is one of the most important ports in France. It has great dock areas which would be suitable for the Allied invasion, once they were seized.

High chalk cliffs lie north of the town.

NIGHT

This is the "year of decision" which General Dwight D. Eisenhower, Allied supreme invasion commander, has set for the defeat of Germany.

With Allied Armies rolling forward above Rome in Italy, and the Red Army massed with its might on the plains of Boland, the Germans have been expecting an imminent invasion by upward of 500,000 Allied troops.

These troops have been poised for months in England for just such a blow.

The world's greatest aerial bombardment has been rolling for months, blasting key communication lines leading to the coast, blowing up bridges, shattering locomotives, and keeping the Nazis guessing where the blow would fall.

Nazi strength is formidable in western France—where Berlin has said the main blow would come this summer.

It has been estimated at forty to fifty divisions—from 600,000 to 750,000 men, and other powerful forces are held in rear reservoirs for ready shuttling to the coast.

The Allies have massed airborne troops, of which the German broadcast spoke, in impressive numbers.

There are parachutists, glider-borne troops and regular airborne infantrymen.

It has been expected that parachutists would spearhead the main attack, landing inland to dynamite bridges and obstruct the rush of Nazi reinforcements.

"New Phase Has Started"

LONDON, June 6 (Tuesday) (AP).—A spokesman for Gen. Dwight D. Eisenhower, in a London broadcast, told the people living on Europe's invasion coast today that "a new phase of the Allied air offensive has started" and warned them to move inland to a depth of 35 kilometers (about 22 miles). In a special broadcast over the B. B. C., directed to France and other coastal countries, the spokesman said:

"A new phase of the air offensive has started. It will affect the entire coastal zone situated not less than 35 kilometers inland from the French coast. People will be advised by special announcements dropped from Allied planes."

Sertorius Comments

LONDON, June 6 (Tuesday) (AP)—The German news agency DNB commentator, Captain Ludwig Sertorius, declared in a broadcast early today that the "great contest between the Reich and the Anglo-Americans has begun."

"The Allied landing in the west today has put the German armed forces in the mood which they express with a laconic 'they are coming'.

"At the present moment when the Allied invasion of western Europe still is in its very first beginning nothing can be said yet about the tactical and operational developments.

"We can only stress the single-mindedness with which the German Wehrmacht is facing the enemy's onslaught, for in war ethical values are at least as important as the number of soldiers and the quantity of their equipment."

On a 75-Mile Front

LONDON, June 6 (Tuesday) (AP)—The Berlin radio said today that "Combined British-American landing operations against the western coast of Europe from the sea and air are stretching over the entire area between Cherbourg and Le Havre," a distance of seventy-five miles.

The broadcast declared that grand scale amphibious operations are under way on a broad front between the mouth of the Seine and the estuary of the River Vire.

"A large number of Allied landing boats of various types and light Allied naval forces in considerable strength are taking part," Berlin added.

"Six heavy Allied warships and twenty destroyers are off the mouth of the Seine."

Allies Spent 4 Years Preparing For Assault on Hitler's Europe

Plans Were Begun Soon After Britain's Army Was Saved From Destruction at Dunkerque; American Entry Gave War Speeded Pace

JUN 1 1944

By The Associated Press

The Allied invasion of Europe, largest and most daring such undertaking in the history of warfare by any standards, is the result of nearly four years of careful methodical preparation.

Hardly had Britain's Army in France been snatched from seemingly certain destruction at Dunkerque that plans for the eventual return were being laid.

For the time being Britain had to content herself with the all-out defense of her home islands against the German aerial blitzkrieg. Mid-September, 1940, was the high point of that battle. Air attacks continued, but it was from that period that the Germans themselves realized their aerial losses were greater than the results warranted.

It was in that time, too, that some sort of German invasion of Britain was nipped off. Stories trickling out months and even years afterward told how hundreds of German invasion barges had been caught and sunk by the R. A. F. Officially, both Britain and Germany kept mum, but it was obvious that a hastily-prepared invasion program had failed. It served as a warning to Britain that spur-of-the-moment invasion could not succeed.

Britain proceeded slowly.

Commandos Were First Step

The Commandos were organized and for years developed their technique in a series of hit-skip raids against German-held Continent, gathering information, damaging enemy installations, keeping the Nazi garrisons at a constant state of alertness and alarm.

With American entry into the war after the Japanese attack on Pearl Harbor, Dec. 7, 1941, the pace quickened from a creep to a gallop.

In January, 1942, American troops landed in Northern Ireland. They were there for one purpose: to prepare for the ultimate invasion of Europe. Soon they extended to Britain itself, their numbers being constantly augmented.

The Americans formed their own commando-like striking force, the Rangers.

In August, 1942, combined forces, mostly Canadians, stormed ashore at Dieppe, France.

The Dieppe adventure since has been officially dismissed as a raid in force, a sort of rehearsal, in which it was not intended to remain on the Continent.

Whatever its purpose, it definitely showed the Allied command that the German defenses of western Europe were very strong, stronger perhaps than had been imagined.

In November the Americans and British invaded French North Africa. They came from Britain and the United States. Their timing was nearly perfect, their plans were neatly laid and closely followed; they worked with the French Underground. The landings succeeded brilliantly.

In Africa a green American Army got its first seasoning under fire. It learned that there, too, the Germans were cunning, stubborn opponents.

Finally, in May, 1943, the last Germans were eliminated from Africa. The Americans, the British and the Fighting French had learned to work together.

The invasion of Sicily in July, 1943, taught them still more. It was a successful surprise assault.

Sicily fell in thirty-eight days. Afterward the American chief of staff, Lieutenant General Walter B. Smith, declared that in some respects Sicily was a more difficult operation than would have been the invasion of western Europe, where he felt that the surprise element could be just as successfully exploited.

He disclosed, too, that some of the more than 3,200 vessels used in that invasion had been prepared and loaded months in advance. It was a tip-off to the long-range, careful nature of Allied staff planning.

Allied forces had worked more closely together in Sicily than anywhere previously, yet they still were separate armies, separate navies, separate air forces.

There followed the invasions of Italy, and at Salerno on Sept. 9 American-British co-operation of all arms reached a new peak. A mixed British-American Army, commanded by an American general, went onto the Salerno beaches. It was a close fight. It was won eventually only by the smooth combination of air, sea and land power.

Supporting Forces Unified

The air cover, British and American, never faltered, while strategic bombing farther inland was maintained constantly. British and American Navies put the troops ashore, kept them supplied with a constant string of ships and barges, and maintained them in precarious position by the strength of big naval rifles.

Due to the great sea and air distances from the nearest bases, it was in some ways a tougher operation than western Europe might have been, but it showed the growing perfection of Allied teamwork.

All the while, independently, yet closely related to timing, preparations continued for the invasion from Britain.

Allied leaders manfully resisted the constant calls of the thoughtless for immediate invasion and for concentration of other theaters, meanwhile permitting a constant flow of "invasion" speculation and reports that obviously gave the Germans the jitters.

German propaganda boasted of the Nazi "Festung Europa," Fortress Europe, but admitted that the invasion was a sure thing and that it might succeed in establishing its beachheads. The Germans talked much of secret weapons, tried to frighten the Allies with tales of tremendous casualties to be suffered.

Meanwhile the Atlantic battle against the submarines went on, with better and better results. Great convoys of men and munitions, food and all the weapons of war steamed regularly to Britain.

The Allied air attacks on Germany and on the French coast grew daily and weekly in power and destructiveness. Particular attention was paid to the cross-Channel area nearest Britain.

Nineteen-forty-four was openly proclaimed as the year of decision. General Dwight D. Eisenhower, appointed as supreme Allied commander, predicted the end of the war in Europe this year, if every one did his job. The date of invasion apparently had been agreed upon far in advance, possibly at the Roosevelt-Churchill-Stalin conferences in Teheran in November, 1943. Yet the tremendous secret was well kept.

Dieppe Failure Paved Way for Allied Success

Invasion Took Advantage of Lessons Learned at Great Cost in 1942 Raid

JUN 1 1944

By The Associated Press

Prior to the Allied invasion of Europe, the most ambitious such undertaking against those shores was the action at Dieppe on Aug. 19, 1942.

That operation officially has been called a "reconnaissance in force." In it Canadian and British troops and a few American Rangers landed at dawn with strong naval and air support, penetrated several miles inland and fought a series of deadly battles for more than nine hours before withdrawing.

The price was high. The Canadians, who made up the bulk of the force, announced they suffered 3,372 casualties out of an attacking force of about 5,000, with 593 men killed.

The Allies lost ninety-eight aircraft and several of the more than 200 landing craft employed.

Dieppe was not by any means a dead loss, however. The lessons learned there have been turned to good account since, and the Germans lost ninety-three planes certainly, forty-four more probably, and 148 badly damaged, plus an undertermined but high number of troop casualties.

Dippe, on the Normandy coast sixty-five miles across the rough Channel from New Haven, England, was strongly fortified. High chalk cliffs frown down on narrow, rocky beaches.

Cannon and machine guns commanded every approach.

The attackers had to scramble up wire-filled cliffside gullies under German fire in broad daylight. They got twenty-eight tanks ashore, but in several instances had to leave them, useless, on the beach.

The fine, deep harbor behind a narrow opening in the bluffs proved to be well gunned and mined.

The vital importance of surprise in amphibious operations was shown by the lack of it at Dieppe. A chance encounter with a German patrol boat gave the enemy a chance to get set.

Certainly, in subsequent amphibious operations, precautions for secrecy and surprise have been more rigid, landing craft have been improved, naval support has been strengthened, and the all-important air cover vastly thickened and extended.

Dieppe proved also to any who may have doubted it that invasion of the Continent was not an undertaking upon which the Allies could embark on the spur of the moment, for the German defenses were strong and alert.

The raid may have served another highly useful purpose in confusing the enemy, for while the Germans were still talking about Dieppe eighty days later, the Allies walked into North Africa.

Sketches of Men Leading Allies In the Invasion

Eisenhower, Texas-Born, Is Chief of Biggest Overseas Offensive in All History

By The Associated Press

History's greatest overseas invasion is lead by a quiet, methodical American soldier whose professional creed of taking big risks for big stakes is here to put to its ultimate test.

As all the world knows, he is General Dwight David Eisenhower, whose phenomenally rapid rise has been justified by his record in the successful planning and directing of the invasion and conquest of North Africa, of Sicily and the other central Mediterranean islands, and the invasion of Italy.

Aside from purely military activities, possibly his greatest success has been in getting American, British and French forces to work together as an harmonious team—an accomplishment which made him almost the inevitable choice for supreme Allied commander in the greatest gamble of all—invasion of Europe from the west.

General Eisenhower will be fifty-four years old on Oct. 14. War Department records list his birthplace as Tyler, Tex., but family accounts say it was Denison, in the same state. He was reared in Kansas, in and around Abilene, and early won the nickname of "Ugly Ike" to distinguish him from brothers "Red Ike" and "Little Ike."

Actually there is nothing ugly about him. A well built man of medium height (5 feet 10 inches), he has pale blue eyes, a few remaining strands of pale hair and a crinkly grin that combine to give him an air of friendly competence.

A 1915 graduate of West Point, he was a tank instructor in the World War, ending up as a temporary lieutenant colonel at the age of twenty-eight.

He had worked up only to the permanent rank of lieutenant colonel when he was named an acting colonel in March, 1941. Six months later he was named a brigadier general, six months after that a major general, four months later a lieutenant general, and finally, in February, 1943, a full general—five promotions in less than two years.

The North African invasion in November, 1942, was his first operation under fire, but he long had been known inside the Army as one of its brains—a soldier's soldier—a man who was willing to take justifiable risks and to accept responsibilities without passing the buck to subordinates.

The name, Eisenhower, is an appropriate one. A legacy from forebears who fled Germany to Switzerland to escape persecution in the seventeenth century, and who migrated to America about 1750, it originally was spelled "Eisenhauer"—meaning "iron striker."

The iron striker has summed up his philosophy in these words:

"You can't hit a home run by bunting; you have to step up there and take your cut at the ball."

Last December, when he was appointed to the supreme command, he predicted:

"We will win the European war in 1944."

General Sir B. L. Montgomery

Possessor of perhaps the most glittering reputation of all the Allied invasion commanders is Sir Bernard Law Montgomery, leader of British ground forces.

Hatchet-faced, hard-fighting, hard-bitten Montgomery has been a professional soldier for thirty-five years, but it was as commander of the British 8th Army that he won fame.

That army saved Egypt by smashing Rommel's Afrika Korps at El Alamein in November, 1942, went across Libya to Tunisia in the great drive that threw the Germans out of Africa, drew one of the toughest assignments in the conquest of Sicily, and was the first Allied force to invade Italy.

Always with them was the general, and his cocky grin beneath his tank-corps beret was a recognized talisman of victory. A non-drinker and non-smoker, "Monty" is an all-out advocate of physical fitness who never overlooks his own daily setting-up exercises even though he will be fifty-seven years old next Nov. 17.

London-born son of a clergyman, he quotes from the Bible to back his contention that spoken orders and personal command are better than written commands. He urges his men to read the Bible daily, as he himself does.

Not noted for modesty, he manages to instill some of his own cock self-confidence into his troops.

He, too, was at Dunkerque in 1940 and was one of the last to leave, sitting boldly on the bridge of a British destroyer and watching unblinkingly as the Stuka bombs splashed all around him.

Possibly growing out of that bitter experience, he asks and gives no quarter and often has declared, "the only way to win is to defeat the Germans on the battlefield."

After taking command of his invasion army, "Monty" told them that they could and would finish the war in Europe this year.

"This war began a long while ago," the general remarked. "I am getting fed up with the thing. I think it is nearly time we finished it."

JUN 1 1944

Lieutenant General Carl Spaatz

A taciturn, tough-jawed Pennsylvania Dutchman who wasn't keen on being a general because it would cut into his flying is commander of all the American strategic air forces operating in western Europe.

His face is grim under graying red hair and his speech is blunt, but he is the man who built the 8th Air Force from nothing, then went to North Africa to develop the "Spaatzwaffe" that smashed Pantelleria almost unaided and played so large a role in the North African, Sicilian and Italian campaigns.

General Spaatz insisted he wanted bigger game, inquiring:

"What's the use of bombing rabbits in Italy when you can bomb wildcats in Germany?"

Fifty-three years old, General Spaatz still goes at the pace that made him the world's first endurance flyer with the old Question Mark a decade and a half ago, when aviation was coming out of its cocoon.

His air experience goes back to 1918 in France. In nineteen days as a combat pilot he shot down two German planes and won the Distinguished Service Cross. He was married in 1917 and has three daughters.

He has made daylight precision bombing his forte, and even despite Eisenhower's frowns, has made a number of combat bombing missions on particularly tough assignments.

Poker-playing is his hobby—and there are some in the Army who say he does it badly. Flying is his religion, and all agree he does it marvelously well.

Admiral Sir Bertram Ramsay

Admiral Sir Bertram Home Ramsay won fame as the man who got the British Army out of Dunkerque. His nickname ever since that summer of 1940 has been "Dynamo"—the code word designating that operation.

Now his job is to put the British Army and the Americans back into France, and to keep them there with sea transport and the endless job of shipping supplies.

The British commander in chief of Allied naval forces for the invasion was born in 1883, and has been in the Royal Navy for forty-six of the sixty-one years. Son of a brigadier and married to a colonel's daughter, he was in retirement when the war started. As flag officer in command at Dover chance cast him in the role of Dunkerque deliverer. His efforts won him knighthood. Then he dropped back into seeming oblivion.

But General Eisenhower singled him out as the brains behind the scenes in the sea phases of the North African operations, and it was Ramsay who marshaled the more than 3,200 vessels that took the Allies to Sicily July 10, 1943.

Now, with an even bigger armada under his command, the tall, erect "Dynamo" with the thinning graying hair is embarked on the greatest amphibious operation of all history.

Air Chief Marshal Leigh-Mallory

Maintaining air supremacy over a hotly contested beachhead is nothing new to the commander of Allied air forces for the invasion. Air Chief Marshal Trafford L. Leigh-Mallory. His men did it over the blazing beach of Dieppe in the raid of August, 1942.

Fifty-three years old next July, Marshal Leigh-Mallory is single-mindedly an airman. A clergyman's son, he had set out to be a lawyer when the World War intervened and he became a flyer. In the quiet between-wars years he devoted himself to military and aviation problems as an instructor and as a deputy at the Air Ministry.

In this war he has risen from chief of a fighter squadron to command of all Royal Air Force British-based fighters, and finally to command of all the air forces for the invasion.

For two years past he has directed the great fighter sweeps from Britain. For this quiet headquarters brain the invasion is a familiar extension of his regular duties.

Air Chief Marshal Tedder

Air Chief Marshal Sir Arthur Tedder, who is General Eisenhower's deputy commander in chief of the Anglo-American invasion forces, has concentrated half of his lifetime on air warfare. During the World War he transferred from the Dorset Infantry Regiment, which he joined at the outbreak of hostilities, to the Royal Air Force, where he has remained.

Three years ago Air Marshal Tedder, now fifty-four years old, was barely known outside the Air Ministry in London, where he was known as a somewhat cocky individual who advocated innovations and experiments. The son of Sir Arthur Tedder, he was educated at Whitgift and Magdelen College, Cambridge.

After fighting as a pilot in France he went to the Middle East as a squadron leader. Between wars he was successively a member of the Imperial Defense Council, the directing staff of the Royal Air Force Staff College, commander of the Air Armament School, director of training of Air Ministry and director general of research and development in the Air Ministry.

In November, 1940, he went to the Middle East to replace Air Vice-Marshal T. W. Boyd, who was captured and whom Air Marshal Tedder later suceedeed as chief of the R. A. F. Middle East Command. He directed air support for the 8th Army's rout of the Germans in North Africa.

In this war Air Marshal Tedder suffered two great personal losses. One of his two sons was killed in a dogfight over England with the Luftwaffe during the Battle of Britain in 1940. The first Lady Tedder died in a plane crash in Cairo in 1942.

Lieutenant General Bradley

Lieutenant General Omar N. Bradley, commander of American ground forces, is tall and mild-mannered, and looks like a Missouri farmer. In Africa he directed the storming of Hill 609 and Mateur and led the 2d Army Corps into Bizerte to smash the last Nazi resistance. "His most prominent characteristic is 'getting there,'" his West Point class book said. He is fifty-one.

Major General Doolittle

Major General James H. Doolittle, commander of the United States Army 8th Air Force, formerly a daredevil pilot, is famed now as "the man who bombed Tokyo." Short, stocky and vital, he also is a prominent aeronautics engineer and did much of the pioneer work in the field of blind flying.

Rear Admiral Kirk

Rear Admiral Alan Goodrich Kirk, commander of American naval forces, headed the naval forces operating out of North Africa in the invasion of Sicily. Thmirty-three years in the Navy he has passed nineteen of those years at sea and won the vessels on which he served countless trophies for battle efficiency, gunnery, engineering and communications. He is fifty-six years old.

AERIAL OFFENSIVE PASSES 90TH HOUR

JUN 6 1944

RAF Night Foray Caps Day Blows By U. S. Heavies

BELMEAR

London, Tuesday, June 6 (AP)—Allied aerial battering of Hitler's European holdings passed the 90-hour mark today.

RAF heavyweights set out early last night in great strength to take up where United States daylight raiders left off.

Axis radios reported "nuisance raiders"—their usual term for Mosquito bombers—over the Reich. This suggested that the main targets for the night were in France or the Lowlands.

NIGHT

Eighth Mission in 4 Days

The American bombers, numbering up to 750, in flying their eighth daylight mission in four days to break all records for heavy bombers, dropped 2,200 tons of bombs on the coastal strip from Calais to Boulogne and boosted the total dumped on the invasion coast since Friday to 15,000 tons.

A United States Strategic Air Forces communique announced that six American bombers, two fighter-bombers and two fighters were missing. Apparently they were downed by flak, since no enemy aircraft was encountered.

Four bombers previously reported missing in Sunday's operations have returned safely to their bases, the communique said.

Flying Fortresses and Liberators, shepherded by 500 fighters, dumped 2,200 tons of bombs on the Nazi front-line invasion defenses in the area from Calais to Boulogne as the mighty Allied aerial onslaught thundered into its eighteenth consecutive day.

It was the fourth continuous day of pounding for the area, and the sixth straight mission against those targets for the American heavies.

During that period American and British heavy bombers also have slammed railroads in the Paris area and other objectives in occupied France with 5,000 tons of explosives.

Today's U. S. assault was followed in the afternoon by attacks on bridges, in sections, locomotives and other rail targets at Conflans, Gisors, Mezieres and Beauvais in northern France and at Mons in Belgium by Thunderbolt fighter-bombers of the U. S. Ninth Air force. Factories at Conflans and Juziers and a radio station at Louviers, also in Northern France, were blasted.

These daylight blows followed quickly the third straight night attack by the R.A.F. on the so-called "mystery emplacements" across the channel in the Pas De Calais area.

Only twice during their eight missions crowded in since Friday morning have the American heavies penetrated beyond the "Rocket-gun Coast." In the second of Saturday's two raids and in the third of yesterday's triple-header attack they went as far as the Paris area to unload their deadly cargo on railroads and other objectives.

The coastal installations still were smoking from the forenoon assault when medium Marauder bombers winged over northern France under Thunderbolt escort at midday, to heap further destruction on invasion targets. Thunderbolt fighter-bombers helped to set the stage by dive-bombing ground defenses. Pilots reported moderate flak and no fighter opposition, and the Marauders accomplished the mission without loss.

Only a small force of the Marauders was assigned to the task, but their attack brought to about 8,000 the number of sorties flown against the French coastal defenses since Friday forenoon.

As the westwall underwent this assault, rocket-firing Typhoons penetrated deeper into northern France to rip enemy radio installations.

Since the first of June, the 200-mile French coastline, bristling with Nazi guns, has been rocked from end to end by Allied bombs.

The previous record period for the number of operations of British-based American heavies was from May 7 to May 11, when they struck at the continent seven times in five days.

A great part of this destruction has been visited upon the Pas-De-Calais area and German strongpoints surrounding the channel ports of Boulogne, Calais, Dieppe and Dunkerque.

The Air ministry disclosed today that the railway yards of Saumur, Trappes and Tergnier are now known to have been severely damaged in recent raids.

R.A.F. planes last night, without loss, flew through gusts of rain to strike at the invasion wall to penetrate as far as Cologne. The R. A. F. also laid mines in enemy waters.

The raid on Cologne, last hit May 28 by a small formation of American heavies after a series of Mosquito attacks at night had peppered the city with 2,000-pound blockbusters, apparently was on a small scale.

Returning from bombing bridges at Conflans and Cisors, a Thunderbolt fighter-bomber group led by Lieut. Col. Harold Holt, of Philadelphia, destroyed 13 locomotives and attacked the railway intersection of Mezieres on the Seine.

Four other locomotives were shot up by a group attacking rail targets at Mons, in Belgium. Another group strafed four German military trucks on a road in northern France.

8 Radio Centers Hit

Eight German radio installations along the northern coast of France and on Channel isles were blasted by rocket and bomb-carrying Typhoons of the Royal Air Force.

There was no fighter opposition but flak was heavy at some points and five Typoons were missing. Two of the pilots were safe.

Thunderbolt fighter-bombers made their third attack of the day shortly before dark, returning to France to lay bombs on two highway bridges, railroad tracks and freight cars in the vicinity of St. Germain, suburb west of Paris. Two Thunderbolts are missing from this operation.

Germans Report Allied Craft Over Paris, and Russian Planes Bomb in Hungary.

JUN 6 1944

London, June 5 (A. P.).—Approximately 1,250 American heavy bombers and fighters—leading an Allied aerial assault of powerful proportions against the fortified French coast—smashed military installations in the Boulogne and Calais areas today with an estimated 2,200 short tons of bombs.

This was the fourth attack in a row against the Pas de Calais, the area of France closest to England, and it came after R. A. F. bombers attacked French coast objectives and targets in Cologne, Germany, last night.

Watchers on the English coast facing Boulogne could see enemy rocket shells rising from the ground, leaving a thin white trail of smoke and exploding high in the air.

For more than three hours powerful fleets of American and British bombers thundered across the English Channel. Clouds which replaced the earlier clear sky failed to halt the offensive.

The German radio at the French capital asserted American bombers were over Paris at noon today. Berlin reported that Russian planes were over Hungary last night.

DAY

The broadcast soon after noon warned that single enemy planes were over the lower Danube, suggesting that Italy-based bombers were on the prowl. The Nazis asserted that Germany itself was free from enemy planes.

Preceded by Thunderbolt fighter bombers which dive-bombed flak defenses, a small force of United States medium Mauraders attacked the northern France invasion zone in midday. Pilots reported moderate flak and no fighter opposition.

Rocket-carrying typhoons of the British Second Tactical Air Force struck radio-location installations in northern France for the second successive day.

Since June began, the more than 200 miles of French coastline—bristling with German guns—has been shaken from end to end by Allied bombs.

The big British bombers made it their target for the third consecutive night last night. The United States Eighth Air Force has neglected strategic targets deeper in the continent for the last four days to concentrate on immediate tactical targets behind the invasion wall.

It is estimated that well over 13,000 tons of bombs have been dumped on France by American and British heavy bombers alone in the last seventy-two hours.

Roads and Rails bombed.

The greater part of this devastating weight of explosives has fallen in the Pas de Calais area and on Nazi strong points surrounding the Channel ports of Boulogne, Calais, Dieppe and Dunkirk. The rest has been aimed mostly at road and rail communications as deep into northern France as Paris.

The British did not lose a single plane in the night operations, during which mines were laid in enemy waters. R. A. F. squadrons flew through gusts of rain to smack the Nazis invasion wall and penetrate to Cologue.

Britain enjoyed another raid free night last night, the German Air Force evidentally husbanding every available plane for the day of the Allied invasion.

The operations today came after approximately 1,200 American heavy bombers from Britain and Italy hit defense and communication targets in Nazi-occupied Europe yesterday.

Force yesterday destroyed and damaged at least 1,200 enemy vehicles in front of the advancing Fifth and Eighth armies. Strong formations of heavy bombers under fighter escort raked northern Italian rail yards and enemy communication lines along the French-Italian border.

Cologne was last hit May 28 by a small formation of American heavy bombers after a series of night attacks by British Mosquitos which had been peppering the city with 2,000-pound block busters.

The raids last night appeared comparatively small in scale, but the Allies' aerial offensive gained momentum by daylight.

NAZI ESCAPE ROUTES HIT BY BOMBERS

KENNEDY

Troops Cross The Tiber; Clark Proclaims Occupation Of Capital

JUN 7 1944

Rome, June 5 (AP)—Allied armor and motorized infantry roared through Rome today—not pausing to sight-see—crossed the Tiber, and proceeded with the task of destroying two battered German armies fleeing to the north.

Allied fighter-bombers spearheaded the pursuit, jamming the escape highways northward with burning enemy transport and killing and wounding many Germans.

The enemy was tired and disorganized by the Allied assault, which in 25 days had inflicted a major catastrophe on German forces in Italy and liberated Rome almost without damage.

Rail Yards Bombed

Joining the program of destruction, 500 American heavy bombers blasted rail yards at five points in northern Italy between Venice and Rimini along which the Germans might attempt to move reinforcements and equipment to bolster Marshal Albert Kesselring's armies.

At 10 A. M. today Lieut. Gen. Mark W. Clark, commander of the Fifth Army, entered Rome in a jeep and drove to the city hall, where he formally proclaimed the Allied occupation and praised the valor of his troops.

Addressing his corps commanders and looking out over thousands of cheering Italians, Clark declared that both the 10th and 14th German armies had been at least partially destroyed, more than 20,000 prisoners taken and untold quantities of Nazi equipment captured.

Allied Troops Praised

He lauded individually the French, British and American troops of the Fifth Army and paid tribute to the "gallant men and women who made the supreme sacrifice" that made today's occupation possible. Mussolini's famous balcony in the Palazzo Venezia, a few blocks from where Clark spoke, looked empty and deserted.

Pope Pius XII, addressing an enormous crowd including many Fifth Army soldiers in St. Peter's Square, expressed thanks to God that Rome had not been destroyed by war.

The inhabitants' reception to the troops approached hysteria as the day wore on and homemade confetti soon littered the streets. There was an almost carnival atmosphere. Little damage to the city was visible, the Nazis having limited demolitions to a few installations of no artistic or religious importance.

NIGHT

Much Material Taken

The speed of the enemy's flight once his lines before Rome burst was evident in the great quantities of war material left behind, stock piles sufficient to equip several divisions. An Allied spokesman expressed the official opinion that the tremendous pressure exerted by the Allies in the final phase of the battle for Rome had forced the enemy to flee beyond the capital rather than make a protracted fight for the city itself.

Just 24 hours after the first Allied troops made their way through dense mine fields and broke into the southeastern suburbs of the city at 8 A. M. yesterday, the leading elements had passed completely through the capital and the last German sniper had been killed or captured.

Some inhabitants reported that the enemy mounted guns on the roof of the Basilica of Saint John Lateran, which is Vatican extra-territorial property, but this was not officially confirmed.

Hour after hour the Allied warplanes swept down on highways leading northward to attack the fleeing enemy. Twelve hundred Nazi transport vehicles were destroyed from dawn to dark yesterday and hundreds more today. Farther north medium bombers smashed bridges and rail facilities, leaving wreckage and fire that one airman said looked like "the city dump on burning day."

British Eighth Army forces advancing from the east continued to meet stubborn opposition, particularly northeast of Valmontone, where the Germans were fighting in fixed mountain-defense positions. The enemy had been driven completely out of the Sacco Valley, clearing the towns of Fiuggi, Piglio, Paliano, Guarcino and Cave. Palestrina, astride an important retreat road four and a half miles north of Valmontone, was seized by Allied troops yesterday.

The British were encountering demolitions on a major scale, and an Allied spokesman said the Italian villages they were being forced to storm were perched on rocky eminences several hundred feet high. The Nazis had mined all the approaches, and covered the roads with heavy fire.

British troops on the coastal flank of the Allied advance pressed to within six miles of the Tiber river below Rome. Hopes of trapping the entire German force in this sector appeared to be bright, as few bridges over the Tiber were available to them. An Allied drive from Rome to the coast would seal their line of retreat.

Marino Captured

Fifth Army troops pushing through the Alban hills captured the towns of Gottaferrata, Marino and Genzano and by-passed some enemy pockets of resistance. As evidence of the disorganization of the German forces in that area, it was disclosed that 377 prisoners taken at Velletri represented 50 different companies.

Burned-out German combat vehicles in the streets of Rome offered evidence that the enemy turned the city into a battleground yesterday, at least to the extent of fighting a delaying action from block to block.

However, the only wrecked sections of the city are adjacent to the San Lorenzo, Tiburtina, Ostiense and Trastevere railroad yards, which had been repeatedly bombed by the Allies.

Mussolini Broadcasts

[In a broadcast to the Italian people, Mussolini appealed to them to "make life as hard as possible" for Allied troops and assured them that "our will is not broken."]

It is generally assumed that the Germans will ultimately fall back about 150 miles north of Rome, where the northern Apennine Mountain range provides a formidable barrier. At no point short of that will they find a natural defense line comparable to the Hitler and Gustav lines.

The Nazis will, undoubtedly, fight any number of delaying actions as they fall back and will retard the Allied advance with elaborate demolitions.

The capture of Rome did little to alter the situation as far as aerial operations is concerned, other than to provide additional bases for operations of the Tactical Air Force.

Allied Headquarters, Naples, June 5 (A. P.).—A welcome approaching hysteria showered down upon the Fifth Army in captured Rome today as Allied troops surged into the town in ever-growing numbers and rolled on across the Tiber in pursuit of the Germans falling back to possible defense lines 150 miles northward.

A fleet of 500 heavy American bombers today joined a mighty attack on the retreating Nazis north of Rome.

While Romans cheered and sang after a night of liberation in which bare-chested Partisans had joined Allied troops in ejecting the Germans and Fascists from the virtually undamaged city, the heavy bombers blasted rail yards at Ferrara, Castel Maggiore, Bologna, Faenza and Forli along the double-track line to Venice and Rimini.

By mid-afternoon fighter-bombers had destroyed and damaged at least 300 vehicles among the German columns fleeing northward.

DAY

Po Valley Is Raked by Planes.

Lightnings raked airfields and other targets in the Po Valley, and the Mediterranean Allied Air Forces announced that both major rail lines into France already were temporarily blocked by Sunday attacks.

In Rome no important artistic or religious monuments were found destroyed as a result of German demolitions or the short, sharp street clashes with German rear guards which sought to delay the Sunday occupation. A few military installations had been demolished by the retreating Germans.

The only wrecked sections of the city were immediately adjacent ot the San Lorenzo, Tiburtina, Ostiense and Trastevere rail yards whic hthe Allies had bombed.

An official announcement tonight said the enemy's rapid withdrawal left great quantities of war material behind.

"By the pressure exerted by the Fifth Army on the enemy in the final phase of the battle south of Rome, the enemy was forced to withdraw so hurriedly that the city has been spared the fate of becoming a battleground," an official said.

The Nazis had guns on Mount Mario inside Rome, and were reported, without confirmation, to have emplaced other guns on the roof of the Basilica of Saint John Lateran, which is Vatican property outside Vatican City, the dispatches added.

Last-ditch German rearguards died within the shadow of the Roman Forum and in the streets of the Government quarter in bitter clashes as Italian Partisans, bare-chested and wearing hammer and sickle insignia fought hand-to-hand with Fascists and Nazis in a brief battle for liberation.

All Quiet in Vatican.

But despite the sporadic clashes, which took place even though the German High Command had pretended until the last that Rome was an open city, the Italian capital with its store of cultural and religious treasures apparently came through unscathed for the most part.

Police officers said all was quiet at the Vatican, where the Pope has been a virtual prisoner of German bayonets since last September. A Berlin broadcast said Baron von Weizsaeker, German Ambassador to the Holy See, "has left his residence in Rome, Villa Bonaparte, and moved to Vatican City. Other diplomatic missions of the tri-partite Powers will move to Vatican City—namely those of Japan, Hungary, Slovakia, Romania and Finland."

(German broadcasts said Allied diplomatic representatives to the Holy See already had left the Vatican precincts for their old apartments in Rome.

(British correspondents in Madrid said the Pope spent Sunday in prayer and in consultation with papal officials during the hours of violent liberation of the city. The Swiss Guard had been doubled about Vatican City to prevent an influx of refugees.

Fiat Plant Wrecked

(King Vittorio Emanuele was expected to hand over his power to Crown Prince Umberto at a formal ceremony in keeping with his promise of several months ago to act when the Allies entered Rome.)

Although first reports from Rome were scanty concerning damage in the city, a number of demolitions were carried out by the Germans. Dispatches said the Fiat factory had been the scene of one such demolition, while efforts also apparently were made to wreck gas, electric and water utilities.

Allies Race to Destroy Foe.

Allied headquarters announced at noon the occupation of Rome by the Fifth Army last night, and thus was realized one of the objectives when Gen. Sir Harold Alexander started the Allied offensive on May 11.

The other objective, the destruction of the German Tenth and Fourteenth armies, remained to be carried out, and toward this objective the Fifth and Eighth armies pressed today.

Fighter-bombers hammered away at the fleeing German columns, leaving congested highways to the north littered with dead and wounded and smashed vehicles.

The Fifth Army tore off and chewed up additional chunks of the disorganized Nazi forces which had tried vainly to stem the advance on the Italian capital long enough to hold open an escape route for troops in the shredded defense line south of the city.

The danger to Field Marshal Albert Kesselring's forces still facing the left flank of the Fifth Army between Rome and the seacoast grew steadily. The main escape route of these forces was lost when Lieut.-Gen. Mark W. Clark's armor and infantry crashed through the defensive screen on the outskirts of Rome yesterday and swarmed into the city, where they met only sporadic resistance.

Toll of Prisoners Rising Fast.

Prisoners taken in the twenty-five-day-old all-out offensive passed well over the 20,000 mark. In rentless strafing and bombing the Tactical Air Force had destroyed or damaged 1,200 German trucks and other vehicles.

The entry into Rome—climax of nine months of hard fighting in Italy—was accompanied by fresh gains in other sectors of the front. Palestrina, astride an important retreat road north of the Via Casilina four and a half miles north of Valmontone, was cleared of the enemy. At the same time the Eighth Army drove the enemy completely out of the Sacco Valley, clearing the towns of Fiuggi, Piglio, Paliano, Guarcino and Cave, all east of Palestrina.

An official account of the drive into Rome said:

"Reconnaissance elements entered the southeastern outskirts of the city at two points about 8 A. M. and 9 A. M., respectively, and a few hours later had pushed on to within its official limits.

"The principal break-through toward Rome was made in a sector defended by the Hermann Goering Division, which fought vainly in North Africa and Sicily as well to stay the Allied advance.

"One American force, moving forward from the southeast, generally along Highway 6 (Via Casilina), advanced nearly eight miles, then met stiff resistance from the enemy on the eastern outskirts.

"Elements severed Highway 5 at the northeastern entrance to Rome. Meanwhile, an advance group pushed on into the outskirts to the southeast at 9 A. M. Three miles due east of Rome stubborn enemy defenses were met, with leading tanks encountering many mines.

"Other Fifth Army forces

meanwhile had moved forward to points four miles south of Rome and Highway 7."

Edward Kennedy, writing from outside Rome, said anti-Fascist Italians clashed with German soldiers and Italian Fascists in bitter, hand-to-hand fighting in the Rome area as the Allied advanced. The anti-Fascists were in civilian clothes but were wearing red arm bands bearing the hammer and sickle insignia. Some were stripped to the waist.

British Also Approach Tiber.

A simultaneous advance from the Alban Hills northwestward by-passed some pockets of resistance. The towns of Gottaferrata, Marino and Genzano were taken in that area.

The British on the left flank pressed to within six miles of the Tiber below Rome and began bridging the Rio Torto.

The Eighth Army, pusning into the rugged mountains north of the Liri and Sacco valleys, encountered demolitions on a grand scale, many covered by fire from well-situated guns to prevent repairs.

An Allied spokesman said the towns being taken were perched on rocky eminences several hundred feet high, and the Germans had mined all the approaches and covered the roads with fire that destroyed virtually every bridge and culvert.

Close On Balsorano

Driving north along Highway 82, the Eighth Army closed in steadily on Balsorano, center of a strongly fortified area.

Evidence of the disorganization of the German forces was seen in the fact 377 prisoners taken at Velletri were members of 50 different Nazi companies.

REPORTS NEW NAZI RETREAT

Vichy Radio Says Tiber Area Is Abandoned Below City

London, June 5 (AP)—Germans retreating from Rome, the Vichy radio announced tonight, have abandoned the entire left bank of the Tiber river from its mouth to the city. The Nazis conceded earlier that the loss of Rome was a blow to their prestige.

Included in the area reported abandoned is the port of Ostia.

Fighting has flared up on the central Italian front, where New Zealanders are strongly pressing toward the upper Sangro Valley," said the broadcast, and "this move seems to indicate that the Allied offensive may soon spread along the entire Italian front right to the Adriatic."

Forecasts Withdrawal

Withdrawal of the German lines on the Adriatic end of the front was forecast by a Berlin radio spokesman in a broadcast recorded by the Ministry of Information.

"It must be expected that the German left (on the Adriatic coast) will have to conform with the changed situation on the right flank," he said.

Reiterating the Nazi propaganda theme that capture of Rome availed the Allies little, he said the new positions would aid the German defense and "the Germans already are intrenched in mountain positions north of the city."

To Move To Vatican City

A broadcast on the wave length of the Rome radio, which the Germans controlled and apparently moved out of the city in their retreat, said Nazi, Japanese and satellite envoys would take up residence in the Vatican City.

Tiber crossings, carefully avoiding any sort of destruction of historic buildings.

"Even the Tiber bridges were not blown up after successful marching off the bulk of German troops to the northern bank of the river."

Allied diplomatic envoys to the Holy See now have returned to their old apartments in Rome in the wake of the Allied occupation, another German broadcast said.

Berlin declared all public amusement places in Italian towns of northern Italy, still under German control, will be closed for three days so "republican Italians will in these hours and days harden their hearts and sharpen their arms for their liberation."

The commanders of a division of Italians in Germany for training were said to have sent Mussolini a message deploring the "tragic consequences of treason," and declaring the "moment of retaliation and victory is not far."

German propagandists, noting that the Allies hailed the capture of Rome as a great victory, sought to minimize the event by declaring the city had no economic, strategic or political value except as a tourist center.

Two special German communiques—the first word in many days from the Fuehrer's headquarters—were broadcast after Rome fell to the Allies. The fight in Italy will go on, said the first announcement, "to force final victory for Germany and her Allies. The year of the invasion will bring Germany's enemies an annihilating defeat at the most decisive moment." It declared German troops had left Rome "to prevent its destruction."

The other announcement asserted Field Marshal Albert Kesselring had given the Vatican proposals that Rome be made an open city and asked they be conveyed to the Allied command.

A Nazi Pledge.

The announced proposals said the German High Command pledged itself to keep no military installations within the open city area and would carry out no troop movements in Rome.

[Field dispatches said German armor in Rome offers stiff resistance to the Allied troops, and German snipers fought from street to street before they were wiped out.]

Marshal Kesselring said no destruction would be carried out within the open town. He proposed measures for the care of the civilian population and suggested the Vatican should arrange for control of observation of the points of agreement. It was said Marshal Kesselring offered these conditions at 11 P. M. Saturday, less than twenty-four hours before Allied occupation of the city.

German propagandists immediately lauanched a campaign to impress people of the Axis that loss of Rome was really favorable for them.

"Abandonment of Rome is a considerable gain from a military point of view," said Karl Praegner, German radio commentator. "All other considerations apart, supply of the town, with its million inhabitants, to which some 30,000 to 40,000 refugees must be added, would be a very heavy strain on the German army. The Allied High Command now will have to take charge of the supply of the Roman population."

Germans Say Battle Rages Northeast of Eternal City

London, June 5 (A. P.).—Fighting raged northeast of Rome today, the German High Command said in a broadcast communique, after Adolf Hitler in two headquarters announcements had acknowledged the fall of the capital despite a last-minute effort to declare it an open city.

United States tank formations pushed into the center of Rome yesterday despite the offer to make it an open city, the bulletin said, and "bitter street fighting developed which was still continuing in the hours of the evening."

The communique added that the German command will "make every effort to reduce the fighting in and around Rome to the smallest possible scope necessary for the prosecuting of fighting."

Say Troops Were Careful.

German broadcasts, giving additional details of the street fighting, said "in the course of the afternoon the eastern districts of the town were included in the actual battleground in delaying actions. German fighting groups retreated gradually toward the

1 Nazi Army Out Of Fight, Clark Thinks

London, June 5 (AP)—The Naples radio said Lieut. Gen. Mark W. Clark, of the Fifth Army, in a speech to his corps commanders had declared "I doubt if the 14th (German army) is any longer capable of fighting."

"It is a great day for the Fifth Army," General Clark was quoted as saying on the capture of Rome. "French, British and American troops have made it possible, and I want to thank General Eaker (Lieut. Gen. Ira C. Eaker, air commander) for his air support.

"I would like to say a word in memory of the men and women of the Fifth Army who have made the supreme sacrifice.

20,000 Prisoners

"We have destroyed parts of two German armies, the 10th and 14th, and I doubt if the 14th is any longer capable of fighting. We have taken 20,000 prisoners, wrecked the German armies and have captured and destroyed untold quantities of enemy battle equipment."

The radio said Clark then told Italian Rome representatives that he was pleased with the condition of the city, regarding both public utilities and the city's clean appearance.

Earlier, the Algiers radio said Clark had issued a special order of the day to his troops declaring "it is the immediate task of the Fifth Army to pursue the retreating enemy and destroy him."

General Clark Named As "Father Of Year"

New York, June 5 (AP)—Lieut. Gen. Mark W. Clark, whose Fifth Army troops took Rome, was designated "father of the year" today, the National Father's Day Committee announced.

General Clark was notified of the honor by a cable sent to Rome signed by Alvin Austin, executive director of the Fathers' Day Committee. Father's Day will be observed June 18.

"For your triumphant capture of Rome," the cable said, "for your gallant inspiration to the victorious American Fifth Army in this heroic achievement, for your being the first Allied commander to bring liberation to a Nazi-enslaved European capital, we proudly designate you the 'Father of the Year' and award you our Eisenhower Medal, so named as this year's Father's Day salute to our fighting dads."

last night, and thousands of Roman Partisans fanned the fires of liberation.

Behind a screen of Partisan volunteers who wore hammer and sickle armbands, waved red flags and brandished old firearms, American forces drove to the Tiber River through futile German resistance in the streets—resistance that was real despite the German pretense that Rome was an open city.

Some Romans died in the fight for freedom, cigarettes between their lips and cheers in their throats. Some were lying across the German machine guns they had tried to seize bare-handed.

"Why were you so long coming? we expected you four months ago," said some of the Partisans. Others in unwhimpering silence, asking no questions, waited for their wounds to be bandaged.

Romans Point the Way.

Thousands of the people of Rome marched jubilantly in impromptu parades with the occupying forces. They waved flags and red banners, splashed through water from broken water mains to grasp the hands of the troops, almost smothered the liberators with roses and kisses.

They shrieked curses at blinking German prisoners, cried at the sight of a dying American soldier. With shrill cries they warned of hidden anti-tank guns and machine-gun nests.

Mothers held up their children to be kissed by the grimy, bearded American troops, in sight of a dying German scout car crewman from whose chest gushed a stream of blood.

Romans Gave Their Lives to Free City of Nazis

But the Americans just swung along in a tired shuffle in the face of all this demonstration, awestruck by the Americans Found Some Italian Dead Across German Machine Guns—Kisses and Roses Greeted U. S. Troops.

By DANIEL DE LUCE.

Rome, June 5 (A. P.).—Mussolini's balcony hung empty in the moonlight as Fifth Army soldiers in Indian file encircled the former Dictator's office at the Palazzo Venezia famous avenues that had been their goal for nine long, dangerous and wearying months.

At a police station near the Forum officers said all was quiet in Vatican City and that the last Germans were fleeing from their rendezvous near the Collosseum.

Wherever the Americans moved forward today against hit-and-run Nazi armored forces they found Italians—of all ages and degrees of poverty—ready to die for "the liberation."

I saw a 10-year-old boy carrying ammunition for his elder brother on sniper patrol. A stubbly-bearded, gray-haired peasant in his middle fifties begged to be put into action. A dark-haired girl with a bandolier insisted "me Partisan, too."

By military standards the battle for Rome was merely a heavy skirmish with the objectives temporarily being to secure the Tiber bridges. From just behind the leading tank, however, I found the struggle as hard on the senses as getting hit between the eyes with brass knuckles.

Acts to Spare Treasures.

Several tanks and one heavy self-propelled gun held up our armor for seven hours at a point five miles outside Rome. But the Allied commander accepted unusual risks rather than bring down a devastating fire on areas where civilians might be sheltering or cultural treasures harmed.

As the final push sent General Sherman tanks clattering through Centocelle's alleyways and green fields, their machine guns drove scores of German snipers from cover. Italian partisans rode the American tanks or preceded them like game beaters.

"I'll bet there are enough Fascist party badges in the Tiber today to make the fish sick," said one officer.

Near the San Lorenzo rail yards in Rome the partisans shrilly warned of a German 88 about 200 yards behind the next corner. Light tanks swerved and hit it from the rear while weeping mothers murmured blessings, kissed the hands of the tank destroyer crewmen and lifted up their children to be kissed on the cheeks.

Within a few seconds after the first tanks crossed under the arch of Porta Maggiore, one of the gates of Rome, the avenue ahead was filled with what seemed all of the population of Rome. Crowds in order to clasp our hands waded through water from a main broken by the Germans in destroying a Fiat factory.

As we passed the Basilica of Santa Maria Maggiore, Romans from upper apartment windows shouted a warning that a German scout car was ahead.

We were proceeding down the Via Nazionale in front of the Bank of Italy—one block from the Roman Forum—when a German heavy machine-gune suddenly began firing. My driver, Pfc. Kenneth Kopplin of Huron, S. D., headed straight into the entrance of a big store. When the shooting stopped we saw the wrecked scout car ahead with two Germans dead and another dying with blood gushing from his chest.

Nazi Caught By Friend.

A tubby German captain in new field gray uniform stood against the wall, the prisoner of two sightseeing French officers who had surprised him in a truck on a side street.

Italians shrieked curses at the German as he blinked owl-like through horn-rimmed spectacles.

A Lieut. Robertson, commanding one of the leading platoons, stationed men before the Palazzo Venezia and the Victor Emmanuel Monument after a sharp and bloody street fight a block away.

Despite the ambush fighting of the Germans inside Rome's walls, religious and cultural treasures apparently escaped damage.

Romans Stage Parade.

Thousands o. Romans marched with the first Allied troop to enter the city Even when a German machine-gun cracked in the Via Nazionale they sought cover, then linked rams again with the Americans.

As darkness settled the Americans fanned out into all corners of the city, firing their rifles in the air to keep the Romans out of the way of the heavy army vehicles following.

Most of the troops caught sight of St. Peter's big dome for the first time from the Via Casilina on the outskirts of the city, but the great stone ruins of the Forum were a surprise saved for the last.

The bridges over the Tiber in the city now are being guarded. The west coast flank of the German 14th Army must seek another route of escape.

MUSSOLINI URGES ROMANS TO RESIST

London, June 5 (A. P.).—The fallen Duce, Benito Mussolini, appealed to the people of Rome today to "make life as hard as possible" for Allied troops which captured his former Fascist capital yesterday.

Mussolini's message was read by an announcer in a broadcast on the same wavelength as the Rome radio at 7:19 A. M. (1:19 A. M. Eastern war time) and recorded by the Associated Press.

"With the help of treachery of the monarchy," said Mussolini, who now heads a puppet Fascist organization under German protection in northern Italy, "the Anglo-Americans were able to land in Italy. German troops have courageously contested every step of their advance, but have now given up Rome.

"It is a great sorrow for us, and I do not want to resort to propaganda now.

"Italians! Do not morally surrender to the invader. With all means at your disposal, make life as hard as possible for him.

Our will is not broken. We shall continue to fight and to work at the side of the Tripartite Powers, and especially Germany."

Troops Kissed By Men In Rome, GI Complaint

Rome, June 5 (AP)—Lieut. C. D. Seith, of Watervliet, N. Y., registered a complaint today about one aspect of the Allied entry into Rome.

"When we got into the city," he said, "the men all kissed us and the women shook hands. And how! Those damn whiskers!"

Privates Bill Gerbert, of Portland, Ore., and Harry Greenwald, of Kingston, Pa., who also were in the first group of the Fifth Army entering Rome Sunday, said no one was in the streets when they first entered but that in 20 minutes they could hardly move about because of the dense crowds storming around them and shouting.

Corporal Joseph Bonzuk, of Turners Falls, Mass., claimed to be the first man in his company to be kissed by a girl.

Early in the afternoon word spread through the city that the Pope would mark the Allies' entrance into Rome by appearing on the balcony of St. Peter's at 6 p.m. half an hour before that time a great crowd was gathered there and long lines of people still were making their way on foot to the Basilica.

Rome was virtually intact as the Germans had limited their demolitions to a few installations of no artistic or religious importance. The Vatican was entirely unmolested.

The dome of St. Peter's, dominating the city, bounced back the rays of the sun as the crowd converged on the great circle in front of the structure. A Swiss guard on duty at St. Peter's said the Germans always had respected the neutrality of the Vatican and he expressed the hope the Americans would also.

Allied troops moving into the city in ever increasing numbers passed by the portals of Vatican city, where only a few papal gendarmes were on duty.

Although the Germans had protested Rome was an open city, many of the streets were littered with their knocked out guns and combat vehicles with which they had attempted to impede the Allied occupation.

GI Gives Balcony Speech From Duce's Perch

New York, June 5 (AP)—The Allied entry into Rome received its crowning touch today when a soldier stood with one of his comrades on the marble balcony overlooking the famous Palazzo Venezia where Mussolini used to harangue the Italian people and made a speech about the fallen dictator, NBC said.

A cheering crowd of Italian men, women and children stood below and, although they didn't understand a word he said, they laughed and cheered and waved flags.

Mutual Broadcasting System said the GI speaker from Mussolini's balcony was John Vitto, of Port Chester, N. Y., a Signal Corps cameraman.

"I promised my mother that is what I'd do when I got to Rome. I can do anything Musso can do. I'm an American," Vitto was quoted as saying.

Pope Pius Gives Thanks to God That Holy City Has Been Spared

ROME, June 5—(AP) Pope Pius XII gave thanks to God before an enormous crowd including soldiers of the victorious Allied Fifth army in the square before St. Peter's tonight that Rome was spared the ravages of war.

The Pontiff also expressed thanks to "both belligerent parties" for saving the city. His words, delivered with his hands outstretched, brought prolonged applause from the multitude.

It was perhaps the greatest crowd gathered there since his coronation. The assemblage was estimated at between 250,000 and 500,000 persons.

Both St. Peter's, Vatican Unhurt

By Edward Kennedy

Rome, June 5 (AP)—Rome, shining brightly in sparkling sunlight and spared almost entirely from the ravages of war, today gave Fifth Army troops a welcome which turned the Eternal City into a near-carnival.

The city is virtually intact. The Germans, last of whom slunk from the capital last night like beaten dogs, limited their demolitions to a few installations of no artistic or religious importance.

St. Peter's Intact

The dome of St. Peter's, dominating the city, bounced back the rays of sunlight and the facade smiled on columns of American troops skirting the plaza where Vatican City begins.

Otherwise there was no sign of life at the Vatican. It was wholly intact and the only remarks of a Swiss guard were that the Germans always had respected its neutrality and that he hoped the Americans would.

The great circle in front of St. Peter's had an Italian crowd in it but there were no American uniforms.

Open To Public

"This square is open to the public, though German soldiers did not come into it," a Vatican guard said.

There was no special guard around the Vatican and at the portals of Vatican City, at the left of the facade, there were only a few papal gendarmes.

The Americans swooped right by but did not enter.

Rome, which has gone through so much for so long a time, took the vicissitudes of the past few years in its old stride and once more has come out on top. It's still the Eternal City.

Yanks Welcomed

All Rome was up at dawn today to see the Americans who swarmed in to occupy the whole of the capital.

From both the Appian and Casilinian ways columns of tanks, guns and trucks crowded with soldiers poured in. The Romans were lined up to greet them and pelt them with flowers.

Crowds were large even as the sun peeped above the horizon, and were still bigger as it cast its soft early rays over the grimy soldiers who had fought their way into the city.

The cheers grew louder and soon that famous Italian invention, confetti, made its appearance. It was homemade confetti.

The people, like their city, seemed war-worn and thinner than the Romans were before. But they were very happy and there was no doubt they were glad to be delivered by the Allies and glad to see Americans.

Happy But Restrained

The entry into Rome was something different than anyone had expected and devoid of the spectacular. But today was a triumph in the classic Roman style. The soldiers were happy, but restrained. They were overawed by Rome and within a short time it was evident that Rome had taken them as much as they had taken Rome.

The people's reception approached hysteria as the morning wore on and as more and more troops came into the city.

At 10 A. M. Lieut. Gen. Mark W. Clark, wearing a simple field uniform and no decorations, entered the city in a jeep and drove to the Campodoglio, or Roman city hall, and formally proclaimed the occupaton, praising the valor of his troops and paying tribute to those fallen.

Why the general elected to make his speech at the Compodoglio is a mystery. Its main connection with Rome lies in the fact that it overlooks the ancient Roman forum. Mussolini's balcony in the Palazzo Venezia a few blocks away looked empty and deserted.

The only wrecked sections of the city are adjacent to the San Lorenzo, Tiburtina, Ostiense and Trastevere rail yards bombed by Allied air forces.

Bridges Standing

All bridges over the Tiber were standing, though mines had been placed under some of them. These mines were removed by army engineers.

Even the Ponte Milvio on the main route north was not blown up.

It was certain, despite German protestations that Rome was an open city, that they had used it as a place from which to fire upon the Americans. Many of their knocked-out guns and combat vehicles littered the streets where they were caught in delaying actions.

One German tank was wrecked in the Piazza di Spagna, one of Rome's main squares, by an American tank which came down the Via Dei Due Macelli—street of the two butchers.

Guns On Church Reported

Some Romans said the Germans had mounted guns on the roof of the Basilica of St. John Lateran, which is Vatican extraterritorial property, but this was not officially confirmed.

It was certain, though, that the enemy had mounted guns on Mount Mario, which is inside Rome.

Food For Romans Is Allied Task

Washington, June 5 (AP)—Under Secretary of State Edward R. Stettinius said today that prompt measures are being taken to relieve food shortages in Rome, and that some announcements will be made about them later.

This raised the possibility that President Roosevelt might take occasion in his 15-minute broadcast tonight on the fall of Rome to reassure the people of that city about Allied plans for their welfare, as well as to state the Allied position with respect to military uses of Rome, and also to cover any Italian political question of primary concern to this Government.

Expects King To Resign

On political implications of the Italian capital's fall, Stettinius said that while he did not know of any exact timetable, it was his understanding that King Vittorio Emanuele now will delegate his powers to Prince Umberto and step aside. It is not contemplated that the King return to Rome.

He said there has been no decision whether Myron Taylor, President Roosevelt's personal representative to the Vatican, who holds the personal rank of ambassador but who has been in this country, will be sent back to the Vatican.

Balkan Reaction Watched

American diplomats view the fall of Rome as speeding the grand assault on Hitler's Europe and confronting Axis satellites and wavering neutrals over the world with clear evidence of the fate destined Berlin.

These officials examined reports on the Balkans and other European areas for signs of reaction to this latest great war development.

It has long been a theory of diplomats and political leaders both here and in London that the day the Allies marched into Rome would be the real beginning of the end for neutral and satellite support of Germany throughout Europe.

BERLIN ADMITS PRESTIGE LOSS

Claims Rome Evacuation Was Strategic Move.

Stockholm, June 5 (A. P.).—The Germans first learned of the fall of Rome in a 7 A. M. broadcast today, and the Berlin press said the Allied victory "involves a loss of prestige for Germany."

"The evacuation of Rome is the result of Gen. Kesselring's strategy and the city itself is not of great military importance. But giving up one of the Axis capitals involves a loss of prestige for Germany."

The Berlin correspondent of Aftonbladt said the Germans made a "lightning retreat" from Rome, withdrawing the main body of German troops to new positions north of the Tiber and north of Rome.

All German dispatches emphasized the task of feeding Rome's 1,155,000 people and asserted this would prove a severe headache for the Allies.

"Now all roads lead to Berlin," Aftonbladet commented editorially.

Axis Ambassadors Remain At Vatican

London, June 5 (AP)—Harold H. Tittmann, Jr., United States charge d'affaires at the Vatican, was quoted in a Morocco radio broadcast today as saying that Japanese and German Ambassadors, as well as Allied envoys, remained at their posts in Vatican City.

The radio, recorded by the Associated Press, said Tittmann, interviewed on a trip from the Holy City into Rome, declared: "It is very doubtful whether the Pope and the Vatican will change their attitude now that Rome is in Allied hands and I do not think they will abandon their attitude of strict neutrality."

Moscow Hails Victory.

Moscow, June 5 (A. P.).—News of the Allied capture of Rome was received enthusiastically in Mocow today as a sign of impending complete occupation of Italy and defeat of Germany.

Major-Gen. Mikhail Galaktionov, reviewing the victory in an article in Pravda, used the warmest words of praise yet given here to an Allied military operation.

Gen. Sir Harold Alexander's plan was described as "excellent," its execution "perfect," and its result "of the most important political and strategic significance.

CHURCHILL TO SPEAK TODAY

LONDON, Tuesday, June 6—(AP) Prime Minister Churchill is expected to tell the story of the fall of Rome to the House of Commons today.

FDR HAILS ROME VICTORY, WARNS HARD FIGHT AHEAD

Day of Germany's Surrender 'Lies Some Distance Away', He Says.

AIM IS TO CRUSH NAZIS

No Thanks Are Due Hitler for Sparing City, President Declares.

WASHINGTON, June 5—(AP) Hailing the capture of Rome with the jubilant phrase "one up and two to go," President Roosevelt declared tonight that the aim now is to drive Germany "to the point where she will be unable to recommence world conquest a generation hence."

Mr. Roosevelt, in a nation-wide radio broadcast, cautioned that this struggle with the Nazis would be tough and costly and that the day of Germany's surrender "lies some distance ahead."

Will Press Fight to Finish

Whether his reaffirmation that the fight would be pressed until Germany surrenders was a reply to the recent speech of Pope Pius XII was not stated. The Pope asserted last week that the idea that the war must end either in complete victory or complete destruction is a stimulant toward prolonging the conflict and expressed hope for an early peace.

Speaking of Rome as the great symbol of Christianity, the President declared "it will be a source of deep satisfaction that the freedom of the Pope and of Vatican City is assured by the armies of the United Nations."

But he declared that no thanks are due Hitler and his generals "If Rome was spared the devastation which the Germans wreaked on Naples and other Italian cities."

"The Allied generals maneuvered so skillfully," he said, "That the Nazis could have stayed long enough to damage Rome at the risk of losing their armies."

Allies Ready to Strike

"Our victory," Mr. Roosevelt asserted, "comes at an excellent time, while our Allied forces are poised for another strike at Western Europe—and while armies of other Nazi soldiers nervously await our assault. And our gallant Russian allies continue to make their power felt more and more."

The President extended to Italy the invitation to help in establishing a lasting peace and said, "all the other nations opposed to Fascism and Nazism should help give Italy a chance.

"The Germans, after years of domination in Rome, left the people in the Eternal City on the verge of starvation. We and the British will do everything we can to bring them relief. We have already begun to save the lives of the men, women and children of Rome."

The Italian people "are capable of self-government," Mr. Roosevelt continued, "we do not lose sight of their virtues as a peace loving nation."

Speaking of the military operations still to come in Europe, the President said:

"We shall have to push through a long period of greater effort and fiercer fighting before we get into Germany itself. The Germans have retreated thousands of miles, all the way from the gates of Cairo, through Libya and Tunisia and Sicily and Southern Italy.

In Italy, the President said, the people had lived so long "under the corrupt rule of Mussolini that, in spite of the tinsel at the top, their economic condition had grown steadily worse. Our troops have found starvation, malnutrition, disease, a deteriorating education and lowered public health—all byproducts of the Fascist misrule.

Stupendous Task Faced Allies

"The task of the Allies in occupation has been stupendous," he continued. "We have had to start at the very bottom, assisting local governments to reform on democratic lines."

"We have had to give them bread to replace that which was stolen out of their mouths by the Germans. We have had to make it possible for the Italians to raise and use their own local crops. We have to help them cleanse their schools of Fascist trappings."

Mr. Roosevelt said the American people approve "the salvage of these human beings who are only now learning to walk in a new atmosphere of freedom."

Some people, he said, may think of the financial cost of liberating Italy but he termed it a "form of relief."

"We hope," he added, "that this relief will be an investment for the future—an investment that will pay dividends by eliminating Fascism and ending any Italian desires to start another war of aggression."

It was the President's first major radio address for months. In it, he paid tribute to all the Allied troops who participated in the Italian campaign.

Text of Roosevelt's Talk

WASHINGTON, June 5—(AP) The text of President Roosevelt's speech tonight, follows:

Yesterday, June 4, 1944, Rome fell to American and Allied troops. The first of the Axis capitals is now in our hands. One up and two to go!

It is perhaps significant that the first of these capitals to fall should have the longest history of all of them. The story of Rome goes back to the time of the foundations of our civilization. We can still see there monuments of the time when Rome and the Romans controlled the whole of the then known world. That too is significant, for the United Nations are determined that in the future no one city and no one race will be able to control the whole of the world.

Symbol of Christianity

In addition to the monuments of the older times, we also see in Rome the great symbol of Christianity, which has reached into almost every part of the world. There are other shrines, and other churches in many places, but the churches and shrines of Rome are visible symbols of the faith and determination of the early saints and martyrs that christianity should live and become universal. And now it will be a source of deep satisfaction that the freedom of the Pope and of the Vatican City is assured by the armies of the United Nations.

It is also significant that Rome has been liberated by the armed forces of many nations. The American and British armies—who bore the chief burdens of battle—found at their sides our own North American neighbors, the gallant Canadians. The fighting New Zealanders from the far South Pacific, the courageous French and the French Moroccans, the South Africans, the Poles and the East Indians—all of them fought with us on the bloody approaches to Rome.

Italian Troops Participated

The Italians too, forswearing a partnership in the Axis which they never desired, have sent their troops to join us in our battles against the German trespassers on their soil.

The prospect of the liberation of Rome meant enough to Hitler and his generals to induce them to fight desperately at great cost of men and materials and with great sacrifice to their crumbling Eastern line and to their Western front.

No thanks are due to them if Rome was spared the devastation which the Germans wreaked on Naples and other Italian cities. The Allied generals maneuvered so skillfully that the Nazis could only have stayed long enough to damage Rome at the risk of losing their armies. But Rome is of course more than a military objective.

Has Great History

Ever since before the days of the Caesars, Rome has stood as a symbol of authority. Rome was the republic. Rome was the empire. Rome was and is in a sense, the Catholic church, and Rome was the capital of a united Italy. Later, unfortunately, Rome became the seat of Fascism—one of the three capitals of the Axis.

For a quarter-century the Italian people were enslaved and degraded by the rule of Mussolini from Rome. They will mark its liberation with deep emotion. In the north of Italy, the people are still dominated and threatened by the Nazi overlords and their Fascist puppets.

"Somehow in the back of my head is still remembered a name—Mussolini."

Allies Poised For Blow

Our victory comes at an excellent time, while our Allied forces are poised for another strike at Western Europe—and while armies of other Nazi soldiers nervously await our assault. And our gallant Russian allies continue to make their power felt more and more.

From a strictly military standpoint, we had long ago accomplished certain of the main objectives of our Italian campaign—the control of the sea lanes of the Mediterranean to shorten our combat and supply lines, and the capture of the airports of Foggia from which we have struck telling blows on the continent.

Nazis Still Strong

It would be unwise to inflate in our own minds the military importance of the capture of Rome. We shall have to push through a long period of greater effort and fiercer fighting before we get into Germany itself. The Germans have retreated thousands of miles, all the way from the gates of Cairo, through Libya and Tunisia and Sicily and southern Italy. They have suffered heavy losses, but not great enough yet to cause collapse.

Germany has not yet been driven to surrender. Germany has not yet been driven to the point where she will be unable to recommence world conquest a generation hence.

Therefore, the victory still lies some distance ahead. That distance will be covered in due time—Have no fear of that. But it will be tough and it will be costly.

Italian Poverty Depicted

In Italy the people had lived so long under the corrupt rule of Mussolini that, in spite of the tinsel at the top, their economic condition had grown steadily worse. Our troops have found starvation, malnutrition, disease, a deteriorating education and lowered public health—all by-products of the Fascist misrule.

The task of the Allies in occupation has been stupendous. We have had to start at the very bottom, assisting local governments to reform on democratic lines. We have had to give them bread to replace that which was stolen out of their mouths by the Germans. We have had to make it possible for the Italians to raise and use their own local crops. We have to help them cleanse their schools of Fascist trappings.

Americans Approve of Help

The American people as a whole approve the salvage of these human beings, who are only now learning to walk in a new atmosphere of freedom.

Some of us may let our thoughts run to the financial cost of it. Essentially it is what we can call a form of relief. At the same time we hope that this relief will be an investment for the future—an investment that will pay dividends by eliminating Fascism and ending any Italian desires to start another war of aggression in the future. They are dividends which justify such an investment, because they are additional supports for world peace.

The Italian people are capable of self-government. We do not lose sight of their virtues as a peace-loving nation.

Leaders in Arts

We remember the many centuries in which the Italians were leaders in the arts and sciences, enriching the lives of all mankind.

We remember the great sons of the Italian people — Galileo and Marconi, Michelangelo and Dante—and that fearless discoverer who typifies the courage of Italy—Christopher Columbus.

Italy cannot grow in stature by seeking to build up a great militaristic empire. Italians have been overcrowded within their own territories, but they do not need to try to conquer the lands of other peoples in order to find the breath of life. Other peoples may not want to be conquered.

Italians Welcomed in U. S.

...st, Italians have come ...s to the United ... been welcomed, they have prospered, they have become good citizens, community and governmental leaders. They are Italian-Americans. They are Americans—Americans of Italian descent.

Italians have gone in great numbers to the other Americas—Brazil and the Argentine, for example—and to many other nations in every continent of the world, giving of their industry and their talents, and achieving success and the comfort of good living.

Contributions Will Continue

Italy should go on as a great mother nation, contributing to the culture and progress and good will of all mankind — and developing special talents in the arts, crafts, and sciences, and preserving her historic and cultural heritage for the benefit of all peoples.

We want and expect the help of the future Italy toward lasting peace. All the other nations opposed to Fascism and Nazism should help give Italy a chance.

The Germans, after years of domination in Rome, left the people in the Eternal City on the verge of starvation. We and the British will do everything we can to bring them relief. Anticipating the fall of Rome, we made preparations to ship food supplies to the city, but it should be borne in mind that the needs are so great and the transportation requirements of our armies so heavy that improvement must be gradual. We have already begun to save the lives of the men, women and children of Rome.

War Machine Efficient

This is an example of the efficiency of your machinery of war. The magnificent ability and energy of the American people is growing the crops, building the merchant ships, making nad collecting the cargoes, getting the supplies over thousands of miles of water, and thinking ahead to meet emergencies—all this spells, I think, an amazing efficiency on the part of our armed forces, all the various agencies working with them, and American industry and labor as a whole.

No great effort like this can be a hundred per cent perfect, but the batting average is very, very high.

I extend the congratulations and thanks of the American people to General Alexander, who has been in command of the whole Italian operation; to General Clark and General Lease of the Fifth and the Eighth armies; to General Wilson, the Supreme Allied Commander of the Mediterranean theater, and General Devers his American deputy; to General Eaker; to Admirals Cunningham and Hewitt; and to all their brave officers and men.

May God bless them and watch over them and over all of our gallant, fighting men.

Victor Emmanuel Quits, Son Becomes New Ruler

JUN 7 1944

FEDER

King Names Umberto Lieutenant General of the Realm.

NAPLES, June 5—(AP) King Vittorio Emanuele III stepped aside as monarch of Italy today as he previously had said he would do upon the liberation of Rome and handed to his 39-year-old son, Crown Prince Umberto, all "royal prerogatives."

Italian political pressure had been brought to bear against him since the conquest of Naples.

Badoglio Countersigns Decree

In a decree signed by himself and countersigned by Premier Marshal Pietro Badoglio, head of the Italian liberation government, the king named his son lieutenant general of the realm.

The monarch, however, retained his title as head of the House of Savoy and remains a king without power.

NIGHT

King Vittorio Emanuele, who became ruler July 29, 1900, had announced last April 12 his "irrevocable" decision to withdraw from public life "on the day on which Allied troops enter Rome," and to turn his powers over to the crown prince.

Little more than a figurehead since Mussolini assumed the dictatorship of Italy, Vittorio Emanuele had won a reputation the first years of his reign as a sympathetic monarch, interested in his people and their problems.

Prince Umberto, tall and erect, opposed Fascism in Italy at the start but later made a truce with Mussolini.

In effect, Umberto becomes the king's regent.

Presented This Morning

The withdrawal was presented to the council of ministers this morning, an announcement by the ministry of the interior said tonight. The decree, signed by the king today at Ravello, announced Prince Umberto "will exercise all royal prerogatives without exception" and will sign royal decrees.

The king's withdrawal decree:

"I Vittorio Emanuele third, by the grace of God and by the will of the nation king of Italy, in collaboration with the president of the council of ministers and with the agreement of the council has ordered and order as follows:

"My beloved son, Umberto of Savoy, prince of Piedmont, is nominated our lieutenant general. In collaboration with responsible ministers he will in our name superintend all matters of administration and exercise all royal prerogatives without exception, signing royal decrees which will be countersigned and authenticated in the usual way.

"We order all concerned to observe this decree and to see that it is observed as the law of the state.

"Given at Ravello the fifth of June, 1944.

"Signed Vittorio Emanuele. Countersigned Pietro Badoglio."

Ministers Receive Message

The council of ministers at the morning meeting also received this message from Gen. Roberto Bencivenga to Badoglio:

"In the name of the government of Italy and the King and on behalf of the Allies, I have temporarily assumed command of the civil and military affairs of Rome and her territory situated in the war zone. Viva L'Italia."

Liberal Italian leaders loudly demanded abdication of Vittorio Emanuele after the conquest of Naples. The king's decision to retire from public life paved the way for a compromise and formation of an enlarged war cabinet under Marshal Badoglio in which each of the six political parties forming a liberation Junta was represented.

Crown Prince Umberto early in 1943 began to come more and more into political prominence. Tasks that would be assigned only to a leader of some political importance were given him, including a radio address to calm the Italian people fearful under heavy Allied air raids, and issuance of an order of the day calling upon Italian soldiers to fight harder.

Umberto, prince of Piedmont, became a general at the age of 29, and achieved the rank of Marshal in September, 1942. He married Marie-Jose of Belgium in 1930; they have four children.

JUN 7 1944

Naples, June 5 (A. P.).—King Victor Emmanuel has signed a decree giving up his throne and conferring his powers upon his son, Crown Prince Humberto, it was announced tonight. DAY

The monarch named Humbert lieutenant-general of the realm, but in the official decree retained title as head of the House of Savoy and thus remains a King without power.

Goering Theft Proven

JUN 7 1944

Allied Headquarters, Naples, June 5 (AP)—The theft of a costly altar statue from the Benedictine Abbey at Cassino for Reichsmarshal Hermann Goering has been proven by an order of the day issued on May 28 by Lieut. Gen. Richard Heidrich, commander of the German First Parachute Division, an official Allied source said today.

NIGHT

The order said: "I have sent a deputation to the Reichsmarshal. . . . The deputation took with them as a present from the division to the Reichsmarshal a costly altar statue taken from the Cassino Abbey by one battalion of the Third Parachute Regiment. The Reichsmarshal received our delegation in Berlin on May 25. He evinced great pleasure at the gift of the First Parachute Division."

The Allied source said that while it was long known that Goering's art collection has been enriched by loot from conquered lands, this is the "first case on which we have evidence of his looting objects from a sacred building."

PLOESTI OIL CUT TO 25 P. C. OF NORMAL

FEDER 1944

Allied Headquarters, Naples, June 5 (A. P.).—The productive capacity of Romania's Ploesti oil refineries has been slashed to less than 25 per cent of normal as a result of the last five Allied attacks on the vital German fuel sources, Allied officials estimated today.

A total of 4,500 tons of bombs have been rained down on the rich oil region in those five raids, which took place between May 5-31.

The refining plants have been so badly smashed, reconnaissance photographs reveal, that only one remains capable of any considerable production. Before the current series of raids Ploesti had been attacked in June, 1942, and August, 1943.

It is estimated here that the Ploesti oil fields in April of this year were capable of producing oil at the rate of about 9,000,000 tons annually. Now it is doubtful if they produce at the rate of 2,000,000 tons.

Aerial photos show great oil tanks with their tops ripped open, while important distillation and cracking plants have been heavily damaged.

REDS ATTACK IN IASI AREA

JUN 7 1944

Report Counterblows Drove Back German Forces

London, Tuesday, June 6 (AP)—A Russian counterattack threw back German forces in fierce fighting Monday in the Iasi sector of Romania, a Soviet communique supplement said today, while Red airmen pounded the railway junction of Chisinau, destroying much enemy transport and equipment.

The Germans, said the broadcast communique, attacked with fresh forces of infantry and tanks in the continuing battle above Iasi and succeeded in "approaching our positions, but a counterblow threw them back."

Midget Tanks Used

In the day's fighting the Nazis lost 41 tanks and 33 planes, Moscow said.

The Germans were reported to have used self-propelled midget tanks of the same type used with mediocre results on the Anzio beachhead. The Russians said most of the electrically-controlled and explosive-filled vehicles were knocked out before even reaching forward positions.

In one instance a junior lieutenant led a group of Red army men to meet the tanks, cut the cables by which they were controlled and, said the communique, "the German's torpedo was safely delivered to headquarters."

Military Trains Set Afire

In the raid on Chisinau the Soviets also bombed military objectives within the town.

Many German military trains were at the junction, 70 miles east-southeast of the Romanian city of Iasi, and dozens of fires broke out, accompanied by explosions, said the war bulletin.

Locomotives, cars, platform wagons with equipment, tankers and war material dumps were reported left blazing in the raid, from which one Soviet plane failed to return.

Nazis Claim New Gain

The Berlin radio, quoting a dispatch of DNB from the front at Iasi, declared Nazi tank formations and tank grenadiers captured another locality and two mountain ranges in the attack, and said the Russians, suffering serious losses there, constantly were concentrating more formations north of the city.

The commentator said the Russians had brought up several hundred howitzers and numerous salvo guns and anti-tank batteries to the front in the past 24 hours, but that the German air force, employing more than 1,000 battle planes and fighter-bombers silenced the new batteries in nonstop raids.

There were no changes on other sectors of the front today, the communique said, adding that in the air yesterday on all fronts Red planes and anti-aircraft fire brought down 39 enemy planes.

Claim Soviet Ships Sunk

In the far north the Germans declared they sank two Soviet ships on each of two nights in naval battles between Nazi patrol boats and Russian speedboats and minesweepers.

There have been reports for the past week of skirmishes in northern waters, where the Germans said units of the Red northern fleet have been making a determined attempt to break out of the Gulf of Finland into the Baltic Sea.

REDS REPEL NAZIS IN NORTH ROMANIA

London, June 5 (A. P.).—Apparently attempting to halt Russian preparations for a new offensive, the Germans continued to attack yesterday north and northwest of Iasi in Romania, but were hurled back, Moscow announced today.

A broadcast Soviet communique indicated that fighting was on a considerable scale, saying the Nazis had thrown large forces of both infantry and tanks into the fray.

DAY

Sharp air battles accompanied the ground fighting, the Russians said.

They reported the rest of the front was quiet.

Nazis Reinforce Drive Against Tito in Bosnia

Yugoslav Partisans Report Bitter Resistance to Germans

LONDON, June 5 (AP).—Fierce fighting is raging in western Bosnia, where the Germans are bringing up strong reinforcements to support an offensive against bitterly resisting Yugoslav Partisans, Morshal Josip Broz (Tito), announced today.

"Our men are heroically defending every inch of soil and are inflicting heavy losses on the enemy," said a bulletin broadcast from Tito's headquarters. "On the remaining frontal sectors in Yugoslavia fighting of local character is being carried out."

The communique reported the derailment and destruction of two trains laden with German troops and war material on the Belgrade-Zagreb line, which was said to have been cut in three places.

BRITISH SUBS SINK 31 SHIPS

Coast Targets Also Shelled By Mediterranean Craft

London, July 5 (AP)—British submarines in the Mediterranean and Aegean seas in a recent offensive against Axis shipping sank 31 enemy ships, 26 merchantmen and five naval auxiliaries, the Admiralty announced tonight.

In addition, the communique said, seven other merchantmen were damaged and shore targets on the Italian and south French coasts and on Crete were shelled by the underwater raiders.

Munitions Ship Included

The submarine bag, one of the largest yet announced by the Admiralty, included a large and strongly escorted munitions ship bound for the Greek island of Crete. In addition, the Admiralty said, a large supply ship and two medium-sized and 22 small supply vessels were sunk.

The five naval auxiliaries destroyed included a medium-sized salvage ship, a mine sweeper and a heavily armed vessel believed to have been another mine sweeper.

The communique said the shore targets included an oil refinery on the Italian coast, a railway freight yard and a seaplane hangar on the south coast of France, and a radio station on Crete.

Norwegian Coast Lashed

Naval task forces spearheaded by carrier-borne planes have been lashing Norwegian coastal shipping and shore installations. The admiralty recently announced the sixth successive strike in two months in northern waters in which three ships were blasted out of a convoy.

At the same time it was learned today that the British Government has made a vigorous protest to Turkey against her action in permitting German ships, until recently used in the Black Sea, to pass through the Dardinelles.

The British representation said the German vessels had been used as warships in the Black Sea and clearly were intended for similar use in the Aegean.

British Subs Sink 31 Axis Ships

London, June 5 (AP)—British submarines sank 31 Axis ships, 26 of them merchantmen and five naval auxiliaries, in recent operations in the Medoiterranean and Aegean seas, the Admiralty announced tonight.

Seven other merchantmen were damaged, the communique said.

One of the British prizes was a large and strongly-escorted munitions ship bound for the big Greek island of Crete.

Shore Targets Shelled

Submarines also shelled a number of shore targets on the Italian and south French coasts and on Crete, the Admiralty said.

The bag, one of the largest yet announced by the Admiralty, included two large supply vessels, two medium-sized and 22 small supply ships.

In the same area where the munitions ship was blown up, a large supply ship was torpedoed and sunk and a number of smaller vessels were dispatched by gunfire.

Mine Sweeper Sunk

The naval ships sung included a medium-sized salvage vessel and one of possibly two mine sweepers.

An oil refinery on the Italian coast, a railway yard, a seaplane hangar in the south of France and a radio station on Crete were bombarded by the undersea craft.

Dispatcher of Invasion Flash Begs Americans to Forgive Her

LONDON, June 5 — (AP) Joan Ellis, the timid, blond 22-year-old girl who inadvertently sent the flash which caused the erroneous Associated Press announcement Saturday of Allied landings in France, said tonight she would be back in the office in a few days and hoped to be able to do a good job for the AP when the big story does break.

"Everybody in the AP has been so nice and considerate," Miss Ellis said at her home, where she is recuperating from nervous tension. "I expect to come back to work by Friday and try to convince myself that I can do the work in spite of the strain of having made such an error that caused so much trouble.

"I am resting well and feel much better tonight. Not many people are bothering me. My first thought of the future was to get away from newspaper offices and try something quieter. But now I expect to return to help the staff with the big story."

In a special dispatch to the International News Service from Kingsbury Smith, London correspondent, Joan Ellis was quoted as saying:

"Please tell the American people how sorry I am for that false alarm. Ask them please to forgive me. I didn't mean to do it."

Paris Reports Yank Unit Reaches W. Africa

London, June 5 (AP)—The Paris radio today said an "important contingent of American troops has arrived in Angola, Portuguese West Africa."

The broadcast was unsubstantiated by any other source. Angola is on Africa's west coast. To the north is French Equatorial Africa and to the south is the Union of South Africa.

Catholics In England Sing Te Deum Sunday

London, June 5 (AP)—A Te Deum for deliverance will be sung in all the Catholic churches in England and Wales next Sunday on the order of the Archbishop of Westminster.

Announcing the service, the Archbishop today said "the city of the Vicar of Christ has been spared the worst horrors of modern warfare which threatened so long. We are grateful to our Allied leaders and to our servicemen for the courage and caution and humanity with which they have set Rome free. The whole Catholic and civilized world rejoices."

De Gaulle Alters Stand

ALGIERS, June 5 (AP).— General Charles De Gaulle abandoned today his efforts to make complete American participation in the forthcoming London negotiations a condition for his departure.

French officials held that the conference on civil administration and French-Allied relations would be pointless without American concurrence, but a source close to De Gaulle told American and British diplomats that stories that he would leave only if America was adequately represented were baseless.

Allied officials said, however, that De Gaulle twice had "suggested" American participation would be both desirable and essential.

It was learned reliably that a French national committee spokesman acted at De Gaulle's direction in telling correspondents the general wished full American participation, but these instructions later were retracted and the general's entourage disavowed the earlier reports.

French Armistice Voided

New York, June 5 (AP)—The Algiers radio said tonight the Italian Council of Ministers had adopted unanimously today a decree "to declare null and void the armistice agreement between the Vichy regime of Petain and Mussolini."

The broadcast quoted the council as saying "this step was taken on the day of the liberation of Rome and on the day before the liberation of all Europe to give marked expression to the unity of spirit between the Italian and French nations."

IRAQ PREMIER OUT

Bagdad, June 5 (A. P.).—Gen. Nuries Said, 57-year-old Premier of Iraq and Minister of National Defense since October, 1941, has resigned on the grounds of ill health.

CHINDITS HIT JAPS IN BURMA

Strike South Of Myitkyina As Chinese Gain In City

Southeast Asia Headquarters, Ceylon, June 5 (AP)—Air-borne Chindits are continuing their attacks from the south of the Japanese North Burma base of Myitkyina, and within the city Chinese and American forces have gained more than 200 yards in the southeast portion, Allied headquarters announced today.

North of the city, levies raided the village of Nsopzup, and to the south the Chindits pressed forward near Waingmaw.

Closing On Kamaing

Kamaing, 40 miles to the west, was being attacked by Allied troops from positions four and one half miles east and six and one half miles southeast of the city, and is "now more closely invested," said the bulletin from Admiral Lord Louis Mountbatten's headquarters. West of the Mogaung river, Chinese pushing southward took another village.

On the India side of the campaign, the city of Kohima was reported reliably to have been cleared completely of Japanese, although some units were clinging to the overlooking hills.

Along the Tiddim road American planes fired two enemy tanks and one fuel truck and destroyed 11 motor transports, and along the Paleltamu road and in the Imphal-Ukhrul area, Allied columns advancing under air and artillery support, "captured" several features" Saturday, the communique said.

"In the Bishenpur neighborhood," it added, "we have captured an important feature after an air strike."

To the east of the Burma fighting, in China's Yunnan province, a Chinese communique said troops southwest of the Salween river, supported by artillery, yesterday attacked Mengliehchieh, 24 miles east of Lungling and about five miles from the Huitung bridge, recapturing a strong point in the face of stiff resistance and putting enemy remnants to flight. The area is about five miles west of the Burma road.

ALLIED FORCES GAIN INSIDE MYITKYINA

Southeast Asia Command Headquarters, Kandy, Ceylon, June 5 (A. P.).—Chinese and American forces have gained 200 more yards in their drive in the southeastern section of Myitkyina in continuing severe fighting in that beleaguered Japanese base in North Burma, it was announced today.

A communique from Admiral Lord Louis Mountbatten's headquarters also announced that on the extreme western end of the North Burma front the Japanese are withdrawing from the town of Mamsum.

British air-borne Chindits were declared to be continuing their attack from the south of Myitkina from the neighboring village of Waingmaw, and Allied levies have raided Nsopzup, north of the key Japanese base.

Forty miles to the west at Kamaing the Japanese garrison "is now more closely invested," the war bulletin said, explaining that Allied troops have reached positions four and a half miles east and six and a half miles southeast of the town.

Chinese troops thrusting down the west side of the Mogaung River valley were said to have captured a village.

SIX JAP COLUMNS MAKE NEW GAINS IN CHANGSHA DRIVE

Japs Near Changsha

Chungking, June 5 (AP)—Japanese vanguards from the north struck within 25 miles tonight of strategic Changsha, provincial capital of Hunan, field dispatches said.

This marked a 17-mile advance from Sinshih.

The United States 14th Air Force is giving strong support to the Chinese fighting to halt the enemy advance toward Changsha, harassing the Japanese without respite.

Column Driven Back

Field dispatches said a second Japanese column which advanced ten miles southwest from Sinshih had been driven back.

The Japanese made still further landings on the southern shore of Lake Tungting, the latest north of Yiyang, 50 miles northwest of Changsha. This exposed the city to attack from the northwest, north and northeast, and the Japanese seemed to be trying to converge the columns.

A communique declared the Chinese had scored successes in the western Hupeh area north of Hunan, but Japanese activity there has been looked upon as a screen for the more important Hunan offensive drive.

Make Water-Borne Thrusts

However, all the way from Pingkiang, 50 miles northeast of Changsha, to a point north of Yiyang, 75 miles to the west, where the enemy made new water-borne thrusts across Lake Tungting, invader columns were slashing southward against bitter opposition, apparently attempting to converge the columns for an all-out assault on Changsha.

The Chinese communique tonight gave this picture of the Hunan front:

One column advancing south from Pingkiang was halted 18 miles north of Liuyang, which is 30 miles due east of Changsha, and heavy fighting was in progress in the mountain paths above Liuyang.

Another column, which split from the one driving on Liuyang, pushed southwest toward Changsha.

The third and fourth columns thrust southward from captured Sinshih. One advanced 17 miles and was halted 25 miles north of Changsha, losing many men in fierce attacks. The other was stopped ten miles southwest of Sinshih and 32 miles from Changsha.

The fifth body, immediately west of the Canton-Hankow railway, once again stabbed through Kweiyi and was hotly engaged about 40 miles above Changsha.

The sixth group forced landings on the south shore of Tungting lake in scores of armored boats, and these forces were fiercely intercepted by the Chinese about ten miles north of Yiyang.

Fight to Finish

Gen. Hsueh Yueh, the "Little Tiger," governor of Hunan and commander of Chinese forces there, today issued an order of the day declaring "the fate of the nation depends upon the outcome of the present battle," and reiterating the determination of the Chinese to fight the invader to the bitter end. He exhorted the Chinese to put forth their best effort "to repulse the enemy and deal him a crushing blow."

To the north, in Hupeh province, a communique said smashing Chinese counterattacks between Tungting lake and the Yangtze river brought recapture of Kungan, 30 miles southwest of the Yangtze port of Shasi. Japanese also were routed at the east bank of the Sungtze and fled in confusion, the bulletin said.

In this area the Chinese said they had reached a region southwest of Nanhsien, and repelled Japanese forces which descended from Hupeh toward Changteh in the Rice bowl, 100 miles northwest of Changsha.

Strong support was given the defenders of Hunan by the 11th U. S. Air force, Lt. Gen. Joseph W. Stilwell's headquarters said.

Mustang and Warhawk fighters, in sweeps over the area south of Tungting lake, repeatedly attacked Japanese troop columns, motor transport supply depots and river craft. Along the road near Pingkiang they strafed five enemy truck columns and a unit of cavalry, causing heavy damage and casualties, Stilwell's bulletin said. Other aircraft struck at Tungcheng in southern Hupeh, hitting an oil dump and destroying trucks.

JAPS PLEDGE BLOW AT ALLIES IN CHINA

London, June 5 (A.P.).—Tokyo radio today asserted Japan "is ready to launch the most formidable offensive ever against the Allies—an offensive which will cut China in two and foil American strategy."

"The moment to strike has come," declared the broadcast.

JAP DESTROYER SUNK BY BOMBER

ADVANCED ALLIED HEADQUARTERS, New Guinea, Tuesday, June 6.—(AP) American bomber lines extended westward resulted in the first reported bag of Japanese warships in more than two months, when long-range planes sank one destroyer and left another in a sinking condition, headquarters announced today.

These two separate operations highlighted renewed aerial warfare which produced stiff sky battles over the Japanese naval base at Truk in the Caroline islands, and the American-invaded Schouten islands off the Dutch New Guinea north coast. Seventeen Japanese planes were shot down against the loss of one American bomber in these engagements.

Land warfare on Biak, main Schouten island, remained fluid. A column of recently-landed reinforcements outflanked the Japanese and approached the Mokmer airdrome, a prime objective, from the north. They were two miles from the airstrip. Another American column remained about two miles east of Mokmer.

During the night of June 3-4, a small force of Liberator bombers, ranging out over the Halmahera sea, northwest of Dutch New Guinea sank one Japanese destroyer and hit two other small vessels east of Morotai island.

The action occurred approximately 300 miles southeast of Mindanao, main southern island of the Philippines. It marked the first sinking of a Japanese warship by Southwest Pacific land-based air forces that close to the former American archipelago.

During the same night Catalina patrol planes, 50 miles off of Manokwari in north Dutch New Guinea, scored two direct hits on a Japanese destroyer, leaving the vessel dead in the water.

These were the first reported sinking of a Japanese war vessel since a destroyer was sunk off Aitape, Dutch New Guinea, March 21.

A spokesman for Gen. Douglas MacArthur said the significance in this bag was the fact Allied bomber lines have been extended several hundred miles during the past few weeks.

A small flight of Thunderbolt fighters whirled into 42 enemy planes east of Bosnek, the beachhead on Biak, during the night of June 3 [illegible] four fi with one more probable. The p vious day, Thunderbolts knocke down six enemy fighters off Owi island, five miles south of Biak, which American forces occupied June 2.

Admiralty-based Liberators hammered Truk with 79 tons of bombs Saturday. This marked a continuation of heavy assaults by southwest Pacific planes, in conjunction with other attacks by bombers from the central Pacific.

Planes Sink Jap Vessel

Pacific Fleet Headquarters, Pearl Harbor, June 5 (AP)—One ship in a convoy of small Japanese vessels sighted west of Truk was sunk, another probably sunk and several heavily strafed in two attacks by single navy search planes last Friday and Saturday, Admiral Chester W. Nimitz announced today.

The group of patrol-type craft, on which the Japanese apparently must depend now to supply beleaguered Truk, was spotted Friday by a navy bomber.

The navy plane attacked immediately, probably sinking one vessel. The others were strafed.

Sights Same Group

Another navy plane sighted the same ship disposition Saturday and attacked. One of the auxiliaries was sunk and another severely damaged.

Ketoi Island in the Kuriles, 450 miles from Japan's northern homeland island of Hokkaido, was bombed before dawn Sunday, Nimitz also reported. No opposition was encountered. The attack was made by Liberator bombers of the 11th Army Air Force. A single navy search plane bombed Paramushiro, at the northern end of the Kuriles, the same day.

JAP SURFACE SHIPS ACTIVE NEAR TRUK

JUN [illegible]

United States Pacific Fleet Headquarters, Pearl Harbor (A. P.).—An indication that Japanese surface ships again are becoming active in waters around Truk was contained in a Navy report today that American planes probably sank one patrol-type vessel and attacked auxiliary craft in that area last Friday and Saturday.

Enemy surface craft have been observed only infrequently in Truk waters since two heavy task force raids on the Japanese base earlier this year and subsequent operations by land based planes.

The Navy also reported a continuation of the almost unbroken series of air raids on the Kurile Islands at the northern end of Japan's home island chain.

JAP NAVAL FORCES ACTIVE NEAR TRUK

WASHINGTON, June 5—(AP) An indication that Japanese surface ships again are becoming active in waters around Truk was contained in a Navy report today that American planes probably sank one patrol-type vessel and attacked auxiliary craft in that area last Friday and Saturday.

Enemy surface craft have been observed only infrequently in Truk waters since two heavy task force raids on the Japanese base earlier this year and subsequent operations by land based planes.

The Navy also reported a continuation of the almost unbroken series of air raids on the Kurile islands at the northern end of Japan's home island chain.

The Pacific fleet release No. 433 said:

"Several enemy patrol-type vessels were sighted west of Truk atoll on June 2 (west longitude—U. S. date) and attacked by a single search plane. One was probably sunk and all were heavily strafed. On June 3 another search plane sighted the disposition and made an attack which resulted in the sinking of one of the auxiliaries and severe damage to another.

"Liberators of the 11th Army Air force bombed Ketoi island in the Kuriles before dawn on June 4. No opposition was encountered. A single search plane of fleet airwing four bombed Paramushiro island before dawn on June 4. All of our planes returned from these operations."

Recognition For Ecuador

Quito, Ecuador, June 5 (AP)—Brazil, Peru and Paraguay recognized the new Ecuadorean Government today and Cesar Coloma Silva, Under Secretary of Foreign Affairs, said communications received from other nations assured similar action by "all republics of the Hemisphere." Brazil was first to recognize the new regime.

Fourth Term Backed In Puerto Rico

San Juan, Puerto Rico, June 5 (A. P.).—Gov. Guy Rexford Tugwell was chosen yesterday as one of Puerto Rico's six delegates to the Decomratic National Convention, pledged in support of a fourth term for President Roosevelt

The convention also pledged support for a Vice-Presidential candidate "in harmony and sympathy with the present administration and with the Democratic party."

Lone American Flyer Rescued By Spaniards

Santa Cruz de Tenerife, June 4 (AP—Delayed)—A lone American airman, who said the bomber in which he was crewman had been forced down at seaten days ago by engine trouble, was rescued from a liferaft off the Canary Islands by Spanish fishermen today.

Spanish naval vessels were dispatched to search for other members of the plane's crew.

U-Boat Sent To Doom

Ottawa, June 5 (AP)—The Canadian destroyer St. Laurent, assisted by the frigate HMCS Swansea and the Royal Navy destroyer Forester, recently sank a U-boat with depth charges and gunfire, the Royal Navy announced tonight.

Zoot Suit War Flares in Montreal

Montreal, June 5 (A. P.).—Two members of the Merchant Marine were hospitalized and a civilian was taken into custody on an attempted murder charge today as the result of week-end clashes between service personnel and zoot-suiters in various sections of Montreal.

City and military police broke up the downtown battle in which the two men were injured, after several shots had been fired.

Large clashes kept city, provincial and service police on emergency schedules throughout the week end, with scores of persons suffering from minor injuries. Thirty-six sailors and two civilians appeared in court today on charges of disturbing the peace.

New York, June 5 (AP) — Propaganda Minister Joseph Goebbels, declaring five years of war had "excessively taxed" the German war machine and exposed it to "various ailments," appealed today to German soldiers to display "more initiative" on the field of battle.

At the same time, United States Government monitors said, the German high command issued an order calling for freer imposition of death sentences on members of the armed forces to maintain "discipline or the security of troops."

The high command order, according to a dispatch transmitted for the German press, was intended to supplement the general wartime code. It provided that all established penalties ought to be raised to the maximum "if the sound instinct of the people considers the normal penalty inadequate."

Goebbels, in a special article transmitted for the German army newspaper front and homeland, asserted that certain "weak individuals" had been showing initiative only in evading "moral obligations" in the absence of specific orders from their superiors.

"Where would we end if the individual would only speak of 'our war' whenever a success is achieved and of 'your war' in case of failures?" he asked.

King on Air at 3 P. M.

NEW YORK, June 6 (Tuesday) (AP).—The London radio, in a broadcast recorded by the Federal Communications Commission, said that King George VI would deliver a special broadcast tonight at 9 P. M. London time, 3 P. M. E. W. T.

SUBMARINES SINK 16 JAP VESSELS

JUN 7 1944

WASHINGTON, June 6 — (AP) The cargo-carrying fleet with which Japan supplies her besieged outer defenses is shy 16 more vessels, sent down by American submarines.

Included in the latest bag, announced by the Navy today, was a large transport (a type vitally needed by the enemy to move men into or get them out of endangered spots) one big, seven medium and two small cargo vessels, four medium and one small cargo transports.

Since the start of the war, American submarines have sunk 589 Japanese ships of which 148 were combatant vessels. In recent months, the average sunk has been close to one a day, a rate believed to surpass any possible replacement by the Japanese shipbuilding industry.

For the 589 enemy vessels sunk, the American submarine fleet has paid with the loss of about a score of its ships. Since the start of the war, 23 submarines have been lost, one of them destroyed at Cavite in the Philippines to prevent capture, and two by causes other than enemy action. The remaining 20 appear on Navy records under the grim heading "overdue and presumed lost."

Text Of Communique

Navy Department Communique No. 522 said:

"Pacific and Far East:

"1. United States submarines have reported the sinking of 16 vessels in operations against the enemy in these waters, as follows:

"One large transport.

"One large cargo vessel.

"Seven medium cargo vessels.

"Two small cargo vessels.

"Four medium cargo transports.

"One small cargo transport.

"2. These actions have not been reported in any previous Navy Department communique."

The total of enemy ships sunk to date includes 148 combatant vessels.

BLOCK ISLAND, CARRIER, LOST

Navy Announces Sinking Of Escort In Atlantic

Washington, June 5 (AP)—Loss of the United States escort carrier Block Island by enemy action in the Atlantic was announcmed today by the navy.

Casualties, the navy said, were light. The announcement did not explain how the vessel went down —whether by submarine action, gunfire, aerial bombs or mines.

The Block Island was the first American aircraft carrier announced lost in the Atlantic in the war.

Text Of Communique

The navy communique follows:

"1. The escort carrier U. S. S. Block Island was sunk in the Atlantic during May, 1944, as the result of enemy action.

"2. The next of kin of casualties, which were light, have been notified."

The Block Island was commanded by Capt. Francis M. Hughes, of Selma, Ala., a native of Charlottesville, Va.

Second Escort Carrier Lost

The carrier was launched June 6, 1942. Escort carriers generally are converted vessels, with flight decks built on merchant ship type hulls.

The Block Island was the 158th navy ship lost in the war. One other escort carrier, the Liscome Bay, has been sunk. She went down in action during the Gilbert Island landings last November. Four big carriers—the Lexington, Yorktown, Wasp and Hornet—have been lost in the Pacific war.

One battleship, the Arizona, was destroyed in the Pearl Harbor attack. The other ships include six heavy cruisers, three light cruisers, 21 destroyers, 23 submarines and 77 miscellaneous craft.

British Freighter Sunk

Miami, Fla., June 5 (AP)—A British freighter, manned by a French crew, was torpedoed and sunk early in May in the first reported outbreak of submarine warfare in the Atlantic Ocean in many months.

Six men are missing, but 47 others sailed 500 miles to the coast of South America in two lifeboats.

Robert Arthur Nutton, 19-year-old United States Navy signalman, of South Portland, Maine, said two torpedoes struck the vessel shortly before sundown.

"We abandoned ship and found places in two lifeboats and two liferafts," he related.

Reach Coast In 7 Days

"Soon after the ship sank, the submarine came alongside one lifeboat. An officer, speaking English, asked 'where is the skipper?' We replied that he had gone down with the ship. Later, though, we found him floating around in a life preserver.

"The next morning 39 of us got into a big lifeboat and eight into a smaller one. I was in the big boat. We sailed to shore in seven days. The small boat made it a day or so later."

BRITISH VESSEL SUNK BY SUB IN ATLANTIC

WASHINGTON, June 5—(AP) A medium-sized British merchant vessel was torpedoed and sunk by an enemy submarine in the Atlantic early in May, the Navy announced today. The ship was manned by a French crew but listed among its gun crew one United States navy man. The latter, a survivor, has been landed at an East coast port.

SOVIET AWARD TO MARSHALL

JUN 7 1944

Ambassador Presents Highest Honor To U. S. Army Chief

Washington, June 5 (AP)—Gen. George C. Marshall, United States Army chief of staff, said tonight "the final action in this terrible European war is now focused on a single battle in which every Allied force will be represented.

"It is to be a battle to the death for the Nazis and a battle to victory for the Allies," he told an audience at the Russian Embassy, where he was decorated with the Order of Suvorov, First Degree, highest honor of the Union of Soviet Socialist Republics.

Presented By Gromyko

The decoration, presented by Ambassador Andrei A. Gromyko, was conferred on General Marshall "for outstanding military activities and merits in the leadership of the American armed forces in the fight against the common enemy . . . Hitlerite Germany."

"I am profoundly honored," General Marshall said.

Curtin Says Australia Feeds Allies in Pacific

National Press Club Hears Him at Luncheon

WASHINGTON, June 5 (AP).—Australia under reverse lend-lease is supplying 95 per cent of the food consumed by American forces in the southwest Pacific, Prime Minister John Curtin told a National Press Club luncheon today.

While asserting that food represented Australia's principal contribution under the reciprocal aid program, Mr. Curtin added that his country provided a wide variety of goods and services ranging from soldiers' clothing to the assembly of bombers for the Army Air Forces.

He placed its aggregate value at $519,675,000 and said $155,350,000 of that amount was provided in the last five months. He said the sum represented 18 per cent of Australia's war expenditure, compared with 14 per cent of this country's war costs diverted to lend-lease.

Stressing the part he said Australian food was playing in Allied war plans, the Prime Minister said his government had placed food production in the same category as munitions to achieve maximum production.

POLAND'S PREMIER ARRIVES FOR TALKS WITH ROOSEVELT

Welcomed to Washington to Confer on Questions Involving His Country.

Washington, June 5 (A. P.).—Prime Minister Stanislaw Mikolajczyk of Poland arrived here today for a week's visit as a guest of the United States Government. The visit is made with full advance information to the Russian and British governments, and has raised some hope here of a new understanding between the Polish regime and Moscow.

Immediately before Mr. Mikolajczyk's arrival by automobile from Baltimore, Under-Secretary of State Edward R. Stettinius said at a press conference that his visit would bring a general exchange of views between him and American officials. He said in part: "On the invitation of this Government, the Polish Prime Minister is arriving in Washington today on a visit of courtesy. . . . He is expected, during his short stay, to exchange views with the President and other American officials on general European and Polish questions."

Mr. Stettinius declined to elaborate on this statement when asked whether he now had great hope for a quick settlement of the Russo-Polish dispute over boundary and political matters. He said that the American offer of good offices in trying to settle this dispute and restore friendly relations is still open, and that we have no new general proposals to make.

Originated in White House.

The State Department said that Mr. Mikolajczyk would stay at Blair House, the Government's guest mansion across from the department and the White House. Stephen Early, the President's press secretary, said that the invitation for the visit originated in the White House.

On Wednesday evening the Prime Minister will be the guest of honor at a dinner given by the President at the White House.

Immediately after the press conference Mr. Stettinius went to Blair House to greet the visitor.

The members of Mikolajczyk's party were named by the State Department as Stanislaw Tabor, Witold Kulerski and Jozef Zaranski. They were not otherwise identified.

Signs of Hope Increase.

During the past month hope has arisen for a solution of the political problems between Poland and Russia based on the co-operation given to Russian troops advancing from the east by the Polish Underground fighters. Prime Minister Churchill said in his last speech that he believed that the breach was not so wide as it appeared on the surface.

It was announced last Christmas that Mr. Mikolajczyk would come to this country to confer with President Roosevelt, but his visit was postponed, presumably because of difficulties within the Polish Government and in relations with Russia. Thus, his arrival hints that some good chance of solving Russo-Polish difficulties, if not an actual formula, now exists. Also, the bitter verbal attacks from both sides, which have marked the year-long estrangement of the two governments, have been notably absent of late.

The Polish Government in London, for reasons it describes as internal, has lately moved toward changes in personnel affecting persons who have been the direct butt of Russian criticism. In particular, it was recommended that Gen. Sosnokowski be removed from his succession to the Priemership. The boundary question has disturbed the Polish Government, which turned down the Russian proposal to set the frontier at the Curzon Line, declaring that a Government in Exile is not empowered to dispose of the territory of its oppressed people. However, recent reports say that the Russians have offered to moderate their claims, leaving the cities of Vilna and Lwow to the Poles.

Representative Celler (D.-N. Y.) renewed today his demand for an explanation of what happened to $12,000,000 which President Roosevelt turned over to the late Premier Sikorski for the Polish underground and "why some of it has been found circulating in the United States."

The New Yorker raised the question about ten days ago and declared today: "The Polish Government has not seen fit to answer my charge that American money turned over to the Polish Government by President Roosevelt for underground work in Poland has been improperly used in the United States."

"The Polish Government," Mr. Celler's statement said, "evidently prefers not to answer that charge. But it must be answered."

He asserted the fund was turned over to the Polish Government in Exile with the specific understanding that the money was to go to England in diplomatic pouches and thence through Polish Government channels to that country's underground.

The statement said some of the currency had turned up in this country and that some had been used to maintain a propaganda organization here.

Leahy Demands Pact To Hit Aggressors

Mount Vernon, Iowa, June 5 (AP). Admiral William D. Leahy, chief of staff to the President, declared today permanent peace could be achieved if "civilized Christian peoples should at the end of this war enter into a solemn agreement to join forces at once in war against any nation that may in the future violate the sovereignty or the territory of any nation."

"Such an agreement would make international war by an aggressor impossible of success," he asserted in an address at the Cornell College commencement exercises. "Foreknowledge of certain failure would prevent aggression even by such pagan peoples as are now attempting to enslave the world."

Political Problems Inevitable

"After the peace will come the inevitable post-war political problems, among which, and, in my opinion of outstanding importance, is an agreement by the victorious civilized nations to prevent international wars for a long time in the future," he continued.

"I am convinced that this can be accomplished, and I believe that at least in our country the cost of this war in treasure and sorrow has convinced our people of the necessity for effective preventative preparations. . . .

"At Any Price"

"Through the years we have heard individuals and advocate a policy of peace at any price. I Repeat—'at any price'—and with my experience in wars in many parts of the world, and in spite of my hatred for war, I am sure that we of Iowa are in complete disagreement with them. Everybody may have peace if they are willing to pay any price for it.

"Part of this any price is slavery, dishonor of your women, destruction of your homes and denial of your God. I have seen all of these abominations in other parts of the world as the price of not resisting invasion, and I have no thought that the inhabitants of this State of my birth (the admiral was born at Hampton) have any desire for peace at that price, or that they lack the fortitude that is necessary to discourage aggression by the barbarians who are now about to be driven back to their kennels, or by the savages who may arise at some later date against our civilized world."

NAVY CASUALTIES

Washington, June 5 (A. P.)—The Navy Department announced today the names of sixty-four casualties in the United States Navy, Marine Corps and Coast Guard which makes a total of 54,563 casualties reported by the Navy since December 7, 1941. Of this total 19,715 are reported dead, 12,220 wounded, 9,166 missing and 4,462 prisoners of war. Included in the list reported today are the following with their next of kin:

HEAVY BOMBER OUTPUT RECORD

Wilson Gives Statistics on May's Production.

Washington, June 5 (A. P.).—Warplane production topped its goal by 2 per cent in May, Charles E. Wilson reported today, with 8,902 aircraft delivered to the armed forces and heavy bomber output described as "the most we ever got in a month." Mr. Wilson, executive vice-chairman of the War Production Board and head of the aircraft production board, said that the showing was particularly gratifying since every high-urgency ship was delivered at or above scheduled rates. Every bomber plant met or exceeded schedule, he said.

Three plants are to be dropped from the production of Liberator B-24 heavy bombers, Mr. Wilson told a press conference, but will concentrate on other work, so that there will be no decline in production or employment. These are the Consolidated plants at Fort Worth, Tex., and San Diego, Cal., and the Douglas plant at Tulsa, Okla. Tulsa will turn exclusively to Douglas's light bomber, the invader.

No Cutbacks Planned.

This will leave the production o fthe big B-24 centered in the North American plant in Dallas, where Liberator production is scheduled into next year, and the huge Ford plant at Willow Run, Mich. Mr. Wilson gave assurance that no aircraft cutbacks are contemplated beyond the fighter plane curtailment which resulted in the cancellation of the Navy's Corsair contract with the Brewster Aeronautical Corporation two weeks ago, effective on July 1.

"While the number of aircraft produced is not a record," Mr. Wilson said, in comparing May with March's peak of 9,118 planes, "nevertheless, in terms of airframe weight, a new high was reached with a total of 104 million pounds." Mr. Wilson declined to specify the number of heavy bombers produced but said that for several months production has been substantially greater than the 1,000 four-engined bombers reported in January.

The new B-29 super-Fortress is included in the heavy bomber totals. Mr. Wilson said that the trend of aircraft production was approximately horizontal in the next few months in number of planes, but that airframe weight would be stepped up slightly from month to month.

House Republicans Demand Story of Pearl Harbor Attack

WASHINGTON, June 5 — (AP) Shouting denunciations of high figures from the President down, House Republicans today demanded "the full story" of the Pearl Harbor attack, charged that the Roberts commission which investigated had two reports—"one secret"—and that the conclusions of the one made public did not fit the testimony.

On top of that, Rep. Maas (R.-Minn.), ranking minority member of the Naval affairs committee, asserted that his group had been denied access to the original testimony obtained by the investigating commission head by Supreme Court Justice Owen J. Roberts.

All this, the Republicans said, added up to an effort to "cloak the true responsibility."

A dozen members on the minority side joined in the series of acrimonious comments during debate on a resolution to extend for one year the statute of limitations so that anyone derelict in his duty at Pearl Harbor Dec. 7, 1941, eventually could be court-martialed.

Senate Adopts Resolution

Earlier the Senate adopted a similar resolution over the protest of Senator Clark (D.-Mo.) who insisted on an immediate trial for Admiral Husband E. Kimmel and Maj. Gen. Walter C. Short.

House Republicans and Democrats joined in a two-fisted arguemnt about the political possibilities. Rep. Clark (D.-N. C.) touched it off when he said there were some more interested in getting President Roosevelt out of the White House than they are getting Hitler out of Berlin.

Rep. Fish (R.-N. Y.) replied that such remarks create disunity besides being "unfair and untrue" and that the soldiers and sailors fighting the war "are Reepublicans and Democrats."

Spectators applauded when Rep. Short (R.-Mo.), sponsor of the extension, declared that "some people may forget Pearl Harbor but the mothers and fathers and uncles and aunts of the boys who died there aren't going to forget it."

Majority Leader McCormack (Mass.) asserted that Congress should avoid "emotions" that could interfere with the war effort.

"Let the chips fall where they may," Short retorted.

Want Trials Now

Fish and Short said that both Admiral Kimmel and General Short want "free and open trials" now. Rep. Graham (R.-Pa.), commented that they were being denied their constitutional rights by not being called for trial.

At that point, Chairman Sumners (D.-Tex.) of the judiciary committee expressed the personal belief that the statute for trial has expired anyhow, despite the Congressional action, and all this was "much ado about nothing."

Thereupon, a group on the Republican side touched on the Roberts report.

Rep. Celler (D.- N. Y.) said that investigation demonstrated a willingness to do something about the charges of dereliction but Rep. Short interjected:

"Yes, they made a report. In fact, they made two of them. One of them is in the secret archives and you and I have never seen it."

Rep. Bradley (R.-Mich.) chimed in with the comment that Admiral Kimmel "has already repudiated the truthfulness of the Roberts report."

Rep. Maas then asserted that members of his Naval committee "asked for the original testimony and it was denied to us. We know the conclusions were not in accord with it."

APPEAL MADE BY STETTINIUS

Asks Congress to Restore Funds for UNRRA.

Washington, June 5 (A. P.).—Edward R. Stettinius, Under-Secretary of State, urged Congress today to restore a $350,000,000 drawing account on lend-lease funds to a $450,000,000 appropriation for the United Nations Relief and Rehabilitation Administration. The House passed a $450,000,000 apropriation for UNRRA last week, but the lend-lease transfer authorization which would bring UNRRA resources up to $800,000,000 was lost on a parliamentary objection.

Mr. Stettinius said in a statement:

"The success of the UNRRA will be placed in grave jeopardy and military operations for the liberation of Europe may be unnecessarily prolonged, if the United States fails to provide—and to provide in time—its share of the funds necessary for UNRRA operations. UNRRA may be called upon to begin active operations in some liberated areas within the current year

Call for $800,000,000.

"How rapidly its resposibilities will expand in scope will depend on military developments which no one can foresee. It is, however, essential that we be ready, it is already late, and $800,000,000 is the minimum contribution by the United States necessary to provide for the first six months of active operations by UNRRA.

"The $450,000,000 voted by the House is required for advance procurement of those supplies that must be bought ahead of time if they are to be on hand when they are needed, but the $350,000,000 which is in transfer authority which the House did not approve is required for other supplies equally essential to the first six months of active relief operations. This $350,000,000 is an essential part of the amount needed now for UNRRA; to provide for only one part without the other would seriously prejudice UNRRA's operations.

"I am confident that the Congress, on due consideration of what is at stake, will reverse this decision and that the appropriation bill, when it is finally passed, will provide the full amount necessary for UNRRA to undertake the responsibilities which the United States and the other united and associated nations had assigned to it."

Hemisphere Rules For Touring Set

Washington, June 5 (AP)—Senator Connally (D., Texas) unrolled a rosy post-war prospectus for ration-hobbled motor tourists today by releasing details of an agreement on international highway travel between 12 of the American republics.

Designed, according to Secretary of State Hull, to "stimulate and facilitate motor travel among the countries of this hemisphere by simplifying certain formalities," the convention has been signed on behalf of the United States and 11 Latin-American nations but still must be ratified by the Senate.

Rules Are Set Up

It sets up uniform rules governing registration, driving licenses, standards of size and equipment, and the keeping of records of travel across national frontiers.

When the last "A" ticket is thrown away and the family buys a set of new tires and hops in the sedan for a trip to Peru, about all they are going to have to worry about is how to speak Spanish and where to pack the native pottery they buy.

Special Licenses

The hemisphere-wandering motorist will have a special international registration plate for his car—an oval marker three inches high and ten inches long bearing his nation's name.

In addition to the United States, the agreement has been signed by Bolivia, Brazil, Cuba, the Dominican Republic, Ecuador, Guatemala, Haiti, Nicaragua, Peru, El Salvador and Costa Rica. Nine more signatories would account for all the Western Hemisphere republics.

SENATOR TOBEY BACKS PLEA FOR CHILDREN

WASHINGTON, June 5 — (AP) Senator Tobey (R.-N. H.) today added his voice to that of New England's Clare Boothe Luce (R.-Conn.) and Senator Maloney (D.-Conn.), advocating immediate shipment of food to European children. They and other New England members of both Houses supported "child feeding resolutions."

Representative Luce made a vigorous plea for action in a broadcast last Friday. Senator Maloney is to address a mass meeting on the subject in Carnegie Hall, New York, next Sunday.

Senator Tobey, likewise active in the movement crystallized by the Temporary Council on Food for Europe's Children, commented today in a statement that "experience shows that these children can be saved without aiding the enemy."

He expressed the belief that "the good-will created for us by this service would be a real factor in the days ahead."

Hawaii-Washington Flight Record Set

Washington, June 5 (AP)—A navy transport plane bringing Vice-Admiral John H. Towers, deputy commander in chief of the Pacific Fleet, to Washington, has set a new record for transport flights between Pearl Harbor and the Capital.

The navy today said the plane, described as a transport version of a four-engine plane used for long-range over-water search, made the 4,945-mile flight in 26½ hours, of which 25 were in the air. Only one stop was made, at Albuquerque, N. M., after winging 3,295 miles from Hawaii.

The navy said Towers came to Washington for a visit.

Warns of Danger In Plant Shutdowns

Washington, June 5 (A. P.).—Senator Kilgore (D.-W. Va.) said today that impending war plant shutdowns threaten to throw hundreds of thousands of workers out of employment. Demanding congressional action on proposals to provide for immediate transfer of plant facilities and labor to other war or essential civilian production as fast as they are released, he declared:

"The recent Brewster (Aeronautical Corporation) cutback has only dramatized the serious production and employment problems of current war mobilization, reconversion and post-war adjustment."

In letters to the National Association of Manufacturers, the Chamber of Commerce of the United States and various labor organizations, Mr. Kilgore asked that they supply a military subcommittee of which he is chairman with full details of cases similar to the Brewster shutdown "which have arisen or may arise in the new future."

Promotion for Capt. Stone

Postal Telegraph Ex-Head Named by Roosevelt for Rear Admiral

WASHINGTON, June 5 (AP).—President Roosevelt nominated Captain Ellery W. Stone, of 1016 Fifth Avenue, New York, today for the temporary rank of rear admiral. He will serve as deputy to British Lieutenant General Mason MacFarlane, president of the Allied Control Commission in Italy.

Captain Stone, fifty years old, is a native of Oakland, Calif. He resigned the presidency of Postal Telegraph, Inc., in 1943 to re-enter active naval service.

SEDITION TRIAL ENTERS 8TH WEEK

Washington, June 5 (A. P.).—Justice Edward C. Eicher today ruled out all repetitious objections to Government exhibits in an effort to speed the mass trial of twenty-nine persons accused of conspiring to set up a Nazi form of government in this country. The trial, still in its preliminary stages, has entered its eighth week.

Justice Eicher told defense attorneys that in the future he would hear only objections not previously made. He added, however, that all defendants would have the benefit of all old objections.

Henry H. Klein, one of the defense attorneys, then made a blanket objection to all Government exhibits obtained from the files of the McCormack-Dickstein House Committee, which investigated Nazi propaganda here a decade ago. He contended the documents were "illegally obtained."

Peter Gissibl, former leader of the Chicago unit of the German-American Bund, the first major Government witness, continued on the stand today.

The prosecution offered a letter from the German Auslands Institute (German Foreign Institute) to Gissibl, obtained from the McCormack-Dickstein files. It asked Gissibl whether the bund would sponsor a trip to Germany in 1938 to include, among other things, a "week of intensive schooling" at the institute in Stuttgart.

SENATE APPROVES CURB ON SUBSIDIES

WASHINGTON, June 5—(AP) The Senate swept aside protests of Majority Leader Barkley (Ky.) today by amending legislation extending the Price and Wage Stabilization act to prohibit payment of food subsidies after June 30, 1945 without congressional direction.

It adopted, by a vote of 50 to 22, an amendment prohibiting after that date either subsidy payments or government buying of commodities for the purpose of selling them at a loss to keep consumer costs down unless the money "has been appropriated by Congress for such purpose."

Barkley declared the people generally and even the farmers were "reasonably satisfied" with the subsidy program, while Senator Maloney (D-Conn.), warned:

"We may be setting up dangers which will prove great."

Maloney asserted that the Office of Price Administration is in a better position than Congress to determine when subsidies are necessary.

All the 22 votes against the amendment were cast by Democrats.

Senator Danaher (R-Conn.) voted for the amendment.

Insurance Business Ruled Subject to Sherman Act

JUN 7 1944

WASHINGTON, June 5. — (AP) The Supreme court, overturning a 75-year-old decision, ruled today that the insurance business is interstate commerce and therefore subject to regulation under the Sherman Anti-Trust law and the Wagner Labor act.

The decision in the anti-trust case upheld indictments charging a group of fire insurance companies with conspiracy to restrain interstate trade and paved the way for similar actions against other companies which the Justice department has said it would start if the indictments were sustained.

Legislation Pending

Legislation is pending in both houses of Congress specifically to exempt the insurance business from the anti-trust laws, and supporters said they would press for quick action. Rep. Walter (D-Pa), author of a measure which has been approved by the House Judiciary committee, declared legislation is "needed immediately to prevent chaos."

Rep. Hancock (R-NY), author of a similar bill, said the Federal government has no organization to take over supervision of insurance. The pending legislation would leave such supervision to the states.

Chairman Sumners (D-Tex) of the House Judiciary committee said "I don't agree with the Supreme court majority opinion."

However, Senator O'Mahoney (D-Wyo), who has long fought the exemption legislation, predicted it would die in Senate committee. He said the court's decision now requires the fire insurance companies to cooperate with Congress and the states "in revising the insurance system so as to provide equitable treatment for little business as well as big business."

With the exception of Justice Roberts, who took no part in the decisions, the court was unanimous in its belief that insurance is interstate commerce and that the Wagner act applies.

Court Splits Four to Three

But the court split, four to three, on the question whether insurance is subject to the anti-trust laws. The dissenters, Chief Justice Stone and Justices Frankfurter and Jackson, contended that Congress had not intended to bring the business under the Sherman act, but had meant to leave regulation to the states. Justice Reed, like Justice Roberts, took no part in this case.

Chief Justice Stone predicted the decision would result in great confusion and much harm. For example, he said, the regulatory statutes of at least five states will be invalidated as conflicting with the Sherman Anti-Trust act.

Justice Black, in the majority opinion in the anti-trust case, termed this view "exaggerated."

"Few states," he said, "go so far as to permit private insurance companies, without state supervision, to agree upon and fix uniform insurance rates. No states authorize combinations of insurance companies to coerce, intimidate and boycott competitors and consumers in the manner here alleged, and it cannot be that any companies have acquired a vested right to engage in such destructive business practices."

Congress Has Right

Black said the court's decisions in 1869 and in subsequent years that the business of insurance is not interstate commerce were aimed primarily at the right of the states to regulate the business. These decisions on the powers of the states, he said, do not affect the right of Congress to regulate the business.

Black declared that there is no commercial enterprise operating across state lines that could be considered exempt from congressional regulation under the commerce clause of the Constitution and the court could not make an exception of the insurance business.

Congress can make that exception if it desires, he said, but there is nothing in the Sherman act to indicate that Congress did not intend to apply it to interstate insurance trade.

"On its face," he said, "it shows a carefully studied attempt to bring within the act every person engaged in business whose activities might restrain or monopolize commercial intercourse among the states."

Chief Justice Stone said he was not nescessarily adverse to overturning previous court decisions, but he foresaw a "flood" of litigation and legislation as a result.

Justice Jackson said that for 150 years Congress had not tried to regulate the insurance business and that the "orderly way to nationalize insurance supervision, if it is desirable, is not by court decision, but through legislation."

The anti-trust case grew out of the dismissal by the Federal district court in Atlanta of anti-trust charges against 196 fire insurance companies and 27 persons associated with the Southeastern Underwriters association in Florida, Alabama, Virginia, North Carolina, South Carolina, and Georgia. They were accused of a conspiracy to fix and maintain arbitrary and non-competitive rates and of a conspiracy to monopolize the fire insurance business in the six states.

Stems from NLRB Ruling

The other insurance case stemmed from a National Labor Relations board ruling that the Polish National Alliance of the United States of North America, a fraternal benefit society with headquarters in Chicago, had engaged in unfair labor practices. The society, which sells insurance certificates in several states, contended it was not subject to the Wagner labor act because it was not in interstate commerce.

Edwards L. Williams, president of the Insurance Executives association, said in a statement that the decision may bring near chaos to the industry and that it was "unfortunate" that the ruling reflected the opinion of only a minority of the full court.

Williams, whose association represents executives of 150 fire insurance companies, said that years of experience had shown that cooperation on insurance rates and terms is "essential" to the public and that states have recognized it.

"At principle, he said, is "diametrically opposed" to the Federal Anti-trust laws which are now made applicable to the business.

He expressed confidence that when the anti-trust case is brought to trial, the jury will acquit the defendants of the conspiracy charges.

SAYS VICTORY WILL NOT GIVE FREEDOM

JUN 7 1944

Boston, June 5.—The Christian Science board of directors, reporting to the several thousand Christian Scientists who attended today the annual meeting of the Mother Church, the First Church of Christ, Scientist, here, stated that "freedom is essentially a spiritual understanding and attainment."

"Righteous victory under arms," the report continued, "will not suffice to guarantee freedom to mankind."

That the world is coming to realize this, the directors said, is evidenced by the careful consideration being given not only to the winning of the war, but the winning of the peace, so that future wars will be impossible.

"Let our prayers for our dear ones who are in service, our prayers for our church, our nation and for all mankind, find consistent expression in our everyday lives," the directors stated. "Let us see that the triumphs of truth over errors with us is a sure sign that victory of good over all evil is assured and that 'the Kingdom of God is at hand.'"

The directors announced the appointment of Paul Stark Seeley of Cambridge as president of the Mother Church to succeed Mrs. Daisette D. S. McKenzie. Mr. Seeley, associate editor of the Christian Science periodicals other than the Christian Science Monitor, is a native of Poughkeepsie and has been a member since 1909 of the Mother Church, which he joined while a student at Harvard Law School.

Biddle Assails Attitude Of Montgomery Ward Co.

JUN 7 1944

BOSTON, June 5—(AP) Attorney General Francis Biddle declared today that the attitude of the Montgomery Ward company toward the War Labor board was not "representative of the great majority of employers."

"But," he added, "I wish that some of them had seized the opportunity to disavow such a point of view."

Biddle spoke before the Convention of the International Ladies Garment Workers union, and won round after round of applause as he discussed the Montgomery Ward seizure.

The Mortgomery Ward company's "defiance of the government cut under the whole national determination to settle labor disputes peacefully and finally during the war," Biddle said.

"If Ward's could defy the government successfully," he added, "an excuse was given to either side —when it didn't happen to like the (War Labor) board's settlement— to ignore it."

Biddle declared that the Ward company's attitude was "not new," since "it was based on the assertion that Ward was not bound by the no strike, no lockout agreement."

He said that Ward's had denied it was a party to that agreement between representatives of labor and industry, and that the company had said in a published statement: "Ward's has never ratified the results of that agreement."

Biddle said he agreed with a published comment on the Ward case (Malcolm Bingay in the Detroit Free Press) which he quoted as saying: "'To me it seems supremely asinine to contend that a government in war time can take a man away from his family, his property and his job to fight for his country and to give up his life —which no court or no act of congress can restore to him—but it must not interfere with an angry old gentleman who wants to settle a private feud with a man named Roosevelt who happened to be president'."

Biddle added that with a new "wave of strikes" threatening the authority of the War Labor board, strikes which "cannot be controlled if the philosophy expressed in Ward's advertisement has its way," the time had come for the leaders of labor to "speak out eloquently and passionately."

Power House On Rails Gets Its Final Tests

JUN 7 1944

Eight-Car Train Will Be Sent to Europe for Use in the Devastated Areas

NEW PHILADELPHIA, Ohio, June 5 (AP).—A grotesque eight-car train stands on a special railroad siding here roaring a tune of victory for America's fighting allies.

It is the nation's first completed power-producing train undergoing final tests before shipment to Europe. There it will become a mobile power plant to thwart Nazi forces that applied the scorched earth policy to power stations while in retreat.

The fantastic train, a lend-lease commodity, produces 5,000 kilowatts of electric power, sufficient for the needs of an average community of possibly 10,000 persons. Its key car contains a steam turbine which drives an electric generator.

Spent steam from the turbine's exhaust is converted into water in two air-cooled condenser cars, each crowned by four man-high funnels. Eight enormous fans draw air through radiators in the sides of the condenser cars and blow it through the funnels, which resemble a cluster of locomotive smokestacks. Engineers for the Westinghouse Electric & Manufacturing Co., builder of the train, contend the plant loses only sixty gallons of water hourly.

In final tests, low-grade coal—comparable to that available in certain parts of Europe—poured into the train's two boiler cars at a rate of ten tons a hour. Powerful blowers blast air through the fuel to burn it at highest efficiency. Ashes cascade from the fire box, keeping a crew of shovelers busy.

In reconquered areas the electricity will be routed through transformers into power lines of cities the train will serve until permanent power plants are erected.

A crew of about a dozen men is required to operate the powerhouse on wheels. Presently the cars rest on trucks fitting American rails, but they are to be transferred to European-gauge trucks once overseas. The train includes a bunk car for workmen and an auxiliary equipment car.

Nine other 5,000-kilowatt Westinghouse power trains are in process of completion here. Twenty-four three-car 1,000-kilowatt power trains are under construction. Both types develop fifty-cycle current for European use.

"The Allies plan to dispatch the trains into recaptured areas on the heels of their advancing armies," said L. B. McCully, manager of Westinghouse's East Pittsburgh transportation and generator division. "Within hours after arrival these traveling power-houses can be generating electricity. This compares with nine months to two years to rebuild a bombed or sabotaged power plant."

100-Year Peace Plan Urged by Sulzberger

JUN 7 1944

'Dynamic' Approach Suggested When Hostilities End

CHATTANOOGA, Tenn., June 5 (AP).—The "true ends of victory—a condition of life in which mankind can live in security"—should be attained in a peace that is more than a mere absence of hostilities but "actual peace, physical peace, mental peace for a hundred years or more," Arthur Hays Sulzberger, president and publisher of "The New York Times," declared here tonight.

Realization of that kind of peace "requires that our approach to it shall be something as dynamic as our approach to war," he added in an address prepared for delivery before the fifty-eighth graduating class of the University of Chattanooga.

"The first is to continue the cooperation already established with our allies. Following that, the framework of a democratic long-term international organization should be outlined as soon as possible."

Mr. Sulzberger declared "our only choice" at the end of the war was to "stay and watch" the defeated enemies since "only in that way can we guard the poisoned minds which indubitably will seek to spread their false ideas." To accomplish this, he advocated establishment of a program of universal military training in the United States with the younger men coming in each year replacing the soldiers now abroad in the conquered nations.

Capt. Britt Receives Congressional Medal

6,000 in Arkansas Cheer Italy Campaign Hero

FAYETTEVILLE, Ark., June 5 (AP).—Major General Harry Z. Collins hung the Congressional Medal of Honor around the neck of a smiling young captain today and told cheering thousands that the husky Arkansan was "one of the nation's greatest fighters."

But Maurice L. Britt, who left his right arm on an Italian battlefield, looked up at the 6,000 thronging the University of Arkansas stadium where a few years ago he won football glory, and told them that he accepted the nation's highest decoration not for himself but for "the men fighting in Italy and in the Pacific and those poised for the invasion of the Continent."

The citation that went with the medal told how the twenty-four-year-old Carlisle, Ark., captain personally killed five Germans and so led his fifty-two men that an overwhelming enemy force was beaten, American prisoners rescued and an entire American battalion saved from entrapment.

WASHINGTON--THE FOLLOWING OFFICIAL STORY WAS RELEASED BY THE WAR DEPARTMENT TODAY UPON THE INVASION OF EUROPE AND DISTRIBUTED BY THE ASSOCIATED PRESS: (400)

HEADQUARTERS, EUROPEAN THEATER OPERATIONS, JUNE 6--SOME OF THE BRAVEST SOLDIERS IN THE UNITED STATES ARMY--IT WAS A JOB ONLY FOR THE BRAVE--MADE THE INITIAL LAND ATTACK ON THE FORTRESS OF EUROPE BY KNOCKING OUT PILL BOXES AND OTHER FORTIFICATIONS OF THE ATLANTIC WALL.

ASSAULT TACTICS, PERFECTED IN NORTH AFRICA, SICILY AND ITALY, WERE DRILLED INTO TROOPS INTO GREAT BRITAIN FOR MONTHS BEFORE THE ACTUAL INVASION. SPECIAL TRAINING WAS GIVEN INFANTRY UNITS WHICH WERE DESIGNATED FOR THE SPEARHEAD OF THE ATTACK.

THE ASSAULT ON CONCRETE EMPLACEMENTS IS ONE OF THE MOST EXCITING AND DANGEROUS OPERATIONS OF MODERN WAR. IT LOOKS IMPOSSIBLE, BUT IT ISN'T, AS AMERICAN DOUGHBOYS HAVE PROVED. THE KEY TO SUCCESS IS PLAIN OLD FASHION FORTITUDE SPELLED WITH A CAPITAL G.

ORIGINALLY, THE REDUCTION OF FORTIFICATIONS WAS CONSIDERED A JOB FOR ENGINEERS. HOWEVER, AFTER SOME EXPERIENCES IT BECAME APPARENT THAT IT WOULD BE MORE EFFECTIVE TO TRAIN INFANTRY WITH SPECIAL ENGINEER WEAPONS AND THIS WAS THE TECHNIQUE USED IN EUROPE.

THE PREPARATION IS PROVIDED BY ARTILLERY, BY NAVAL GUNS, BY AIR BOMBARDMENT AND BY WATERPROOFED TANKS FIRING HULL-DOWN IN THE WATER.

THERE ARE 30 MEN IN AN ASSAULT SECTION--29 ENLISTED MEN AND ONE OFFICER. THIS IS THE CAPACITY OF THE ASSAULT BOATS, AND IT IS ALSO THE MOST CONVENIENT SIZE FOR ATTACKING A SINGLE PILL BOX.

IT IS THE JOB OF THE FIRST MEN ASHORE TO LOCATE LAND MINES, AND MARK SAFE LANES WITH SPECIAL TRACING STRIPS.

AS PART OF THIS OPERATION, BARBED WIRE MUST BE CUT, AND AMERICAN SOLDIERS HAVE A WONDERFUL WEAPON FOR THIS PURPOSE. IT IS THE BANGALORE TORPEDO, WHICH BLOWS A WIDE SWATH THROUGH THE WIRE.

THEN THE OTHER MEMBERS OF THE TEAM FOLLOW THROUGH THE WIRE, AND MOVE UP THE BEACH.

ONE OF THE MOST DRAMATIC ACTIONS OF THE ASSAULT IS CARRIED OUT BY THE ROCKET GUNNERS, FIRING THE FAMOUS BAZOOKAS. THEIR MISSION IS TO ATTACK THE PILLBOX APERATURES TO SILENCE ENEMY FIRE, AND THE ACCURACY OF AMERICAN ROCKET GUNNERS IS REMARKABLE.

THE CLIMAX OF THE ENTIRE OPERATION IS PLAYED BY THE SOLDIER WITH THE FLAME THROWER AND THE MAN WITH THE DEMOLITION CHARGE.

AS SOON AS ONE PILL BOX BLOWS THE ENTIRE SECTION MOVES FORWARD FOR ANOTHER ATTACK. DURING A LANDING OPERATION THESE TACTICS ARE REPEATED BY MANY SQUADS ALONG A CONSIDERABLE FRONT--THERE WILL BE AT LEAST ONE DIVISION IN LINE, AND PROBABLY MORE.

ADD LONDON - (HERCHER) XX DAYLIGHT

FOR ONE PERIOD OF ABOUT A HALF-HOUR AIRCRAFT PASSED OVER FOLKESTONE WITH A ROAR LIKE THAT OF EXPRESS TRAINS RUSHING THROUGH TUNNELS. WAVES OF MEDIUM BOMBERS WERE RECOGNIZED, AS WELL AS VERY LARGE NUMBERS OF THUNDERBOLTS AND MUSTANGS. THE LATTER TWO TYPES PROBABLY INCLUDED BOTH FIGHTERS AND FIGHTER-BOMBERS.

JUN 7 1944

AT NOON THE GERMAN RADIO REPORTED THAT "SINGLE ENEMY RAIDERS WERE OVER BAVARIA." THESE MIGHT HAVE BEEN FROM EITHER BRITISH OR ITALIAN BASES.

ELEVEN ALLIED AIRCRAFT WERE MISSING AND TWO ENEMY PLANES WERE DOWNED DURING THESE MISSIONS. LAST NIGHT MEDITERRANEAN ALLIED AIR FORCE BOMBERS ATTACKED OBJECTIVES IN NORTHERN ITALY.

IN THREE SEPARATE ATTACKS ON GERMAN INSTALLATIONS IN FRANCE YESTERDAY, FIGHTER-ESCORTED U.S.FLYING FORTRESSES AND LIBERATORS FROM BRITAIN MADE TWO ASSAULTS IN THE VICINITY OF BOULOGNE IN THE BOMB-PITTED PAS DE CALAIS DEPARTMENT AND THEN PENETRATED TO THE PARIS AREA IN AN EVENING FORAY.

FOUR BOMBERS AND THREE FIGHTERS FAILED TO RETURN FROM THESE OPERATIONS, A U.S.COMMUNIQUE SAID, ADDING THAT ONE GERMAN PLANE WAS DESTROYED OUT OF THE FEW PUT UP BY THE ENEMY TO COUNTER THE BLOWS. GERMAN ANTI-AIRCRAFT FIRE WAS DESCRIBED AS RANGING FROM MODERATE TO HEAVY OVER SOME OF THE TARGETS.

IN THE EVENING RAID THE HEAVY BOMBERS HAMMERED A RAILWAY JUNCTION AT MASSY-PALAISEAU, AN AIRDROME AT BERTIGNY, A LOCOMOTIVE DEPOT AT VERSAILLES-MATELETS AND RAIL LINES AT VILLENEUVE-ST.GEORGE, ALL IN THE PARIS AREA, AND A NUMBER OF GERMAN AIRDROMES SOUTHWEST OF PARIS.

OTHER ATTACKS LAUNCHED FROM BRITISH BASES YESTERDAY INCLUDED:

1. BOMBING AND STRAFING SWEEPS BY BRITISH SPITFIRES AGAINST GERMAN RADIO INSTALLATIONS ALONG THE NORTHERN COAST OF FRANCE.

2. ATTACKS BY U.S.NINTH AIR FORCE THUNDERBOLT FIGHTER-BOMBERS ON TWO BRIDGES OVER THE SEINE AT ROUEN AND RAILROAD TARGETS IN THE OISE VALLEY.

JUN 7 1944

3. SWEEPS BY AMERICAN MUSTANG FIGHTER-BOMBERS AGAINST RAIL JUNCTIONS SOUTH OF PARIS. ONE ENEMY TRAINING PLANE WAS DESTROYED DURING THIS OPERATION.

4. ATTACKS ON FRENCH COAST MILITARY OBJECTIVES BY NINTH AIR FORCE MARAUDERS AND HAVOCS UNDER A SCREEN OF MUSTANGS AND THUNDERBOLTS. ONE GROUP HIT A HIGHWAY BRIDGE AT COURCELLES-SUR-SEINE, 40 MILES NORTHWEST OF PARIS.

SWEEPING UP FROM SOUTHERN ITALY, BETWEEN 500 AND 750 HEAVY BOMBERS OF HHE U.S.FIFTEENTH AIR FORCE MADE A STRONG ATTEMPT YESTERDAY TO SEVER TWO HAIN RAIL LINES BETWEEN FRANCE AND ITALY.

ONE FORCE HIT THE TURIN YARDS, THE DOUBLE-TRACK MOUNT CENIS RAILROAD LEADING WEST FROM TURIN TO LYON, A BRIDGE ON THE ITALIAN SIDE OF THE MODANE TUNNEL THROUGH THE ALPS, AND TRACKS NEAR ST.MICHEL ON THE FRENCH SIDE.

JUN 7 1944

OTHER BOMBERS SINGLED OUT THE RIVIERA LINE, BOMBING A VIADUCT SOUTHWEST OF CANNES AND THE VAR RIBER BRIDGE, SOUTHWEST OF NICE. STILL OTHER FORMATIONS HIT THE GENOA RAILYARDS AND THE RECCO VIADUCT TO THE EAST. THE YARDS AT NOVI LEGURE AND THE HARBOR AT SAVONA, BOTH ABOUT 25 MILES FROM GENOA, ALSO WERE TARGETS.

BRITISH-BASED RAF BOMBERS ATTACKED THE BIG CHEMICAL CENTER OF LUDWIGSHAFEN IN GERMANY, OBJECTIVES ALONG THE FRENCH COAST, AND SCATTERED MINES IN ENEMY WATERS WITHOUT LOSS OF ANY AIRCRAFT IN OPERATIONS SATURDAY NIGHT.

IT IS ESTIMATED NOW THAT ALLIED PLANES POURED MORE THAN 147,000 TONS OF BOMBS ON CONTINENTAL TARGETS DURING MAY. OF THIS TOTAL, NEARLY 100,000 TONS WERE CARRIED FROM BRITISH BASES AND 45,000 FROM THE MEDITERRANEAN.

ALLIED AIRMEN IN THE EUROPEAN, MEDITERRANEAN AND MIDDLE-EAST THEATER SHOT DOWN AT LEAST 439 GERMAN AIRCRAFT LAST WEEK AS AGAINST AN ALLIED LOSS OF 280.

AMONG PILOTS RETURNING FROM THE FRENCH COAST WAS LT. CHARLES E. BROWN, 35 ALDERSON AVE., BILLINGS, MONT., WHO SAID HE SAW AT LEAST FIVE BOMB BURSTS ON THE TARGET.

"THE NAXIS WERE SHOOTING ALL KINDS OF FLAK AT US TODAY," HE COMMENTED.

AT A FIGHTER BASE IN ENGLAND, JUNE 5--(AP)-- LT. HENRY BROWN OF WASHINGTON, D. JUN 7 1944

BROWN GOT ONE NAZI WHILE STRAFING A CONTINENTAL AIRFIELD, AND CLIMBED TO KILL ANOTHER IN AIR COMBAT, USING UP ALL HIS AMMUNITION. THEN HE SAW THE FOUR ENEMY PLANES ATTACKING TWO AMERICAN FIGHTERS, THE CITATION SAID, "AND WITH COMPLETE DISREGARD FOR HIS OWN SAFETY, AT ONCE HE FLEW TO ASSIST THE FRIENDLY FIGHTERS. HIS DETERMINATION AND BOLDNESS FORCED THE ENEMY TO BREAK OFF THE FIGHT."

LONDON, JUNE 5-(AP)-PILOTS OF A MUSTANG FIGHTER GROUP MADE A DOUBLE RUN TO THE CONTINENT TODAY-- THE FIRST TO ESCORT HEAVY BOMBERS OVER THE FRENCH COAST, AND THE SECOND TO DROP THEIR OWN BOMBS ON AN ENEMY TRUCK TRANSPORT THEY DISCOVERED THEMSELVES.

THE GROUP COMMANDED BY COL. DON BLAKESLEE OF FAIRPORT HARBOR, HIO,--WHICH HAS DESTROYED 583 GERMAN PLANES IN AERIAL COMBAT AND STRAFING ATTACKS--ENCOUNTERED NO ENEMY FIGHTERS ON THE FIRST TRIP. BUT EN ROUTE BACK TO THEIR BASES THEY SPOTTED A LARGE GERMAN TRUCK CONVOY MOVING ALONG AN ALREADY BOMB-PITTED ROAD.

THEY RACED BACK TO BASE, REFUELLED, LOADED UP WITH BOMBS AND SPED BACK TO THE CONTINENT. THEY RELOCATED THE CONVOY, AND ONE BY ONE THE MUSTANGS SWOOPED DOWN AND DROPPED THEIR BOMBS ON TH PRETM

London, June 5-(ap)-- One of the neatest tricks of the war was performed by lt. george jones, of sodus, n.y., who brought his flak-riddled marauder "Hell's kitchen" back from a bombing mission over northern france and glided to a safe landing with both engines out, minus his landing gear, and almost without use of the controls.

JUN 7 1944

Jones was bringing his bomber over the target when flak knocked out one engine, shot away the rudder controls and trim tabs, knocked out the hydraulic system which lowers the wheels, and blasted a hole three feet wide in the bomb bay. the same blast severely injured two crewmen.

Jones nursed the bomber back across the channel on a single engine, and as he reached the english coast at 8,000 feet this one died out also.

He made a split-second decision. Without power, almost unable to steer the ship, he headed for an emergency landing field, going down in a steep glide at 3,000 feet per minute. Instead of steering, he slipped and banked the ship to guide it.

The crew braced for a terrific shock, but "hell's kitchen" with only a gentle shudder slid to a perfect belly landing.

a moment after the landing there was an explosion in the bomb bay, saturated with leaking gasoline and oil. flames filled the plane, but the crew scrambled to safety.

"GIVING UP ONE OF THE AXIS CAPITALS INVOLVES A LOSS OF PRESTIGE FOR GERMANY."

WITH THE CEASELESS AERIAL BATTERING OF THE ATLANTIC WALL, BRITONS WAITED EXPECTANT AND CONFIDENT FOR THE GROUND ASSAULT AND SOME RECALLED PRIME MINISTER CHURCHILL'S WORDS AFTER DUNKERQUE TO A HUSHED COMMONS AND A TENSE NATION JUST FOUR YEARS AND A DAY AGO:

"WE SHALL NEVER SURRENDER...(WE) WILL CARRY ON THE STRUGGLE UNTIL IN GOD'S GOOD TIME THE NEW WORLD IN ALL ITS STRENGTH AND MIGHT SETS FORTH TO THE RESCUE AND LIBERATION OF THE OLD."

BATTLE-CLAD CANADIANS AND A GREAT UNITED STATES ARMY MECHANIZED AND EQUIPPED FOR A TREMENDOUS PART IN THAT PROMISED TASK OF LIBERATION NOW ARE SWARMING OVER THIS ISLAND.

A BERLIN BROADCAST, IN AN APPARENT ATTEMPT TO BELITTLE THE SETBACKS IN ITALY, DECLARED THAT "IF THE ENEMY WANTS TO FORCE A DECISIVE BATTLE THEN HE MUST CARRY OUT AN INVASION IN THE WEST ON A GRAND SCALE."

LORD WOOLTON, MINISTER OF RECONSTRUCTION, IMPLIED THE GERMANS MIGHT NOT HAVE LONG TO WAIT. COMMENTING ON ROME'S CAPTURE HE SAID: "I AM SURE IT IS A PRECURSOR OF THINGS THAT ARE TO COME."

A MESSAGE READ FOR THE FALLEN BENITO MUSSOLINI FROM HIS RETREAT IN NORTHERN ITALY CALLED ON THE ROMANS TO "MAKE LIFE AS HARD AS POSSIBLE" FOR ALLIED TROOPS, BUT IT MUST HAVE HAD A HOLLOW ECHO IN A CITY RESOUNDING TO SHOUTS OF CITIZENS WELCOMING THEIR LIBERATORS.

A COMMUNIQUE FROM THE GERMAN HIGH COMMAND REPORTED VIOLENT FIGHTING RAGED NORTHEAST OF ROME, AND SAID A LAST-MINUTE ATTEMPT HAD BEEN MADE TO DECLARE IT AN OPEN CITY.

TO A GERMAN NATION SHAKEN BY ROME'S FALL, PROPAGANDA MINISTER PAUL JOSEPH GOEBBELS' WORKERS DECLARED TONIGHT THAT THE ALLIES FACED A MUCH HARDER TASK IN THE WEST BECAUSE "NEVER HAS THERE BEEN A COAST IN THE WORLD SO READY FOR DEFENSE AS THE ATLANTIC WALL."

CORRESPONDENT LUTZ KOCH, BROADCASTING FROM THE WESTWALL WHICH HE TOURED WITH MARSHAL ERWIN ROMMEL, REPORTED THAT ALONG THE BEACH WERE "TENS OF THOUSANDS OF TREE TRUNKS ALL WIRE-MINED INTO A DEADLY NET" WHICH WOULD BECOME "AN EXPLODING FOREST."

THE MOSCOW RADIO BROADCAST A GENEVA REPORT, HOWEVER, THAT MASS ARRESTS WERE BEING MADE IN GERMANY ON CHARGES OF DEFEATISM, A REIGN OF TERROR BY THE GESTAPO WAS REPORTED IN FRANCE WHERE EVEN VICHY OFFICIALS WERE REPORTED UNDER SURVEILLANCE, AND A TASS DISPATCH FROM ZURICH SAID A NAZI IRON RULE WAS TIGHTENING THROUGHOUT AUSTRIA, ALSACE-LORRAINE, SLOVAKIA AND MORAVIA.

THE GERMAN ARMY BULLETIN SAID THE ALLIES IN SOUTHERN ITALY "TRIED TO FORCE US TO SEND RESERVES TO THIS WAR THEATER" WHICH WERE BEING HELD READY "FOR THE PROBABLE WAR THEATER IN THE WEST," BUT HAD FAILED.

DIPLOMATS EXPECTED THE ITALIAN MILITARY SUCCESS TO BE THEIR HIGH TRUMP CARD AS THEY PRESSED TO SHUT OFF THE LAST VESTIGE OF SUPPLIES TO GERMANY THROUGH NEUTRAL COUNTRIES.

THE LONDON PRESS HAILED THE CONQUEST AS "A GREAT MILESTONE OF WAR" AND THE EVENING STANDARD SAID THE CAMPAIGN WAS "A PRELUDE TO A YET GREATER CAMPAIGN IN WHICH THE STAKES MUST BE DOUBLED AND QUADRUPLED."

"THE LEGIONS OF FREEDOM ARE MARCHING AND THE WANING POWER OF THE TYRANT CANNOT HOLD THEM BACK," SAID THE STAR.

AS THE WESTWALL UNDERWENT THIS ASSAULT, ROCKET-FIRING TYPHOONS PENETRATED DEEPER INTO NORTHERN FRANCE TO RIP ENEMY RADIO INSTALLATIONS.

SINCE THE FIRST OF JUNE, THE 200-MILE FRENCH COASTLINE, BRISTLING WITH NAZI GUNS, HAS BEEN ROCKED FROM END TO END BY ALLIED BOMBS. THE PREVIOUS RECORD PERIOD FOR THE NUMBER OF OPERATIONS OF BRITISH-BASED AMERICAN HEAVIES WAS FROM MAY 7 TO MAY 11, WHEN THEY STRUCK AT THE CONTINENT SEVEN TIMES IN FIVE DAYS.

A GREAT PART OF THIS DESTRUCTION HAS BEEN VISITED UPON THE PAS-DE-CALAIS AREA AND GERMAN STRONGPOINTS SURROUNDING THE CHANNEL PORTS OF BOULOGNE, CALAIS, DIEPPE AND DUNKERQUE.

THE AIR MINISTRY DISCLOSED TODAY THAT THE RAILWAY YARDS OF SAUMUR, TRAPPES AND TERGNIER ARE NOW KNOWN TO HAVE BEEN SEVERELY DAMAGED IN RECENT RAIDS.

RAF PLANES LAST NIGHT, WITHOUT LOSS, FLEW THROUGH GUSTS OF RAIN TO STRIKE AT THE INVASION WALL AND TO PENETRATE AS FAR AS COLOGNE. THE RAF ALSO LAID MINES IN ENEMY WATERS.

THE RAID ON COLOGNE, LAST HIT MAY 28 BY A SMALL FORMATION OF AMERICAN HEAVIES AFTER A SERIES OF MOSQUITO ATTACKS AT NIGHT HAD PEPPERED THE CITY WITH 2,000-POUND BLOCKBUSTERS, APPARENTLY WAS ON A SMALL SCALE.

London, Tuesday, June 6 (AP)--Guerrilla warfare is spreading in German-dominated Bulgaria with partisan bands battling army troops and even marching penetrating into the vicinity of Sofia the Moscow radio said today.

JUN 7 1944

The broadcast, recorded by the soviet monitor, said that in one sector several hundred guerrillas inflicted heavy losses on police and militia in a three-day pitched battle.

Another group, Moscow said, entered a village within eight miles of Sofia and "in the presence of th inhabitants tried the local police chie and then disappeared into the mountains."

The moscow report said that in addition to sending "considerable forces" of regular army troops to fight the guerillas authorities were forming special police garrisons and had restricted peasants from leaving their villages without special permission.

MOSCOW, JUNE 5-(AP)-ERIC JOHNSTON, PRESIDENT OF THE UNITED STATES CHAMBER OF COMMERCE, HAS TOLD SOVIET TRADE LEADERS THERE ADMITTEDLY IS A "GULF" BETWEEN THE ECONOMIC IDEOLOGIES OF THE U.S.S.R. AND THE UNITED STATES, BUT "BRIDGES OF PRACTICAL COOPERATION CAN BE THROWN ACROSS IT."

JOHNSTON'S SPEECH, PROBABLY THE MOST FRANK AND PROVOCATIVE EVER MADE HERE BY A PRIVATE INDIVIDUAL, WAS MADE AT A LUNCHEON GIVEN SATURDAY BY ANASTAS I.MIKOYAN, SOVIET TRADE COMMISSAR, AND ISSUED

YESTERDAY BY JOHNSTON AT A PRESS CONFERENCE.

DECLARING HIS INTENTION TO DISCUSS "DIRECT, HARSH, BUSINESS FACTS," JOHNSTON SAID: "IN ECONOMIC IDEOLOGY, THE PRACTICE OF MY COUNTRY IS DIFFERENT FROM YOURS. YOU ARE STATE-MINDED. WE ARE PRIVATE-MINDED, MOST INDIVIDUAL-MINDED, AND GENTLEMEN, MAKE NO MISTAKE, WE ARE DETERMINED TO REMAIN SO OR BECOME MORE SO."

"YOU MUST REALIZE HOW COMPLETELY AMERICAN COMMUNISTS HAVE BEEN WASTING THEIR TIME," JOHNSTON ADDED. "IN A RECENT POLL MOST ORGANIZED WORKERS ANSWERING A QUESTION AS TO THEIR SOCIAL CLASS REPLIED MIDDLE CLASS. SO PERHAPS IN A WAY YOU CANNOT BLAME OUR AMERICAN COMMUNISTS FOR THEIR FAILURE. IF I MAY PUT IT FRANKLY, HOW CAN THEY MAKE A PROLETARIAN REVOLUTION AMONG WORKERS WHO DO NOT EVEN KNOW THEY ARE PROLETARIANS?"

HE SUGGESTED RUSSIAN RAW MATERIAL AND AMERICAN MACHINES "HAVE NO IDEOLOGIES. . . THEY COULD BE MEDIATORS AND INTERPRETERS BETWEEN US HUMANS."

JOHNSTON SAID HE HOPED THAT "WHATEVER POLITICAL QUESTIONS MAY ARISE BETWEEN OUR TWO GOVERNMENTS REGARDING AFFAIRS OF EUROPE AND ANY OTHER CONTINENT CAN BE ADJUSTED IN THE SPIRIT OF FRIENDSHIP AND ON THE BASIS OF AGREED MORAL PRINCIPLES. AND I AM HOPING THEREUPON OUR TWO GOVERNMENTS WILL NEGOTIATE AND CONCLUDE A TRADE TREATY THAT NOT ONLY WILL PERMIT TRADE BETWEEN US BUT FACILITATE IT FURTHER THROUGHOUT THE WORLD."

A UNITED STATES AIR BASE SOMEWHERE IN THE SOVIET UNION, JUNE 5-(AP)-EVERY ONE OF THE AMERICANS PARTICIPATING IN THE HISTORY-MAKING FIRST SHUTTLE BOMBING FLIGHT TO RUSSIA WAS ANXIOUS AND WILLING TO GO, THEIR COMMANDER, A COLONEL FROM CHICAGO, PROUDLY RELATED TODAY.

"WE GOT WORD THE NIGHT BEFORE THE FLIGHT WE WERE GOING TO RUSSIA," HE SAID IN AN EXCLUSIVE INTERVIEW WITH THE ASSOCIATED PRESS. "YOU CAN BET I WAS PRETTY EXCITED."

"I MADE THE ANNOUNCEMENT AT A MEETING OF ALL OFFICERS AND MEN, MANY OF THEM VETERANS OF MORE THAN 50 MISSIONS. THEY SAID 'SWELL' AND 'HOT DOG.'

"THEN I TOLD THEM THAT NOT A MAN HAD TO GO IF HE DIDN'T WANT TO. I MEAN THEY HAD DONE THEIR MISSIONS. WELL SIR, NOT A SINGLE MAN SPOKE UP--THEY ALL WANTED TO GO, SO IT AMOUNTS TO ALMOST THE SAME THING AS A VOLUNTEER BASIS. I WAS PROUD OF THEM."

THE COMMANDER SAID THE FLYING FORTRESSES AND THEIR FIGHTER ESCORT WENT STRAIGHT FOR TARGETS IN HUNGARY. HIS PLANE WENT TO THE BIG RAILWAY CITY OF DEBRECZEN. NO FLAK AND NO ENEMY PLANES WERE ENCOUNTERED, HE RELATED.

"WE HIT THE TARGET ALL RIGHT, THEN TURNED AND HEADED TOWARD THE SOVIET UNION AND YOU CAN BET I GOT A REAL THRILL OUT OF THAT," THE COLONEL SAID.

"WE DIDN'T KNOW WHAT WE WERE GOING TO FIND, YOU KNOW. WE DIDN'T KNOW EXACTLY HOW MANY AMERICANS WE'D FIND OR HOW MANY RUSSIANS WE'D FIND."

THE COLONEL SAID THAT BEFORE HE LEFT HE TOLD HIS MEN ABOUT WHEN THEY WOULD HIT THE RUSSIAN-GERMAN FRONT, AND "WE DIDN'T MISS IT FAR."

"HOW DID WE KNOW IT WAS THE FRONT? WELL BROTHER, THEY BEGAN SHOOTING AT US--I MEAN THE GERMANS."

THE FLAK, HOWEVER, WAS LIGHT AND THE PLANES APPEARED TO BE COMING THROUGH ALL RIGHT, HE SAID.

"OUR FIGHTERS WERE WITH US AND SO WERE THE RUSSIANS BY THIS TIME. THEY WERE OVER US. AND FROM THEN ON IT WAS A REAL PLEASURE."

ONE OF HIS ENGINES BEGAN GIVING TROUBLE AND "I KEPT WONDERING WHO WOULD FIX IT WHEN WE LANDED, RUSSIANS OR AMERICANS. NOW I AM VERY PROUD TO SAY IT WAS FIXED BY BOTH RUSSIANS AND AMERICANS."

30.24— 15947

AS SOON AS HE STEPPED OUT OF THE PLANE SOMEONE HANDED THE COLONEL A MICROPHONE.

"I SAW IT WAS A RUSSIAN AND I SUPPOSED HE WANTED ME TO SAY SOMETHING OR HE WOULDN'T HAVE HANDED IT TO ME. SO I STARTED TALKING," THE COLONEL SAID.

"I TOLD THEM,---AND BY THEM, I MEAN THE RUSSIANS,---THAT WE WERE ALL VERY GLAD TO PARTICIPATE IN THIS HISTORY-MAKING OCCASION WHICH ALL OF US KNEW WOULD NOT HAVE BEEN POSSIBLE WITHOUT THEM--THEIR GENERALS, OFFICERS, MEN AND PEOPLE."

THE COLONEL SAID "I CAN'T LET YOU USE MY NAME--THAT'S REGULATIONS. BUT I'M FROM CHICAGO."

AMERICANS WHO ARE AT THE BASE HAVE MADE THIS BIT OF RUSSIA AS DEFINITELY AMERICAN AS A KANSAS WHEAT FIELD OR A GEORGIA MELON PATCH.

I HADN'T ANY MORE THAN LANDED WHEN I SAW A FAMILIAR LOOKING TALL BLOND STRINGING TELEPHONE WIRES. IT WAS SGT.LEROY MASSEY, FORMER CENTER FOR THE DETROIT LIONS PRO FOOTBALL TEAM. HE HAD A DAMAGED EAR AND SAID LAUGHINGLY "I GOT IT PLAYING FOOTBALL DOWN HERE--I FELL IN A SLIT TRENCH."

IN A NEARBY FIELD SOME GI'S WERE PLAYING SOFTBALL DURING THEIR LUNCH HOUR. SOME RUSSIAN SOLDIERS WERE WATCHING THEM CURIOUSLY.

"DON'T GET THE IDEA WE HAVE MUCH TIME FOR THIS," SAID LT.JOHN L. FREDERICKS, EAST MCKEESPORT, PA. "WHY, I'VE KNOWN THESE FELLOWS TO BE WORKING AT 2 O'CLOCK IN THE MORNING."

BEHIND A BUILDING I SAW RUSSIANS PLAYING VOLLEY BALL AND THIS TIME IT WAS AMERICANS LOOKING ON.

"YEAH," SAID PVT.THOMAS F.GAFFORD, DICKSON, TENN., "WE'RE GOING TO LEARN THAT GAME AND THEY'RE GOING TO LEARN SOFTBALL. THEN WE'RE GOING TO HAVE SOME INTERNATIONAL SPORTS."

IN THE KITCHEN, WHERE I FOUND MANY FAMILIAR AMERICAN LABELS, LT.LOUIS WAMPERT, SALEM, ORE., WAS IN CHARGE.

"WE'VE GOT A RED-HEADED SARGE, HAROLD CARLISLE OF TAKOMA, WASH., AS MESS SARGE," HE RELATED. "WE HAVE PLENTY OF AMERICAN COOKS AND SOME RED ARMY GIRLS HELP OUT. THEY ARE ALL SWELL."

LT.DONALD J.KOEBUCK, CHARLES CITY, IA., TOLD ME ABOUT THE ENGINEERING WORK AND PRAISED THE RUSSIANS FOR THEIR PART.

"WE SPOKE NO RUSSIAN WHEN WE GOT HERE AND THEY SPOKE NO ENGLISH," HE SAID. "WE JUST WENT ALONG ON THE SIGN LANGUAGE AND THAT COMMON LANGUAGE, WORK, AND BROTHER IF YOU'LL LOOK AROUND I BELIEVE YOU'LL SEE WE GOT IT DONE."

THE BASE HOSPITAL, UNDER DIRECTION OF LT.COL.WILLIAM M.JACKSON, SOUTH PITTSBURG, TENN., IS CLEAN, MODERN AND UP TO DATE, WITH AMERICAN DOCTORS AND NURSES.

PVT.ARLON BOOZER, NACOGDOCHES, TEX., WAS ENTHUSIASTIC ABOUT THE RUSSIANS.

BY KENNETH [illegible] (370)
ROME, JUNE 5-(AP)-THE MOUNTAINEERS CAME DOWN OUT OF THE MOUNTAINS YESTERDAY AND MOVED INTO ROME ALONG A ROAD DYED RED WITH ROSES AND THEIR OWN BLOOD.

BEARDED, EYES BORED DEEP INTO THEIR FACES FROM SHEER FATIGUE, THEY CAME DOWN FROM THE ALBAN HILLS TO FIGHT INTO THE SUBURBS WHERE MACHINE-GUNS, MORTARS AND TANKS OF THE ENEMY WERE HOLDING UP THE ADVANCE.

JUN 7 1944

THEY CALL THEMSELVES THE MOUNTAINEERS BECAUSE THEY HAVE FOUGHT THROUGH THE MOUNTAINS, THESE KIDS WHO HAVE BEHIND THEM THE BATTLES OF SALERNO, ALTAVILLE, SAN PIETRO, THE RAPIDO RIVER AND CASSINO.

THEY MAY NOT HAVE BEEN THE FIRST TO ENTER THE CITY--THAT MAY BE A SOURCE OF A MILLION ARGUMENTS FOR YEARS--BUT THEY DESERVE THE HONOR FOR THEY ARE THE ONES WHO INFILTRADED THOUSANDS STRONG THROUGH THE LAST MAIN GERMAN LINE BEFORE ROME AND STRUCK THE ENEMY FROM THE REAR.

I CAME IN WITH THEM YESTERDAY AFTERNOON ABOUT 2 O'CLOCK AND TWO GERMAN TANKS ON THE LAST LAP OF THE ANCIENT ROMAN ROAD MADE IT PLAIN NOBODY HAD BEEN THERE BEFORE US.

SO DID THE SNIPERS AND MACHINE GUN NESTS WHICH PINNED US DOWN FOR THREE HOURS BEFORE WE WERE ABLE TO MOVE ON INTO ROME.

THEY HAD JUST COME FROM THIS GREAT, DECISIVE INFILTRATION MOVE IN WHICH THEY HAD SHIFTED THOUSANDS OF MEN THREE MILES BEHIND THE GERMAN LINES BEYOND VELLETRI WITH ALMOST NO CASUALTIES.

WHEN THE RACE OF ALL DIVISIONS IN THIS AREA, ALL RECONNAISSANCE OUTFITS--ALL EVERYTHING--STARTED TOWARD ROME YESTERDAY IT LOOKED AT FIRST LIKE THE LADS WHO MADE IT POSSIBLE MIGHT BE LOST IN THE SHUFFLE.

BUT WHEN THE GERMANS CUT LOOSE IN THE SUBURBS THE GUYS WHO WERE RUNNING THE GREAT ROME HANDICAP--JEEPS AND COMMAND CARS--NATURALLY CALLED BACK FOR THE INFANTRY.

AND SO NATURALLY THE MOUNTAINEERS CAME UP, THIS TIME RIDING IN TRUCKS, HOPPED OUT, AND TOOK TO THE SLOPES, SLOUGHS AND DRAWS WHERE THE SNIPERS, WHO HAD KILLED OR WOUNDED MORE THAN 20 IN THE COMPANY I ACCOMPANIED, WERE HIDDEN.

SOME OF THEM WERE UNFED FOR NEARLY 48 HOURS, OTHERS HAD BEEN LIVING ON ONLY ONE CANTEEN OF WATER FOR TWO DAYS, BUT THEY KEPT ON GOING AND DOZENS WERE MOWED DOWN.

BETWEEN SUCH TRAGEDIES THEY STUCK INTO THEIR HELMETS ROSES HANDED THEM BY ITALIAN FAMILIES ALONG THE WAY, DRANK THE WATER POURED BY OTHER FRIENDLY NATIVES, AND MOVED ON INTO THE CITY THEY HAD BEEN HOPING TO OCCUPY FOR THE PAST NINE MONTHS.

IT IS A STRANGE COMMENTARY ON THE CAPTURE OF ROME THAT THE DOUGHBOYS WERE MET BY SOME PEOPLE THROWING FLOWERS--AND OTHERS THROWING LEAD.

ROME, JUNE 5-(AP)-ASSERTING THE MAJOR PARTS OF TWO GERMAN ARMIES HAD BEEN SMASHED, LT.GEN.MARK W.CLARK SAID TODAY THAT THE OCCUPATION OF ROME WAS "A GREAT DAY FOR THE FIFTH ARMY".

MEETING HIS CORPS OF COMMANDERS ON THE CITY HALL STEPS IN A MILITARY HUDDLE ON FUTURE OPERATIONS, GEN.CLARK PAID TRIBUTE TO "THE GALLANT MEN AND WOMEN WHO MADE THE SUPREME SACRIFICE" DURING THE ITALIAN CAMPAIGN TO MAKE TODAY'S OCCUPATION POSSIBLE.

GEN.CLARK LAUDED FRENCH, BRITISH AND AMERICAN FORCES OF THE FIFTH ARMY INDIVIDUALLY.

LOOKING OUT OVER THOUSANDS OF CHEERING ITALIANS, THE LANKY GENERAL SAID BOTH THE TENTH AND FOURTEENTH GERMAN ARMIES HAD BEEN AT LEAST PARTLY DESTROYED--20,000 PRISONERS TAKEN AND UNTOL QUANTITIES OF MATERIEL CAPTURED.

ALLIED HEADQUARTERS, NAPLES, JUNE [illegible]-(AP)-THE GERMAN 10TH AND 14TH ARMIES, REELING NORTHWARD UNDER CLOSE PURSUIT OF THE FIFTH ARMY FROM ROME AND UNDER A STEADY ATTACK FROM WARPLANES, WILL HAVE TO RETREAT ANOTHER 150 MILES BEFORE FINDING A DEFENSE LINE WITH NATURAL ADVANTAGES SUCH AS THAT AT CASSINO.

THE GERMANS PROBABLY WILL FIGHT ANY NUMBER OF DELAYING ACTIONS AT POINTS PERMITTING A STAND OF A DAY OR TWO, BUT THE MOST POPULAR GUESS IS THAT THEY WILL FALL BACK TO WHAT IS CALLED THE RIMINI-PISA LINE FOR THEIR NEXT REAL DEFENSE. THIS IS WHERE THE NORTHERN APPENNINES PROVIDE A FORMIDABLE BARRIER ACROSS ITALY.

ALLIED HEADQUARTERS, NAPLES, JUNE 5-(AP)-GEN.SIR HENRY MAITLAND WILSON EXPRESSED PARTICULAR ADMIRATION TONIGHT FOR "THE DASH AND FIGHTING SPIRIT" OF THE U.S. 85TH AND 88TH DIVISIONS--FIRST SELECTIVE SERVICE DIVISIONS TO SERVE IN THE FRONT LINES DURING THE CURRENT ITALIAN OFFENSIVE.

THE COMMENT OF THE ALLIED COMMANDER IN CHIEF IN THE MEDITERRANEAN THEATER WAS MADE IN REPLY TO A MESSAGE OF CONGRATULATIONS FROM PRESIDENT ROOSEVELT ON THE SUCCESS OF THE CAMPAIGN IN ITALY.

"THE SUCCESS," GEN.WILSON MESSAGED, "HAS BEEN DUE TO THE FINE FIGHTING QUALITIES OF THE ALLIED TROOPS; ALSO TO THE UNREMITTING HARASSING OPERATIONS OF THE ALLIED AIR FORCES AND TO THE ASSISTANCE RECEIVED FROM THE ALLIED NAVIES DURING THE LAST FEW MONTHS.

"I WOULD LIKE TO RECORD MY ADMIRATION OF THE DASH AND FIGHTING SPIRIT SHOWN BY THE 85TH AND 88TH UNITED STATES DIVISIONS IN THIS THEIR FIRST BATTLE."

REPLYING TO A MESSAGE OF CONGRATULATIONS FROM SECRETARY OF WAR STIMSON GEN.WILSON SAID IT "WILL BE THE GREATEST INSPIRATION AND ENCOURAGEMENT TO ALL OF US TO KNOW WE HAVE THE CONFIDENCE AND SUPPORT OF THE PEOPLE OF THE UNITED STATES."

"GENERAL EISENHOWER," GEN.WILSON ADDED IN HIS MESSAGE TO MR.ROOSEVELT, "INSPIRED THE FORCES UNDER HIS COMMAND. IT IS MY CONSTANT ENDEAVOR TO DEVELOP THIS SPIRIT. I TRUST THAT THE SUCCESSFUL CONCLUSION OF THE CAMPAIGN IN ITALY, IN WHICH THERE IS STILL MUCH TO BE DONE TO COMPLETE THE DESTRUCTION OF THE GERMAN FORCES, WILL PROVIDE AN EXAMPLE AND FORECAST OF COOPERATION OF ALLIED ACTIONS WHICH WILL SOON SURELY FOLLOW.'

ROME, JUNE 5-(AP)-HIGHWAY SIX, THE OLD VIA CASILINA WHICH ONCE WAS THE LIFE LINE FOR FIELD MARSHAL GEN.ALBERT KESSERING'S GERMAN FORCES, WAS FREE OF SHOT AND SHELL TODAY AND FROM CASSINO TO ROME IT WAS ALIVE WITH ALLIED TROOPS STREAMING FORWARD.

ALL AFTERNOON DOUGHBOYS POURED THROUGH ROME--ONE OF THE FEW CITIES IN THE PATH OF WAR TO ESCAPE UNRAVAGED--ON FOOT, IN JEEPS AND TANKS, RUMBLING PAST ST.PETER'S ANCIENT STONES.

ITALIANS, FEW OF WHOM HAD SLEPT LAST NIGHT WHILE THE TROOPS WERE FIGHTING INTO THE CITY, CROWDED THE STREETS, CHEERING AND APPLAUDING. OTHERS WAVED FROM BALCONIES. CHILDREN CARRIED SMALL ITALIAN FLAGS.

SMALL GIRLS IN BRIGHT DRESSES THREW ROSES. SOME MARCHING SOLDIERS HAD SMALL ITALIAN FLAGS POKING FROM THE MUZZLES OF THEIR RIFLES.

SOME SIDEWALK CAFES WERE THRONGED, BUT MOST OF THE BUSINESS HOUSES WERE CLOSED, WITH THE SHUTTERS DOWN.

DOZENS OF ITALIANS TRIED OUT THEIR ENGLISH ON THE AMERICANS. AMONG THEM WAS JOSEPH ESPOSITO, WHO SAID HE FORMERLY WAS FROM ST.LOUIS AND HAD BEEN LIVING IN ROME FOR THE LAST TEN YEARS. HE VOLUNTEERED TO BE OUR GUIDE.

ESPOSITO POINTED OUT THE CENTRAL RAILROAD STATION WHERE A BOMB HAD NEATLY PUT THE YARDS OUT OF COMMISSION AND MISSED BY BUT A FEW YARDS THE CONTINENTAL HOTEL, WHERE GERMAN OFFICERS WERE BILLETED.

THE EXCELSIOR HOTEL, WHERE THE GERMAN COMMANDER STAYED, WAS DECORATED WITH BIG BRITISH AND AMERICAN FLAGS, AS WAS THE FAMOUS GRAND HOTEL.

A FREE AUSTRIA MOVEMENT HAS MOVED IN AND HAS RAISED THE AUSTRIAN FLAG.

IT WAS A GREAT DAY FOR BOTH THE ALLIES AND THE ROMANS, BUT UP IN THE HILLS BEYOND THE FIFTH AND EIGHTH ARMIES STILL WERE FIGHTING THE ENEMY.

PVT.WILLIE BLACK OF GULEY BRIDGE, W.VA., STANDING GUARD AT ONE CORNER, SAID HE HAD TO FIGHT HIS WAY THROUGH THE FRIENDLY CROWDS TO HIS POST AND HAD TURNED DOWN INNUMERABLE BOTTLES OF WINE.

WASHINGTON,JUNE 5-(AP)-AMERICAN DIPLOMATS VIEWED THE FALL OF ROME TODAY AS SPEEDING THE GRAND ASSAULT ON HITLER'S EUROPE AND CONFRONTING AXIS SATELLITES AND WAVERING NEUTRALS OVER THE WORLD WITH CLEAR EVIDENCE OF THE FATE DESTINED BERLIN.

HAPPY AT THE CAPTURE OF THE ITALIAN CAPITAL, ORIGINAL SEAT OF FASCISM, THESE OFFICIALS EARNESTLY EXAMINED REPORTS ON THE BALKANS AND OTHER EUROPEAN AREAS FOR SIGNS OF REACTION TO THIS LATEST GREAT WAR DEVELOPMENT EVEN AS PRESIDENT ROOSEVELT PREPARED A 15-MINUTE RADIO BROADCAST SUMMING UP THIS GOVERNMENT'S OFFICIAL REACTION.

THE BROADCAST, OVER ALL MAJOR NETWORKS, IS SET FOR 8:30 P.M., EASTERN WARTIME.

THE PRESIDENT WAS EXPECTED TO EMPHASIZE THE SYMBOLIC IMPORTANCE OF THE ITALIAN CONQUEST AND TO BEAR HEAVILY UPON ITS POLITICAL SIGNIFICANCE.

IT HAS LONG BEEN A THEORY OF DIPLOMATS AND POLITICAL LEADERS BOTH HERE AND IN LONDON THAT THE DAY THE ALLIES MARCHED INTO ROME WOULD BE THE REAL BEGINNING OF THE END FOR NEUTRAL AND SATELLITE SUPPORT OF GERMANY THROUGHOUT EUROPE.

AT THE SAME TIME MILITARY AUTHORITIES AND INTERNATIONAL POLITICAL EXPERTS GRAPPLED WITH TWO TOUGH PROBLEMS STEMMING DIRECTLY FROM THE MILITARY TRIUMPH. ADMITTEDLY THE MORE DIFFICULT WAS THE PROBLEM OF RUSHING FOOD SUPPLIES, MEDICAL EQUIPMENT AND CLOTHING TO THE POPULATION OF THE CITY.

INFORMATION AVAILABLE HERE WAS THAT THE PEOPLE HAD SUFFERED SEVERELY AT THE HANDS OF THE ENEMY WHO REMOVED ALL PORTABLE SUPPLIES EVEN THOUGH THE CITY ITSELF HAD ESCAPED THE DEVASTATION OF A SEIGE.

THE OTHER TASK CONFRONTING DIRECTLY THE ALLIED COMMAND OF GENERAL SIR HENRY MAITLAND WILSON, AND INDIRECTLY THE WASHINGTON, LONDON AND MOSCOW GOVERNMENTS, WAS THAT OF REORGANIZATION OF THE WHOLE ITALIAN REGIME HEADED BY KING VITTORIO EMANUELE AND PREMIER MARSHAL PIETRO BADOGLIO.

THE KING PROMISED WEEKS AGO THAT HE WOULD RETIRE WHEN ROME WAS LIBERATED. HIS SON, CROWN PRINCE UMBERTO, WILL TAKE OVER IN HIS PLACE AS A SORT OF REGENT.

THE ALLIED GOVERNMENTS HAVE TAKEN HIS PROMISE LITERALLY AND THE KING'S FULFILLMENT IS EXPECTED MOMENTARILY. SOME DAYS AGO, IT WAS LEARNED, HE SENT WORD HE WOULD PREFER TO MAKE THE SWITCH IN ROME. HOWEVER, THERE WAS NO DISPOSITION, SO FAR AS COULD BE LEARNED HERE, TO ALLOW HIM TO ENTER THE ETERNAL CITY AS HEAD OF THE ITALIAN STATE.

BADOGLIO IS EXPECTED TO CONTINUE AS CHIEF OF THE GOVERNMENT, AT LEAST FOR A TIME. HIS TASK WILL BE TO RECRUIT FROM THE PATRIOT POLITICAL FORCES WHICH HE MAY FIND IN ROME SUPPORT AND NUMBERS FOR HIS GOVERNMENT.

WITH A FORWARD INVADER GROUP IN ITALY, JUNE 5-(AP)-THE "BOMB LINE" HAS TAKEN ANOTHER LONG NORTHWARD LEAP AS A RESULT OF THE GERMANS' RAPID WITHDRAWAL NORTH OF ROME.

INVADER ATTACK PILOTS FROM FLIGHT AFTER FLIGHT TODAY REPORTED THE ENEMY'S TRANSPORT ON HIGHWAYS NO. 1, 2 AND 3 GROWING THINNER AND MORE SCATTERED.

"YESTERDAY WAS WONDERFUL" SAID LT. EDWARD H.RYAN OF PITTSBURGH, PA., WHO LED A FLIGHT CONSERVATIVELY ESTIMATED TO HAVE DESTROYED 30 ENEMY VEHICLES ALONG HIGHWAY 1--THE VIA AURELIA.

"BUT THERE WERE LOTS WE SIMPLY COULD NOT COUNT," SAID RYAN WHO FLEW SOUTHWARD ALONG THE ROUTE ALMOST TO THE VATICAN. THE ROAD WAS CHOKED WITH A MOTLEY ARRAY OF TRANSPORT, INCLUDICG HORSEDRAWN WAGONS AND TRUCKS CARRYING GASOLINE AND AMMUNITION OUT OF THE CITY.

"FLAMES, EXPLOSIONS AND CLOUDS OF SMOKE SHOT UP AS WE TOUCHED OFF THE INFLAMMABLE LOADS," SAID RYAN. "WE WERE SO LOW WE COULD PLAINLY SEE BLOOD SPATTER ON THE ROAD AS HORSES SIMPLY FELL APART."

EARLIER LT. P.R.NORDELL OF PORTLAND, ORE., LEADING A FOUR-MAN FLIGHT ON A SWEEP ACROSS HIGHWAYS 1 TO 3, SAW ROME TO THE SOUTH, ALMOST HIDDEN IN A CLOUD THROUGH WHICH DOZENS OF PLUMES OF SMOKE ROSE, AND HIT SOLID COLUMNS OF TRAFFIC SPLITTING AT THE FORK SOUTH OF LAKE BRACCIANO.

"WE'D RUN LOW ON AMMUNITION BEFORE FINDING THIS TARGET BUT BY THE TIME WE HAD FINISHED EVEN THE GRASS AT THE ROADSIDE WAS BURNING," HE SAID.

THE CHINESE ALSO CLAIMED TO HAVE REPELLED ENEMY FORCES DESCENDING FROM HUPEH TOWARD CHANGTEH, 100 MILES NORTHWEST OF CHANGSHA. THE BULLETIN SAID THE COUNTERATTACKERS REACHED A REGION JUST SOUTHWEST OF NANHSIEN OF TUNGTING LAKE, ABOUT 40 MILES SOUTHWEST OF THE NORTH HUNAN JAPANESE BASE OF YOYANG.
JAPANESE WHO HAD PUSHED TO THE EAST BANK OF THE SUNGTZE, TRIBUTARY OF THE YANGTZE IN HUPEH, WERE SMASHED AND FLED EASTWARD IN CONFUSION, THE HIGH COMMAND SAID.

A COMMUNIQUE SAID CHINESE AND CHINESE-AMERICAN PLANES STRIKING AT THE ENEMY IN HONAN PROVINCE SOUTHWEST OF SHANSIEN ATTACKED JAPANESE TANK AND TROOP CONCENTRATIONS, DESTROYING SCORES OF ENEMY VEHICLES OF VARIOUS TYPES" AND INFLICTING HEAVY CASUALTIES.

FIELD DISPATCHES YESTERDAY SAID THE LEFT WING OF THE INVADER'S MAIN BODY WAS 40 MILES EAST-NORTHEAST OF CHANGSHA, A CITY BRACED FOR ITS FOURTH BATTLE OF THE WAR, WHILE DIRECTLY FROM THE NORTH THE JAPANESE HAVE PUSHED TO A POINT WITHIN 35 MILES OF THEIR OBJECTIVE.

DEFENDING FORCES HALTED THIS SECOND ASSAULT WHEN JAPANESE TROOPS TRIED TO CROSS THE HILLY REGION 20 MILES NORTHEAST OF LIUYANG, A CHINESE COMMUNIQUE SAID.
APPARENTLY THE PURPOSE OF THE LIUYANG DRIVE IS TO PLACE THE JAPANESE IN POSITION TO STRIKE CHANGSHA FROM THE EAST. LIUYANG LIES 30 MILES DUE EAST OF CHANGSHA.
THERE WAS NO MENTION IN YESTERDAY'S CHINESE WAR BULLETIN OF THE SITUATION DIRECTLY WEST OF THE CANTON-HANKOW RAILWAY, WHERE THE CHINESE LAST WERE REPORTED TO HAVE HALTED THE INVADERS AT KWEIYI, ABOUT 40 MILES NORTH OF CHANGSHA.
THE CHINESE HIGH COMMAND ALSO ANNOUNCED RECAPTURE OF ANSIANG, ON THE NORTHWESTERN SHORE OF TUNGTING LAKE AND 55 MILES WEST OF YOCHOW, JAPANESE BASE IN NORTHERN HUNAN. HALF THE JAPANESE GARRISON WAS ANNIHILATED AND LARGE QUANTITIES OF WAR MATERIALS WERE CAPTURED, THE ANNOUNCEMENT SAID.
IN THE HONAN PROVINCE THEATER, 400 MILES TO THE NORTH OF THE HUNAN BATTLE AREA, THE CHINESE WERE REPORTED PURSUING THE ENEMY NORTHWARD AFTER CAPTURE OF SUNGHSIEN. THIS CITY IS 45 MILES SOUTHWEST OF LOYANG, NOW OCCUPIED BY JAPANESE.
ON THE SALWEEN RIVER FRONT IN YUNNAN PROVINCE, WHERE CHINESE ARE ATTEMPTING TO DRIVE INTO NORTH BURMA, THE WAR BULLETIN SAID CHINESE FORCES HAD CROSSED THE SHWELI RIVER AND PUSHED TO WITHIN 12 MILES OF THE JAPANESE BASE OF TENGCHUNG, CUTTING THE MAIN ENEMY SUPPLY ARTERY TO THE NORTH.

JUN 7 1944
NOTING THAT ARRIVAL OF THE MONSOON SEASON HAD BROUGHT LITTLE SLACKENING IN ALLIED OPERATIONS, EITHER AGROUND OR IN THE AIR, THE REVIEW SAID WITH GUARDED OPTIMISM:
"TO THE JAPANESE, BURMA SHOWS SIGNS, WHICH MUST APPEAR OMINOUS, OF BECOMING A DANGEROUS RUNNING SORE, DRAINING AWAY MEN AND SUPPLIES WHOSE REINFORCEMENT AND REPLACEMENT WILL GROW MORE COSTLY AND DIFFICULT AS ALLIED PRESSURE INCREASES."

THE AERIAL BATTLE WAS THE SECOND BIG CONFLICT OVER TRUK IN TWO DAYS, AS JAPANESE INTERCEPTORS STEPPED UP THEIR EFFORTS TO THWART THE ATTACKS. YANK FLIERS DESTROYED 10 OF A 20-PLANE FIGHTER SQUADRON FRIDAY. WHEN NONE OF THE ATTACKING LIBERATORS WAS LOST.

LOSS OF ONLY ONE ALLIED PLANE WAS LISTED IN THE ACCOUNTS OF AIR ACTION DURING WHICH SEVEN OTHER NIPPONESE AIRCRAFT PROBABLY WERE SHOT DOWN IN ADDITION TO THE 30 AND SEVERAL WERE DESTROYED ON THE GROUND.

ON BIAK, MAIN ISLAND IN THE SCHOUTENS OFF NORTH DUTCH NEW GUINEA, GEN. DOUGLAS MACARTHUR CHANGED HIS OFFENSIVE TACTICS AFTER HIS SIXTH ARMY UNITS WHICH LANDED THERE MAY 27 FAILED IN A PUSH ALONG A COASTAL ROAD TOWARD THREE AIRFIELDS.

IN THE NEW DRIVE, WHILE ONE COLUMN MOVED BACK FROM RETREAT ALONG THAT ROAD ANOTHER BUCKED TREACHEROUS TERRAIN IN AN ACCOMPANY-ING DRIVE ALONG THE RIDGES FROM WHICH THE JAPANESE PREVIOUSLY HAD POURED DOWN A MURDEROUS FIRE. THE COLUMNS CRUNCHED AHEAD SLOWLY AGAINST INTENSE ENEMY MORTAR, MACHINEGUN AND RIFLE OPPOSITION.

TWENTY JAPANESE DIVE BOMBERS WERE SENT AGAINST THE INVASION BEACHHEAD. AUSTRALIAN KITTYHAWKS SHOT DOWN EIGHT AND ACK ACK GUNNERS GOT ANOTHER.

TO THE SOUTHWEST ON THE DUTCH NEW GUINEA MAINLAND, LIGHTNINGS TANGLED OVER THE ENEMY BASE OF BABO WITH 20 ZEROS, DOWNING 11 FOR CERTAIN AND PROBABLY FOUR OTHERS FOR A LOSS OF ONE LIGHTNING.

THE BIGGEST AIR BATTLE OCCURRED OVER TRUK IN THE CAROLINES WHERE 50 ENEMY FIGHTERS TRIED VAINLY TO BREAK UP A STRONG DAYLIGHT RAID BY LIBERATORS. GUNNERS OF THE BOMBERS SHOT DOWN AT LEAST 10. PERHAPS THREE OTHERS, DURING A LONG RUNNING FIGHT IN WHICH 10 LIBERATORS WERE DAMAGED, THREE CREWMEN KILLED AND FOUR WOUNDED. BUT THE BOMBERS DROPPED THEIR 36 TONS OF EXPLOSIVES SQUARELY IN THE CENTER OF DUBLON TOWNSHIP AND ALL GOT BACK TO THEIR ADMIRALTY BASES.

THAT RAID WAS MADE FRIDAY. AT PEARL HARBOR, ADM. CHESTER W. NIMITZ REPORTED THAT LIBERATORS FROM THE MARSHALLS LATER DROPPED 41 TONS ON TRUK, ENCOUNTERING ONLY TWO ENEMY FIGHTERS AND EMERGING UNSCATHED.

AGROUND ALONG THE NEW GUINEA COAST, A GROWING TOLL WAS TAKEN OF JAPANESE TRAPPED BY A SERIES OF LEAPFROG LANDINGS. FURTHER DETERIORATION OF THE JAPANESE POSITION ON BOUGAINVILLE IN THE NORTHERN SOLOMONS WAS INDICATED BY THE SEIZURE OF ABANDONED FORTIFICATIONS IN A NEW CUTBACK LANDING SOUTHEAST OF THE AMERICAN POSITION AT EMPRESS AUGUSTA BAY.

"WHEN THE SHELL EXPLODED," SAID C.C.COLGROVE, RADIOMAN, OF OGELL, MINN., "I SUDDENLY FELT A SHARP PAIN IN MY SHOULDER. BLOOD STARTED POURING FROM THE WOUND JUST AS I SAW THE PLANE CAPTAIN, JOHN H.ALDERSON, (AVIATION MACHINIST'S MATE, OF 10511 SOUTH MANHATTAN PLACE, LOS ANGELES) COME STAGGERING THROUGH THE DOOR FROM THE COCKPIT. I SAW RIGHT AWAY THAT HE'D BEEN HIT BY A PIECE OF FLAK WHICH WENT THROUGH HIS RIGHT SIDE."

"CPL.ARTHUR W.BRANDL, (A MARINE PHOTOGRAPHER FROM FOWLER AVE., MERIDEN, CONN.) WAS SO BUSY IN THE REAR SNAPPING PICTURES THAT HE WAS UNAWARE OF WHAT HAD HAPPENED UNTIL I CALLED HIM TO COME BANDAGE MY ARM AND SHOULDER. HE MADE AN IMPROVISED TOURNIQUET AND APPLIED PRESSURE, WHILE 'FITZ', LAWRENCE FITZGERALD, (AVIATION MACHINIST, OF 432 8TH ST., SAN BERNARDINO, CAL.) THE TURRET GUNNER, AND REED GOT LIEUT.PETERSON OUT OF THE COCKPIT. HE DIED A FEW MINUTES AFTER WE MADE HIM AS COMFORTABLE AS POSSIBLE ON THE FLOOR -

JUN 7 194

"ALDERSON WAS HAVING TROUBLE BREATHING," FITZGERALD SAID, "SO I ADMINISTERED WHAT LITTLE FIRST AID I KNEW AND TOLD BRANDL TO CONTINUE WITH THE PRESSURE ON COLGROVE'S SHOULDER. FLAK ALSO HAD HIT THE RADIO APPARATUS, BUT, WORKING ONLY WITH HIS LEFT HAND, COLGROVE GOT IT WORKING AND MADE CONTACT WITH OUR BASE.

"IT WASN'T UNTIL I MOVED OVER INTO THE PILOT'S SEAT, ONLY TO FIND THE CONTROLS NO GOOD, THAT I FOUND OUT I, TOO, HAD BEEN HIT," SAID ENSIGN MCNATT. "I FELT A SLOW TRICKLE OF BLOOD ACROSS MY FACE AS I GOT UP, BUT IT WAS ONLY A SCRATCH."

IN REGARD TO THE LANDING, ENSIGN MCNATT HAD ONLY THIS TO SAY: "THE FELLOWS WERE EXCITED ENOUGH, SO I DIDN'T DARE TELL 'EM I'D NEVER LANDED ONE OF THE THINGS. THEY ALL DID A WONDERFUL JOB, THOUGH, AND I'M MIGHTY PROUD OF THEM. THE DOC SAYS BRANDL KEPT COLGROVE FROM BLEEDING TO DEATH."

LIEUT.PETERSON, WHO WAS SQUADRON PHOTOGRAPHIC OFFICER, WAS ON HIS THIRD TOUR OF DUTY IN THE COMBAT ZONE, HAVING BEEN TO THE ALEUTIANS AND BACK TO THE STATES TWICE BEFORE BEING SENT INTO THE CENTRAL PACIFIC.

ENSIGN MCNATT, WAS PARTICIPATING IN HIS 10TH MISSION OVER ENEMY TERRITORY.

THE ST. LAURENT "RODE HERD" ON THE U-BOAT SO SUCCESSFULLY THAT MEMBERS OF THE CREW FIRED PISTOLS AND HURLED EMPTY SHELL CASES AS WELL AS OTHER BRIC-A-BRAC AT THE SUBMARINE.

A NUMBER OF PRISONERS WERE PICKED UP BY THE THREE SHIPS AFTER THE U-BOAT WAS DESTROYED.

MONTREAL, JUNE 5-(AP)-POLICE WERE PUT ON EMERGENCY SCHEDULES TONIGHT IN SEVERAL DISTRICTS OF MONTREAL AND ITS SUBURBS AS AUTHORITIES ATTEMPTED TO TRACE THE CAUSE OF WEEK-END MELEES BETWEEN SERVICEMEN AND LONG-COATED ZOOT-SUITERS.

THIRTY-EIGHT PERSONS WERE CALLED TO APPEAR IN COURT JUNE 12 ON CHARGES OF DISTURBING THE PEACE, ONE CIVILIAN WAS CHARGED WITH ATTEMPTED MURDER, AND FOUR PERSONS WERE HOSPITALIZED AS THE RESULT OF THE CLASHES.

THE DISTURBANCES APPEARED TO BE A LARGE SCALE CONTINUATION OF MINOR INCIDENTS LAST WEEK WHICH AT FIRST DID NOT INVOLVE SERVICE PERSONNEL.

THE DRAPE-SHAPE BOYS FIRST BECAME INVOLVED IN A MELEE WITH YOUNG RESIDENTS OF SUBURBAN ST.LAMBERT OVER OCCUPANCY OF SPACE IN A ROADSIDE RESTAURANT. THE ZOOT-SUITERS LOST OUT AND WHEN THEY ATTEMPTED TO CONTINUE THE ARGUMENT THE NEXT NIGHT THEY WERE STEERED AWAY BY ST. LAMBERT POLICE.

IN CROSSING A BRIDGE OVER THE ST.LAWRENCE, THE ZOO-SUITERS MET A GROU OF A SOLDIERS FROM NEARBY JACQUES CARTIER BARRACKS. A RESULTANT FIGHT WAS QUICKLY QUELLED BY MILITARY POLICE. FORTY OF THE ZOOT-SUIT YOUTHS WERE TAKEN INTO CUSTODY BUT WERE RELEASED WHEN THEIR REGISTRATION PAPERS WERE FOUND TO BE IN ORDER.

THE ZOOT-SUITERS TOOK ROUGH TREATMENT SATURDAY AND SUNDAY. GROUPS OF SERVICEMEN, MOSTLY IN NAVY UNIFORM, TOURED MONTREAL NIGHT SPOTS, HUNTED OUT ZOOT-SUITERS IN A DOZEN CLUBS AND DANCE-HALLS, AND RIPPED OFF THEIR CLOTHING. THE ACTIVITIES SPREAD TO NEIGHBORING MUNICIPALITIES AND RETURNED TO CENTRAL LAFONTAINE PARK SUNDAY WHEN A GROUP OF SAILORS BROKE UP A BAND CONCERT.

NEW YORK, JUNE 5-(AP)-A MAJOR REVOLT BY LITHUANIAN TROOPS AGAINST GERMAN OCCUPATION FORCES WHICH LED TO THE ARREST AND DEPORTATION OF THE LITHUANIAN COMMANDER TO GERMANY WAS REPORTED TONIGHT BY A SWEDISH RADIO BROADCAST PARAPHRASING A COMMUNIQUE ISSUED BY THE "SUPREME LIBERATION COMMITTEE" IN VILNA.

THE BROADCAST, REPORTED BY THE FEDERAL COMMUNICATIONS COMMISSION, IDENTIFIED THE COMMANDER AS GEN.POVILAS PLECHAVICIUS, WHO FORMED A 14-BATTALION LITHUANIAN DEFENSE ARMY WITH NAZI PERMISSION IN FEBRUARY.

PLECHAVICIUS HAD STIPULATED THAT THE TROOPS WERE NOT TO BE USED BY THE GERMANS ANYWHERE, ACCORDING TO THE BROADCAST, WHICH SAID THE REVOLT HAD BEEN TOUCHED OFF THREE WEEKS AGO WHEN THE NAZIS TRIED TO "INCORPORATE THE LITHUANIAN BATTALIONS IN GERMAN WAFFEN (ARMED) SS BATTALIONS."

"IN THE NIGHT OF MAY 15," THE SWEDISH RADIO SAID, "SS UNITS TRIED TO DISARM A LITHUANIAN BATTALION NUMBERING 1,800 MEN AND OFFICERS AND 1,200 CADETS IN AN OFFICERS' TRAINING SCHOOL, BOTH AT MARIAMPOLE. FIGHTING HERE CONTINUED UNTIL THE LITHUANIANS HAD USED UP ALL THEIR AMMUNITION, AND BOTH SIDES SUFFERED SEVERE LOSSES.

"SEVEN LITHUANIAN BATTALIONS STATIONED AT VILNA WERE DISARMED, WHILE BATTALIONS STATIONED IN NORTHERN LITHUANIA LEFT THEIR BARRACKS AND TOOK TO THE FORESTS."

ABOARD ALSO WILL BE 43 CIVILIANS FOR A TOTAL PASSENGER COMPLEMENT OF 131, THE SMALLEST NUMBER EVER TO ARRIVE ON AN EXCHANGE SHIP. THE GRIPSHOLM DISCHARGED MORE THAN 600 BRITISH REPATRIATES AT BELFAST AFTER EFFECTING THE EXCHANGE WITH THE GERMANS AT BARCELONA.

AMONG THE CIVILIANS ARE EIGHT UNITED STATES CITIZENS, INCLUDING LARRY ALLEN, ASSOCIATED PRESS WAR CORRESPONDENT WHO SPENT 20 MONTHS IN ITALIAN AND GERMAN PRISON CAMPS. HE WAS TAKEN PRISONER WHEN THE DESTROYER TO WHICH HE WAS ASSIGNED WAS SUNK DURING A COMMANDO RAID ON TOBRUK IN SEPTEMBER, 1942.

NEW YORK, JUNE 5-(AP)-SECRETARY OF THE INTERIOR HAROLD L.ICKES SAID TONIGHT THE DELIVERANCE OF THE PEOPLE OF EUROPE MUST BE ACCOMPANIED BY ELIMINATION OF HATE AND INTOLERANCE OF MINORITIES AT HOME.

"HERE IN THE UNITED STATES WE CANNOT IGNORE THE STARK COLD FACT THAT WE HAVE A RACIAL PROBLEM OF SIGNIFICANT PROPORTIONS," HE SAID IN A PREPARED ADDRESS AT A TESTIMONIAL DINNER GIVEN PROF.ALBERT EINSTEIN BY THE AMERICAN FUND FOR PALESTINIAN INSTITUTIONS.

"WHAT GOOD DOES IT DO," ASKED ICKES, "TO SEND ARMIES TO ROME, BERLIN AND TOKYO TO 'LIBERATE,' AS WE SAY, THE INHABITANTS OF THOSE COUNTRIES WHILE DENYING PEOPLE OF THOSE SAME EXTRACTIONS THE LIBERATION THEY HAVE SOUGHT IN THIS COUNTRY?"

DECLARING "WE MAKE CERTAIN OUR OWN EVENTUAL DEFEAT SO LONG AS WE TOLERATE INTOLERANCE," ICKES CONTINUED:

"THE SOVIET UNION HS APPARENTLY SOLVED ITS RACIAL AND ETHNIC PROBLEMS, AFTER GENERATIONS OF CONFLICT, BUT NOT ON THE BASIS OF A MERE NEGATIVE IDEA OF RACIAL 'TOLERANCE.'

"IT HAS DONE THE JOB SIMPLY AND DIRECTLY ON THE PRINCIPLE THAT A MAN IS A MAN, AND THAT HE MUST RISE OR FALL ON THE BASIS OF HIS OWN CHARACTER AND ABILITY.

"TO TALK OF 'TOLERANCE' FOR A MAN LIKE PROFESSOR EINSTEIN, OR FOR THE THOUSANDS OF OTHER OUTSTANDING JEWS, CATHOLICS, NEGROES AND OTHER MINORITY PEOPLES OF THIS COUNTRY IS TO IMPLY THAT WE PERMIT THEM TO LIVE AND WORK AND ASSOCIATE WITH US ON SUFFERANCE; THAT THEY ARE A BURDEN WHICH WE BEAR IN AS GENTEEL AND CHRISTIAN A SPIRIT AS POSSIBLE. THAT, OF COURSE, IS ARRANT NONSENSE."

HOLDING THAT MAJORITIES OFTEN NEEDED RESTRAINT RATHER THAN PROTECTION, HE DECLARED THAT PROTECTION WAS REQUIRED FOR THE JEW DERIDED BY HOODLUMS AND THAT "IT IS THE AMERICAN WHOSE ANCESTORS ARE JAPANESE WHO NEEDS THE PROUD STRENGTH OF THE BILL OF RIGHTS."

THE WAR DEPARTMENT'S ANNOUNCEMENT SAID HUFF, 25-YEAR-OLD FORMER RAILROADER WHO HAILS FROM THE SAME TENNESSEE HILL COUNTRY AS WORLD WAR I'S GT. ALVIN YORK, WON THE AWARD IN FOUR DANGER-FRAUGHT HOURS LAST FEBRUARY 8.

HE VOLUNTEERED TO LEAD A SIX-MAN PATROL INTO ENEMY TERRITORY NEAR CARANO. THE MISSION WAS COMPLICATED BY CLEAR WEATHER, THE ABSENCE OF COVER AND GOOD OBSERVATION POSITIONS AVAILABLE TO THE GERMANS.

WHILE APPROACHING THROUGH A MINED AREA, THE PATROL RAN INTO FIRE FROM THREE MACHINE GUNS AND A 20 MM. WEAPON. HUFF ORDERED HIS MEN TO HALT AND WENT FORWARD ALONE, CRAWLING 75 YARDS TO A POINT BEHIND THE FIRST NAZI GUN.

RISING TO A KNEELING POSITION TO ATTRACT ATTENTION, HE OPENED FIRE WITH A SUBMACHINE GUN, KILLING THE ENTIRE CREW AND PUTTING THE GUN OUT OF ACTION.

FOUR HOURS AFTER IT STARTED OUT, HUFF'S CREW RETURNED WITHOUT A CASUALTY, BRINGING WITH IT INFORMATION THAT LED TO THE KILLING OF 27 GERMANS, THE CAPTURE OF 21 OTHERS AND THE ROUTING OF THE ENTIRE UNIT OF 125 MEN--AT A COST OF TWO AMERICAN DEAD AND ONE WOUNDED.

A PARACHUTE INFANTRYMAN, HUFF'S HOME IS IN CLEVELAND, TENN.

(EDITOR'S NOTE: RUSSEL BRINES KNOWS THE JAPANESE SOLDIER BY CLOSE OBSERVATION. HE WAS A WAR CORRESPONDENT WITH THE NIP-PONESE FORCES IN 1939 DURING CLASHES WITH THE RUSSIANS ON THE OUTER MONGOLIA-MANCHURIAN BORDER. BY RUSSELL BRINES
ASSOCIATED PRESS WAR EDITOR

THERE ARE MANY WAYS TO DIE IN THE JAPANESE EMPEROR'S SERVICE, BUT NOT ALL DEMONSTRATE BRAVERY.

IN LIMESTONE CAVES ABOVE THE BLOODY MAIN ROAD ON BIAK ISLAND, ANOTHER HUNDRED JAPANESE LAST WEEK TOOK THE EASY WAY--SUICIDE.

THESE SOLDIERS AND MARINES KILLED THEMSELVES WITHOUT, AT THE LEAS, ACCOMPLISHING ANY MILITARY PURPOSE. THEY DIED BEFORE ANY IMMINENCE OF CAPTURE WITH, TO THEM, ITS SEVERE SOCIAL DISGRACE AND ANTICIPATED TORTURE.

THOUSANDS OF JAPANESE HAVE MET DEATHS EQUALLY WASTEFUL FROM THE MILITARY VIEWPOINT, BY ATTEMPTING TO CAPTURE IMPOSSIBLE OBJECTIVES SINGLE-HANDEDLY AND WITHOUT ORDERS.

BESIDES EMPEROR DEVOTION, WHICH IS FUNDAMENTAL, THERE IS A MORE PRACTICAL EXPLANATION FOR FUTILE SELF-DESTRUCTION AND DEATH BY HOPELESS ASSAULT.

SHINTO, JAPAN'S STATE RELIGION, TEACHES THAT DEATH IS A PASSING PHASE BETWEEN TWO SIMILAR WORLDS; ALWAYS TO BE ACCEPTED, SOMETIMES COURTED. FROM EARLIEST SCHOOL EARS THIS IDEA, PLUS THE "GLORY" OF DYING FOR THE THRONE, HAVE BEEN DRILLED INTO ALL JAPANESE. RUTHLESS WATCH IS MAINTAINED AGAINST COUNTER PHILOSOPHIES.

ON BATTLEFIELDS, THE JAPANESE SOLDIER OFTEN IS TERRORIZED, NOT BY DEATH, BUT ITS PRELUDES--ARTILLERY AND BOMBING ASSAULTS, SNIPERS' FIRE, THE CONSTANT FEAR OF DISGRACING HIMSELF BY UN-SEEMLY CONDUCT OR CAPTURE.

30.24— 15957

THIS WORRY EATS INTO THE UNSTABLE, BROODING JAPANESE MIND. IT CAN BE ELIMINATED ONLY BY BATTLE EXCITEMENT OR, FINALLY, THE RELEASE OF DEATH. SINCE THAT STATE IS MEANINGLESS, IT BECOMES A SURCEASE; WHEREAS AN UNORDERED RETREAT WOULD BRING THE INDIVIDUAL UNBEARABLE DISAPPROVAL FROM FELLOW SOLDIERS.

A25FX

THE BATTLEFITLJ SUICIDE RECEIVES THE SAME REWARDS AS THE HERO--ENSHRINEMENT AT YASUKUNI, TOKYO'S GREAT WAR SHRINE; A SPIRITUAL POSITION IN THE FAMILY'S HIERARCHY OF GODS HIGHER THAN POSSIBLE BY PEACETIME LIVING; CASH AWARDS TO THE DECEASED'S FAMILY FROM THE IMPERIAL PURSE.

THESE SOMETIMES ARE SUFFICIENT TO REMOVE GENERATIONS OF DEBT FROM PEASANT HOUSEHOLDS; AN IMPORTANT FACTOR CONSIDERING THE INTENSE JAPANESE FAMILY DEVOTION.

THE HARASSED SOLDIER CAN ACQUIRE ALL THIS AT, TO HIM, A CHEAP PRICE. THE ALTERNATIVE IS ONLY MORE BATTLE THUNDER, MORE RISK OF DISGRACE AND, A POST-WAR LIFE OF HOPELESS LABOR.

AMONG THE STRONG AND THE FANATICS, THESE ELEMENTS IMPLEMENT THE SCHOOLED INTENTION TO FIGHT TO THE LAST MAN. AMONG THE WEAK AND UNSTABLE, THEY PRECIPITATE MASS SUICIDES OR UNAUTHORIZED ONE-MAN FORAYS TO HASTEN THE "FLOURIOUS" END.

Battle Raging At Caen, Report Rail Line Cut

JUN 7 1944

By WES GALLAGHER

SUPREME HEADQUARTERS, ALLIED EXPEDITIONARY FORCE, Wednesday, June 7—(AP) Allied troops swiftly cleared Normandy beaches of the dazed Nazi survivors of a punishing sea and air bombardment and armor-backed landing parties ranged inland today in a liberation invasion which the Germans themselves predicted would expand. Reinforcements streamed across the white-capped channel.

The German radio, in a dawn broadcast, said the Allies had made "further landings at the mouth of the Orne under cover of naval artillery" and that heavy fighting was raging on the coast.

Some reports reached here that Gen. Sir Bernard L. Montgomery's men had cut at Caen the Paris-Cherbourg railway, a main route supplying Hitler's defense forces in the Cherbourg peninsula. The German high command, however, insisted that no Allied troops had penetrated Caen.

No Major Battles

Up to early morning, there were no reports from any quarter of a single major engagement.

Prime Minister Churchill first disclosed that Allied troops were fighting in Caen, on the River Orne, nine miles inland, a coast; the 27-mile-long area between Carentan and Bayeux; the River Orne estuary; a 15-mile stretch of beaches in the Villers-Trouville region across the Seine estuary from Le Havre; and the town of Honfleur, on the Seine six miles southeast of Le Havre.

NIGHT

Channel weather was adverse, a strong northeaster kicking up the waves. But this was not permitted to halt the stream of reinforcements and supplies for the forces hacking out positions along a 100-mile front between Cherbourg and Le Havre.

The German radio expressed fear of further landings. Fresh and strong naval forces were reported sighted this morning off the Dunkerque-Calais area, opposite Dover and some 200 miles airline northeast of Cherbourg.

The Nazi-controlled Paris radio said "an important American-British naval squadron was cruising off Cherbourg two hours after midnight."

Eisenhower Confident

Gen. Dwight D. Eisenhower, supreme commander, was serene and confident of success in the great land, sea and air blow, launched before dawn Tuesday under a screen of bombs and shells from 4,000 warships and 11,000 warplanes.

The Allied high command disclosed that more than 1,000 troop-carrying aircraft, including gliders, bore fighting specialists on invasion missions and said this phase was executed with "unexpected success." Allied bulldozers slashed out coastal landing strips.

Naval casualties were officially regarded as "very light."

It was disclosed that among the Allied armada was the U.S.S. Nevada, 29,000-ton battleship repaired and restored to duty after she was badly damaged at Pearl Harbor.

The U.S.S. Augusta, 9,050-ton heavy cruiser on which Prime Minister Churchill and President Roosevelt signed the Atlantic Charter, went into the action as the flagship of Rear Admiral Alan G. Kirk, a veteran of the Sicilian campaign who commands "the Western Naval Task force."

Another American cruiser involved was the 9,975-ton Tuscaloosa, commanded by Rear Admiral Morton L. Deyo.

Air Force Attacks

Allied air forces maintained their missions despite the wind. The U. S. Ninth Air force alone flew 4,000 sorties yesterday. Clearing the way for ground troops, 10,000 tons of explosives crashed down upon the German positions from the air, among them some described in a field dispatch as "huge bombs of a mysterious type."

A British naval officer, who accompanied the task forces, said the supreme command was "still worried about the weather" and that there had been much seasickness among the invasion forces. The wind over the channel grew stronger during the night.

The German high command in a special late communique declared that "fighting in the Cherbourg-Le Havre area is in full swing. South of Le Havre strong air-borne units have been annihilated. New enemy operations must be expected but have not taken shape yet. Fighting is extremely fierce everywhere as the Anglo-Americans are putting up a most tenacious resistance."

Germans Admit Retreat

"It must be admitted," said the Nazi-controlled Vichy radio, "that the Allied beachhead area has been considerably widened and that Allied reinforcements are pouring in."

There were indications that the Germans were losing touch with their battle groups and that they were not sure where the main force of the Allied assault was striking.

At a late hour last night hundreds of Allied planes still were in the air, guarding the convoys and the beachheads and striking beyond the zone of operations to paralyze Nazi defense positions and communications.

During the first day of the assault Allied airmen reported that Frenchwomen stepped from their doorways to wave at them as they sped overhead.

The first of the Allied wounded were returned to England. Despite injuries, many were smiling and cheerful.

Headquarters officers, reticent about the progress of sea landings, expressed themselves as more than satisfied with the air-borne attack, contradicting a German high command claim shortly after midnight that the defenders had annihilated strong air-borne units.

The Germans expressed fear of additional operations and said "Fresh and strong naval units approached the Calais-Dunkerque area northeast of the Normandy bridgehead) this morning."

"Under cover of heavy naval guns, the Allies are bringing up fresh troops," said a DNB dispatch broadcast from Berlin.

Parachute Troops Landed

The German news agency declared Allied parachute troops landed between Carentan and Bayeux, 27 miles apart in the western zone of operations, "as well as air-borne and sea-borne troops, have been driven back in very heavy fighting."

(CBS quoted a Berlin broadcast as saying that a strong formation of Allied parachute troops had gained lodgments on both sides of the road from Carentan to Valognes, a highway junction point 11 miles southeast of Cherbourg.

(A BBC correspondent was quoted by the Blue network as saying Allied forces had pushed 13 miles inland in the Caen area.)

Swedish correspondents in Berlin reported that the German high command expected "new and larger landings" overnight and said the invasion front stretched more than 200 miles from Calais to the channel islands. Several divisions were said to be fighting in the big bridgehead, in some cases hand to hand.

A Stockholm dispatch to the Daily Mail said Hitler was expected to speak soon "somewhere in the west", as personal commander of anti-invasion operations.

Ferried across the white-capped channel by a great armada of 4,000 ships and thousands of lighter craft and screened from above by a thundering fleet of 11,000 Allied warplanes, American, British and Canadian troops hit the beaches along a front of roughly 100 miles between Cherbourg and Le Havre in the first cloudy hours of daylight and swept swiftly inland.

Allied Losses Light

Allied losses in the initial assault were much lighter than had been anticipated and there was an unmistakable air of optimism at the headquarters of Gen. Dwight D. Eisenhower, supreme Allied commander. It was disclosed that D-Day originally had been set for Monday, but that bad weather forced a day's postponement.

Tonight a German news broadcast announced the Allies held a front from 10 to 15 miles broad along the Normandy coast and from a half-mile to nearly a mile deep.

Prime Minister Churchill announced that Allied air-borne troops had captured several strategic bridges inside France before the enemy could destroy them and that "there is even fighting proceeding in the town of Caen." Caen is nine miles inland near the base of the Cherbourg peninsula, west and slightly south of Le Havre.

"Air-borne troops are well established and the followups are proceeding with very much less loss than we expected,' Churchill told a cheering house of Commons in his second report of the day. "Many dangers and difficulties which this time last night appeared extremely formidable are behind us. This operation is proceeding in a thoroughly satisfactory manner."

Germans Report Battle

The German-controlled Paris radio broadcast a "last-minute flash from the battlefield" early tonight, saying that "a vicious battle is raging north of Rouen between powerful Allied paratroop formations and German anti-invasion forces." Rouen is 41 miles from the coast, east of Le Havre.

In an earlier report, Churchill told Commons that the Allied assault was "proceeding according to plan—and what a plan! We hope to furnish the enemy with a succession of surprises during the course of the fighting."

Parachute and glider-borne troops who led the history-making attack in thousands of pre-dawn landings deep within the enemy's vaunted defenses suffered "extremely small" losses in the air, headquarters announced, and seaborne losses were described as "very, very small."

Nazi coastal defenses had been silenced until they offered only sporadic fire and Allied air power completely dominated the battle area. Several of the toughest invasion hurdles had been successfully cleared, but an Allied spokesman warned that "many more remain." Huge Allied reinforcements of men and armor were pouring ashore tonight.

Fixed German guns along the coast were literally blown apart by a 10,000-ton aerial barrage in the eight hours preceding the landings, and then a formidable fleet of American and British warships—including battleships with 16-inch rifles—stood close inshore and destroyed enemy bunkers and gun positions with point-blank fire.

Goering Issues Command

Despite a command by Reichsmarshal Hermann Goering that the "invasion must be beaten off even if the Luftwaffe perishes," only 50 German planes appeared in the early hours of the attack. Allied fighters ranged 75 miles inland without meeting opposition.

The German radio reported bitter fighting at a half-dozen points in Normandy and claimed to have identified two U. S. air-borne divisions in the Chercourg peninsula and two British air-borne divisions in the Seine area near Le Havre.

First to report that the invasion was underway early today, the Nazis speculated that the Normandy assault merely was diversionary in nature and declared the invasion troops were "going into an inferno in comparison with which Dante's hell was child's play." The enemy broadcasters said German reinforcements were being rushed to meet the onslaught and that counter-attacks already had been struck.

JUN 7 1944

'Chutists Seize Bridges, Battle in Caen—Air Troops Reported 41 Miles Inland—4000 Ships Land Main Force.

Supreme Headquarters, Allied Expeditionary Force, June 6 (A. P.).—The Allies landed in the Normandy section of northwest France early today and by evening had smashed their way inland on a broad front, making good a gigantic air and sea invasion against unexpectedly slight German opposition.

Prime Minister Churchill said part of the record-shattering number of parachute and glider troops were fighting in Caen, nine miles inland, and had seized a number of important bridges in the invasion area.

Four thousand ships and thousands of smaller landing craft took the thousands of American, British and Canadian seaborne forces from England to France under protection of 11,000 Allied bombers and fighters who wrought gigantic havoc with the whole elaborate coastal defense system that the Nazis had spent four years building. Naval gunfire completed the job and the beachheads were secured quickly.

Allied losses in every branch were declared to be far less than had been counted upon in advance.

DAY

Foe Puts Allies 41 Miles Inland.

The Germans said the landings took place from Cherbourg to Le Havre—a front of about 100 miles, and that a strong airborne force was fighting as far inland as Rouen, forty-one miles east of Le Havre.

Tonight the Vichy radio declared: "It must be admitted that the Allied beachhead area has been considerably widened and that Allied reinforcements are pouring in."

The International Information Bureau, German propaganda agency, reported that the Allies had secured a foothold about fifteen miles broad and several kilometers deep between Villers and Trouville. Trouville is nine miles directly south across the Seine estuary from Le Havre.

A German radio roundup of Berlin military commentary predicted further Allied landings and suggested that there might be a sudden powerful stab for Paris. "Further Anglo-American transports are en route, partly in the channel, partly north of Cherbourg," said one commentator of Transocean news agency. Soberly another declared that the situation still obscure.

Germans reports from the Spanish frontier said that the Allies were in full possession of Honfleur, six miles southeast of Le Havre across the Seine estuary, and were fanning out south and east toward Pont L'Eveque, Beuzeville and Pont Audemer, ranging from ten to fifteen miles inland.

Mr. Churchill's Address.

Mr. Churchill told the Commons:

30-24— 15961

"All this, of course, although very valuable as a first and vitally essential step, gives no indication whatever of what may be the course of the battle in the next days and weeks, because the enemy will now probably endeavor to concentrate on this area.

"In that event, heavy fighting will soon begin and will continue. It is therefore a most serious time that we are entering upon."

Thousands of highly trained troops leaped down well behind Nazi lines from carrier sky trains boring through the rainy, stormy night, and a headquarters officer declared this "very large scale" operation was "carried out with great precision. Our losses in aircraft were extremely small. It was a fine job—very fine, indeed."

The airborne troops carried the brunt of early battle, creating a large diversion and many demolitions.

The grand assault—scheduled for yesterday but postponed until today because of bad weather—found the German defenses much less formidable in every department than had been feared.

Naval losses for the seaborne forces were described at headquarters as "very, very small."

Coastal batteries were virtually silenced by the guns of the British, American and Allied fleets, including battleships, and the beachheads were speedily consolidated.

Luftwaffe Avoided Battle.

Fighters who went out to guard the beaches had little to do, however, as the German air force up till noon had flown only fifty sorties against the invading forces. The Germans were known to have probably 1,750 fighters and 500 bombers to meet the attack. Why they did not use them at the start was not apparent, but Allied airmen warned that a violent reaction might be expected soon, noting that Herman Goering in an order of the day had told his air forces, "The invasion must be beaten off, even if the Luftwaffe perishes."

An optimistic air pervaded this headquarters over the smooth manner in which the great crusade was launched to liberate Nazi-enslaved Europe, a crusade in which the supreme commander, Gen. Dwight D. Eisenhower, told his men, "We will accept nothing less than full victory."

Prime Minister Churchill in the Commons tonight happily asserted, "many dangers and difficulties which this time last night appeared extremely formidable are behind us."

Paris Puts Allies 41 Miles Inland.

He and all other sources agreed that the operation was going according to plan. The air forces, to which he paid high tribute for their work in smashing coastal defenses, estimated that between midnight and 8 A. M. alone more than 31,000 airmen were over France, not counting parachute and glider troops.

German broadcasts said the Allies penetrated several kilometers in between Caen and Isigny, which are thirty-five miles apart and respectively nine and two miles from the sea.

The Germans said they were bringing reinforcements continuously up to the coast, where "a battle for life or death is in progress."

The sea-borne troops, led by Gen. Sir Bernard L. Montgomery, were preceded by massed flights of parachute and glider forces who landed inland during the dark.

The initial landings were made from 6 to 8:25 A. M. British time (midnight to 2:25 A. M., Eastern war time). The Germans said subsequent landings were made on the English Channel Isles of Jersey and Guernsey and that invasion at new points on the Continent was expected hourly.

Aside from confirming that Normandy was the general area of the assault, Supreme Headquarters of the Allied Expeditionary Force was silent concerning the location for tactical reasons.

From Moscow came word that the Russian Army was massing in preparation for another great attack from the East as its part in defeating Germany.

JUN 7 1944

Allies Make Good a Gamble.

All reports from the beachhead, meager though they were in specific detail, agreed that the Allies had made good the great gamble of amphibious landing against possibly the strongest fortified section of coast in the world.

Reconnaissance pilots said the Allied troops had secured the beaches and were slashing inland, some of them actually running in a swift advance.

More than 640 naval guns, ranging from 4 to 16-inch, hurled many tons of shells accurately into the coastal fortifications.

Prime Minister Churchill was able to tell Parliament that the shore batteries had been largely quelled, the underwater obstructions had proven less dangerous than feared.

German naval opposition was confined to destroyers and motor torpedo boats which headquarters said succinctly were being dealt with. The Germans, as expected, blared on their radios all sorts of claims of vast destruction done to Allied fleets and forces, but with no confirmation.

In one defiant gesture, some of the German cross-channel guns opened a sporadic fire on Dover during the afternoon.

Hitler Reported on Way.

Unconfirmed reports said Adolf Hitler was rushing to France to try his intuition against the Allied operation. Presumably, Field Marshals Karl Gert von Rundstedt and Erwin Rommel were directing the defenses from their headquarters in France.

German accounts through Sweden admitted that steady streams of Allied troops were continuing to land, particularly in the vicinity of Arromanches, about midway between Le Havre and Barfleur, and that tanks were ashore at several places. They said there was especially bitter fighting at the mouths of the Orne and Vire Rivers.

The air-borne troops' principal scenes of operations were placed by the Germans at Caen and Barfleur. The Germans said the American 82d and 101st Parachute Divisions had landed on the Normandy Peninsula, along with the American 28th and 100th Airborne Divisions. They said the British First and Sixth Airborne Divisions were operating in the Seine Bay area. The Germans complained that at some points dummy parachutists were dropped, exploding on touch.

The tenor of their accounts lent support to Prime Minister Churchill's assertion that "there already are hopes that actual tactical surprise has been attained" and that "we hope to furnish the enemy with a succession of surprises during the course of the fighting."

JUN 7 1944

The First Allied Communique.

Allied headquarters, however, kept silent until 9:32 A. M. British time (3:32 A. M. Eastern war time), when the following communique was issued:

"Under the command of Gen. Eisenhower, Allied naval forces supported by strong air forces began landing Allied armies this morning on the northern coast of France."

A high officer explained that Gen. Eisenhower had kept resolutely silent until he was absolutely certain the landings had "taken hold."

It was disclosed that a number of unannounced feints had taken place in the pre-invasion period, so that the Germans would not know when the real blow was coming.

Paratroops in Great Strength.

The parachutists and glider men went in after a personal farewell from Gen. Eisenhower.

Great flotillas of minesweepers led the way to the beaches for the Allied ground troops, and the sweeping operation alone was described by SHAEF as the largest in history.

The Channel was rough and there was a shower of rain at dawn. At Supreme Headquarters it was stated that the condition of the sea had caused some anxiety, but that the troops had gone ashore, even though many were seasick.

mandy had been penetrated by the airborne troops "in great depth."

Fighter pilots who returned from covering the first invasion waves said things already seemed well organized on the beaches. "There was a hell of a lot of armored stuff on the beach that looked like tanks," said a Canadian flyer. "I've never seen so many ships in all my life."

Much Shooting on Beaches.

He and others said there was much shooting going on at the beaches, but the troops got ashore well and many of the fighter planes did not even have to fire their guns.

French patriots had been warned by Allied radios to withdraw at least to a depth of twenty-two miles.

While the French thus were warned away from the immediate attack area, an Allied officer

Landings at 12 Places Reported.

Swedish correspondents reported from Germany that the Allies had landed at twelve points between the Orne and Vire rivers with the central assault directed at Caen, ten miles inland and at the base of the Cherbourg Peninsula. The Germans themselves called Caen the "center of gravity" of the attack.

The Stockholm paper Aftonbladet said: "The attack seems directed against the most heavily defended section of the French coast and aimed directly at Paris."

The German radio called it "a grand-style operation" both in area and numbers of troops and admitted Nor-at headquarters declared, "we have high hopes of the underground in France which we have aided so long."

A senior officer at headquarters said the times of the landings varied to take advantage of the various tide stages at different beaches.

"We have been months and years waiting for this," said a senior officer giving correspondents the story at headquarters. "Geography made it evident to the Germans, as well as us, that the shortest way to Europe was across the channel. I don't know how much tactical surprise we achieved. It is too early to tell."

Churchill, though his night report to Commons was extremely optimistic in the main, warned that the day's fighting "gives no indication whatever of what may be the course of the battle in the next days and weeks, because the enemy will now probably endeavor to concentrate on this area.

"In that event, heavy fighting will soon begin and will continue. It is therefore a most serious time that we are entering upon."

In addition to the heavy counter-attacks expected to be launched by German ground troops within a matter of days or even hours, it also was anticipated that the Nazi air force would pitch violently into the battle soon. The Germans are estimated to have probably 1,750 fighters and 500 bombers available for the defense of the west.

Air Transports Praised

By comparison, the great Allied plane fleets which led the assault before dawn today extended across 200 miles of sky and used navigation lights to maintain formation. Headquarters tonight praised troop carriers of the Ninth air force for having conducted "very large scale" airborne operations with "very small losses."

"The sky was black with them as they headed for France," said an American fighter pilot. He said a thick overcast up to 7,000 feet might have contributed to keeping the German air force on the ground. Other airmen told of seeing Allied ground troops hit the beaches and literally run inland through the shattered enemy defenses.

More than 640 Allied naval guns, ranging from 4 to 16 inches, participated in the pulverizing bombardment of the Atlantic wall, the most photographed and publicized belt of defenses the world has ever known. Churchill said the Nazi shore batteries were "largely quelled" before an Allied soldier landed. Only a few enemy destroyers and motor torpedo boats attempted to interfere with the vast Allied fleet.

Preceding the actual invasion fleet across the channel was a huge armada of little ships—minesweepers—which swept lanes straight to the designated landing points. The length of sweep wires used to tear loose the moored German mines stretched nearly 70 miles in all—the greatest minesweeping job in history. Some of the ships used still are on the secret list.

After the sweepers, in amazingly ordered confusion, came the whole flat-bottomed family of landing craft laden with fighting men, guns, tanks, shells, field rations, hypodermics, radio sets, bandages, trucks and the other bewildering baggage of combat. An Associated Press correspondent reported the morale of American troops was amazingly high as the invasion fleet prepared to move across the channel.

JUN 7 1944

See First Battle

"Most of them never have been in battle before," he wrote, "but their ranks are toughened by a hard core of veterans who learned to fight across the battlegrounds of the Mediterranean." The troops entered their ships at noon yesterday, and then passed the hours reading, arguing, playing cards or rolling dice.

Eisenhower, after having personally inspected and wished luck to a unit of airborne troops, addressed a ringing message to all the Allied invasion forces in which he declared "we will accept nothing less than full victory." Then, from a housetop somewhere on the English coast, the commander watched the great spectacle unfold.

Leading all Allied ground troops in the invasion was Gen. Sir Bernard L. Montgomery, Britain's most famed field commander, who whipped Marshal Irwin Rommel on the sands of Africa. He predicted three weeks ago that Rommel would "try to knock us back into the sea." He described Rommel as a "disrupter," and forecast that "to disrupt the invasion he will try to hit us early."

Ankara, June 6 (AP)—Ankara buzzed tonight with reports of an Allied landing in the Peloponnesus and, although there was no official confirmation, responsible quarters said it could be true now or shortly. [A Reuter dispatch named its landing place as Prator.]

[Peloponnesus is that part of Greece south of the Isthmus of Corinth and is a potential Allied stepping stone to the Balkan mainland.]

JUN 7 1944 NIGHT

A high source said, however, that an Allied landing there definitely would not change Turkey's neutrality at this time. Turkish roads are closed to foreigners. A considerable part of the Turkish army is on its annual maneuvers.

Opening of the western front in Europe was heard in Ankara with interest, but without manifestations.

London, Wednesday, June 7 (AP)—A United States Ninth Air Force pilot said he saw American soldiers in France standing alongside roads and leaning on their rifles awaiting chow during a low-level flight over the beachhead at dusk yesterday.

JUN 7 1944

Lieut. James B. Crawley, of Springfield, Ill., declared, "I didn't see any firing anywhere. The craters looked less than 100 feet apart."

DAY

JUN 7 1944

London, Wednesday, June 7 (AP)—The German news agency, Transocean, said early today that the Allies had made "further landings at the mouth of the Orne under cover of naval artillery." The agency said "heavy fighting" was raging on the coast of northern France.

There was no immediate indication of their targets, but it was probable that the invasion path of the Allied landing forces was getting a nighttime going-over.

London, Wednesday, June 7 (AP)—General Eisenhower is directing the invasion of western Europe from an advanced outpost in England, supreme headquarters of the AEF said early today, denying a report broadcast by the Brazzaville radio that the commander had established headquarters on French soil.

Says Allies Hold 15-mile Front.

London, June 6 (A. P.).—Transocean in a Berlin broadcast today said the Allies had established a fifteen-mile front from a mile to half a mile deep between Villers-sur-Mer and Trouville. This area is about seven miles south of the big port of Le Havre where trans-Atlantic liners docked in pre-war days and takes in the beach resort area of Deauville.

4 Parachute Divisions Land

LONDON, June 6 (AP).—The German radio reported today that four British parachute divisions had landed between Le Havre and Cherbourg in France. This was four times the size of the Nazi parachute force dropped on the Island of Crete in the Mediterranean in 1941.

Berlin Reports That Allies Lost 35 Tanks.

JUN 7 1944

London, June 6 (A. P.).—German forces launching a counter-attack knocked out thirty-five heavy Allied tanks at Asnelles in the Seine Bay area alone by noon, a DNB report from Berlin said today. The Allies are throwing the bulk of their landing troops into the area between Cherbourg and Oystreham, the western part of the Seine bight, DNB said.

The German news agency at 10 A. M. today gave this version of the Allied invasion:

An Anglo-American large scale attack against the Seine Bay and Normany began early in the morning of June 6 with the dropping of major airborne formations between the estuaries of the Seine and Orne, in the area of Isigny, Caen and near Barfleur at the northeastern tip of the peninsula of Normany.

While the parachutists dropped between the Seine and Orne as well as strong groups of parachutists dropped near Barfleur were annihilated, fighting in the area of Isigny and Caen is in progress still.

About two hours after the first parachutists' landing, large-scale amphibious operations commenced on a wide front between Le Havre and Cherbourg, with the focal points again directed against the river's estuaries.

Ship to Shore Duel.

Further very strong disembarkments took place at the small coastal place at St. Vaast La Houghe, where a violent artillery duel developed between German coastal batteries and naval forces of the Allied landing fleet. As already reported, one cruiser and one major landing vessel heavily laden with troops and heavy arms were sunk by direct hits.

Grim fighting is taking place in the district of the estuary of the Orne and Vire.

Protected by numerous light naval forces and artificial fog, landing boats of various types entered the river estuaries, attempting to carry out major scale landing operations in the rear of the Atlantic Wall.

North of Caen a group from a landing vessel was completely annihilated by the surprise attack of a German reserve formation, in which the invaders suffered heavy casualties and considerable losses in material.

Regarding the fighting on the Vire estuary no details are available so far.

Nazis Expect Extension.

The naval and airborne operations were supported by strong Allied fighter formations. How many Allied troops have been employed in the amphibious operations cannot be said so far.

German military circles assume that invasion operations will be extended to a wider coastal strip before long.

It is also possible that the Anglo-Saxons will extend their invasion attempts to the coastal district between the Somme and Seine estuaries, while an attack against the coast zone of Boulogne and Calais next to the British Isles is not expected for the time being.

It described airborne divisions in action as the First and Sixth British divisions in the Seine area and the American Twenty-eighth and 100th on the Normandy peninsula.

Normandy Terrain Forms Path Into France.

JUN 7 1944 DAY

London, June 6 (A. P.).—Normandy jutting out along the English Channel opposite British invasion bases forms a natural peninsular pathway into France, and from the first Allied Commanders have recognized it as one of their best bets for beachheads.

The gun-bristling coastline, rock shoals and in some places bad tide made initial landings hazardous, but once a foothold is established the Allies can attack along either side of the peninsula, protected on the flank by the sea.

The Cherbourg peninsula—old Normandy — thrusts out to the Cape de la Hague and Cape de Barfleur eighty-eight miles from the Isle of Wight.

The peninsula is seventy miles long and ranges from twenty-five to sixty miles wide, with the port of Cherbourg at the tip as a keypoint of coastal defense. Cherbourg is seventy-five miles from Bournemouth, England.

From German accounts, the Allied objective appeared to be establishment of a broad beachhead along the curving coast between Le Havre and Cherbourg.

Penetrations inland would clear all of Normandy, with its good airfield sites, and provide a pathway down the Seine Valley to Paris.

City on Level Ground.

Le Havre, 100 air-line miles northwest of Paris on the Seine river estuary, is France's second seaport and has fourteen ship basins and eight miles of docks.

One of France's main trans-Atlantic terminals for the peacetime trade with New York and other ports, the city itself lies mostly on a level strip of ground except on the north where a great bluff overlooks the entrance to the Seine estuary. Before the war it was France's eleventh city in population with about 165,000 persons.

30. 24— 15963

Until 1516 it was only a fishing village. Its name Havre (Harbor) De Grace was given it by King Francis I.

It has been bombarded before. The English shelled it in 1694, 1759, 1794 and 1795, and in this war it has been attacked by Allied planes because of its importance as a Nazi submarine base.

Napoleon I, raised Le Havre to a war harbor of the first rank, and under Napoleon III works begun by King Louis XVI were completed. During the world war Britain and the United States used it as a base and point for landing troops and stores.

NAZI DEFENSES WERE NAPPING

JUN 7 1944

London Analyzes Germany's Radio Broadcasts.

London, June 6 (A. P.).—German propagandists asserted today that despite the invasion of western Europe life continued normally in Berlin with "no excitement, no extra editions, no special radio announcements," but a part of these assertions obviously were false. From the time of the first landings, a constant stream of broadcasts came from the German transmitters—many carrying more than an indication that Adolf Hitler's defenses along the western coast had been caught napping.

The German press chief was quoted by DNB as saying that the Allies opened the invasion "on the order of Moscow." A DNB correspondent asserted that the "German people are longing for revenge" because of the Allied bombings of their cities.

The German Transocean News Agency contended in early broadcasts that it was not certain of Allied intentions, but at 1 P. M., it said: "This much has become clear by midday—these Allied landings mean this is the great invasion." The German home radio gave word of the Allied landings to the German people at about this time.

"The enemy dropped man-sized uniformed dummies which contained explosives and which went off when they touched," a Berlin broadcast said. This same report claimed that the first prisoners captured were American parachute troops taken in the Cherbourg area and British parachutists seized in the Caen sector.

Allied Landings Made On Channel Islands, German Agency Says

JUN 7 1944

By the Associated Press.

LONDON, June 6.—Allied troops have landed on the Channel Islands of Gurnsey and Jersey, the German agency Transocean said.

Allied tanks have landed in the Arromanches area, midway between Cherbourg and Le Havre, the agency added, but it said the greatest concentrations of landing craft were observed off Cherbourg and Le Havre.

DAY

(One German broadcast said four British parachute divisions had landed between Le Havre and Cherbourg. This was four times the size of the Nazi parachute force dropped on Crete, in the Mediterranean.)

Mainly Parachutists Used.

"The enemy, who had thrown in mainly parachute troops in the small hours of the morning, is now incessantly employing assault boats off Oystreham," Transocean continued.

"Several advanced islands off the coast aroused the particular interest of the invaders and they were the first points where they established a foothold."

"Meantime, numerous landings were made all along the coast between the mouth of the Seine and the northern shores of Normandy, both from the air and from the sea.

"More concentrations of landing craft have been observed further to the north as far as the Channel and were fought before going into action."

Nazi Counterthrusts Reported.

"German counterthrusts by all kinds of units are in progress," the Transocean report declared. "Fierce fighting is going on everywhere.

"On many points of the Channel numerous balloons are floating at great altitude continuously circled around by enemy fighters. Probably they constitute artillery observation posts."

Earlier, the German news agency DNB commentator, Capt. Ludwig Sertorius, declared in a broadcast that the "great contest between the Reich and the Anglo-Americans has begun."

"The Allied landings in the west today has put the German armed forces in the mood which they express with a laconic 'They are coming'.

"At the present moment when the Allied invasion of Western Europe still is in its very first beginning nothing can be said yet about the tactical and operational developments.

"We can only stress the single-mindedness with which the German Wehrmacht is facing the enemy's onslaught, for in war ethical values are at least as important as the number of soldiers and the quantity of their equipment."

NIGHT

launched by the enemy in connection with the question of invasion likewise failed to impress the German people. We are ready to receive the enemy."

A commentator for DNB, German News agency, put it this way:

"The German soldiers have always wished for the invasion to come so they could show their moral supremacy in a fight that is not marked by material inferiority such as was the case in Africa and Italy. All our hopes and expectations are thus expressed in the words: 'They are coming—and it is good that they should come.'"

Underlying the torrent of words which poured from the German radio appeared a note of relief that the war of nerves finally was at an end, but despite the vaunted confidence in ultimate victory, the commentators were aware of the might of the Allied assaults.

One of them said:

"It need not be specifically stressed that superiority at sea as regards size and number and kind of naval forces is clearly on the side of the strongest naval nations—the United States and Great Britain."

Glad Final Test Has Come, Theme of Nazi Propaganda

JUN 7 1944

LONDON, June 6—(AP) Nazi propaganda harped today on the theme that the Germans were glad the final test had come in the west for a showdown with the Allies and were confident that the outcome would mean German victory.

Nazi radio commentators — and Dr. Paul Joseph Goebbels himself—acknowledged that this attack was no mere sham, and that the real test in France had come at last.

The German propaganda minister, speaking at a national socialist party meeting in a town recently raided heavily by Allied fliers, blustered thus, according to the German radio:

NIGHT

"The enemy believes the situation in Germany to be the same as in 1918, but he is mistaken. The ears of the Germans are shut against enemy propaganda and slogans. The nerve campaign recently

BERLIN SEES NEW LANDINGS

RASTSCHNE

Sudden Allied Stab For Paris Considered A Possibility

JUN 7 1944

London, June 6 (AP)—Berlin military spokesmen predicted in broadcasts tonight that further Allied landings would be made in western Europe and suggested that there might be a sudden Allied stab for Paris.

Describing the situation as "still obscure," Nazi military commentator Capt. Ludwig Sertorius said that "maybe the bulk of the enemy invasion troops still are at sea or at this moment are engaged in landing."

NIGHT

Swedish correspondents in Berlin said the German high command expects "new and larger landings" before Wednesday dawn and declared that several divisions now are fighting in the big beachhead, in some places hand-to-hand.

Hitler's Command Quoted

These correspondents quoted Hitler's command which said the invasion front stretches "240 miles from Calais through Boulogne, Le Havre, Caen, Isigny, the Cherbourg peninsula and to the Channel islands."

In a broadcast statement the German high command described the fighting in the Cherbourg-Le Havre area as being "in full swing," and declared that everywhere along the invasion front British and American troops are "putting up a most tenacious resistance."

The statement claimed that Allied troops had been sealed off in the area of the mouth of the Drne, and that strong air-borne units had been annihilated south of Le Havre. There was no Allied confirmation for either claim.

New Operations Expected

"New enemy operations must be expected but have not taken shape yet," the statement said.

A commentaror for the Nazi agency Transocean declared:

"Further Anglo-American transports are en route partly in the Channel and partly north of Cherbourg. St. Malo bight is thought to be a particularly likely target for major sea and air-borne landings. The coastal areas between the esturies of the Somme and Seine are other likely targets for invasion."

He added that an attack on the Boulogne-Calais region is not anticipated "for the time being." This portion of France is the closest to England.

War Correspondent's Report

Sertorius asserted that "the bulk of the enemy's parachutists and landed air-borne formations can be regarded as annihilated" and that "Anglo-American army formations landed from the sea have for the most part been thrown back again to the shore except in one sector."

German war correspondent Heinz Priet in a broadcast from the Normandy front, however, painted a gloomy picture of the German situation. He said German defenders of the French coast had been caught napping by the Allied invaders.

The German-controlled Vichy radio flatly said "Allied reinforcements are pouring into widening beachheads," and the Paris radio declared there was heavy fighting north of Rouen between Allied parachute troops and Germans.

Striking Southward

A Berlin broadcast pictured the Allies as striking "in a southern direction with tanks and heavy infantry weapons" from near Bayeux, Isigny and Caen.

The Germans reported without Allied confirmation that British and American troops had landed on the Channel islands of Guernsey and Jersey west of Normandy in the early morning and were immediately engaged in costly fighting.

Nazis Seem Confused

Referring to the focal point of the Allied invasion, D. N. B. said it "is not so much between the Seine and the Orne estuaries, but in the area between the lower Orne and the area north and northwest of Bayeux."

This conflicted with the account of the German International Information Bureau, which had placed the landing between the Seine and the Orne—indicating some confusion among the Nazis themselves as to the exact location of the beachhead.

The Berlin radio broadcast the following German high command statement early today:

"Fighting in the Cherbourg-Le Havre area is in full swing. On the coast of northern France heavy fighting is continuing. In the area of the mouth of the Orne, enemy troops are sealed off.

"South of Le Havre, strong air-borne units have been annihilated.

"New enemy operations must be expected but have not taken shape yet. Fighting is extremely fierce everywhere, as the Anglo-Americans are putting up a most tenacious resistance."

Claims Thirty-five Allied Tanks

German forces launching a counter-attack knocked out thirty-five heavy Allied tanks at Asnelles, in the Seine Bay area, by noon, a D. N. B. report from Berlin said yesterday.

"Innumerable barriers on the beaches are rendering enemy landings extremely difficult," the German account declared.

"In the area east of Cherbourg, massed German counter-thrusts are making good headway. The enemy now, as before, is throwing the bulk of his landing troops into the area between Cherbourg and Oystreham, the western part of the Seine bight."

"Another center of gravity developed between Caen and Isigny (at the mouth of the Vire River)," another German broadcast reported.

Eisenhower's Message To Occupied Countries

JUN 7 1944

The OWI reported today this statement by Gen. Eisenhower was broadcast by Allied radios in London:

"People of Western Europe! A landing was made this morning on the coast of France by troops of the Allied Expeditionary Force. This landing is part of the concerted United Nations' plan for the liberation of Europe, made in conjunction with your great Russian allies.

"Although the initial assault may not have been made in your own country, the hour of your liberation is approaching.

"All patriots, men and women, young and old, have a part to play in the achievement of final victory. To members of resistance movements, whether led by national or outside leaders, I say: 'Follow the instructions you have received.' To patriots who are not members of organized resistance groups I say: 'Continue your passive resistance, but do not needlessly endanger your lives until I give you the signal to rise and strike the enemy.' The day will come when I shall need your united strength. Until that day, I call on you for the hard task of discipline and restraint.

"Citizens of France! I am proud to have again under my command the gallant forces of France. Fighting beside their allies, they will play a worthy part in the liberation of their homeland. Because the initial landing has been made on the soil of your country, I repeat to you with even greater emphasis my message to the peoples of other occupied countries in western Europe. Follow the instructions of your leaders. A premature uprising of all Frenchmen may prevent you from being of maximum help to your country in the critical hour. Be patient. Prepare.

"As supreme commander of the Allied Expeditionary Force, there is imposed on me the duty and responsibility of taking all measures necessary to the prosecution of the war. Prompt and willing obedience to the orders that I shall issue is essential. Effective civil administration of France must be provided by Frenchmen. All persons must continue in their present duties unless otherwise instructed. Those who have common cause with the enemy and so betrayed their country will be removed. As France is liberated from her oppressors, you yourselves will choose your representatives and the government under which you want to live.

"In the course of this campaign for the final defeat of the enemy you may sustain further loss and damage. Tragic though they may be, they are part of the price of victory. I assure you that I shall do all in my power to mitigate your hardships. I know that I can count on your steadfastness now, no less than in the past. The heroic deeds of Frenchmen who have continued their struggle against the Nazis and their Vichy satellites, in France and throughout the French empire, have been an example and an inspiration to all of us.

"This landing is but the opening phase of the campaign in western Europe. Great battles lie ahead. I call upon all who love freedom to stand with us. Keep your faith stanch—our arms are resolute—together we shall achieve victory."

EISENHOWER AND MONTGOMERY MESSAGES

JUN 7 1944

London, June 6 (A. P.).—Gen. Dwight D. Eisenhower issued the following order of the day to his invasion troops today:

"Soldiers, sailors and airmen of the Allied Expeditionary Force:

"You are about to embark on a great crusade. The eyes of the world are upon you and the hopes and prayers of all liberty-loving peoples go with you.

"In company with our brave Allies and brothers in arms on other fronts, you will bring about the destruction of the German war machine, elimination of Nazi tyranny over the oppressed peoples of Europe, and security for ourselves in a free world.

"Your task will not be an easy one. Your enemy is well trained, well equipped and battle-hardened. He will fight savagely. But in this year of 1944 much has happened since the Nazi triumphs of 1940 and 1941.

"The United Nations have inflicted upon the Germans great defeats in open battle, man to man. Our air offensive has seriously reduced their strength in the air and their capacity to wage war on the ground, our home fronts have given us overwhelming superiority in weapons and munitions of war and have placed at our disposal great reserves of trained fighting men. The tide has turned and free men of the world are marching together to victory.

"I have full confidence in your courage, devotion to duty and skill in battle. We will accept nothing less than full victory. Good luck and let us all beseech the blessing of Almigh[illegible] God upon this great and noble undertaking."

Gen. Montgomery's Message to His Troops.

Gen. Sir Bernard L. Montgomery, in a special message to the troops under his command, wished every man good luck and told them that he had "complete confidence in the successful outcome of the operations." The text of Gen. Montgomery's message, as recorded here at the Columbia short-wave listening station, follows:

"The time has come to deal the enemy a terrific blow in western Europe. The blow will be struck by the combined sea, land and air forces of the Allies, together constituting one great Allied team under the supreme command of Gen. Eisenhower.

"On the eve of this great adventure, I send my best wishes to every soldier in the Allied field. To us is given the honor of striking a blow for freedom which will live in history, and in the better days that lie ahead, men will speak with pride of our doings. We have a great and righteous cause. Let us pray that the Lord, mighty in battle, will aid us in the struggle.

"I want every soldier to know that I have complete confidence in the successful outcome of the operations that we are now about to begin. With stout hearts and with enthusiasm for the contest, let us go forward to victory, and, as we enter the battle, let us recall the words of a famous soldier spoken many years ago.

"These are the words he said: 'He either fears his fate too much, or his deserts are small, who dares put it to the test to win or lose it all.'

"Good luck to each one of you and good hunting on the mainland of Europe."

U. S. Admirals In Assault Fleet

London, Wednesday, June 7 (AP). The United States Navy, with two rear admirals riding in cruisers and paced by the battleship Nevada, was a part of a 4,000-ship Allied armada which blasted German defenses before the assault troops hit the beaches of France, it was announced today.

In Washington, President Roosevelt announced that up to noon yesterday (Eastern War Time) United States naval losses were two destroyers and one LST (landing ship, tanks). The entire Allied naval losses were officially described as "very light."

Rear Admiral Alan Goodrich Kirk, commander of one of the task forces, watched the mammoth operations from his flagship, the cruiser Augusta, Supreme Headquarters, Allied Expeditionary Force, announced in a communique.

JUN 7 1944

Casualties Light

Rear Admiral Morton L. Deyo was in command of the cruiser Tuscaloosa.

The communique, second of the day and issued shortly after midnight, said naval casualties "are regarded as being very light, especially when the magnitude of the operation is taken into account."

[In addition to the Nevada, the U. S. battleships Texas and Arkansas took part in the bombardment, NBC quoted the BBC as saying, adding that the British battleships Warspite, Nelson and Romilles, the British cruisers Glasgow, Enterprise and Orion and the Canadian destroyers Sioux and Algonquin also were in the fleet.]

British warships alone, bombarding the area west of Le Havre, poured in 2,000 tons of shells every 10 minutes with 600 ships firing everything from 4 to 16 inchers, stunning shore batteries whose return fire was sporadic.

The continuous thunder of broadsides and the crash of bombs filled the air, and great spurts of flame flared from the shore.

As the first wave of assault troops touched shore and fanned up the beach, the battleships and cruisers steamed on ahead to attack other sections of the coast.

Just Ahead Of Troops

The naval and aerial assault was so closely timed to keep the Germans off balance that bombs crashed down just three minutes ahead of the landing infantry.

Six British battleships defied coastal batteries by moving into the Channels' narrow waters to aid the bombardment.

[Merrill Mueller, NBC reporter, quoted Allied Naval Commander in Chief Admiral Sir Bertram Ramsay as saying the naval command had lost only light combat vessels in the initial operations in contrast to a ten per cent. over-all loss which had been anticipated. Ramsay, he said, termed the initial operation in putting troops ashore 100 per cent. successful and said the light combat vessels lost did not affect troop landings.]

More British Vessels

A British naval commentator, who revealed for the first time that 300 naval vessels in amphibious exercises sailed within ten miles of the French coast last September, said the proportion of warships was three British to one American and the over-all proportion including landing craft was three British to two American.

"There was a big Canadian contribution as well as many Norwegian, Polish, Dutch, French and Greek ships," he said.

After this bombardment, the flat-bottomed "Elsie" ships—landing craft—headed for the beaches.

There were plywood, 36-foot LCVP's (landing craft, vehicle personnel); 50-foot LCM's (mechanized) valuable for supply; 200-foot LCI's (infantry); ungainly 200-foot LCT's (tanks), and the queens of the Elsies—300-foot LST's (landing ship, tanks) disgorging anything from jeeps to road builders. And all around like water bugs were amphibious "ducks" and other small craft.

Destroyers Move In

The English Channel swarmed with the landing ships moving toward the coast. The German airforce was nowhere in evidence as clouds hung low over the area. Destroyers moved in close as the naval cannonading ceased.

The snub-nosed fleet was equipped with its own fire power to take on anything the big fellows had overlooked.

In this fleet, among American warships, were seasoned sailors who had performed this job in the Pacific or the Mediterranean.

But there also were American boys who had practiced for this day in the Florida waters, in Chesapeake Bay and later in the treacherous tides around the British Isles.

Sailors Go Ashore

Still other sailors tumbled from the landing craft in the first wave of the army. They were trained as naval shore battalions to fight beside the army's beach brigades.

It was their job to clear the Channel of underwater obstacles ahead of the incoming landing craft, direct landings, tend wounded, repair or blow up disabled craft clogging the coastal approaches, establish communications with the ships and set up emergency dressing stations in the sand.

Ahead of these armadas had gone the vital nocturnal work of the mine sweepers and PT boats, seagoing "secret weapons" sent out to deal with the Nazi E-boats.

HIGH WAVES SWEEP CHANNEL BEACHES

JUN 7 1944

Rough Water Fails to Halt Flow of Reinforcements to French Shore.

LONDON, June 6—(AP) The weather which caused a 24-hour postponement of D-Day, still is one of the biggest invasion worries, Supreme headquarters, Allied Expeditionary Force chiefs disclosed early today.

At midnight a strong wind blowing from the northeast raised whitecaps in the Dover Strait and high waves swept the beaches, and showed no signs of moderating.

Though it will not be permitted to halt the flow of reinforcements, improvement in the weather would make operations very much easier for there was a great amount of seasickness among the first troops crossing. Many got wet disembarking.

NIGHT

A Naval officer, just returned from the beaches, said that taking the operation as a whole the weather probably was worse than at the time of the Sicily landings.

Deteriorating weather during the day yesterday forced the bombers of the Allied Expeditionary air force to attack at low altitudes, risking heavy flak.

(NBC in New York reported the secret German radio station on the Atlantic broadcast that the wind over the channel had grown stronger and no new landings had been expected yesterday.)

Storm predictions previously had caused a full 24-hour postponement of the invasion, launched this morning despite wind-whipped seas and forbidding flying conditions, Supreme headquarters, Allied expeditionary force, revealed after the landings were made.

The temperature dropped to 50 degrees at 10:30 p. m. and the sea was smooth although a haze reduced the visibility which in the afternoon offorded glimpses of the French coast.

Vast Fleet Made Channel Reminiscent of Broadway

"Sure Was a Lot of Shipping There," Says Soldier

JUN 7 1944

LONDON, June 6 (AP).—American airmen returning from today's big invasion assault expressed amazement at the huge armada of Allied invasion craft crowding the English Channel, and fighter pilots reported that no German fighter planes and scarcely any flak had been encountered up to noon.

Hundreds of Allied planes packed the air lines. Fortresses, Liberators and medium and light bombers—many of them without escort—shuttled back and forth over the Channel to drop bombs on Nazi military strongholds.

Swift fighters darted high and low to protect Allied naval craft and pave the way for the ground troops.

"It looked like Forty-second Street and Broadway to me," Lieutenant Paul E. Huff, fighter pilot of Swartz Creek, Mich., said of the Channel.

NIGHT

"There sure was a lot of shipping there," added Lieutenant Frank Boryczka, of Dunkirk, N. Y.

"There were enough barges so you could walk from England to France," said pilot Captain Jack L. Weber, Lime Rock, Conn., "and I saw only friendly planes."

Invasion Path Cleared By Minesweeper Fleet

JUN 7 1944

By the Associated Press.

LONDON, June 6.—In the face of enemy shore batteries and aircraft a gallant minesweeping force of 10,000 British and Americans guided D-day's seaborne assault with greatest mine-sweeping operation in history.

The great armada of little ships —converted fishing trawlers, coal burners which served in the last war, ships still on the secret list and recently launched in British and American yards—performed their task on a huge scale. The length of sweep wires used to tear loose moored mines stretched nearly 70 miles in all.

30.24 — 15965

With the sweepers trailed other ships which dropped markers to guide the invasion fleet through the cleared seas.

The job had to be completed on a time table, despite gunfire, attacking aircraft and tricky tides. Doggedly the little craft kept perfect formation to make sure the swept lanes went straight to the designated landing points.

NAZIS PLAY TUNES FOR INVADERS

JUN 7 1944

London, June 6 (A. P.).—The German-controlled Calais radio came on the air today with the following announcement in English:

"This is D day. We shall now bring music for the invasion forces."

ALLIED AIRCRAFT RULE SKIES OVER INVASION SECTOR

HERCHER

More Than 1,000 Big Planes Drop Paratroopers into France

JUN 7 1944

MAKE 7,500 SORTIES

Yank Bombers from Russia Batter Galati Airfield in Romania.

LONDON, Wednesday, June 7.—(AP) Supreme headquarters announced todey that more than 1,000 troop-carrying aircraft delivered the largest air-borne force in history into France yesterday as other Allied planes—in the war's greatest air operation—ruled not only the invasion beaches but also far inland.

NIGHT

The aerial phase of the invasion saw 10,000 tons of bombs crash down clearing the way for the ground troops. The attacking planes which swept through French skies found that only 50 German planes had come up to meet them.

Fighter Cover Maintained

"Continuous fighter cover was maintained over the beaches and for some distance inland, and over naval operations in the channel," the Supreme headquarters communique said. Night raiders protected the troop-carrier force, which included gliders, and reconnaissance aircraft maintained a day and night watch over shipping and ground forces.

In all, the Allies made more than 7,500 sorties between midnight and 8 a. m. yesterday. Prime Minister Churchill told Parliament that an armada of 11,000 first-line planes sustained the assault.

Scores of U. S. heavy bombers conducted the first American raid of the war from their new bases in Russia yesterday showering tons of high explosives and incendiary bombs on an airdrome at Galati, a Romanian city on the lower Danube river. The Fifteenth Air force sky giants were escorted by both Soviet and American fighters.

A communique issued at a Russian air base said that six enemy interceptors were shot down and two American fliers had not yet returned. An Associated Press dispatch from the base also quoted returning American bomber and fighter pilots on the results of the raid, showing that the operation was not of the shuttle type such as was the original landing of the American planes in Russia several days ago after the hammering of Debrecen, Hungary.

Germans Claim 11 Planes

(The German radio claimed 11 American planes were lost over Romania yesterday and said the raid produced "fierce air battles.")

The 7,500 sorties between midnight and 8 a. m. made by Allied aircraft in the west yesterday did not take into account the hail of bombs, rockets and bullets that crashed down upon the French coast in the hours following.

During the period covered by the report more than 1,000 British heavy bombers filled the night with thunder. At dawn the American Eighth airforce sent another fleet of more than 1,000 heavies into the air. More than 500 medium bombers and hundreds of British and American fighters were out during the same period.

In the light of Reich Marshal Goering's order of the day, in which he instructed the German airforce to repel invasion "even if the Luftwaffe perishes," there were only two explanations why the German air force did not put up a fight on D-Day.

One was that the enemy was caught flat-footed without enough planes in France to fight effectively although it was estimated that the German air force had 1,750 fighters and about 500 bombers in the west to meet the Allied thrust.

The other was that the Nazi pilots were afraid to fly in weather braved by the Allied airmen. Supreme headquarters, Allied expeditionary force, described the weather as "very bad" for flying. There were brief thunderstorms over the channel and clouds 5,000 feet thick in some places.

Allied Losses Small

Despite the large scale airborne sorties and their extremely vulnerable operations, Allied losses were reported small.

Beyond the shore defenses additional hundreds of planes charged against the enemy's communications. There was anti-aircraft fire in the clouds and the Germans even used small arms in a desperate attempt to bring down the bombers, many of which swept low to get under the thick rolling layer of clouds.

The British bomber command threw more than 1,300 aircraft against the enemy's coastal batteries in the darknese preceding the assault, and from 11:30 p. m. Monday night until dawn they sent well over 5,000 tons of bombs cascading on the invasion coast. This was the greatest weight of bombs ever dropped by the British in one night.

There were well over 1,000 giant Lancasters and Halifaxes engaged in the thundering night prelude to invasion.

In the purple dawn the American Ninth air force's first fighters became air-borne and they were in the air continuously afterward throughout the day, bombing, strafing and patrolling ahead of the ground troops.

The first ten waves of fighter-bombers to go into action reported no serious opposition from enemy fighters anywhere over the channel or beachheads.

Then more than 1,000 American Liberators and Flying Fortresses took up where the RAF heavies left off, unloading possibly another 3,000 tons of explosives on gun emplacements and other defensive works.

German Opposition Light

In its first report on general air activity, Shaef described German opposition as "light."

"After a night of heavy air bombardment and incessant attacks against the invasion coast, an effective cover for our troops and naval forces was maintained throughout the morning," headquarters said.

"Air opposition has so far been light.

"The air attacks began shortly before midnight, when well over 1,000 heavy bombers of the RAF bomber command opened up on the German coastal defenses.

"During the night troop carriers and gliders of the U. S. Ninth air force and the RAF flew paratroops and air-borne infantry into the zone of operations while light bombers of the second tactical air force attacked road and rail junctions and bridges.

"At daybreak more than 1,000 heavy bombers of the U. S. Eighth air force and waves of U. S. Ninth air force medium bombers took up the air bombardment of gun emplacements and defensive works in support of the landing operations.

Make Repeated Attacks

"Fighter-bombers made repeated attacks during the morning on gun batteries and communications in and behind the assault front. The fighters have been out in large numbers, supporting the heavy bombers and covering the land and sea operations."

"There were so many Allied aircraft in the air that you almost had to put your hand out to turn," said Lt. Col. Frank Perego, of Canandaigua, N. Y.

More than 350 Marauders made repeated dashes across the channel and blasted a wide strip of the coastline in the zone of operations, encountering icing conditions that forced many to fly below the normal medium altitude, bombing at a level so low that concuessions rocked the planes.

Twin-engined Lightnings patrolled the skies continuously, guarding the fleet of naval craft and landing boats from an aerial attack which did not materialize. Thunderbolts flew a protective umbrella for troops moving into the Continent.

Other Thunderbolt fighter-bombers attacked railroad and highway bridges, road bottlenecks and coastal batteries in the invasion zone. Some descended to tree-top level and strafed German troops moving by trucks to defense of the beaches. There were literally hundreds there, the targets including airfields, anti-aircraft towers and gun emplacements.

Transports Striped

Every plane in the big fleet of Skytrain transports that flew the first troops and equipment on the Continent were painted with broad zebralike blue and white stripes and carried colored lights. The strategem appeared to have prevented any repetition of the Sicilian episode in which many troop-carriers accidentally were shot down by their own anti-aircraft batteries.

The brightly lighted armada, which was traveling only a few hundred feet off the ground, stretched for more than 200 miles. It attracted only small arms fire, mostly from machine guns, as they drove into France to the "DZ's" (dropping zones).

The war paint was added to the planes' fuselage a few hours before the takeoff. The lights were added to help keep the pilots in formation.

Allied Air-Borne Forces Bear Brunt Of Invasion

JUN 7 1944

Supreme Headquarters, Allied Expeditionary Force, June 6 (AP)—The Allies hurled against the Germans in France today the greatest air-borne force in military history.

Wielding sheath knives and tommy guns, thousands of American and British paratroops and glider troops swept down on sleeping Cherbourg peninsula out of the pre-dawn blackness and immediately set about the tasks of disrupting Nazi rear lines by destroying key bridges, rail yards and enemy strong points.

At SHAEF late today a military spokesman, praising troop-carrier planes which navigated through a rainy, stormy night to drop thousands of these specially trained soldiers on vital objectives, said:

"The operation was on a very large scale and was carried out with great precision. Our losses in aircraft were extremely small. It was a fine job—very fine indeed."

Carried Brunt Of Battle

As the air-borne troops are fighting well behind the enemy lines, the spokesman was not in a position to give a detailed picture of the results of their landings, but reports from air observers indicated they carried the brunt of the battle in the early stages, creating large diversions and as much damage as possible.

Attack bombers flying back over the area in which the air-borne troops landed reported seeing a number of demolitions and many burning buildings.

The German radio gave the first hint of the scope of this epochal operation. The broadcast claimed the soldiers had been identified as from four divisions, which were named as the First and Sixth British and the 28th and 100th American. Allied military authorities withheld comment on the size of the landing force.

Eisenhower Tours Airdroms

Before taking off, these crack troops were wished Godspeed by Supreme Commander General Dwight D. Eisenhower, who spent seven hours touring airdromes from which the air troops took off.

After chatting with them and eating doughnuts and coffee at one of their headquarters, General Eisenhower climbed to a roof and watched as squadron after squadron climbed into the sky, their destination France.

Associated Press War Correspondent Gladwin Hill, flying over the landing area shortly after 6 A. M., reported that "inland hundreds of parachutes, plopped neatly in fields without a sign of life about, testified eloquently to the alacrity with which their riders plunged into cover to tangle with the Germans. The concentration of 'chutes in model landing places was cheering evidence of smoothness with which the operation came off."

Later, Associated Press Photographer Bede Irwin told of seeing "thousands" of red and dark green camouflaged parachutes lying about on the ground during a flight across the Cherbourg peninsula.

Some Cracked Up

"There was also about a 500-acre section packed with gliders," he said. "A number had cracked up but most seemed to have gotten down okay. From our height I couldn't see any ground movement but many buildings in the area were burning. There must have been quite a battle."

For this moment, the spearheading air-borne troops spent months in secret, arduous training. Besides ankle sheath knives and rapid-fire weapons, they carried bandoliers of ammunition, hand grenades, coils of rope, pick handles, spades and rubber dinghies—the last in case of plane failure over the Channel.

Some of the paratroopers, looking like Indians with their faces stained reddish brown with cocoa and linseed oil, said they had put on the camouflage "so we will have something to eat if our rations run out."

The quip, told to Eisenhower, made the supreme commander laugh heartily.

Why Luftwaffe Didn't Fight

LONDON, June 6 (AP).—In the light of Reich Marshal Goering's order of the day, in which he instructed the German Air Force to repel the invasion "even if the Luftwaffe perishes," there were only two explanations why the German Air Force did not put up a fight on D Day.

One was that the enemy was caught flat-footed without enough planes in France to fight effectively, although it was estimated that the German Air Force had 1,750 fighters and about 500 bombers in the west to meet the Allied thrust.

The other, offered by the Berlin radio, was that "the German fighter Army was extraordinarily handicapped by the extremely bad conditions of visibility on the Channel." This report, heard by the Columbia Broadcasting System, said "some short and violent air clashes took place in which a number of Allied planes were shot down."

The Allied airmen, however, braved this weather, described by the Supreme Headquarters, Allied Expeditionary Force as "very bad."

Despite the large scale airborne sorties and their extremely vulnerable operations, Allied losses were reported small.

Every plane in the big fleet of C-47s that flew the first troops and equipment on the continent was painted with broad Zebra-like blue and white stripes and carried colored lights. The stratagem appeared to have prevented any repetition of the Sicilian episode in which many troop-carriers accidentally were shot down by their own anti-aircraft batteries.

Yank Chutists Fill Skies Over France

By the Associated Press.

A UNITED STATES FIGHTER BASE IN BRITAIN, June 6.—In the dawn dozens of American transport planes and gliders carrying parachute and air-borne troops flew from British bases toward the French Coast. It was about 5 a.m. (11 p.m. Monday, Eastern War Time.)

"They're going over as thick as flies," said an American fighter pilot just before he, too, flew off on a different assignment—patroling the French Coast to protect Allied land, sea and air operations.

"The sky was black with them as they headed for France above scattered clouds," Lt. Ralph Santasiero, Bellerose, N. Y., a Thunderbolt pilot reported.

"Big red flares and flashes" were spotted in the distance by Lt. Duane Bunce, Minneapolis, Minn., who figured they came from shellings on the French coast.

Squadrons of fighter pilots patroled the French Coast in endless relays to "run interference" for the big bombers—RAF Halifaxes and Whitneys and United States Liberators—which were searching for Nazi submarines off shore to keep the Channel open for Allied naval craft.

"We were acting as a buffer," Lt. Thomas Hamilton, Miami, Fla., a fighter pilot, said. "But we didn't see a thing except bad weather. I don't think the Huns could get off the ground. If they had there would have been a general rat-race through the clouds for there was a thick overcast up to 7,000 feet."

Brooklyn Officer Describes Take-off

A United States Fighter Base in England, June 6 (A. P.).—Capt. John Schlechter of 97 Nichols avenue, Cypress Hills, Brooklyn, N. Y., flight surgeon of a fighter group here, described the invasion take-off weather today in this fashion:

"You could hardly see the moonglow piercing the layer of cloud. At 4:45 A. M. it started to get light. Then the sun came up. It was funny to see the sun and moon there at the same time.

"The sun was pretty well up by 7 A. M. and it was cold—that early morning English cold that we don't have back in the States."

Allied Secret Weapons Unveiled for Invasion

LONDON, June 6 (AP).—The Allied Army of Liberation rammed Hitler's Westwall today with many secret weapons in use for the first time.

While not disclosing the types and actual number of these weapons, the Ministry of Supply said factories had been manufacturing them for many months past under the greatest secrecy. Often workers themselves did not know what they were making.

The weapons, many so vital they were made in small parts at widely separated plants, were brought together only for final assembly. Workers in these plants were pledged to secrecy—and they kept the trust.

Allied Barrage Of Propaganda Pounds Europe

Planes Loose Pamphlets, Radio Carries Message That Liberation Is Near

LONDON, June 6 (AP).—A barrage of paper missiles and spoken words—by the millions and in every language—pounded Europe today with the news of the Allied invasion.

From heavily freighted cargo planes pamphlets spilled by the ton with word to conquered peoples that the first blow had been struck toward their deliverance. From hundreds of radio stations in England, the United States, North Africa, southern Italy and Russia instructions and words of counsel poured forth in unceasing volume.

The paper bullets began falling even before the first real ones were fired on the invasion beaches. The all-important task of hauling them was the job of a specially selected Fortress squadron of veterans of propaganda mail flying.

The radio broadcasters cut loose after the news of the invasion was flashed around the world. In measured tones United Nations leaders gave tidings of confidence and hope.

Chiefs of exiled governments calmly and in detail told their people what to do in the presence of both friend and foe.

The detailed task of carrying out the greatest propaganda offensive of all time fell to General Dwight D. Eisenhower's Office of Psychological Warfare, directed by Brigadier General Robert A. McClure.

This day of invasion climaxed long months of painstaking and exacting work by the psychological warfare organization, which has had to do much of it underground.

Through tenuous, always dangerous, channels underground liaison has been kept with patriots of every overrun country. Separate instructions were drawn for different groups as circumstances dictated.

Then these instructions were incorporated into pamphlets and sent on their way in much the same manner that a newspaper mailroom functions. The pilots were all specially trained, and before each mission were briefed to hit specially selected targets.

The Germans, too, were a major target of the Allied propagandists. For the last few months the psychological warfare's "flying newsboys" have delivered German-language newspapers to Hitler's Westwall troops.

U. S. Reconnaissance Flyers Report Troops Are Fighting Their Way Inland.

An Eighth U. S. A. A. F. Photo Reconnaissance Base, June 6 (A. P.).—Allied landing forces have established beachheads on the coast of northern France and are slashing their way inland, the first photo reconnaissance pilots back from the scene of the initial thrust said today.

From a ringside seat only 500 feet above the burning, smoking rim of the continent, two airmen watched the Allies strike the first blow.

One is Lieut.-Col. C. A. Shoop of Beverly Hills, Cal., a former Army test pilot who arrived in this theater six weeks ago and became commander of this group only yesterday and flew his first mission today.

The other is Major Norris Hartwell Jr. of Cheyenne, Wyo., formerly acting commander of this unit.

"They've established some good beachheads," Col. Shoop said.

"There were lots of burning buildings and bomb craters," Major Hartwell declared. "Towns were burning all over the area."

Col. Shoop said the Channel was "full of our warships" but that no German naval vessels were around. "I don't know whether the enemy was surprised or not, but we didn't see any opposition to our ground forces. At each location along the beaches our warships were standing off throwing in shells. There were groups of ships both coming and going across the Channel. Some of them were big ones and they were as close to the shore as they could possibly get. I think their fire was being thrown pretty far in."

He added that "we could see our troops advancing across the ground at one place. At one locality we saw a group of gliders on the ground. We didn't run into any air opposition, but we got down to 500 feet and the ground fire was pretty heavy."

As usual these photo pilots flew unarmed, each Lightning carrying four cameras instead of guns. They penetrated twenty-five miles inland and ranged up and down the coast, taking a total of 1,440 pictures.

Men like these shot thousands of pictures covering every foot of Nazi Europe in recent weeks to aid in planning the gigantic invasion operation.

Major Hartwell said the only opposition to naval forces was furnished by ground batteries and their fire "apparently was almost as heavy as ours," he said.

"You could see the guns hitting buildings and every now and then you'd see a building explode. The air was filled with our planes—all kinds. Visibility was good when we arrived but smoke began covering the area and it was pretty thick by the time we left."

Both pilots said they saw not a single person in the streets of the towns even before the bombardment got well underway indicating the civilian population was complying with Gen. Dwight D. Eisenhower's request to get out of the way.

"It was a great show," he summarized. "It looked like a newspaper picture I had seen of other invasions."

Infantry Got Job of Blasting Nazi Pill Boxes

Used Rocket Guns, Flame Throwers, Explosives, Old-Fashioned Fortitude

The following official story, released by the War Department, was distributed by The Associated Press:

HEADQUARTERS, European Theater Operations, June 6.—Some of the bravest soldiers in the United States Army—it was a job only for the brave—made the initial land attack on the fortress of Europe by knocking out pill boxes and other fortifications of the Atlantic wall.

Assault tactics, perfected in North Africa, Sicily and Italy, were drilled into troops in Great Britain for months before the actual invasion. Special training was given infantry units which were designated for the spearhead of the attack.

The assault on concrete emplacements is one of the most exciting and dangerous operations of modern war. It looks impossible, but it isn't, as American doughboys have proved. The key to success is plain, old-fashioned fortitude spelled with a capital G.

Job Given to Infantry

Originally the reduction of fortifications was considered a job for engineers. However, after some experience it became apparent that it would be more effective to train infantry with special engineer weapons, and this was the technique used in Europe.

The preparation is provided by artillery, by naval guns, by air bombardment and by waterproofed tanks firing hull-down in the water.

There are thirty men in an assault section—twenty-nine enlisted men and one officer. This is the capacity of the assault boats, and it also is the most convenient size for attacking a single pillbox.

It is the job of the first men ashore to locate land mines and make safe lanes with special tracing strips.

As part of this operation barbed wire must be cut, and American soldiers have a wonderful weapon for this purpose. It is the bangalore torpedo, which blows a wide swath through the wire.

Role of Rocket Gunners

Then the other members of the team follow through the wire and move up the beach.

One of the most dramatic actions of the assault is carried out by the rocket gunners, firing the famous bazookas. Their mission is to attack the pillbox apertatures to silence enemy fire, and the accuracy of American rocket gunners is remarkable.

The climax of the entire operation is played by the soldier with the flame thrower and the man with the demolition charge.

As soon as one pillbox blows the entire section moves forward for another attack. During a landing operation these tactics are repeated by many squads along a considerable front—there will be at least one division in line and probably more.

Invasion Port Was One Minute Ahead of Months-Old Schedule

By Howard Whitman

New York Daily News Correspondent Representing the Combined American Press

Distributed by The Associated Press

AN INVASION PORT IN ENGLAND, June 6.—From this port the invasion was exactly one minute ahead of schedule. The timetable, worked out months in advance, called for completion at midnight. I was with Brigadier General Charles Thrasher, commanding general of a southern base section in England soon after the successful completion of the loading. You never saw a happier man than General Thrasher.

A year and a half's work in mounting this operation—a year and a half of one of the most complex jobs a man ever undertook—and Thrasher delivered the goods a minute ahead of schedule.

Another happy man was Brigadier General Frank Ross, chief Army transportation officer in the European theater. He told me how thousands of invasion craft were loaded backwards. Men and equipment that were to be spewed upon the beaches first had to be loaded last. Everything had to be placed in assault boats in the order it would be needed on the beaches.

The invasion was mounted

along a stretch of the British coast. So tremendous was the operation that it can best be understood by picturing Britain in a series of funnels with their open ends in the interior of the country and their spouts at embarkation points along the invasion coast. The assault force—men and equipment—poured down these funnels in accordance with a fantastically detailed timetable.

First, the invasion forces were gathered, some of them months ago, in concentrated areas in the interior. Then, within the last two months, they were moved into marshalling areas where they were briefed and equipped for the invasion. The final step was to move to embarkation points and onto invasion craft.

At this port the troops embarked directly from docks, some stepping aboard L. C. I. (Landing Craft Infantry); others were ferried out to big A. T.A. (Auxiliary Transport, Assault).

U. S. PARATROOP VETERANS LAND ON FRENCH SOIL

JUN 7 1944

Americans Strike at Nazi Forces Behind Hitler's Atlantic Wall.

With United States Parachute Troops, June 6 (A. P.).—American paratroopers—studded with battle-hardened veterans of the Sicilian and Italian campaigns—landed behind Hitler's Atlantic Wall today to plant the first blow of the long-awaited western front squarely in the enemy vitals.

The Allies' toughest, wiriest men of war cascaded from faintly moonlit skies in an awesome operation.

Twin-engined Curtis Commandos bore the human cargo across the skies, simultaneously towing troop-laden gliders—to merge in a single sledgehammer blow paving the way for frontal assault forces.

Armed with weapons from the most primitive to the most modern, the paratroopers' mission was to disrupt and demoralize the Germans' communications inside the Nazis' own lines.

Wear American Flags.

There was no immediate indication that their dynamite and flashing steel and well-aimed fire was not succeeding in the execution of plans rehearsed for months in preparation for the liberation of occupied Europe.

The steel-helmeted, ankle-booted warriors wore a red, white and blue American flag insignia on the sleeve and camouflaged green-splotched battle dress.

In the dawn dozens of American transport planes and gliders carrying parachute and air-borne troops flew from British bases toward the French coast. It was about 5 A. M. (11 P. M. Monday, Eastern War Time).

"They're going over as thick as flies," said an American fighter pilot just before he, too, flew off on a different assignment—patrolling the French coast to protect Allied land, sea and air operations.

"The sky was black with them as they headed for France above scattered clouds," reported Lieut. Ralph Santasiero, 95-01 239th street, Bellerose, Queens, a Thunderbolt pilot.

Big red flares and flashes were spotted in the distance by Lieut. Duane Bunce of Minneapolis, Minn., who figured they came from shellings on the French coast.

Squadrons of fighter pilots patrolled the French coast in endless relays to run interference for the big bombers—R. A. F. Halifaxes and Whitneys and United States Liberators—which were searching for Nazi submarines off shore to keep the Channel open for Allied naval craft.

"We were acting as a buffer," said Lieut. Thomas Hamilton of Miami, Fla., a fighter pilot, "but we didn't see a thing except bad weather. I don't think the Huns could get off the ground. If they had there would have been a general rat race through the clouds, for there was a thick overcast up to 7,000 feet."

GEN. EISENHOWER DIRECTS ATTACK FROM HIS TRAILER

JUN 7 1944

(Distributed By The Associated Press)

AN ADVANCE COMMAND POST, Supreme Allied Headquarters, June 6—Gen. Dwight Eisenhower pressed the button for the invasion of France from this tented camp in the depth of the sleeping English countryside. Here in a motor trailer he is directing the first phase of history's most gigantic amphibious operation.

It was at night that the supreme commander, pink, serene and confident, made his great decision. Final weather forecasts determined the choice.

Weather Chief Factor

The commanders met with Gen. Eisenhower to study the deciding factors of sun, wind and visibility. Throughout "D-Minus-1 Day" the success of the first phase of the second front was poised on the slender apex of a meteorological machine.

To those of us who have watched Gen. Eisenhower during these tense 24 hours the characteristic gesture had been his head cocked at the sky.

The whole tremendous attack narrows down to one man in dark khaki battledress—the man who is breaking the thunder and lightning over France and who strolls with casual confidence under the sprouting boughs of the English trees. He has had little sleep for many hours, but you could never guess it as you watched him striding fresh and alert between his office on wheels and his war room pregnant with its maps.

So smooth has been the 24 hours before H-hour that Eisenhower left his camp twice to say God-speed to his assault teams.

In the morning he "chinned" in his familiar way with the men of a British unit as they embarked from an invasion quay.

Tours Airdromes

Late yesterday he was away for seven hours on a tour of airdromes where American parachute troops were preparing to take off. With casual questions, jests and cheery sallies, Eisenhower brought a last satisfied smile to faces already grim for the adventure.

As dusk fell and the air began to hum with the sound planes carrying the first France-bound troops, he called at the headquarters of one of the airborne units. He had grown hungry during his non-stop tour of the airfields.

He relaxed, ate doughnuts and drank coffee in a great panelled hall. Outside the air was now full of Douglas airliners.

Gen. Eisenhower walked up to the roof of the house and watched the procession in the darkening skies as the squadrons roared over him at 15 second intervals.

Soldiers Knew 'This Was It' but Couldn't Talk

JUN 7 1944

Onlookers at Jumping-Off Points Believed It Was Just Another Rehearsal

EUROPEAN THEATER OF OPERATIONS, June 6 (AP).—The armed hordes which struck the coast of France last night set in motion the most complex military machine in history.

American, British and Canadian soldiers, sailors and airmen blasted the invasion coast with an unprecedented barrage of gunfire and aerial bombardment and stormed its beaches and cliffs in a furious assault of thousands of foot soldiers, each a walking arsenal.

The imminence of the long-awaited assault had been evident to every one, but the actual hour was a well-kept secret, despite the fact that final preparations for the jump-off began a week ago, on May 30.

Those who saw the small advance parties with their light combat packs march to the jumping-off points could not say "this is it"—rehearsals over months of time had made the sight commonplace throughout the restricted and closely guarded coastal zone, but the men knew they were saying good by to England.

Troops Were Briefed

Weeks or months before, they had moved into assembly areas on the hills overlooking the ports. Landing craft had begun assembling. On May 28, the assembly areas were changed into marshaling areas. The troops had been briefed on their exact mission. The designated assault troops were forbidden to talk to civilians or to unbriefed soldiers.

As the eve of invasion approached, the hundreds and thousands of fighter bombers of the tactical air forces concentrated their attacks in a relatively narrow but important urban area of northern France and Belgium. They went after strategic air bases, cities, railway yards, bridges, gun emplacements, canal locks, locomotives and barges. Fighter planes rushed at the enemy from altitudes of 1,500 feet down to the point where they almost touched the tree tops, at speeds of 400 to 500 miles an hour.

Before the invasion was launched, miles upon miles of coastal area in England were given over to the assembly of troops. Persons not on official business were barred from this zone, hundreds of other elaborate precautions were taken.

All England an Arsenal

Back of this area, all England was an arsenal. There were miles of ammunition storage — more stored ammunion, shells and explosives of all kinds, than was used throughout the entire World War. Full sized trains, built to roll on the tracks of continental Europe, had been brought to England in pieces and assembled here. The latest radio equipment, much of it still on the secret list, was stored in vast quantities.

In addition to stockpiling huge amounts of supplies, the service forces set up a complex and carefully detailed system to keep the supplies moving from the storage areas to the troops once the invasion was under way.

There was a staggering total of 125,000,000 maps.

The final plans for the H Hour strike were drawn within sight of France, in specially guarded buildings to which even generals could be admitted only by showing an authorization card. In these buildings, maps of the French coast revealed the landing areas, to the foot, of each British, Canadian and American unit. Before these maps, staff conferences worked out to the minute and to the second the liaison between army and navy, between British and Americans, between infantry and engineers, between air forces and ground forces. These plans covered not only D Day and H Hour, but—in precise detail — five days, twenty days, ninety days later.

Yanks Start Out On Invasion As If Headed For A Picnic

JUN 7 1944

By HOWARD WHITMAN

[American War Correspondent]

[Distributed by the Associated Press]

An Invasion Port in England, June 6—They boarded the invasion ships as if they were headed for a Sunday-school picnic. It didn't matter that death might be there, too. For days the cream of America's fighting men poured through this port and streamed aboard the invasion armada.

Never were men more anxious to get on with so grim a task.

This port was one of many from which the invasion sprung. But this was the spearhead port where the toughest of tough assault soldiers were loaded.

Shave Heads "For Hell Of It"

Many of the men went aboard with shaved heads, particularly the hard-fighting assault troops. I asked a couple of them why. "We just do it for the hell of it," said one.

But he was spoofing. The reason thousands of invasion boys shaved their heads close is that this reduces the danger of infection in case of head wounds.

All of them wore gas protective clothing from top to bottom, and carried waterproof gas masks. Their paymasters had given each man $4 invasion money and some had obtained more by cashing in their British funds.

I met a staff sergeant who had hundreds of dollars of invasion currency. "I like to travel heavy. There's lots of stuff I want to buy when I go over there," he said.

Poker and crap games aboard the invasion craft were in progress continually—with invasion money.

These boys seemed unaware that they were standing at the crossroads of history.

Most of them had embarked on the same ships three of four times before in practice exercises. They had stormed and assaulted beach after beach in England. Now they knew it was the real thing—and unbelievable as it seems—they were happy about it.

Poker And Crap Game

Take Corporal Alphone Pesci, Stapleton, S. I., father of a boy 7 and a girl 5.

"After you practice for a thing so long you get sick of practicing," he said. "We know what we got to do and we want to get the damned thing done. Maybe if we get the damned thing done we'll get home some day."

Sitting on a cargo hatch like a couple of pleasure travelers were Sergt. John Connors, Chicago, and Private Herbert Campbell, of Owensville, Ohio.

Wish Tub Would eGt Going

"I wish this tub would get going. Let's get it over with and knock their teeth out. That's the way we feel, and you can tell them back home that our morale was never better—I mean that," Connors said.

Campbell piped up "that goes for me." "From what I hear it's the people back home who have the worst jitters," said Corporal Norman Pattzer, the Bronx.

I know it sounds incredibly calm. But that's the way it was.

The invasion was mounted along a stretch of the British coast. So tremendous was the operation that it can best be understood by picturing Britain as a series of funnels with their open ends in the interior of the country and their spouts at embarkation points along the invasion coast. The assault forces—men and equipment—poured down these funnels in accordance with a fantastically detailed timetable.

Embark Direct From Docks

At this port the troops embarked directly from docks, some stepping aboard LCI (landing craft, infantry) and others were ferried out to big ATA (auxiliary transport, assault). At another embarkation point nearby equipment was being simultaneously loaded — heavy guns, tank destroyers, armored cars, jeeps and amphibious fighting vihicles. These were driven to concrete ramps and run straight up into the open jaws of LST (landing ships, tanks).

It was exactly one minute ahead of schedule. The timetable—worked out months in advance—called for completion at midnight. I was with Birg. Gen. Charles Thrasher, commanding general of a southern base section in England—shortly after the successful completion of the loading. You never saw a happier man than Thrasher.

A year and a half's work in mounting this operation—a year and a half ofone of the most complex jobs a man ever undertook—and Thrasher delivered the goods a minute ahead of schedule.

General Ross Describes Work

Another happy man was Brig. Gen. Frank Ross, chief army transportation officer in the European theater.

He eold me how thousands of invasion craft were loaded backwards. Men and equipment that were to be spewed upon beaches first had to be loaded last. Everything had to be placed in assault boats in the order they would be needed on the beachheads.

You've never seen such laden troops as those who embarked here. oYu could hardly see their faces beneath the welter of equipment. Some of the things they carried were ifield backs, side arms, rifles, machine guns, walkie-talkies, field glasses, medical supplies, jackets stuffed with hand grenades, smoke bombs, heavy loads of ammunition, prepared dynamite charges, flame throwers, grenade launchers, bazookas, TNT chargse on the ends of poles and full anti-gas equipment.

One Carries Guitar

One of them also carried a guitar.

Another had a red and white sign painted on his back: "Danger —minefield."

Several had plucked flowers on their way to embarkation and stuck them in their helmets.

As they hopped from trucks to board ships, embarkation officers checked every man by calling out his last name and having him respond with his first name and middle initial. Just before he stepped aboard he was given a life preserver for himself and one for every piece of equipment he carried.

Chewing Gum Among Equipment

He was also given seven sticks of chewing gum, four boxes of matches, a box of body insecticide powder, three boxes of K rations, three boxes of D rations, pipe, cigarette and chewing tobacco, water-purification tablets, a carton of cigarettes or cigarette makings, one razor blade, a tin of canned heat, 12 seasickness pills and two vomit bags.

At this embarkation point the first two invaders to embark were lieutenants from New York State—Stanley White, of Abescon, and Robert Edlin, of New Albany.

LUFTWAFFE BETTER AS GROUND SUPPORT

JUN 7 1944

Allied Expeditionary Air Force Headquarters in England (AP).—Although the German air force has been strained just to replace the Allies' daily inroads on it and has little chance of expanding, it will become relatively stronger because of the Allies western front offensive. By an even greater paradox, what will strengthen it is the very thing that has weakened it during preceding stages of the war. That is the fact that the German air force is basically a tactical one—designed for immediate support of ground operations.

Despite the German imaginative use of airplanes in the invasions of Poland and France, they never envisioned real "strategic" heavy bombardment such as the U. S. A. A. F. and the R. A. F. had been working on for decades before the war.

The Germans never planned airpower beyond a very subordinate —albeit effective—auxiliary to ground operations. They started with a tactical air force, premised on a quick blitz victory. When that failed, Germany was stuck with a tactical air force and it was too late to change. They had to keep on building essentially single and twin-engine fighters and multi-purpose fighter-bombers. That is mainly what they have been throwing at England in 100-and-200 plane raids, and their impact has been negligible.

As Germany goes more and more on the defensive with the development of the western front, and it becomes a contest of ground and air forces, the Luftwaffe can fall back on the support work for which it was basically designed and therefore at which it presumably will be more efficient.

INVASION WAS PUT OFF A DAY

JUN 7 1944

Supreme Headquarters, Allied Expeditionary Force, June 6 (A. P.).—The Allied landings in France were postponed twenty-four hours due to bad weather, it was learned today. They were originally scheduled for yesterday morning.

As the time for the original D day approached there was a clear sky, but the weatherman warned that a storm was coming and Gen. Eeisenhower postponed the operations twenty-four hours.

Although the weather still looked bad when the invasion finally was ordered, the predictions were for clearing skies and the expedition moved out.

Canadians Win Beachhead And Continue Fight Inland

JUN 7 1944

WITH CANADIAN FORCES LANDING IN FRANCE, June 6.—In two hours and 45 minutes of fighting on the beaches here the Canadian invasion force won its beachhead and shoved on inland.

This morning the Canadian commander sent this message to Lt. Gen. H. D. G. Crerar: 'Beachhead taken. Well on way to immediate objective."

The strip of coast won by the Canadians in this initial assault was quite narrow, but it gave them beaches and provided a base for further penetration.

Stiff Street Fighting

There was some stiff street fighting in little coast towns and the Canadians also met considerable enemy fire on the beaches as they worked their way into the defenses.

They had to overcome numerous steel and wooden obstacles which had been placed out on the tidal part of the beach, and which are covered at high tide to trap landing craft.

However, the assault went in just as the tide began to rise and many of these obstacles were cleared away by engineers before the water covered them, enabling follow-up craft to beach and unload.

The Canadians suffered some casualties from machine-guns, mortars and artillery.

By 10 a. m. the Canadians were about 1,000 yards inland, going strong, and meeting only small pockets of Germans.

The first prisoners taken were identified as belonging to a coastal defense unit.

On other parts of the front near us the operation is moving along. Canadian and British airborne troops did a good job when they were dropped and came in by gliders at 3:30 a.m. They captured and held several important bridges.

Cruisers provided the Canadians very effective support. One cruiser knocked out a troublesome battery about a mile and a half from the coast with six direct hits.

Enemy Tanks Reported

Enemy tanks are reported about ten or 15 miles south of the beachhead and some of the enemy's transport also is moving. The French coast is wreathed in smoke drifting far down the channel.

In some of the bombarded towns fires are burning and destroyers and support craft are still prowling up and down the coast to finish off anything else that may show up.

Allied air cover over the fleet and beachhead is very complete. Every few minutes Spitfires or Lightnings sweep past in the sunshine which has now come out. The wind shows signs of abating.

The Canadian assault formation staff appears pleased at the result of the morning's battle, but they are not going to be certain until they get a solid line on the perimeter inland from which they can strike deeper into France.

Correspondents Leave London Secretly With None Knowing Real Show to Start

JUN 7 1944

By DON WHITEHEAD

ABOARD AN INVASION SHIP, June 3—(Delayed)—(AP) Newspaper correspondents accompanying American assault forces on the invasion of France were whisked out of London May 29 with only an hour's notice—and so tight was the secrecy that none knew whether he was heading for the real show or just another exercise.

Although all had been waiting for weeks to be called to join the units to which they had been assigned for the great expedition almost everyone was taken by surprise when the call finally came.

I received a telephone call at my London flat at 9:30 a. m. and Lt. Col. Jack Redding, a former reporter for The Chicago Herald American, chatted casually for awhile and then said, "I'd like you to come over in an hour and it would be a good idea to bring along a musette bag. You might go out of town for a day or two."

The other correspondents were at Redding's office when I arrived.

John O'Reilly of The New York Herald Tribune remarked that he had "sent a thousand dollars in money orders out to be pressed" in a pocket of a suit.

Kept Under Escort

He was permitted, under escort, to return to his hotel to salvage the money orders, and others were given escort to pick up forgotten papers or uniforms they had neglected to bring along. None was permitted to make telephone calls or write notes and no one was allowed to leave the hotel room except under escort.

We were given a Supreme Headquarters, Allied Expeditionary Force Overseas visa which said "no correspondent may quit the overseas theater during the validity of this overseas visa without the express permission of the supreme commander."

Then we were loaded into jeeps and under the watchful eye of a security officer began the long drive from London. Only Lt. Sam Brightman, former Washington correspondent for The Louisville Courier-Journal knew where we were going.

In camp for an overnight stay Capt. Robert Hughes, Greer, S. C., chief field censor of our sector, read us the stringent rules of censorship by which we must abide.

The next day the group of some 20 correspondents split up to join various units. We were driven by back roads and winding lanes to avoid towns and were finally delivered to the unit which was making preparations to board ship.

"I've been throwing another extra sock in my bag each time I heard the rumor we were leaving," said Maj. Owen B. Murphy of Lexington, Ky. "Now that you boys have shown up I guess it's official this time."

Girls operating a Red Cross clubmobile at the unit headquarters were Ann Pasternacki, of Virginia, Minn., Birnelyn Seymour, of Berkeley, Calif., and Frances Webb Roosevelt of Kansas City, Mo., who recently was married to Capt. Quentin Roosevelt.

Miss Seymour, bemoaning that she could not accompany the troops on the invasion, said "I'd like to go in early. I wouldn't mind the danger, honest I wouldn't."

Then John Thompson of The Chicago Tribune and I met the commanding general of the unit. He gave us the warmest welcome ever received in any outfit.

Pledges Full Cooperation

"Regard yourselves as members of this unit," he said. "You have complete freedom of movement and I want you to get all the information you can. We are ready to help you all that is possible. The people at home won't know what is happening unless you are given information and I want them to know."

Then the general smiled.

"You both know how to take care of yourselves and won't forget to duck. But if an unlucky shell should get you we'll do all we can. If you're wounded we'll take care of you. If you're killed we'll bury you. Meantime, we'll feed you and see you get what you want."

I know it sounds incredibly calm. But that's the way it was.

The invasion was mounted along a stretch of the British coast. So tremendous was the operation that it can best be understood by picturing Britain as a series of funnels with their open ends in the interior of the country and their spouts at embarkation points along the invasion coast. The assault forces—men and equipment—poured down these funnels in accordance with a fantastically detailed timetable.

First the invasion forces were gathered, some of them months ago, in concentrated areas in the interior. Then within the last two months they were moved into marshalling areas where they were briefed and equipped for the invasion.

The final step was to move to embarkation points and onto invasion craft.

At this port the troops embarked directly from docks, some stepping aboard LCI (landing craft, infantry) and others were ferried out to big ATA (auxiliary transport, assault). At another embarkation point nearby equipment was being simultaneously loaded—heavy guns, tank destroyers, armored cars, jeeps and amphibious fighting vehicles. These were driven to concrete ramps and run straight up into the open jaws of LST (landing ships, tanks).

Ahead of Schedule

It was exactly one minute ahead of schedule. The timetable—worked out months in advance—called for completion at midnight. I was with Brig Gen. Charles Thrasher, commanding general of a southern base section in England—shortly after the successful completion of the loading. You never saw a happier man than Thrasher.

A year and a half's work in mounting this operation — a year and a half of one of the most complex jobs a man ever undertook—and Thrasher delivered the goods a minute ahead of schedule.

Another happy man was Brig. Gen. Frank Ross, chief Army transportation officer in the European theater.

He told me how thousands of invasion craft were loaded backwards. Men and equipment that were to be spewed upon beaches first had to be loaded last. Everything had to be placed in assault boats in the order they would be needed on the beachheads.

Some Carry Flowers

Several had plucked flowers on their way to embarkation and stuck them in their helmets.

As they hopped from trucks to board ships, embarkation officers checked every man by calling out his last name and having him respond with his first name and middle initial. Just before he stepped aboard he was given a life preserver for himself and one for every piece of equipment he carried.

INVASION CAUGHT NAZIS NAPPING

JUN 7 1944

By BOB MILLER

Representing The Combined British Press
(Distributed By The Associated Press)

ABOARD A U. S. P-T BOAT OFF FRANCE, June 6—The invasion caught the Nazis completely by surprise.

It was not until 3:30 a.m. that a, German reconnaissance plane sighted the United Nations invading forces moving into position and this was too late to be effective.

Dawn revealed the most amazing sight of this or any other war.

There were ships everywhere I looked. Planes were darting through the coluds above them.

Heavy broadsides of American and British battleships and cruisers rumbled through the overcast and yellow flames from the gun muzzles all but obscured the warships as thousands of tons of explosives were sent shoreward against German installations.

30. 24 — 15969

NIGHT

Jockey for Position

Destroyers and landing craft jockeyed for position, awaiting the opportunity to discharge their cargoes.

So completely asleep were the Germans that British minesweepers escorted by this P-T squadron ran interference for the invasion by clearing a broad path right up to the beaches without once being challenged.

This unprecedented maneuver was carried out without loss of a single P-T. Despite rough seas which left crews bruised and battered and many acutely seasick, the American P-Ts shepherded the mine-sweepers along the chartered route all ngiht. Because of the slowness of the minesweepers it had been necessary to begin the operation in broad daylight Monday, but perfect air cover by the U. S. air forces and the RAF kept away any German planes.

Boat Crews Watch Battle

P-T and sweeper crewmen practically within gunshot range of German batteries watched a battle between planes and German anti-aircraft batteries ashore.

Huge bombs of a mysterious type rained down upon the Germans. They retaliated with an ack, ack barrage.

The naval barrage began at 5:40 a.m.

JUN 7 1944

Enroute back to an English port, the squadron was never once out of the sight of ships from one side of the channel to the other.

The heavy concussion of exploding shells and bombs could still be felt aboard the P-Ts after the shoreline faded from view.

First Yank Dead Brought Back

JUN 7 1944

By RUTH COWAN

At a Port in Southern England, June 6 (AP)—A British sailor, his young face grimy with coal dust and his dark eyes solemn, stood at attention with fixed bayonet at the head of the gangplank.

The first American dead in the invasion of western Europe were being brought off mine sweepers, dubbed "Smokey Joes"—the first ships out and the first back.

There were survivors, too, 19 of them, "picked up at sea."

I was the only correspondent present.

Those with a job to do went down to the quay. A big truck drove up to take the survivors to a British camp. Ambulances lined up.

American soldiers on the wharf with rifles and blue arm bands marked "security" watched all comers.

DAY

Survivors Know Too Much

I was told not to attempt to talk to anyone getting off the ship.

The survivors are called "brief troops"—men who have been told too much, who have seen too much of the invasion plan to speak to any outsider. They will be closely guarded until they go out again.

The first mine sweeper eased up to the dock. No one cheered.

There was a call for someone from the American Medical Corps to board, and Capt. Thomas Newbold, Brooklyn, N. Y., responded.

Standing near by, Chaplain Meyer Miller, Greenwich, Conn., said "we saw them off—and now we see them back."

Captain Newbold returned, conferred with Capt. A. J. Marsala, Monroe, La., liaison officer between the United States Medical Corps and the Allied navies.

A Lad With Light Hair

Then the first survivor came onto deck and up the gangplank. He was a young lad with light brown hair. He wore the two-piece white pajamalike suit given men picked up at sea. Willing British hands helped him into a waiting truck.

Others came, some very tired, one stumbled, one wore borrowed navy gear. A few wore green dungarees.

As they came ashore another mine sweeper eased alongside with three survivors. One shouted as he climbed into a truck, "We made it after all."

"Bring up the ambulances," came a command. Litter bearers began placing them beside the gangplank. No one spoke.

Attack Is Led By Cloudburst Of Sky Troops

Paratroopers and Glider Soldiers by Thousands Land Behind Nazi Lines

JUN 7 1944

By Pugh Moore

SUPREME HEADQUARTERS ALLIED EXPEDITIONARY FORCE, June 6 (AP).—The Allies hurled against the Germans in France today the greatest airborne force in military history, giving to these hardy, face-stained men the honor of delivering the first great land smash of the western front.

Wielding sheath knives and tommy-guns, thousands of American and British paratroops and glider troops swept down on sleeping Cherbourg Peninsula out of the pre-dawn blackness and immediately set about the task of disrupting Nazi rear lines by destroying key bridges, rail yards and enemy strong points.

At S. H. A. E. F. late today a military spokesman, praising troop-carrier planes which navigated through a rainy, stormy night to drop thousands of these specially trained soldiers on vital objectives, said:

"The operation was on a very large scale and was carried out with great precision. Our losses in aircraft were extremely small. It was a fine job—very fine indeed."

NIGHT

Bear Brunt of Battle

As the air-borne troops are fighting fiercely well behind the enemy lines, the spokesman naturally was not in a position to give a detailed picture of the results of their landings. Reports from air observers indicated they carried the brunt of the battle in the early stages, creating large diversions and much demage.

Attack bombers flying back over the area in which the air-borne troops landed reported seeing a number of demolitions and many burning buildings.

The German radio gave the first hint of the scope of this epochal operation. The broadcast claimed the soldiers had been identified as from four divisions which were named as the 1st and 6th British and the 28th and 100th American. Allied military authorities withheld comment on the size of the landing force.

Before taking off these crack troops were wished Godspeed by Supreme Commander General Eisenhower, who spent seven hours touring airdromes from which the air troops took off.

After chatting with them and eating doughnuts and coffee at one of their headquarters, Eisenhower climbed to a roof and watched as squadron after squadron climbed into the sky, their destination France.

Associated Press war correspondent Gladwill Hill, flying over the landing area shortly after 6 a. m., reported that "inland hundreds of parachutes, plopped neatly in fields without a sign of life about, testified eloquently to the alacrity with which their riders plunged into cover to tangle with Germans. The concentration of chutes in model landing places was cheering evidence of the smoothness with which the operation came off."

Later Associated Press Photographer Bede Irwin told of seeing "thousands" of red and dark green camouflaged parachutes lying about on the ground during a flight across the Cherbourg Peninsula.

Some Gliders Crash

"There was also about a 500-acre section packed with gliders," he said. "A number had cracked up, but most seemed to have gotten down okay. From our height I couldn't see any ground movement, but many buildings in the area were burning. There must have been quite a battle."

For this climatic moment the spearheading air-borne troops spent months in secret, arduous training. Besides ankle sheath knives and rapid-fire weapons, they carried bandoliers of ammunition, hand grenades, coils of rope, pick handles, spades and rubber dinghies—the last in case of plane failure over the channel.

Some of the paratroopers, looking like Indians on the warpath with their faces stained reddish brown with cocoa and linseed oil, said testingly they had put on the camouflage "so we will have something to eat if our rations run out."

The quip, told to Eisenhower, made the supreme commander laugh heartily.

GEN. MONTGOMERY EXPECTS ROMMEL TO 'HIT US EARLY'

JUN 7 1944

WHITEHEAD

GENERAL MONTGOMERY'S HEADQUARTERS, June 6—(AP) Gen. Sir Bernard L. Montgomery, leading Allied armies in the grand assault on France, believes Field Marshal Erwin Rommel—the desert fox he trapped on Africa's sands—will try at once "to knock us back into the sea."

The little gray general who chased Rommel across North Africa predicted to correspondents May 15 that the German general entrusted with ground defenses in the west "will commit himself on the beaches."

NIGHT

"He is a disrupter," Gen. Montgomery said, "and to disrupt the invasion he will try to hit us early."

Studied Rommel's Methods

The general based his prediction, made public today, on a long study of Rommel's methods in battle, and of the man himself.

"I have supreme confidence," declared the hero of El Alamein, who broke the back of the German desert army there and then pursued him to the ultimate Afrika corps disaster at Cap Bon.

Monty studied the characteristics, habits and fighting methods of Rommel—he even kept a picture of the Nazi general above his table in his desert caravan—and came to know him as an impulsive commander who preferred the quick decision to slow slugging.

Montgomery told the correspondents that his battle plans were based on a study of human nature.

Must Know Human Nature

"It is important," he said, "to know human nature and what men can do—to get men into the right places doing the right job."

As no two men are alike, so Gen. Montgomery believes no two divisions are alike.

"You may think so," he said, "but I assure you they are different. The commander who thinks divisions are all alike will lose battles. No division is equally good at everything. One division does one thing well, another does another thing best. And it is the commander's responsibility to see that the right divisions are in the right places at the proper time."

Praises Eisenhower

Gen. Montgomery praised the leadership of Gen. Dwight D. Eisenhower in drawing the British and Americans close together, asserting: "We are the only two peoples in the world who could have done it—teamed up for this great show."

Montgomery expects a hard fight, sees the German soldier as good as any in the world, but he believes the German high command is not up to its old standard.

"Put the German on some ground," he said, "and let him stay there long enough and it takes a bit of doing to get him off—it takes a bit of doing."

COMMANDER HAPPY OVER INITIAL GAINS

JUN 7 1944

Allied Armies Headquarters, June 6 (A. P.).—Gen. Sir Bernard L. Montgomery, commander of the group of armies invading France, said this afternoon he was pleased with the initial phase of the landing operations.

Dressed in the familiar Montgomery sweater with battledress trousers, the sharp-featured general appeared quite happy as he told o fa five-point recipe for victory he had given his officers shortly before the invasion signal.

He listed the five points as (1) Allied solidarity, (2) offensive eagerness, (3) enthusiasm, (4) confidence, and (5) all-out effort.

11,000 Allied Planes Aid Invasion Despite Thick, Rolling Clouds

Absence of German Resistance Stands Out In Aerial Operations

JUN 7 1944

HERCHER

By the Associated Press.

SUPREME HEADQUARTERS, ALLIED EXPEDITIONARY FORCE, June 6.—Through a rolling ocean of clouds 5,000 feet thick, Allied air forces threw 11,000 aircraft of almost every type into the grand invasion of Europe today, bombing and strafing miles of Normandy's beaches and flying inland to break the enemy's communications.

Two things stood out in the air operations launched in support of the landings in Northern France. The first was the mass of airplanes the Allies were able to put into the sky in weather described as "just fair."

The other was the absence of German resistance.

DAY

In a blasting herald to the invasion, the British bomber command sent more than 1,300 of its biggest ships roaring across the Channel last night and early today in the heaviest aerial attack ever aimed at German batteries along the French coast.

Ten attacks were executed between 11:30 p.m. and sunrise, each with 100 or more bombers.

Other British aircraft attacked the Northwestern German railroad city of Osnabruck without loss.

The stunning aerial bombardment fell on the Normandy landing beaches as the first phases of the co-ordinated assault began.

Clouds Screen Targets.

There was a complete cloud over some of the Royal Air Force coastal targets during the night, but the Air Ministry declared that it was no obstacle to the well-trained pathfinder crews. The R. A. F. had begun to attack the coastal targets in earnest on May 7, in undertaking one of its most difficult assignments. The targets were very small and well-protected. They had to be hit at night.

During that time the Bomber Command had made forty attacks on twenty-four sites and made direct hits on the vital parts of twelve of these sites, as well as doing other damage, the Air Ministry said. Guns sought out as targets were of two kinds, with two different functions. They were the very long-range 155-millimeter guns, such as those used by the Germans to shell Dover and designed, as well, to fire on shipping, and the 170-millimeter type placed to fire on beaches or landing craft inshore.

It was believed that the usefulness of many batteries which escaped direct hits was impaired by near misses severing communications with command posts, throwing the guns out of alignment, or raising mounds of earth in front of the guns to make sighting impossible.

Every Aid of Military Science Used in Selection of D-Day

JUN 7 1944

By WES GALLAGHER,
Associated Press War Correspondent.

SUPREME HEADQUARTERS, Allied Expeditionary Force, June 6.—In this military Shangri-La, cleverly hidden from snooping German spy planes, the war's greatest secret was hatched early this year.

Adolf Hitler would have squandered the lives of 10 divisions and much of his wealth to have learned it, even up to a few hours ago.

But today he was given it "free of charge." And it may cost him his life and power eventually. The secret naturally was "D-day and H-hour."

D-day was military terminology for the day of the great Allied attack. H-hour was the exact hour

Dates Set for Operation

Hard supply necessities and complications of modern amphibious warfare made it necessary that these two factors be known months in advance.

The dates were set for the arrival of troops, guns and tanks. The dates for air attacks on specific objectives. Dates for establishing bases.

Dates for the capture of key ports.

Dates are not figures on the calendar. They are scheduled in terminology like this: D-plus-five, or D-minus-six. The first means five days after the troops land. The second means six days before the day for attack.

Hundreds of thousands of lives depended on a successful D-day choice. If the weather was bad and the water rough thousands of soldiers might be drowned in the treacherous surfs off the European coast. If it was too light at night the convoys might be broken up and the soldiers landed on the wrong beaches. If the tides were wrong the ships might be stranded. Any one of a hundred things might go amiss.

Weather for 25 Years Studied.

Every aid of military science hiding under a cloak of camouflage here was brought forth to aid the supreme commander in his difficult choice.

JUN 7 1944

British and American weather experts studied reports for the last quarter of a century over every foot of coast. They figured the exact hours of darkness and light. Canadian, British and American air force chiefs were given specified objectives and estimated how long it was going to take to beat the German air force to a pulp.

Then these men walked down the long corridors, heavily guarded by MPS, and presented their invasion date to Gen. Eisenhower.

Allied supply chiefs estimated how many guns and tanks were required and by what date they could be assembled at designated points. Navy men made their estimates.

Russians Study Problems.

In Moscow, Russians studied their problems and how best to correlate operations on both east and west fronts. In the Mediterranean, the Allied staff these sent in their data.

With all this before him, the supreme commander spent long hours in his office selecting and rejecting —finally hitting on one date. It probably didn't coincide with any submitted but was the best possible compromise.

"A general needs luck," Gen. Eisenhower once said in North Africa.

And Gen. Eisenhower is a "lucky" general. He picked D-day for the African invasion 60 days ahead of time, with the scientific odds 9 to 1 against him that French Morocco's iron coast would be swept by tides and waves that would make landings impossible except for three days of the month. But D-day found the waters fairly calm.

He picked the Sicily invasion date more than a month in advance and except for a high wind early in the night the time was almost perfect. The same happened at Salerno.

Gen. Eisenhower cannot be called superstitious but he carries a small purse on "tough" days. It contains his "lucky" coins which he rubbed before the African, Sicilian and Italian invasions. And there was no doubt he was rubbing them last night.

ALLIED [illegible] PRECEDED INVASION

JUN 7 1944

Supreme Headquarters, Allied Expeditionary Force, June 6 (A. P.).—It can now be revealed that the Allies have been conducting a series of feints in advance of the invasion today. These feints were predicted some time ago by Prime Minister Churchill, and were designed to lull the Germans so that they would never know when the blow was coming.

DAY

LANDING CRAFT JAM INVASION ROUTE

JUN 6 1944

A United States Troop Carrier Base in England, June 6 (A. P.).—Crews returning from this morning's historic airborne invasion of Europe reported the English Channel was jammed with landing barges moving in toward the French coast.

"There seemed to be a million of 'em," said Sergt. Sanford Kaufman of 10730 Earle avenue, Cleveland, Ohio.

The big twin-engined C-47s' encountered only mild opposition according to first reports.

The crews, standing and drinking coffee and munching sandwiches, expressed surprise that it was so uneventful.

"Not much of a story, was it?" asked Sergt. Allen Snair of Orbisonio, Pa., then he added, "a rocket shell tore a two-foot hole in our wing."

Col. Frank McNees of 2208 Dayton avenue, St. Paul, Minn., who flew the lead plane from this base, came home on one engine. The other was knocked out by a shell that grazed the leg of Lieut. James Clifford of 88-19 193d Road, Hollis, L. I., Clifford escaped serious injury.

"We had just jumped our troops over the dropping zone when the shell hit," said Col McNees. "We skimmed over the channel on the way home. I am glad we didn't meet any battleships. "We were so low we'd have run right over them."

None of the crews reported seeing enemy fighters during their brief dash, which was made in moonlight with scattered cloud cover.

ASSAULT DIRECTED FROM SECRET BASE

E. MUN 7 1944 ROBERTS

Allied Advance Command Post in England, June 6 (A. P.).—This post from which Gen. Dwight D. Eisenhower is directing the Allied invasion of Europe is set up in a thick wood, located strategically near the bases from which the mighty assault fleets launched their attack against fortress Europe last night.

Its location, of course, is a carefully guarded secret. However, in selecting the site, Supreme Headquarters was guided largely by the successful practices developed in the five previous Allied amphibious operations in the European theater.

There are no permanent structures on the post and it may be assumed that, if the invasion moves well and swiftly, it will be whisked across the channel and set up in its entirety in France.

The entire area is carefully and skillfully camouflaged and reporters were told it is not visible from the air from a distance of more than a few hundred feet.

Gen. Eisenhower's personal and staff headquarters is set up in tents and specially outfitted trailers. The furnishings are sparse and simple. A leather arm chair for the general is the camp's sole hint of luxury.

DAY

Only four reporters—representing respectively British and American radio and press—are assigned to this post for the initial invasion period. Upon Gen. Eisenhower's instructions, they were briefed thoroughly upon the nature and size of the planned operation many hours before "H hour." In the post's highly secret war room, they were shown maps indicating both Allied and Axis troop concentrations, and officers explained the strategy by which the Allies hope to shatter the German military machine.

Air-Borne Troops Told They Have a Tough Job

JUN 7

Leigh-Mallory Says He Has Confidence in Them

AT AN AMERICAN AIR BASE, England, June 6 (AP).—Air Marshal Trafford Leigh-Mallory, invasion Air Force commander, told combat crews at this troop-carrier and fighter base on the eve of D-Day that "being air-borne forces you have a tough assignment."

"You expect that," he said before telling them that the undertaking was "one of the greatest operations of its kind that ever has taken place in history."

"Others have wanted to do it—Hitler for instance—but they have never been able to pull it off."

Then looking intently into the faces of hundreds of C-47 and glider pilots gathered about him in full battle dress, he said:

"I've watched you in training and I've been tremendously impressed by your enthusiasm and efficiency. I have the utmost confidence you will do your job damned well. My best wishes go with you."

DAY

He made his remarks after stopping at this base in his tiny Proctor plane which he flew himself. The troop-carrier group was commanded by Colonel Frederick Hudgens, of Homer, La.

U. S. Warships Shell Beaches

L. HAWKINS JUN 7 1944

Bombardment Rages Before Landing Craft Break Away From Convoys.

With Allied Naval Forces, June 6 (A. P.).—The United States Navy struck the beaches of western Europe today with torrents of shells in shepherding the Army's invasion troops onto the hostile coast, seared and pitted by thousands of aerial bombs.

Warship guns fired an ear-trying prelude before the swarms of homely hybrid landing craft broke away from the shelter of the convoys to begin the first critical showdown on the beaches. This bombardment was a combined chorus from the cannon of several navies, but British warships spoke the loudest, because there were more of them.

"Elsies" Land Impedimenta.

The immensely hazardous and complicated job of taking the soldiers across the last yards of the moat to Adolf Hittler's "Fortress Europe" found American soldiers and American landing craft by the hundreds carrying the foot-soldiers ashore. The untold hundreds of strange and wonderful craft would have caused the eyes of John Paul Jones to pop open.

In an amazingly ordered confusion came the whole flat-bottomed "Elsie" family laden with fighting men, guns, tanks, shells, field rations, hypodermics, radio sets, bandages, trucks and the other bewildering baggage of combat.

Snub-nosed Fleet.

Thirty-six foot LCVP's (Landing Craft, Vehicle Personnel) made of plywood, the baby of the family and perhaps its most important member; LCM's (Landing Craft, Mechanized), steel fifty-footers most valuable for the first supply phase; LCI's (Landing Craft, Infantry) around 200 feet in length and almost proper looking ships; LCT's (Landing Craft, Tanks), ungainly 200-footers, and LST's (Landing Ships, Tanks), queens of the family able to disgorge anything from jeeps to monster road-building machines—all these plus amphibious ducks and other weird craft were there.

This bizarre, snub-nosed fleet did not confine itself to a transport job. It had its own firepower to supplement that of the orthodox warships. In many American warships and in the vast "Elsie" fleet were seasoned sailors who had done this sort of job before—in the Mediterranean or the Pacific.

DAY

For many more who had come from desks and work benches, barns and bars, stages and stores to lend a hand it was the first stark climax to grindingly weary months of rehearsals—rehearsals in Florida waters or Chesapeake Bay, or later in the treacherously swift currents off the British coasts—rehearsals in which in a few short months non-nautical men had to learn the mastery of the cranky keel-less landing craft which are headaches even to experienced seamen.

Navy Men 'Land, Too.

Nor was the Navy's job confined to bombardment, to protecting the vast convoys from air, surface and undersea attack and to the landing of troops. Still other citizen-sailors tumbled out of the landing craft along with the first wave of troops in naval shore battalions integrated into the Army's amphibious brigades.

Under fire or not, these beached sailors in Army garb and gear had to do preliminary demolition of underwater obstacles, clear the channels for the landing craft, tend wounded and prisoners, direct the landings of incoming craft, bury the dead, repair or blow up disabled craft clogging the beach approaches, establish communications between the beachhead and the ships, and establish emergency dressing stations dug into the sand.

Eisenhower Stands on Roof to See Take-off

JUN 7 1944

By E. V. ROBERTS.
Representing the Combined American Press.

Allied Advanced Command Post, England, June 6 (A. P.).—Gen. Dwight D. Eisenhower stood on a rooftop on invasion eve and watched a mighty airborne armada form in the sky and wing its way toward France and the beginning of the final phase of the war of liberation. The supreme commander radiated a calm confidence contagious to those about him.

He spent the greater part of the day among the troops, seaborne and airborne, walking from group to group, chatting and laughing with the men. At 2:30 P. M., on Monday, Gen. Eisenhower met with a small group of British and American press and radio representatives here.

He told us that the invasion of Europe would be launched on Tuesday and the machinery already was in motion. We were informed that the operation would be the largest of its type ever launched and that the Allies had assembled their mightiest land, sea and air force for the purpose.

DAY

Conference in Tent.

Gen. Eisenhower talked to us for an hour and a half. The conference took place in his command tent, a plain, bare-walled structure about twenty feet square with canvas roof and walls of stained pine boards.

At the start he greeted each of us with a handshake and a friendly, lopsided grin. He stressed the importance of the job, which his staff officers, British and American, had done in preparing and launching the blow and spoke earnestly of his desire to emphasize this.

The weather, we learned, had been the biggest Allied headache in the selection of D day. At one time Gen. Eisenhower interrupted his discourse to look out the door and comment with enthusiasm upon a patch of sunshine.

General Smokes Constantly.

The General sat comfortably slouched behind his big battered desk. On the desktop was a green telephone, a desk lamp and inkwell and a packet of cigarettes. During the conference, he leaned forward occasionally to tap a finger with emphasis.

He smoked constantly, sometimes lighting one cigarette from another. Beyond that he made no movement. He did not appear to notice the express train roar of constant Allied air patrols overhead.

After the conference he stood outside, hatless and with hands in pockets, and chatted with us informally. We remarked upon his calmness and I asked him, "Don't these things make you nervous." He chuckled and said that he was the type that boiled up inside, but that when things got too bad, he usually was able to sleep it off.

Visit to Airborne Units.

He told us then that he planned to visit the airborne units during the evening and that before turning in he would probably read a little philosophy or a wild west story. We correspondents were permitted to tag along on the Supreme Commander's visit to the airborne units, but only with the understanding that we would remain definitely in the background. There is a warm personal relationship between Gen. Eisenhower and his men and he made it clear to us that he wished it to remain personal.

As we swept along a road overlooking a coastal town en route to the airborne bases we could see a great flotilla of landing craft out at sea. At the airborne assembly areas, Gen. Eisenhower walked swiftly and alone through the groups of men where they were drawn up at attention.

He asked that they be placed at ease. He stopped frequently, picking men at random to talk with. Often he was completely surrounded by the men and they trooped after him laughing and joking like schoolboys. I estimate that during the evening hours he talked with several hundred men individually.

JUN 7 1944

War Paint Tastes Good.

He asked them where they were from—he seemed determined to find a paratrooper from his home State of Kansas—and what they did in civilian life and what their Army job was. Then he added personal touches. He asked a youngster where he got his haircut and an ex-Dakota farmer how much wheat he grew per acre. He asked about the weird war paint of the paratroopers and was told it was a mixture of cocoa and cottonseed oil. It tastes good, one trooper told him.

The Supreme Commander's party reached the last base just at take-off time. At seven-second intervals the big C-47s roared off the runway and lurched into the sky in a seeming endless stream. Gen. Eisenhower was escorted to the roof of headquarters for a better view as they circled above, coming into formation for the great task ahead. He turned his face toward France and watched them vanish in the darkening sky.

D DAY TROOPS' MORALE HIGH

JUN 7 1944

U. S. Doughboys Confident on Way to Attack.

By DON WHITEHEAD.

Aboard an Invasion Ship (Deloyed) (A. P.).—The morale of American troops is running high as the vast invasion fleet prepares to move through the channel to storm Hitler's fortress Europe.

There's no doubt about it. Doughboys are ready and their spirits are up. They can see the beginning of the end of war.

It's not a false optimism. They know what lies ahead of them, that many will die on the beaches of Normandy. They know the Germans are going to throw everything in the book at them to smash the invasion, but still they are grimly confident.

They feel this is the road back home, home which most of them have not seen for many months.

Most of them never have been in battle before, but their ranks are toughened by a hard core of veterans who learned to fight across the battlegrounds of the Mediterranean.

DAY

The quality, the variety and the amount of equipment are almost beyond belief. Never has the United States sent an army into battle so well equipped. Capt. Victor Briggs of 433 Central Park West, New York city, summed it up when he said "we're ten times better right now than when we were in Sicily. We've really got the stuff. It takes more to knock out one of our companies now than it would have to knock out a battalion in Sicily."

For weeks the Allies have been assembling the invasion fleet in every port in England.

"I wouldn't want to be on the receiving end of the stuff we're going to throw on the beaches," said Major Paul Gale of Lynn, Mass. "It will be terrific."

We boarded our ship at midday today after all the troops were loaded. They lounged on bunks in holds, reading, sleeping or arguing. Some played cards; other rolled dice.

Study Miniature Beach.

In the bottom hold the Army had set up a miniature sponge-rubber model of the beach and countryside which our troops are to attack. Made from hundreds of aerial photographs, the model shows in detail each hedgerow, tree, house, barn, church and lane.

Sprawled around it were soldiers studying its features. They were leaders of assault groups which will land in the initial waves.

There were Capt. Briggs, Lieut. Clarence M. Bloch of Beckley, W. Va., leader of a mortar platoon; Lieut. Ralph W. Vernon of Hyattsville, Md., leader of a mortar section; Lieut. Donald E. Jennings of North Olmsted, Ohio, an assistant section leader.

With them were Lieut. Bennett Atkinson of Chester, S. C.; Lieut. Marion Skinner of Paducah, Ky., and Lieut. Anthony Lechtenberg of Ponca City, Okla.

ONSLAUGHT LED BY PT BOATS

Americans Who Fought Japs Take On Nazis.

JUN 7 1944

Aboard United States Navy Patrol Boat in the English Channel, June 6 (A. P.).—A fleet of PT boats, seagoing secret weapons of the western invasion, spearheaded Gen. Dwight D. Eisenhower's assault on the Continent today with an audacious dash right up to the French coast. The spectacular mission to which the PT's were assigned was to screen Allied minesweepers.

The thin-skinned mahogany hulls were brought across the Atlantic in great secrecy months ago to be thrown into the invasion as a counter-weapon against the Germans' elusive and deadly E-boats. The invasion-pacing run by these fastest fighting craft in the world was believed to have given the Germans the first bad news they had from the new invasion front.

DAY

Guard for Minesweepers.

Under a warm June moon the commander of the PT's slipped out of his British base and rendezvoused with the slow minesweepers assigned to the job of clearing the way for invasion convoys to the beaches. To guard the sweepers, the PT's made dangerous runs under the muzzles of the German guns to within swimming distance of the French shore.

"I believe we are able to stop the E-boats," said the compactly built, serious-faced commander as H hour approached. "From our experiences with the Japanese, we know it's a fight to the finish on this side of the world, too. We are going to chase the E-boat to its death."

Sports Writer Has Boat.

Though much smaller than the E-boat and outgunned, the PT can outrun them—or anything else—he added.

Part of the invasion?" answered Lieut. Henry Aldridge of Mobile, Ala. "Hell, we start them!"

Cal. Whorton, sports writer for the Los Angeles Times before he became a PT skipper, said that his only previous seagoing experience was riding a press boat to see a hydroplane race.

D-Day Task Force Gets Warm Invasion Sendoff

MORNING

Aboard the U. S. Assault Transport Thomas Jefferson at a British Invasion Port, June 6 (AP)—Rear Admiral Alan G. Kirk, commander of the western naval task force for the invasion of western Europe, told the men of his force in a spirited pre-invasion message that "it will take more than a last convulsive effort of the beaten 'master race' to match the fighting spirit of the American navy."

JUN 7 1944

NIGHT

Kirk's message was roundly applauded aboard this battle-scarred transport which had helped smash the enemy at Morocco, Sicily and Salerno. Youthful veterans who had served under the Philadelphia-born Kirk in the Sicilian campaign rated the message as one of the best sent thus far by Allied leaders.

DE GAULLE URGES FRENCH TO FIGHT

JUN 7 1944

London, June 6 (A. P.).—Gen. Charles De Gaulle broadcast to the French people today that it was 'now necessary to obey orders of the true government of France appointed by the legitimate representatives of the French people."

Announcing the battle for France had started, the French leader said that "more than anything, it now is necessary that all those who can, contribute to the Allied cause with arms, with sabotage, with information or with refusal of work for Germans. It is necessary, I repeat, that all do all in their power to escape capture and to prevent being arrested."

DAY

Gen. De Gaulle said "it now is a question of destroying the enemy who like a beast is defending up to the last his life and existence. This enemy will try all in his power to delay the final hour of his fall. From Stalingrad to Tarnopol, from Tunis to Rome, he knows the taste of defeat and he knows no hopes are left to him."

Gen. de Gaulle's arrival in London had been kept secret for military reasons. He made the trip from Algiers to discuss the status of his French Committee of National Liberation, which several days ago designated itself as the Provisional Government of France.

VAST HIDDEN ARMY AWAITING SIGNAL

JUN 7 1944

LONDON, June 6.—(AP) A vast hidden army, menacing Hitler's legions in the occupied countries with potential phantom-like stabs from all directions, received its invasion instructions today—to wait, but be ready to do its part at the appointed signal.

The Germans know these people thirst for revenge. On all sides, the German-controlled radios in France bombarded the underground with wheedling and threats and anti-Allied propaganda, hoping to confuse them or deter them from their grim, solemn purpose.

But the time is not quite ripe. The underground army will know when it is. The Allied supreme commander, Gen. Dwight D. Eisenhower, promised them today that he would give the signal. Until then, he told them to "be patient, prepare."

NIGHT

Gen. Charles De Gaulle, leader of the French National committee addressed himself to this army, telling them that "more than anything it is now necessary that all those who can, contribute to the Allied cause with arms, with sabotage, with information or with refusal to work for the Germans. It is necessary, I repeat, that all do all in their power to escape capture and to prevent being arrested."

A similar message went out to the people of the Netherlands, from their premier in London, P. S. Gerbrandy.

ALLIES DIRECT UNDERGROUND

BALL

Broadcasts and Leaflets Instruct Patriots.

JUN 7 1944

London, June 6 (A. P.).—A continent-engulfing barrage of paper missiles and spoken words—by the millions and in every language—pounded Europe today with the news of the Allied western invasion.

From heavily freighted cargo planes pamphlets spilled by the ton with word to conquered peoples that the first blow had been struck toward their deliverance. From hundreds of radio stations in England, the United States, North Africa, southern Italy and Russia instructions and words of counsel poured forth in unceasing volume.

The paper bullets began falling even before the first real ones were fired on the invasion. The all-important task of hauling them was the job of a specially selected fortress squadron of veterans of propaganda mail flying.

The radio broadcasters cut loose after the news of the invasion was flashed around the world. In measured tones, United Nations leaders gave tidings of confidence and hope.

Chiefs of exiled governments calmly and in detail told their people what to do—in the presence of both friends and foe.

The detailed task of carrying out the greatest propaganda offensive of all time fell to Gen. Eisenhower's office of Pyschological Warfare directed by Brig.-Gen. Robert A. McClure.

Preparations Were Made.

This day of invasion climaxed long months of painstaking and exacting work by the psychological warfare organization, which has had to do much of it underground.

Through tenuous, always dangerous channels underground liaison has been kept with patriots of every over-run country. Separate instructions were drawn for different groups as circumstances dictated.

Then these instructions were incorporated into pamphlets and sent on their way in much the same manner that a newspaper mailroom functions. The pilots were all specially trained, and before each mission were briefed to hit specially selected targets.

The Germans, too, were a major target of the Allied propagandists. For the past several months the psychological warfare's "flying newsboys" have delivered German language newspapers to Hitler's West Wall troops.

A spokesman for Gen. Dwight D. Eisenhower, in a London broadcast, told the people living on Europe's invasion coast today that "a new phase of the Allied air offensive has started" and warned them to move inland to a depth of twenty-two miles.

In a special broadcast over the BBC, directed to France and other coastal countries, the spokesman said:

"A new phase of the air offensive has started. It will affect the entire coastal zone situated not less than thirty-five kilometers inland from the French coast. People will be advised by special announcements dropped from Allied planes.

"The attack will take place less than one hour later. As soon as the warning has been given, the following orders are to be followed:

"First, leave the town at once. Second, choose such a route out of town as to avoid the main road. Third, leave on foot only carrying essentials. Fourth, go to the country at least two kilometers from town. Do not assemble in groups which might appear to be troop concentrations."

The broadcast advised the people to keep as far as possible away from roads and railroad lines and to take nothing with them they cannot carry personally.

The spokesman concluded with the advice that those able to leave the thirty-five kilometer coastal belt should do so at once, adding that those who cannot leave now must do so when the Allies give warning.

Petain Tells Frenchmen Not to Help the Invaders

Bids Them Accept German Orders, Avoid Reprisals

JUN 7 1944

LONDON, June 6 (AP).—The Paris radio today broadcast an appeal by Marshal Henri Petain to Frenchmen to refrain from actions "which would call down upon you tragic reprisals."

"France has become a battlefield," said the aged Vichy chief. "The circumstances of battle may compel the German Army to take special measures in the battle area. Accept this necessity."

He called on officials, railwaymen, and workers to remain at their posts—where they would serve the German military machine—"in order to keep the life of the nation and in order to carry out your tasks."

DAY

"Do not listen to outside voices calling on you not to listen to our decrees," he said.

Eisenhower Warns Underground Against Premature Uprisings

By the Associated Press.

SUPREME HEADQUARTERS, ALLIED EXPEDITIONARY FORCE, June 6.—Gen. Dwight D. Eisenhower, the supreme Allied commander, went on the air this invasion day, telling the peoples of Europe the grand assault on the continent had begun and "all patriots, young and old, will have a part to play in the liberation."

He pleaded against premature uprisings, saying, "Be patient, prepare. Wait until I give you the signal."

He was followed by King Haakon of Norway, who broadcast special orders to both organized and unorganized resistance groups in Norway but warned his people not to rise up against the Germans prematurely.

De Gaulle in London.

It was announced that Gen. Charles de Gaulle, who had just arrived in London, would broadcast a message to the people of France later in the day.

Gen. de Gaulle already has conferred with Prime Minister Churchill.

Earlier in the day the BBC had broadcast communique No. 1 from invasion headquarters, first in English and then in French, and immediately thereafter sounded an "alert" to the peoples of Norway, the Netherlands, Belgium and Denmark.

French people were told additionally to stand by in 14 minutes for a special announcement.

Alerts Repeated Continuously.

Announcements also were carried by Absie (American broadcasting station in England), and it was announced that all wave lengths of the BBC, Absie and the World broadcasting station in the United States and the United Nations radio in Algiers were surrounding Europe with the same announcements.

Alerts were repeated continuously for a 10-minute period in French, Dutch, Danish, Norwegian and Flemish.

EXILED MEN HIT AT NAZI CONQUEROR

London (A. P.).—Armies in exile—Poles, Norwegians, Dutch Belgians, Czechs — waited the hour to strike at the Nazi conqueror of their homelands. Highly skilled mountain fighters from Norway and Commandos and parachutists from Belgium and the Netherlands were ready.

The Dutch, Belgian, Norwegian and Czecho-Slovak units are small. But what they lack in size they expect to make up in special tasks alongside their big Allies. Polish forces were reorganized after the German victory, and now more than 100,000 troops are in Britain and Italy—about a third of them in Britain.

Strong Polish tank artillery, parachute and infantry units were built up on this island, and Polish flyers with the Royal Air Force have been hitting the Hun since before the Battle of Britain. The Polish Air Force in the R. A. F.—more than 12,000 men—has shot down 610 German planes and dropped 14,592,151 pounds of bombs since 1940.

Vessels of the Belgium, the Netherlands and Norway merchant marine have been massed. The 1,204 ships of the Norwegian merchant marine, once fourth largest in the world, proved indispensable while Britain and America rushed shipbuilding and battled U-boats. The Dutch brought 2,800,000 tons of shipping and the Belgians 350,000.

The Princess Irene Brigade is the principal Dutch formation. Dutchmen fly with the R. A. F. and some are fighting in the far Pacific. There are Belgian squadrons in the R. A. F. as well as small ground forces.

Inland Czecho-Slovakia had a tough time getting men out of the country, but some left after Munich. Others now fight with the Red Army. One unit of Czech forces operates with the British here and Czechs fly with the R. A. F. All nationals from other countries join the Czech forces voluntarily, because they have received no call-up.

LONDON HAPPY INVASION IS ON

Reports Taken Skeptically at First in England.

London, June 6 (A. P.).—A buxom barmaid's exclamation—"Thank goodness, now we're beginning to get it over with"—typified the reaction of Londoners today to the news that the invasion of Europe has begun.

Although the BBC report of the German announcement that the long-awaited activity had begun was taken skeptically by those who heard it, once the news was confirmed by Allied headquarters, Londoners took it quietly.

By 11 A. M. queues formed in front of news stands for the first editions of evening newspapers which were sold out immediately.

The news brought back to London some of the comradeship and friendliness which was expressed on all sides when the British capital was undergoing the blitz.

One anxious wife, with a husband in the fire service on the southeast coast and a son on the invasion craft, said:

"I almost wish they'd bomb us too in London. It would make me feel better."

The elderly verger of the famous church, St. Dunstan's in the West, which was struck recently by incendiaries, expressed the thought held by many in the midst of the quiet rejoicing.

"I'm glad it started," he said, as he dusted around scaffolding propping up the roof, "though you can't help thinking of them who won't come back."

He saw in the German announcement that the invasion struck at the mouth of the Seine river a good omen for the Allies.

"That's where Henry the Fifth landed for Agincourt, you know."

At Agincourt, in northern France, Henry the Fifth defeated the French on October 25, 1415.

Nazi Leaders In West: Rundstedt And Rommel

Supreme Headquarters, Allied Expeditionary Force, June 6 (AP)—Field Marshal Karl Rudolf Gerd von Rundstedt is in over-all command of German ground forces in western Europe, with Field Marshal Erwin Rommel in charge of the north and Field Marshal Johannes Blaskowitz leading another army group in southern France and the Bay of Biscay area. Blaskowitz was raised from the rank of colonel general on May 11, it was reported at headquarters.

Admiral Krancke is commanding the German naval forces which offered only feeble resistance today, while Field Marshal Hugo Sperlle commands the German air force in the west, according to the latest information here.

Before D-day best estimates placed German strength in the Low Countries and France at between 54 and 60 divisions, which with supply troops, would bring to approximately 1,000,000 the force behind the Nazi west wall facing the Allied assault.

SHAEF's No. 2 Communique

Supreme Headquarters, Allied Expeditionary Force, Wednesday, June 7 (AP)—Allied forces succeeded in their initial landings and fighting continues, said the SHAEF early today.

In its second communique, issued shortly after midnight, SHAEF said:

"Shortly before midnight on June 5, 1944, Allied night bombers opened the assault.

"They attacked in very great strength and continued until dawn.

"Between 6.30 and 7.30 this morning two naval task forces commanded by Rear Admiral I. R. Philip Vian, flying his flag in H. M. S. Scylla (Capt. T. T. M. Brownrig, C. B. E., R. N.), and Rear Admiral Alan Goodrich Kirk, USN, in the USS Augusta (Capt. E. H. Jones, USN) launched their assault forces at enemy beaches.

"Naval forces which had previously assembled under the overall command of Admiral Sir Bertram Ramsay made their departure in fresh weather and were joined during the night by bombarding forces which had previously left nothern waters. The channels had to be swept through large enemy mine fields.

"This operation was completed before dawn and, while the minesweeping flotillas continued to sweep toward the enemy coast the entire naval forces followed down and swept the channels behind them toward their objectives.

Torpedo Boats Driven Off

"Shortly before the assault three enemy torpedo boats with armored trawlers in company attempted to interfere with the operations and were promptly driven off.

"One enemy trawler was sunk and another severely damaged.

"The assault forces moved toward the beaches under cover of a heavy bombardment from destroyers and other support craft, while heavier ships engaged the enemy batteries which had already been subjected to bombardment from the air.

"Some of these were silenced. The Allied landings were effected under cover of air and naval bombardments, and the air-borne landings, involving troop-carrying aircraft and gliders carrying large forces of troops, were also made successfully at a number of points.

"Continuous fighter cover was maintained over the beaches and for some distance inland, and over naval operations in the Channel. Our night fighters played an equally important role in protecting shipping and the troop-carrier forces and intruder operations.

"Allied reconnaissance aircraft maintained a continuous watch by day and night over shipping and the ground forces. Our aircraft met with little enemy fighter opposition or anti-aircraft gunfire.

"The naval casualties are regarded as being very light, especially when the magnitude of the operation is taken into account."

Losses Less Than Expected Churchill Tells Commons

LONDON, June 6—(AP) Prime Minister Churchill said tonight that Allied troops have penetrated in some cases several miles inland from the coast of France, and that "this operation is proceeding in a thoroughly satisfactory manner" with losses far less than anticipated.

In his second statement of this D-day, Churchill said he had been at centers where the latest information was received, and reported that "the passage of the sea has been made with far less loss than we apprehended."

Surprise is Achieved

He said it appeared that tactical surprise had been achieved over the Germans as the Allies established lodgments "on a broad front."

"The resistance of batteries has been greatly weakened by the bombing of the air force, and the superior bombardment of our ships greatly reduced their fire to dimensions which did not affect the problem," he said, adding that "airborne troops are well established and the followups all are proceeding with very much less loss than we expected."

After visiting supreme headquarters of Gen. Dwight D. Eisenhower with King George VI, the prime minister described those airborne landings as "an outstanding feat on a scale far larger than anything there has been so far in the world. These landings took place with extremely little loss and great accuracy."

"Many dangers and difficulties which appeared at this time last night extremely formidable are behind us," Churchill said.

"All this, of course, although very valuable, is a first and vitally essential step and gives no indication whatever of what may be the course of the battle in the next days and weeks, because the enemy will now probably endeavor to concentrate on this area.

"In that event, heavy fighting will soon begin and will continue. It is therefore a most serious time that we are entering upon, and we enter upon it with our great Allies all in good heart and all in good friendship."

Brotherhood in Arms

In his first report, the prime minister, in confident, measured tones, had told a wildly cheering House of Commons that "throughout the Allied armies there is a brotherhood in arms between us and our friends in the other states. There is complete confidence in the supreme commander, Gen. Eisenhower, and in his lieutenants, and also in the commander of the expeditionary force, General Montgomery."

Sometimes hushed and tense, sometimes tumultuous in its emotions, commons heard the prime minister tell how the assault was launched—by a vast armada of 4,000 ships and thousands of lighter craft, supported by 11,000 first-line planes, and heard him declare that "the whole process of opening this great new front will be pursued with the utmost determination."

In his message to the House, Churchill hailed liberation of Rome as "a memorable and glorious event which rewards the intense fights of the last five months in Italy," but added the grim report that the battle of the Anzio beachhead, established last January and held against fierce counterattacks, cost the Allies 20,000 men and the Germans, 25,000. But he said the beachhead had "borne good fruit."

"In the first place Hitler was induced to send to the south of Rome eight or nine divisions which he might well have needed elsewhere. Secondly, these divisions were repulsed and their teeth broken by the successful response of the Allied bridgehead force in the important battle which took place in the middle of February. Thereafter the Anzio beachhead was considered by the enemy to be impregnable, meanwhile a great regrouping of the main body had to take place before the attack could be renewed. These attacks were at first unsuccessful and Cassino still blocked the advance."

That bridgehead force, he said, re-inforced to 150,000 men, fell on the retreating enemy's flank when the American, French, British and Polish forces broke the German lines in their vast offensive.

Retreat is Costly

"The junction of the main army with the bridgehead forces drove the enemy off his principal lines of retreat to the north, forcing a great part of his army to retire in considerable disorder and with heavy loss, especially in material, to mountainous country," Churchill said.

The prime minister hailed the cooperative effort of Gen. Sir Harold Alexander, Allied commander in Italy; Lt. Gen. Mark W. Clark, commander of the American forces, and Lt. Gen. Sir Oliver Leese, commander of the British Eighth army.

"It would be futile to attempt to estimate our final gains at the present time," he said. "It is our duty, however, to pay the warmest tribute of gratitude and admiration to Gen. Alexander for the skill with which he has saddled this army of so many different states and nations and for the temerity and fortitude with which he sustained long periods when success was denied. In Gen. Clark of the U. S. Army he found a leader—a fighting leader of the highest order, and the qualities that all the Allied troops have shown themselves, in noble and unjealous rivalry."

Concluding his summary of the Italian campaign, Churchill said:

"We must await further developments in the Italian theater before it is possible to estimate the magnitude or quality of the gains, great and timely though they are."

CHURCHILL SAYS ALLIED TROOPS FIGHT FOR CAEN

Several Strategic Bridges in France Captured by Air-borne Units.

HE AND KING VISIT GENERAL

Reports to House of Commons After Call at Eisenhower's Supreme Headquarters.

London, June 6 (A. P.).—Prime Minister Churchill announced tonight that airborne troops had captured several strategic bridges in France and that "there is even fighting proceeding in the town of Caen.

"Airborne troops are well established and the follows-up are proceeding with very much less loss than we expected," Mr. Churchill reported in a second statement of the day to the House of Commons. Allied troops had penetrated, in some cases, several miles inland after effective landings on the coast on a broad front, he said.

The Prime Minister said that he had visited various centers where latest information was received and could state that "this operation is proceeding in a thoroughly satisfactory manner."

Many Dangers Surmounted.

"Many dangers and difficulties which appeared at this time last night extremely formidable are behind us," the war leader reported. "Passage of the sea has been made with far less loss than we apprehended.

"All this of course, although very valuable, is a first and vitally essential step and gives no indication whatever of what may be the course of battle in the next days and weeks because the enemy will now probably endeavor to concentrate on this area. In that event, heavy fighting will soon begin and will continue. It is, therefore, a most serious time that we are entering upon, and we enter upon it with our great Allies all in good heart and all in good friendship.

Mr. Churchill, addressing the House of Commons after a visit to Gen. Dwight D. Eisenhower's headquarters in company with King George VI, described the landing of airborne troops on the European Continent as an outstanding feat "on a scale far larger that anything there has been so far in the world.

"These landings took place with extremely little loss and great accuracy." Earlier, he told the cheering House that the Allied liberating assault was "proceeding according to plan—and what a plan."

In tones of confidence, he reported that the Allied forces had been transported across the Channel to the shores of France by "an immense armada" of 4,000 ships with several thousand smaller craft—"probably the greatest fleet ever assembled."

Mass air-borne landings also have been successfully effected behind the enemy's lines, he said.

"There are already hopes that actual tactical surprise has been attained," he continued, "and we hope to furnish the enemy with a succession of surprises during the course of the fighting.

Landings on Beaches Are Proceeding.

"The battle which is now beginning will grow constantly in scale and in intensity for many weeks to come and I shall not attempt to speculate upon its course.

"The landings on the beaches are proceeding at various points at the present time," Mr. Churchill said.

"The fire of shore batteries has been largely quelled."

He said that "obstacles which were constructed in the sea have not proved so difficult as was apprehended."

The Prime Minister said the American-British Allies are sustained by about 11,000 first-line aircraft, which can be drawn on as needed.

"So far," he said, "the commanders who are engaged report that everything is proceeding according to plan."

"And what a plan!" he declared.

Most Complicated Operation Ever Attempted.

Mr. Churchill said the vast operation was "undoubtedly the most complicated and difficult which has ever occurred."

To cheers by Parliament members, Mr. Churchill took "formal cognizance of the liberation of Rome," he added:

"American and other forces of the 5th Army broke through the enemy's last line and entered Rome, where Allied troops have been received with joy by the population.

"This entry and liberation of Rome means that we shall have power to defend it from hostile air attacks and deliver it from the famine with which it was threatened."

Britain's war leader paid high tribute to both Gen. Harold Alexander and Lt. Gen. Mark W. Clark in Italy and said: "Complete unity prevails throughout the Allied armies. * * * There is complete confidence in the supreme commander, Gen. Eisenhower, and his lieutenants and also in the commander of the expeditionary force, Gen. Montgomery.

Hopes for Further Captures in Italy.

In discussing the Italian campaign, where he said the Allied forces "with the Americans in the van are driving ahead northward in relentless pursuit of the enemy," Mr. Churchill said it was hoped that the 20,000 prisoners already taken would be followed by further captures in the near future.

Of the new European operations, Mr. Churchill said "this great new front will be pursued with the utmost resolution, both by the commanders and the United States and British governments whom they serve."

In responce to a question he told Commons that certainly in the early part of the battle he would endeavor to keep the House fully informed.

"It may be that I shall ask their indulgence to press myself upon them before we rise tonight," he added.

Allies Lost 20,000 at Anzio.

There was grim news as well as good in Mr. Churchill's address.

In discussing the battle of the Anzio beachhead in Italy, which was established last January and held against heavy German counterattacks, he said the Allies lost about 20,000 men, and the German 25,000.

But the Anzio landing had in the end borne good fruit by forcing Hitler to send south of Rome eight or nine divisions "which he might well have needed elsewhere," he added.

Text Of Churchill's Two Speeches In Commons

London, June 6 (AP)—The texts of Prime M inister Churchill's two statements to Commons today are as follows:

JUN 7 1944

Afternoon Statement

I promised to report to the House later on in the sitting and I have been at the center where the latest information is received and I can state to the House that this operation is proceeding in a thoroughly satisfactory manner.

Many dangers and difficulties which at this time last night appeared extremely formidable are behind us. Passage of the sea has been made with far less losses than we apprehended. Resistance of batteries has been greatly weakened by the bombing of the air force and the superior bombardment of our ships quickly reduced their fire to dimensions which did not affect problem.

The landing of troops on a broad front, both British and American and Allied troops—I will not give lists of what different nationalities they represented or states they represented—but landings along the whole front have been effective and our troops have penetrated in some cases several miles inland. Lodgments exist on a broad front.

Air-borne Landings Feature

The outstanding feature has been the landings of air-borne troops which were, of course, on a scale far larger than anything else that has been seen so far in the world. These landings took place with extremely little loss and with great accuracy. Particular anxiety was attached to them because the conditions of light prevailing in the very limited period just before the dawn—the conditions of visibility made all the difference.

It might easily have been that something might have happened at the last minute which would not enable air-borne troops to play their part. A very great degree of risk had to be taken in respect of the weather, but General Eisenhower's courage is equal to all the necessary decisions that had to be taken in all these extremely difficult and uncontrollable matters.

They Are Well Established

The air-borne troops are well established and landings and follow-ups are all proceeding with much less loss than we expected—very much less loss. Fighting is proceeding at various points. We have captured various bridges which are important and which have not been blown up by the enemy and fighting is even proceeding in the town of Caen inland.

But all these very valuable first steps, essential first steps, of course, give no indication whatever of what may be the course of battle in the next days and weeks, because the enemy will now probably endeavor to concentrate on this area and in that event heavy fighting will soon begin and will continue without any letup as fast as we can push troops in and the enemy can bring other troops up.

It is therefore a most serious time we are entering upon and we enter upon it with our great allies all in good heart and in good friendship.

The Morning Speech

In his speech this morning the Prime Minister said:

The House should, I think, take formal notice of the liberation of Rome by Allied armies under the command of General Alexander, with General Clark of the United States services and Gen. Oliver Leese in command of the Fifth and Eighth armies, respectively.

This is a memorable and glorious event which rewards the intense fights of the last five months in Italy. The original landings made on January 22 at Anzio have in the end borne good fruit.

In the first place, Hitler was induced to send to the south of Rome eight or nine divisions which he might well have needed elsewhere.

Secondly, these divisions were repulsed and their teeth were broken by the successful response of the Allied bridgehead force in an important battle which took place in the middle of February, the losses on both sides were heavy, the Allies losing about 20,000 and the Germans about 25,000 men.

Thereafter the Anzio bridgehead was considered by the enemy to be impregnable.

Main Army Regrouped

Meanwhile, a great regrouping of the main army had to take place before the attack could be renewed. These attacks were at first unsuccessful, and Cassino still blocked the advance.

General Alexander began his present operations, and after unceasing and intense fights by the whole of the army, broke into the enemy lines and entered the Liri Valley. It is noteworthy that considering the fight from the right to the left, Polish, British, French and United States forces all broke the German lines in front of them by frontal attacks, and this has an important bearing on other aspects which I shall come to later.

At what we considered to be the right moment, the bridgehead forces, which had by this time reached a total of nearly 150,000 men, fell on the retreating enemy's flank, and threatened his retreat.

Foe Retreated With Heavy Loss

The junction of the main army with the bridgehead forces drove the enemy off his principal lines of retreat to the north, forcing a great part of his army to retire in considerable disorder and with heavy loss, especially in material, to mountainous country.

Allied forces with great rapidity were grouped with special emphasis to their left.

The American and other forces of the Fifth Army broke through the enemy's last lines and entered Rome where Allied troops have been received with joy by the population. This entry and the liberation of Rome means we shall have the power to defend it from hostile air attacks, and deliver it from the famine with which it was threatened.

However, General Alexander's prime object has never been the liberation of Rome, great as are the moral, political and psychological advantages of this episode. Allied forces with the Americans in the van are driving ahead northward in relentless pursuit of the enemy. The destruction of the enemy's armies has been throughout the aim, and they are now being engaged at the same time along the whole length of the line as they attempt to escape to the north.

Final Gains Not Yet Estimated

It is hoped that the 20,000 prisoners already taken will be followed by further captures in the near future and that the conditions of the enemy's army which he has crowded into southern Italy will be decisively affected.

It would be futile to attempt to estimate our final gains at the present time. It is our duty, however, to pay the warmest tribute of gratitude and admiration to General Alexander for the skill with which he has saddled this army of so many different states and nations, and for the temerity and fortitude with which he sustained long periods when success was denied.

In General Clark of the United States Army he has found a leader, a fighting leader of the highest order with the qualities that all the Allied troops have shown themselves, in noble and unjealous rivalry.

The great strength of the air forces at our disposal as well as the preponderance of our armor undoubtedly contributed in a noteworthy and distinctive manner to the successes which have been achieved.

Landing In France Announced

We must await further developments in the Italian theater before it is possible to estimate the magnitude or the quality of the gains, great and timely though they are.

I have also to announce to the House that during the night and early hours of this morning, the first of a series of landings in force upon the European Continent has taken place.

In this case, the liberating assault fell upon the coast of France.

An immense armada of upward of 4,000 ships together with several thousand smaller craft crossed the Channel. Mass air-borne landings have been successfully effected behind the enemy's lines.

Landings on the beaches are proceeding at various points at the present time. The fire of shore batteries has been largely quelled. Obstacles which were encountered in the sea have not proved as difficult as was apprehended.

The Anglo-American Allies are sustained by about 1,100 first-line aircraft, which can be drawn upon as may be needed for the purposes of the battle.

"What A Plan"

I cannot, of course, commit myself to any particular details, as reports are coming in in rapid succession. So far the commanders who are engaged report that everything is proceeding according to plan. And what a plan!

This vast plan is undoubtedly the most complicated and difficult that has ever occurred. It involves the tides, wind, waves and visibility both from the air and sea standpoints and the combined employment of land, air and sea forces in the highest degree of intimacy.

There are already hopes that actual tactical surprise has been attained, and we hope to furnish the enemy with a succession of surprises during the course of the fighting.

The battle which has now begun will grow constantly in scale and in intensity for many weeks to come, and I shall not attempt to speculate on its course, but this I may say—that complete unity prevails.

Confidence In Eisenhower

Throughout the Allied armies

there is a brotherhood in arms between us and our friends in other states. There is complete confidence in the supreme commander, General Eisenhower, and in his lieutenants, and also in the commander of the expeditionary force, General Montgomery.

The ardor and spirit of the troops, as I saw for myself when they were embarking in the last few days, were splendid to witness. Nothing in the way of equipment, science or forethought has been neglected and the whole process of opening this great new front will be pushed by the commanders and by the United States and British Government whom they serve.

More Churchill Talks Due

LONDON, June 6 (AP).—It is probable that Prime Minister Churchill will give an almost day-to-day account in the House o Commons on the ortunes of the western front following his two appearances today.

KING GEORGE URGES WIDESPREAD PRAYER

LONDON, June 6 (AP) King George VI tonight called upon his subjects to offer up "earnest and continuous and widespread prayer throughout the present crisis of the liberation of Europe."

Prayer, he said, would fortify the "determination of our sailors, soldiers and airmen who go forth to get captives free."

"At this historic moment surely not one of us is too busy, too young or too old to play their part in the nationwide, perchance world-wide, vigil of prayer as the great crusade sets forth," the King said in a BBC broadcast.

"After nearly five years of toil and suffering we must renew that crusading impulse on which we entered the war and met its darkest hour. We and our allies are sure that our fight is against evil and for a world in which goodness and honor may be the foundation of life of men in every land.

"That we may be worthily matched with this new summons of destiny, I desire solemnly to call my people to prayer and dedication.

"We are not unmindful of our shortcomings of the past and present. We shall not ask that God may do our will but that we may be enabled to do the will of God; and we dare to believe that God has used our nation and empire as an instrument for fulfilling his high purpose."

Text of King's Broadcast

The text of the broadcast by King George VI yesterday, as recorded by the National Broadcasting Company and reported by The Associated Press, follows:

"Four years ago our nation and empire stood alone against an overwhelming enemy with our backs to the wall, tested as never before in our history, and we survived that test. The spirit of the people, resolute, dedicated, burned like a bright flame, lit surely from those unseen fires which nothing can quench.

"Once more the supreme test has to be faced. This time the challenge is not to fight to survive but to fight to win the final victory for the good cause. Once again what is demanded from us all is something more than courage; more than endurance. We need a revival of spirit, a new unconquerable resolve. After nearly five years of toil and suffering we must renew that crusading impulse on which we entered the war and met its darkest hour. We and our allies are sure that our fight is against evil and for a world in which godliness and honor may be the foundation of the life of men in every land.

"That we may be worthily matched with this new summons of destiny, I desire solemnly to call my people to prayer and dedication. We are not unmindful of our own shortcomings, past and present. We shall ask not that God may do our will, but that we may be enabled to do the will of God, and we dare to believe that God has used our nation and empire as an instrument for fulfilling His high purpose. I hope throughout the present crisis of the liberation of Europe, there may be offered up earnest, continuous and widespread prayer. We who remain in this land can most effectively enter into the suffering of subjugated Europe by prayer; thereby we can fortify the determination of our sailors, soldiers and airmen who go forth to set the captives free.

The Queen joins with me in sending you this message. She will understand the anxieties and cares of our women folk at this time, and she knows that many of them will find, as she does herself, fresh strength and comfort in such waiting upon God. She feels that many women will be glad in this way to keep vigil with their men as they man the ships, storm the beaches and fill the skies.

"At this historic moment surely not one of us is too busy, too young or too old to play a part in a nation-wide, a world-wide vigil of prayer, as the great crusade sets forth.

"If from every place of worship, from home and factory, from men and women of all ages, and many races and occupations, our intercessions rise, then, please God, both now and in the future, not remote, the predictions of an ancient psalm may be fulfilled. The Lord will give strength unto His people. The Lord will give His people the blessing of peace."

Nazi Guns Fire Across Strait

DOVER, England, June 6 (AP).—Big guns on the French coast opened fire across the Strait of Dover soon after midday today. A salvo of four shells was seen to explode.

Stockholm Calls Paris Goal.

Stockholm, June 6 (A. P.).—The Berlin correspondent of the Aftonbladet asserted in a dispatch today that the Allied invasion attack "seems directed against the most heavily defended section of the French coast and aimed directly at Paris."

The dispatch declared that warships of all kinds, including battleships, threw tons of shells at the coast, covering the landings.

Berlin said that newspapers were jammed with calls as word of the invasion spread through the Reich.

Other Stockholm dispatches from Berlin said the Allies landed at twelve points between the mouths of the Orne and Vire rivers on the Normandy coast, with the central assault directed at Caen.

ROME IS JUBILANT AT INVASION NEWS

ROME, June 6—(AP) The Eternal City, still in a state of exaltation and confusion over its liberation, was thrown into even greater excitement this morning as word of the German announcement of a channel invasion swept like wildfire through the city.

The streets were filled with crowds of persons chattering with each other and asking Fifth army soldiers for details.

Yesterday's hysterical welcome which faded somewhat last night as the fighting men succumbed to sheer fatigue still was evident with the latest great news. Thousands of waving, laughing Romans continued to cheer lustily as the Yanks passed by.

As swiftly as possible, Rome is being restored to normal by Allied military government authorities, under Maj. Gen. Harry H. Johnson of Houston, Tex., military governor of Rome. Electric power was restored for most of the city during the night, and although the people were without water in their homes, they carried it in pails from hydrants gushing in the streets. Public transports were expected to be restored partially by tomorrow, when trolleys resume operation. The Germans took all buses.

Two hundred tons of flour and other food for civilian relief moved into the city, whose refugee-swollen population of 2,500,000 was for the most part on a rigid diet.

There was however little evidence that there had been actual starvation in the city.

NAZIS REPORT ALLIES HAVE TAKEN HONFLEUR

BARCELONA, Spain, June 6—(AP) German reports received here today said Allied forces were in full possession of Honfleur at the mouth of the Seine.

Honfleur is just across the river mouth from Le Havre and the harbor was enlarged shortly before the war.

From Honfleur the Allied forces were said to be fanning out to the east and south toward Pont Audemer, 14 miles to the east, Beuzeville, seven miles inland and Pont L'Eveque.

The latter town was reported heavily bombed by Allied planes and already under Allied artillery fire. It is 7½ miles inland from the fashionable beach forest of Deauville.

REPORT GERMANS SHIFTING TROOPS

Madrid, June 6 (A. P.).—Border reports today said the Germans were moving mobile units from central France northward to meet any penetration of the Atlantic Wall, and had alerted the whole German-held Mediterranean area for any blow from the south.

Just before news of the invasion reached Madrid, frontier reports said the Nazis were concentrating strongly in the Rome valley area, in preparation against any Allied spring from Italy or North Africa into southern France.

Organized French underground movements were said to have gone into action promptly with complete discipline, with their first act to liquidate or isolate any members known to be in communication with the Germans or Vichy collaborationists.

The reaction in Spain was intense interest, combined with relief that the blow had not fallen close to Spain at the Pyrenees border, as often rumored. The Spanish frontier garrison along the Pyrenees was placed on the alert.

Germans in Spain were told by Nazi authorities to withhold all mail and rail communication with Germany and France until further notice.

Eisenhower Greeted From Central Pacific

United States Army Headquarters, Central Pacific, Wednesday, June 7 (AP)—Lieut. Gen. Robert C. Richardson, commanding United States army forces in the Central Pacific, sent this message to Gen. Dwight D. Eisenhower:

"Every soldier in the Central Pacific area is watching with pride and admiration the magnificent achievement of forces under your command. We send you our prayers and best wishes for every continuing success."

Hawaiians Hear News in Homes

Honolulu, June 6 (A. P.).—The invasion caught Hawaiians curfew-bound in their homes. Although the blackout was lifted a month ago, 10 P. M. is still the curfew time. Newspapers put out extra editions at dawn, when the curfew was lifted.

Norse Warned On Premature Uprising

New York, June 6 (AP)—King Haakon of Norway in an invasion broadcast today to his homeland warned his people against premature uprisings, said a broadcast from supreme headquarters, Allied Expeditionary Force, heard by NBC.

The King broadcast special orders to both organized and unorganized resistance groups in Norway.

Report To Leaders, Underground Is Told

New York, June 6 (AP)—The London radio, in a Dutch-language broadcast recorded by NBC, warned European underground workers today to report to their leaders with all speed and to "be prepared for anything."

"Keep away from military installations," the broadcast said. "Underground members report to your trusted leaders. Act with speed. Be prepared for anything. There is bombardment in the port of Le Havre."

New York, June 6 (AP)—The German radio said tonight that "in the area south of Cherbourg a British-American air-borne division was engaged in heavy fighting with German anti-invasion forces.

The second day of the battle of the Somme River raged two days after the last British soldier had escaped from Dunkirk and after Prime Minister Churchill had declared that Britons would fight on "until God's good time, the New World, with all its power and might, sets forth to the liberation and rescue of the Old."

French troops tried to absorb German tank thrusts toward Paris with feather-pillow system, but the Germans gained up to thirteen miles and reached the Bresle and Aisne rivers.

Japs See Nazis As Jubilant Over Invasion

JUN 7 1944

By the Associated Press.

The Tokyo radio in its first reaction to the western invasion today quoted Nobuhiko Ushiba, former secretary of the Japanese embassy at Berlin, as saying he "could well imagine the jubilation in the German high command upon receipt of the news."

Ushiba cautiously added that whether this invasion will develop into a full-scale European second front remains to be seen.

DAY

Boasting of prepared Nazi defenses and declaring the most formidable of them were between Cherbourg and Dunkerque, embracing the area of the Allied landings, Ushiba said the strongly fortified defense lines would give the Germans absolute advantage in "inner line" operations.

He estimated that at least 60 crack German divisions are concentrated in these defense zones and said the Luftwaffe could be reinforced at a moment's notice.

PRESIDENT ASKS NATION TO JOIN HIM IN PRAYER

JUN 7 1944

Roosevelt Pens Supplication During the Night While Invasion Proceeds.

GOES ON THE AIR TONIGHT

Calls In High Command for Conference During Morning and Hears of Progress.

Washington, June 6 (A. P.).—President Roosevelt called upon a hopeful nation today to join him in a prayer for Divine aid in speeding the invasion to victory and "a peace that will let all men live in freedom, reaping the just rewards of their honest toil."

The President wrote the prayer last night as he sat up late at the blacked out White House to hear up-to-the-minute reports on progress of the great battle of liberation.

He will read it over a nation-wide broadcast at 10 o'clock, Eastern war time, tonight, but its text was issued at midday to permit Americans to familiarize themselves with with its wording so that they might join him in the recital.

Mr. Roosevelt dispatched the prayer to the House by motorcyvle messenger, and it was read on the floor shortly after Dr. James Shera Montgomery, House chaplain, departed from custom to ask members to join him in the opening invocation.

Again the members stood, this time in silent prayer. At its conclusion Minority Leader Martin reminded his colleagues that "many heart-breaking days lie ahead."

The Senate, meeting an hour later, at noon, opened its D day session with a moment of silent prayer and the recital of the Twenty-third Psalm by the Rev. Frederick Brown Harris, the chaplain.

Then, to the hushed and solemn chamber, Majority Leader Barkley said:

"It seems that all we need, or ought to, or can do is pray fervently and devoutedly for the success of our troops and those of our Allies in whatever direction they may be moving."

Calls in High Command.

During the morning Mr. Roosevelt summoned the Army and Navy High Command to the White House for his first personal conference with the commanders since troops began hitting the beaches during the night.

Gen. George C. Marshall, Army Chief of Staff; Gen. H. H. Arnold, head of the Army Air Forces, and Admiral Ernest J. King, Chief of Naval Operations, arrived at 11:30 A. M. Gen. Marshall appeared worn, as if after a sleepless night.

Speaker Rayburn of the House earlier called at the White House and told reporters that Mr. Roosevelt had expressed confidence that the invasion was going well and according to plans. Mr. Rayburn said he had no personal comment to make on the arrival of D day because "this is not a civilian undertaking."

Aware, of course, of the invasion date, Mr. Roosevelt began work on his prayer several days ago, but did not complete it until last night, said presidential Secretary Stephen T. Early, correcting an earlier impression

Chief Executive did not ntil the attack was at ing the President's ac- reporters, Mr. Early Roosevelt went to his early last evening short- e delivered his radio ad- the fall of Rome.

id the President received invasion reports — com- lete and in detail—from 11:30 P. M. on into the actual hour of the assault.

He Knew All the Details.

"He knew when the first barges started across the channel and he knew when they landed," the secretary said. "He knew of other operations in just as great detail."

The reports came into the White House by telephone from the Army's nerve center, the nearby Pentagon Building. Mr. Early said he could not disclose from whom the President received his information because of security reasons, but he gave the impression Mr. Roosevelt was intimately abreast of the operations.

Mr. Early called his regular morning press conference thirty minutes earlier than usual, telling reporters that he knew they were anxious to get invasion news.

"The President has known for some time what the world now knows about the invasion," he said.

He said Mr. Roosevelt, although intent on invasion reports within his blacked out bedroom much of the night, managed to get several hours of sleep but, he continued, the President was up late last night and early this morning.

"The fact that the White House was blacked out meant nothing," Mr. Early said. "The blackout shades were drawn. We have had them all along, and we were using them."

Mr. Early said he saw no likelihood that the President would address Congress early in the invasion.

Speaker Rayburn of the House asked the Chief Executive if he wanted to appear on Capital Hill but, in Mr. Early's words, "there is no necessity or need at this time" for such an appearance.

The President's Prayer

JUN 7 1944

Washington, June 6 (A. P.).—This is the invasion prayer which President Roosevelt wrote while Allied troops were landing on the coast of France and which he will read to the nation by radio at 10 o'clock (Eastern wartime) tonight:

MY FELLOW AMERICANS:

In this poignant hour, I ask you to join me in prayer:

ALMIGHTY GOD: Our sons, pride of our nation, this day have set upon a mighty endeavor, a struggle to preserve our republic, our religion and our civilization, and to set free a suffering humanity.

Lead them straight and true; give strength to their arms, stoutness to their hearts, steadfastness to their faith.

They will need Thy blessings. Their road will be long and hard. The enemy is strong. He may hurl back our forces. Success may not come with rushing speed, but we shall return again and again; and we know that by Thy grace, and by the righteousness of our cause, our sons will triumph.

They will be sore tried, by night and by day, without rest—till the victory is won. The darkness will be rent by noise and flame. Men's souls will be shaken with the violences of war.

These are men lately drawn from the ways of peace. They fight not for the lust of conquest. They fight to end conquest. They fight to liberate. They fight to let justice arise, and tolerance and good will among all Thy people. They yearn but for the end of battle, for their return to the haven of home.

Some will never return. Embrace these, Father, and receive them, Thy heroic servants, into Thy Kingdom.

And for us at home—fathers, mothers, children, wives, sisters and brothers of brave men overseas, whose thoughts and prayers are ever with them—help us, Almighty God, to rededicate ourselves in renewed faith in Thee in this hour of great sacrifice.

Many people have urged that I call the nation into a single day of special prayer. But because the road is long and the desire is great, I ask that our people devote themselves in continuance of prayer. As we rise to each new day, and again when each day is spent, let words of prayer be on our lips, invoking Thy help to our efforts.

Give us strength, too—strength in our daily tasks, to redouble the contributions we make in the physical and material support of our armed forces.

And let our hearts be stout, to wait out the long travail, to bear sorrows that may come, to impart our courage unto our sons wheresoever they may be.

And, O Lord, give us faith. Give us faith in Thee; faith in our sons; faith in each other; faith in our united crusade. Let not the keenness of our spirit ever be dulled. Let not the impacts of temporary events, of temporal matters of but fleeting moment—let not these deter us in our unconquerable purpose.

With Thy blessing, we shall prevail over the unholy forces of our enemy. Help us to conquer the apostles of greed and racial arrogances. Lead us to the saving of our country, and with our sister nations into a world unity that will spell a sure peace—a peace invulnerable to the schemings of unworthy men. And a peace that will let all men live in freedom, reaping the just rewards of their honest toil.

Thy will be done, Almighty God.

Amen.

Invasion Time Was Set At Teheran, Says FDR

JUN 7 1944

WASHINGTON, June 6—(AP) President Roosevelt disclosed today that the approximate time of the Allied cross-channel assault on Hitler's European fortress was set last December at his Teheran conference with Prime Minister Churchill and Premier Stalin.

It was agreed then that it should come the last of May or the first week in June, he told a news conference, adding that the decision was dictated chiefly by weather records. These showed that in the late May-early June period there is usually small boat weather in the notoriously rough English channel.

The exact date, Mr. Roosevelt said was fixed only a few days ago and was first set for June 5. Because of bad weather, there was a last minute decision to wait another day.

H-HOUR FINDS CHIEFS ABED

JUN 7 1944

Stimson And Marshall At Home As Invasion Starts

Washington, June 6 (AP) — Gen. George C. Marshall's job was done before the invasion of France started—so the chief of staff went home to bed and didn't come down to his Pentagon office until his regular hour this morning.

That attitude pretty well summed up the War Department's D-day.

The nearest thing to a spot development at army headquarters was an announcement from Maj. Gen. A. D. Surles, d[illegible] public relations, that both Secretary Stimson and General Marshall were at home when the invasion broke and would not have a press conference today.

In answer to a formal request for a press conference from correspondents assigned to the War Department, Surles reported:

"In view of the fact that neither the Secretary of War nor the chief of staff has anything to add to the news coming from the Supreme Allied Force Headquarters for the present, neither will hold a press conference today."

The news that General Marshall went home at 5 o'clock yesterday afternoon and did not come down until 7.30 A. M. today was at variance with a report from officers last night that he was in his office.

STIMSON SURPRISED BY NEWS OF INVASION

JUN 7 1944

WASHINGTON, June 6—(AP) Secretary of War Stimson said today he was "about as surprised" as anyone else when he heard that the invasion had started.

Stimson told a reporter that he happened to awake at 4:20 a. m., and turned on a radio beside his bed.

"I was just about as surprised as anyone else when I heard a news correspondent telling how he had just returned from an airplane trip from France where parachutists were dropped," he said.

First Invasion Picture Sent Soon After Flash

17 Arrived in U. S. on D-Day by Wirephoto

JUN 7 1944

WASHINGTON, June 6 (AP).—First pictures of the European invasion were speeded to the wirephoto network today by D-Day messengers who shuttled hourly between the Washington Associated Press bureau and War Department headquarters in the Pentagon Building, across the Potomac.

The initial spot invasion picture—showing LCT's loaded with armored vehicles at an English port, just before heading for the French coast—was transmitted by wirephoto less than four and a half hours after the Allied landing was flashed.

By mid-afternoon seventeen other spot invasion pictures were carried by wirephoto. These showed armada loading operations, the huge fleet under way across the English Channel, the first casualty in the new landings and General Eisenhower giving the order of the day to troops.

All of this picture copy was transmitted by Army Signal Corps radio facilities from London to the Pentagon, where distribution was made to The Associated Press and other services.

One of the first pictures available, showing troops leaving a British port, was made by Peter J. Carroll, Associated Press photographer in the war-time still photographic pool. Other pictures on the first invasion day were provided by additional pool photographers and British official, Signal Corps, Navy and Coast Guard operators.

Gen. Pershing Acclaims Mighty Force And Predicts Victory Over Germans

JUN 7 1944

Washington, June 6 (AP).—Gen. John J. Pershing, who commanded American armies in France in world war I, issued the following statement following the announcement that a new expeditionary force had landed in France:

"American troops have landed in western Europe.

"As the overmastering military might of the Allies advances, it will be joined by the men of the occupied countries, whose land has been overrun by the enemy but whose spirit remains unconquered.

"Twenty-six years ago American soldiers, in co-operation with their allies, were locked in mortal combat with the German enemy. Their march of victory was never halted until the enemy laid down his arms in defeat. The American soldier of 1917-1918, fighting in a war of liberation, wrote by his deeds one of the most glorious pages of military history.

"Today, the sons of American soldiers of 1917-1918 are engaged in a like war of liberation. It is their task to bring freedom to peoples who have been enslaved. I have every confidence that they, together with their gallant brothers-in-arms, will win through to victory."

New Box Pontoons Play Big Part in Landings

Navy Fits Them Together for Docks, Bridges, Barges

JUN 7 1944

WASHINGTON, June 6 (AP).—One of the Navy's latest developments in amphibious operations is playing a big part in troop landings on the French north coast today. It is the new Seabee-manned box pontoon being used for construction of bridges leading from invasion craft over the last few hundred yards to the beaches.

Radically changed from conventional pontoons, the new type consists of hollow boxes of light, welded steel. They may be fitted together like toy construction sets and may be used for bridges, docks, causeways, even for self-propelled barges by the addition of an outboard motor.

Warns Americans Of Axis Reports

JUN 7 1944

Washington, June 6 (A. P.).—Director Elmer Davis of the Office of War Information, advised Americans today to be wary of Axis reports on the progress of invasion fighting.

"Anything the Axis radio puts out, is in their own interest," Mr. Davis told a handful of correspondents gathered in his office in early morning hours.

'All Right So Far'

JUN 7 1944

Washington, June 6 (AP)—Admiral Ernest J. King told reporters at 1 P. M. today that the invasion is "doing all right so far."

King, commander in chief of the fleet, made the remark as he, Gen. George C. Marshall, chief of staff, and Gen. H. H. Arnold, chief of the air forces, left the White House after an hour-and-a-half conference with President Roosevelt.

The three top officers appeared in good spirits as they left the Executive Mansion, but they would not discuss their conference further.

No Time For Strikes, Say 2 U. S. Officials

JUN 7 1944

Washington, June 6 (AP)—Secretary of the Navy Forrestal and Under Secretary of War Patterson asserted tonight that with "our boys fighting into France" this is no time for strikes or quarrels over profits. The two officials said in a joint statement:

"Our behavior on the home front at this critical hour will determine whether we can look those boys squarely in the eye when they come back home."

Chiefs of the two big branches of organized labor pledged their forces to uninterrupted production in support of the invasion.

Eisenhower's Birthplace May Name Street for Him

General Was Born on Day Street, in Denison, Tex.

JUN 7 1944

DENISON, Tex., June 6 (AP).—Mayor W. L. Ashburn announced today he would favor a proposal to rename Day Street, on which General Dwight D. Eisenhower was born, to Eisennower Street. "I think the idea proper for Denison, as the general's birthplace to show appreciation of the No. 1 war leader," he said.

Miss Jennie Jackson, retired school teacher, who was a neighbor of the Eisenhowers at the time of the general's birth, is chairman of a move to establish an Eisenhower shrine here. She said the campaign would be intensified.

Eisenhower's Town Thrilled

ABILENE, Kan., June 6 (AP).—This home town of General Eisenhower, Allied supreme commander, was thrilled today by news of the invasion of France.

Mrs. Ida Eisenhower, the general's mother, was being kept informed of developments. Churches were open and many went to pray.

Brother Hopes for Luck

CHARLEROI, Pa., June 6 (AP).—General Eisenhower's brother, Earl, a relay engineer at a power substation, voiced the hope today that "Ike's luck will keep pace with his ability."

"I think you need luck in any war. He has the material and the ability. I hope he keeps pace with it," the brother said.

Hull Says Allied Forces Serve Cause of Liberty

Looks Forward Confidently to a Great Victory

JUN 7 1944

HERSHEY, Pa., June 6 (AP).—Cordell Hull, Secretary of State, said today the Allied armies landing in Europe "never more truly represented the cause of liberty and of mankind." Secretary Hull, vacationing here, declared in a statement we confidently look forward to a great historic Allied victory." The text:

"Our brave Allied armies, today waging the most pivotal battle of all time, never more truly represented the cause of liberty and of mankind.

"The forces of savagery, desperately endeavoring to destroy the human race, are making their last stand.

"While we fight and pray and while we know that the fighting will be hard, we confidently look forward to a great historic Allied victory.

"We must then pledge our all that never again shall the forces of human destruction be let loose on the world."

How the Nation Reacted

JUN 7 1944

Philadelphia, June 6 (A. P.).—The Liberty Bell, which heralded this nation's independence, rang out today as the liberation of Europe began.

Striking the great bell six times on a broadcast (NBC) heard throughout the United States and Britain Mayor Bernard Samuel quoted its inscription—"Proclaim liberty throughout all the land unto all the inhabitants thereof"—and commented:

"Let it indeed proclaim liberty throughout the land and the return of liberty throughout the world."

Portland, Ore., June 6 (A. P.).—Air raid sirens and church bells sounded the start of the European invasion almost immediately after the Associated Press announcement today, and house lights started popping on all over Portland.

Thousands of persons gathered at churches for prayer.

Boston, June 6 (A. P.).—Mayor Maurice J. Tobin read an Associated Press dispatch from London over the city-wide air raid broadcasting system to inform early risers that the invasion was under way.

At intervals, broadcasts of news bulletins continued over the system interspersed with the national anthem.

Soldiers in Army camps in the New England area took the invasion announcement "in stride," public relations offices announced.

Los Angeles, June 6 (A. P.).—Thousands of aircraft and shipyard workers in this vast war production area today received with solemn intentness, and no slackening of output, confirmation of the Allied invasion.

Straining to hear above the whirl of machinery, they were given the first word over loudspeakers in most plants. None reported any shouting or other demonstration: all said employees merely worked with extra zeal thereafter.

At the Santa Monica plant of the Douglas Aircraft Company the invasion there was heralded by a bugle note, recorded previously especially for the occasion.

Sirens at Albuquerque.

Albuquerque, N. M., June 6 (A. P.).—Sirens and whistles announced the invasion of Europe.

"I carried out my promise to the people of Albuquerque to notify them, and call them to prayer the minute the invasion began," said Mayor Clyde Tingley.

Helena, Mont., June 6 (A. P.).—Troops who train Army sled and pack dogs at Camp Rimini, set in rugged mountains nine miles west of Helena, came out of their beds when the invasion news broke.

The soldiers called the Associated Press bureau here periodically to keep posted. Advised there had been no Allied confirmation of German radio flashes by 11:15 P. M. (mountain war time) a foggy-voiced trooper told the A. P.:

"We'll stay up and see."

They stayed—and saw.

Tulsa, Okla., June 6 (A. P.).—The Tulsa World today heralded the Allied landings in France with a one line streamer saying "Invasion On" in what was approximately 212 point type, the largest the paper ever has used.

The headline was prepared nearly two months ago by setting the line in 120 point Gothic type and then having a photoengraver enlarge a proof to its final size on a zinc strip.

Washington, June 6 (A. P.).—Lord Halifax, British Ambassador, upon being informed of the invasion, issued the following statement:

30.24— 15977

"No doubt we shall have very tough fighting, but we all have complete confidence in Gen. Eisenhower, his deputy commanders, and all the Allied troops."

JUN 7 1944

Albany, June 6 (A. P.).—A municipal carillon program for announcing the invasion failed to materialize today.

Floyd Walter, carilloneur, who arranged the program weeks ago, said that Mayor Frank S. Harris had advised against it following receipt of several protests.

One group contended "the bells would cause mental anguish." Supporters of the plan asserted the purpose was to call persons to prayer.

People in Sober Mood.

San Francisco, June 6 (A. P.).—Huge black headlines screamed the word "Invasion!" on Market street today, but most of those who reached eagerly for the papers were strangely silent and in sober mood.

One elderly woman turned to another. "I am thinking of the thousands of lives that will be sacrificed," she said. "I can not help but think of it."

There were some shouts of enthusiasm—but not much laughter. A French seaman saw the great "Invasion On!" headlines. He gave a yell. He couldn't speak English but he knew what the word meant.

JUN 7 1944

Wellsville, N. Y., June 6 (A. P.).—The Wellsville Daily Reporter, an evening newspaper published in the smallest New York community served by the Associated Press leased wire printer service, issued today the first morning edition in its sixty-four-year history. It was an invasion extra.

Hoover Sees End Of German Tyranny

JUN 7 1944

New York, June 6 (AP)—Former President Herbert Hoover, commenting on the Allied invasion of Europe, said in a statement today:

"The end of German tyranny is on the way. We have faith in our army. We pray for the safety of all our courageous boys."

He issued the statement from his suite at the Waldorf Astoria at 5 A. M. shortly after he had been apprised of the Allied landings on the French coast.

Invasion News Proves Bullish On Markets

JUN 7 1944

New York, June 6 (AP)—Financial markets generally viewed the big invasion news as bullish today and stocks with a favorable peace rating swung upward on the largest turnover in about seven months.

Some selling at the start evaporated quickly as motors and other industrials surged forward as much as $1 a share.

The New York Stock Exchange and other markets throughout the nation observed moments of silence in tribute to the fighting forces.

The Associated Press 60-stock average ended 20 cents higher, at $53.10. Transfers of 1,788,760 shares were the largest since November 8 last and compared with 858,990 Monday.

Foreign dollar bonds displayed strength while carrier loans were hesitant. Commodities stumbled in the forenoon, but came back briskly.

Mrs. Eisenhower Told Of News At West Point

JUN 7 1944

New York, June 6 (AP)—The New York Post, in a copyrighted story said today that Mrs. Dwight D. Eisenhower, wife of the supreme commander of the Allied forces, greeted news of the invasion early this morning with "Why, that's wonderful! I'm so excited."

A Post reporter telephoned Mrs. Eisenhower at the Thayer Hotel at West Point, where she is to attend the graduation today of her son, John, from the Military Academy.

"The invasion? What about the invasion?" she asked when she answered the call.

"Well, it's started," she was told.

"Please forgive me," she said. "Did you say the invasion has started? I'm still rather asleep, you know." Later she said, "But why hasn't somebody told me?"

When communique No. 1 from Allied headquarters was read to her she remarked, "If I were at home I would have heard all that."

Ads Dropped For Invasion News

JUN 7 1944

New York, June 6 (AP)—The New York Daily News, the New York Daily Mirror and the New York Herald Tribune appeared without any advertisements in tonight's editions to make room for full invasion coverage without increasing the number of pages during the national paper shortage.

Novena For Victory Started In Churches

JUN 7 1944

Chicago, June 6 (AP)—The Mother Shrin eo fthe World-Wide Perpetual Novena in Honor of the Sorrowful Mother, and 1,300 novena churches throughout the United States tonight began nightly services of united prayers for victory.

The Rev. Terrence A. Seery, O. S. M., novena director, said the services would continue nine nights.

He said "durin gthese nine days, the most crucial period, millions of nevenites all over the country will beg the intercession of the Sorrowful Mother to bring about the speedy collapse of the enemy."

Nazi News Service Pleases Publisher

JUN 7 1944

St. Joseph, Mo., June 6 (A. P.).—When the German radio announced the invasion of the coast of France ahead of London's first flash, H. D. Bradley, publisher of the St. Joseph News-Press, wired the Nazi news agency DNB:

"Interested in your bulletin service. Please quote rates."

HERE'S A HITLER JOKE

JUN 7 1944

London (A. P.).—Here is a bomb-born joke which travelers say is making the rounds of shattered Berlin: A new postage stamp, illustrated with a head of Hitler, came out about the time the big Berlin raids started. One Berliner complained to another, "These new stamps are no good. They won't stick." "No good? Why, they stick all right," the other replied. "I'll show you." He found a stamp in his pocket, wet it and stuck it on a piece of paper. "See," he said, "it sticks just the same as any other stamp." "Oh!" said the first Berliner. "You spit on that side!"

Ovation Is Given Eisenhower's Son At West Point Graduation

JUN 7 1944

West Point, N. Y., June 6 (AP)—Solemn graduation ceremonies at the United States Military Academy here today were interrupted by a tremendous burst of applause from D-day-conscious crowds as Cadet John Eisenhower, son of the invasion chief, received his diploma from Maj. Gen. Francis B. Wilby, academy superintendent.

Eisenhower, commissioned a second lieutenant in the infantry, has been assigned to Fort Benning, Georgia, for transition training.

Bradley's Son-In-Law Graduated

Also among the graduates was Cadet Henry Beukema, future son-in-law of Lieut. Gen. Omar N. Bradley, commander of United States invasion ground forces.

Lieut. Gen. Brehon B. Somervell, speaker at the services, made no direct reference to the invasion. He told cadets of the responsibilities of being graduated at "this momentous time."

Among the 6,000 spectators was Mrs. Eisenhower, who gave her son a sealed message from the general immediately after the ceremony, and Mrs. Bradley, who attended with her daughter.

24 Weddings Held

Twenty-four weddings were held in the cadet chapel this afternoon. Of the 474 graduates, 171 received Air Corps wings. Each newly commissioned officer will report for active duty in his respective branch of the service following a ten-day leave.

SOVIET ARMY GETTING SET

Reds Predict Attack From East In Invasion Wake

London, Wednesday, June 7 (AP)—An indication that the Germans are weakening in their eight-day battle near Iasi was given by Moscow early today.

"The Germans in the last few days have suffered heavy losses and Tuesday brought into action comparatively smaller forces of tanks and infantry," a supplement to the communique said.

The Baltic fleet's air arm sank three German transports totaling 11,000 tons Monday night and shot down 20 German planes, it added.

JUN 7 1944

Moscow, June 7 (AP)—The 3-year-long dream of a western land front came true for the Russian people today when they heard by radio that the Allies had invaded France.

At the same time the Red army was understood to be massing for its expected blow from the east following up the assault from the west.

News of the invasion was welcomed with a heart-warming reaction—the full import of the action being realized gradually here as successive broadcasts brought the people word of the developments from London.

Expect Reaction To Grow

There was no public shouting and cheering, but Russian citizens and officials alike were discussing events with lively enthusiasm. Foreign diplomats expected the reaction to the news to grow as operations developed and the Russians saw concrete results. Loud speakers had been switched on in the streets and squares of the capital for the announcements.

[The German commentator Von Hammer broadcast from Berlin that with the attack from the west a big Russian offensive would open soon along the lower Dnestr "where a strong Soviet offensive army has taken action stations and where Soviet artillery and mortar fire is gaining in intensity." Other German commentators said multiple assaults could be expected.

Reports Red Mass Raid

[Tonight's broadcast Russian communique, recorded by the Soviet monitor in London, said the Red army had repulsed continuing Nazi attacks north and northwest of Iasi in Romania and that Russian bombers had carried out a mass raid Monday night on Iasi itself.

[Ninety fires were started, the bulletin stated, and the fires were accompanied by big explosions, machine-gun and cannon fire. Several trains were burned. All Soviet planes returned to their bases.

[There were no changes on other sectors of the front, the communique added.]

Make Joint Announcement

A joint announcement of the western invasion was made to the Soviet press by Maj. Gen. John R. Deane, chief of the United States military mission, and Lieut. Gen. Brocas Burrows, chief of the British mission.

These men, who four days ago announced the arrival of United States bombers at a base in Russia, told the Russian people that the Allies together with the Red army would go forward to victory. They warned that the task would not be easy but expressed confidence in the outcome of the struggle.

Air Battle Over Romania Reported

LONDON, June 6 (AP)—The Berlin radio reported tonight that big air battles developed over Romania today between Nazi fighters and bombers of the Allied Mediterranean Air Force.

Lieutenant General Alexei Perminov, who sat in on the American briefing last night, smiled and said "very well done," as the last bomber landed.

"The target was well hit," said the commander from Chicago after putting down on Russian soil again. "I believe you will find the airfield completely destroyed. It was practically a milk run."

Asked if he'd heard about the invasion, he gasped and said: "Boy! has it really come off?" Then he added laughingly "Well, I'm glad I'm here."

Major John Morris, of Oaklandon, Ind., a pilot, said he heard of the invasion while returning to the base after dropping his bombs. "No, we didn't tell the crew. They'd have done nothing but listen to the radio, I expect," he said.

Major Morris and others said flak was light over the target. No planes were hit.

Captain Bill Jett, of Las Cruces, N. M., said boats on the Danube scurried for cover when bombs began falling.

Sergeant William Umstead, of Washington, D. C., formerly of Washington University, said he learned about the invasion from the Russians when he landed.

Lieutenant Harry T. Leigner, of Nashotah, Wis., said he learned about the invasion about the time he was crossing the Russian-German front. "What did I say? Why I said: "That's wonderful. We've just put our bombs down from Russian bases and here's the second front. Fellows, things are going fine.'"

Lieutenant Robert J. Sitterly, of Gloversville, N. Y., sighed, "There's the second front and here I am in Russia. Oh my!"

RUSSIANS MASS TO STRIKE NAZIS FROM THE EAST

JUN 7 1944

Combined Assault to Crush Germany Expected at an Early Date.

TIMING SET AT TEHERAN

Moscow Reacts Gleefully to Allied Announcement of Landings on French Coast.

Moscow, June 6 (A. P.).—Russian armies were understood today to be massing and preparing to perform their part of the joint Allied task of crushing Germany with a blow from the East, combined with Gen. Eisenhower's invasion from the West and Gen. Alexander's thrust up the Italian peninsula.

The invasion of northwest France was the "second front" for which the Russians had called for three anxious years. But the "second front" already had ceased to be a political issue here before Gen. Eisenhower struck.

The controversy amounted virtually to a crisis in 1942 when Stalin called for a front in western Europe of "first rate importance" and urged the United States and Great Britain to fulfill their obligations "fully and on time." The "second front" talk died down after the Teheran agreement on "the scope and timing" of blows from the East and West.

Moscow Anxiety Over.

Russians who learned of the invasion today literally danced with glee. For them it meant the end of three years of anxious waiting for the thrust from the west.

Newspapers which had not announced the landings still were carrying glowing accounts of the fall of Rome.

Peter Smollett, head of the Russian Department of the British Ministry of Information, walked into the press department of the Foreign Commissariat at 12:30 P. M., holding up his thumb, and announced: "They're off." Then he went to notify Soviet officials.

Major-Gen. John R. Deane, chief of the United States military mission, and Lieut.-Gen. Broacas Burrows, British military mission head, prepared a joint statement for the Soviet press.

SIX TOWNS CAPTURED BY YUGOSLAV PARTISANS

JUN 7 1944

LONDON, Wednesday, June 7—(AP) In an accelerated offensive to coincide with the Allied landings in France, partisans of Marshal Tito captured six towns from the Germans, the free Yugoslav radio reported today in a broadcast.

In Western Bosnia, the broadcast said, Kljuc and Arzano were taken with more than 300 Germans slain in the fighting for Arzano. In eastern Bosnia, the partisans reported four towns were taken southeast of Belgrade.

YANKS PURSUING NAZIS IN ITALY; GAIN FIVE MILES

Remnants of German Army Fleeing in Disorder Beyond the Tiber.

FRENCH TAKE TIVOLI

Allied Invasion of France May Cut Reinforcements for Kesselring.

ALLIED HEADQUARTERS, Naples, June 6.—(AP) Remnants of the Germany army fled in disorder north and west of Rome today, as Fifth army troops swarming over the historic Tiber in many places and against weak resistance advanced another five miles beyond the river.

"The battle to destroy the enemy continues without pause," the Allied communique said, and it was made clear that as the United Nations mount the great invasion of the west, there is to be no halt to the slugging Italian campaign.

Rome Ends Another Chapter

"With the capture of Rome, the Allied armies in Italy have brought another phase of their campaign to a most successful conclusion," said the bulletin.

NIGHT

To the northeast, 15 miles from Rome, French troops have captured Tivoli on the important Avezzano road (highway 5), and as the Fifth army offensive rolled forward, fanning out west and north of the Eternal City on a broad front, additional thousands of prisoners marched to the rear. The momentum of the Fifth's attack and the disorganization of the enemy hourly were becoming more apparent.

All the way from Rome to the sea the troops of Lt. Gen. Mark W. Clark have crossed or reached the Tiber, and in the Eternal City itself they plunged in a constant stream across the 11 spans still remaining intact, to chase the Germans to the north. Infantry crossed the river in force and was reported driving due west to Vatican City, and Allied armored forces spread out over a wide area.

Invasion Hampers Nazis

Whatever hope Nazi Field Marshal Gen. Albert Kesselring might have had of establishing a strong defense line anywhere south of the northern Appenine range guarding the Po valley undoubtedly suffered a sharp blow when the Allied armies struck in northern France. The Mediterranean air force's methodical destruction of rail lines in northern Italy and southeastern France has so curtailed the mobility of Nazi reserves that the German command must decide quickly and irrevocably whether to risk any more precious manpower south of the Genoa-Florence limits line.

Enemy divisions still in the flatlands below the city were in desperate straits. Westward from Rome to the sea all the Tiber's bridges have been blown up or have been captured by the Allies, and in the coastal area alone, well over 2,000 Nazis apparently will be unable to extricate themselves.

Rear Guards Continue Fight

Only isolated rear guards offered any serious resistance. In the mountains east of Rome Nazi rearguards threw strong opposition against the British Eighth army in an attempt to cover the northward withdrawal of the German main body in that sector.

The enemy still resisted in the hills north of the Via Casilina, against Eighth army troops, but Palena station and some mountain positions in that sector have been abandoned by the Germans, the communique said.

From the air the retreating enemy was battered mercilessly. Tactical aircraft concentrated attacks yesterday on his communications leading to the battle area; medium bombers hit road bridges in west-central Italy, north of Rome; fighter-bombers lashed at rail bridges, trucks, motor transport and ammunition dumps and other aircraft concentrated on strategic targets over a wide area. Four enemy aircraft were destroyed out of the mere eight seen by Allied forces over the battle area, and 13 Allied planes were reported missing.

Nazi Resistance Weak As 5th Army Drives Steadily Beyond Rome

Enemy Divisions Still In Flatlands Below City In Desperate Straits

JUN 7 1944

FEDER

By the Associated Press.

ALLIED HEADQUARTERS, Naples, June 6.—Fifth Army forces drove steadily beyond liberated Rome today, some units plunging as much as 5 miles out from the historic Tiber River against what was officially termed "only weak resistance."

"The battle to destroy the enemy continues without pause," said a communique.

Lt. Gen. Mark W. Clark's troops have crossed or reached the Tiber all the way from Rome to the sea and enemy divisions still in the flatlands below the city are in desperate straits.

DAY

Armored Forces Fan Out.

In the coastal area alone well over 2,000 Germans apparently will be unable to scramble out of the Allied net because all Tiber bridges from Rome to the sea either have been blown up or captured.

In still-jubilant Rome, however, 11 crossings remained intact and the 5th Army poured across in a constant stream to chase the Germans fleeing northward in disorder.

Allied armored forces fanned out over a wide area. Infantry also has crossed the river in force and was reported driving due west of Vatican City. The only resistance anywhere came from isolated rearguards.

In the mountains east of Rome German rearguards threw strong opposition against the British 8th Army in an effort to cover the northward withdrawal of the main enemy troops in that sector.

(French troops have captured Tivoli, on the Avezzano highway 30 miles northeast of Rome, the British Broadcasting Co. announced today in a broadcast heard by NBC.)

The Allied air forces gave the German columns no rest. In the area imediately north of Rome yesterday more than 375 of their vehicles were destroyed or damaged by fighter-bombers. Heavy bombers meanwhile pounded Northern Italy rail lines, particularly in the Po Valley. Four enemy planes were destroyed and the Allies lost 13.

Stalin Congratulates Churchill

LONDON, June 6 (AP).—Prime Minister Winston Churchill received today this congratulatory message from Premier Stalin of Russia on the Allied liberation of Rome: "I congratulate you on the great victory of the Allied Anglo-American forces in the taking of Rome. This news has been greeted in the Soviet Union with great satisfaction."

Victor Turns Over Powers to Umberto, Keeping His Pledge

JUN 7 1944

By the Associated Press.

NAPLES, June 6.—Italy's 74-year-old King Victor Emmanuel III has made good his promise, contingent on the liberation of Rome, and stepped out of public life, turning over his "royal prerogatives" to his 39-year-old son, Crown Prince Umberto.

The King took his action yesterday in a decree countersigned by Premier Badoglio, which named Umberto "lieutenant general" of the realm.

Prince Umberto "will exercise all royal prerogatives without exception," said the decree, which was signed by the King at Ravello, just outside Naples, and delivered to the Council of Ministers.

Through his action the monarch remains a King without power and continues to head the House of Savoy. In effect, Umberto becomes the King's regent.

Italian political parties had been insistent since the Allied capture of Naples that the King step down, and last April 12 Victor Emmanuel declared his "irrevocable" decision to retire from public life "on the day on which Allied troops enter Rome."

In the first years of his reign, which began July 29, 1900, Victor Emmanuel became known as a King interested in his people and sympathetic with their problems. Under the Mussolini dictatorship he became little more than a figurehead.

Umberto, tall, lean and erect, has become more and more prominent politically since 1943. He became a general in the Italian Army at 29 and a marshal in September, 1942.

His wife is Marie-Jose of Belgium, whom he married in 1930. They have four children.

BADOGLIO FORMING NEW GOVERNMENT

JUN 7 1944

Naples, June 6 (A. P.).—Premier Marshal Pietro Badoglio dissolved his Italian government today and was charged by Crown Prince Humbert with forming a new government to include political leaders in liberated Rome.

Premier Badoglio went through the parliamentary form of submitting the old Government's resignation.

An official announcement said the action would permit establishment of a Government "composed of political figures from many regions of Italy."

Prince Umberto, 39, has received the "royal prerogatives" of 74-year-old King Victor Emmanuel III, who made good his promise to step out of public life as soon as Rome was liberated.

POPE RECEIVES 150 SOLDIERS

Pontiff Blesses Men From Allied Forces

JUN 7 1944

Vatican City, June 6 (AP)—More than 150 soldiers, mostly Americans, were received by Pope Pius today in a surprise audience.

The soldiers had gathered before St. Peter's and asked whether they could call on the Pope.

Suddenly word came out that the Pontiff would see them and the group, which included British, Canadians, French and Poles as well as Americans, was led into the Consistory Hall.

Gives His Blessing

Catholics and Protestants alike knelt as the Holy Father blessed them.

NIGHT

Wearing a white cassock and zucchetto, the Pope passed among the soldiers afterward, addressing several in their own languages.

The Pontiff asked several of the Americans what city they were from. When one said New York, the Pope recalled his visit there with pleasure. When another said Washington, the Holy Father remarked he had been there, too, on his American trip when he was a cardinal and Secretary of State to Pope Pius XI.

[The Pope visited the United States in 1936.]

Soldiers Kneel In Prayer

The Pope never received a group of German soldiers in this manner, although some German soldiers in the early part of the war were among a group of pilgrims. Since the Italian collapse last September, he received no German soldiers, persons familiar with the Vatican said.

After the audience, the soldiers went to the steps of St. Peter's and knelt there in prayer. In traditional manner, the Pontiff extended his hand to the kneeling soldiers, who kissed the ring of St. Peter which he wore. In the background was the throne of Consistory Hall.

2 Cultural Monuments Found Damaged in Rome

JUN 7 1944

Basilica of San Lorenzo and Protestant Cemetery Hit

ALLIED HEADQUARTERS, Naples, June 6 (AP).—The Mediterranean Allied Air Forces reported today that a preliminary inspection showed that the basilica of San Lorenzo and a Protestant cemetery are apparently the only cultural monuments in Rome damaged by Allied bombing.

[The reference probably is to the Protestant Cemetery in Rome southwest of the Aventine hill. In it are interred numerous English, American and other visitors to Rome, such as John Keats. The ashes of Percy Bysshe Shelley also are there.]

DAY

Captain John Hall, of Yonkers, N. Y., M. A. A. F. public relations staff, advised headquarters however, that an examination of battered railroad yards disproved German claims that Rome was not used for clearing frontline supplies.

He reported that in the Ostiense yards on the southern edge of the city he found at least forty German guns ranging from light field pieces to 150 millimeter rifles. Italians said the equipment was in sheds or bound for the Anzio beachhead when the M. A. A. F. struck the yards.

Captain Hall said he learned that an entire trainload of gasoline and oil burned at the same yards and that Italians told of two trainloads of tanks passing through a few days before the bombers struck.

All four major railyards in Rome have been idle in recent months due to bomb damage.

PONTIFF THANKFUL AS ROME IS SPARED

JUN 7 1944

Rome, June 6 (A. P.).—The big bell of St. Peter's rang out, and the enormous crowd that assembled in the square before the church last night knew that the Pope would soon make his appearance.

The doors leading to the balcony swung open and the carpet bearing the Papal arms and the motto of Pope Pius XII, "Peace Through Justice," was lowered.

Then the Pontiff strode on the balcony, clad in a white cassock and skull cap. These were the brief words he spoke to the soldiers who had conquered Rome and the citizens who had welcomed them:

DAY

"We have been troubled over the lot of the city.

"Today we rejoice because, thanks to God and to the will of both belligerent parties, Rome has been saved from the horrors of war.

"For this we must show gratitude to the Madonna for the salvation of the Roman people."

30. 24— 15979

Cheers echoed through the square and many men and women sobbed.

Algiers French Annoyed By Late De Gaulle Trip

Say He Went to London to Meet 'Fait Accompli'

ALGIERS, June 6 (AP).—Some members of the French National Committee voiced resentment today at the manner in which General Charles de Gaulle was brought to London to be faced with the accomplished fact of the Allied invasion when he had expected to confer on the civil administration of liberated territories.

These circles asserted that de Gaulle had been tricked into compliance with General Dwight D. Eisenhower's plans for a "fait accompli" administration in France, and added that negotiations on the administration of liberated areas of France now are pointless and obsolete.

The same circles resented General Eisenhower's broadcast statement to the French people in which the supreme Allied commander omitted any direct mention of the committee, and asserted that the French must be free to choose their own government.

Capture Of Jap Position Near Myitkyina Reported

Southeast Asia Command Headquarters, Kandy, Ceylon, June 6 (AP)—Allied forces under Lieut. Gen. Joseph W. Stilwell have captured an enemy position on the northern edge of Myitkyina and have destroyed the defenses in the southern and southwestern sectors of that besieged Japanese north Burma base, it was announced today.

A communique from Admiral Lord Louis Mountbatten's headquarters also said that Chinese troops advancing down the west side of the Mogaung Valley have captured Tangaoyon south of Kansi and near Mansum.

At Kamaing, 40 miles west of Myitkyina, Allied troops were declared to have repulsed a Japanese attack on a road block southeast of the town and then to have driven northward occupying the villages of Seton and Tumbonbkka.

Japs At Changsha Gates, Chinese Command Says

Chungking, June 6 (AP)—The Chinese high command announced tonight that the Japanese had reached the outer defenses of Changsha, and that fighting was also in progress 22 miles northeast of the city.

In Honan province, scene of another Japanese offensive, the Chinese said the enemy had started a drive along the east-west Lunghai railway toward Tungkwang but had fallen back under pressure.

The Japanese recaptured several other points in Honan, however, notably Sunghsien and the provincial capital, Lushan.

FLANKING PUSH GAINS ON BIAK

Americans On Ridge Within Half Mile Of Airport

San Francisco, June 6 (AP)—The National Broadcasting Company said today it had not heard Tokyo radio since 11.55 A. M. (Pacific War Time), but the Office of War Information said it had no indication the station was off the air. The OWI said the only station recorded as not broadcasting was Saigon, French Indo-China.

Advanced Headquarters, New Guinea, Wednesday, June 7 (AP)—American forces, which since May 27 have been striving to capture Mokmer airfield on Biak in the Schouten Islands, now have battled to within a mile and a half of their objective, headquarters announced today.

The advance was scored by a flanking force along cliffs dominating the airfield, a base coveted because it would put the Americans within good bombing range of the Philippines.

Repel Maffin Bay Attack

On another invasion beachhead 200 miles to the southeast at Maffin Bay, Dutch New Guinea, 107 Japanese were slain Sunday as the Yanks there repulsed a counter attack.

At still another invasion point to the southeast in the Hollandia Aitape vicinity, patrols killed 28 Japanese, found 106 more dead and took 33 more prisoners.

Enemy planes, out in greater force than the Japanese had risked in many months, were reported in today's communique to have "twice ineffectively raided our positions" in the Schoutens. One was downed by anti-aircraft.

Japs Battle Liberators

Ten other Japanese planes resisted Liberator bombings of rear positions. One interceptor was shot down, three others probably.

The Yanks nearing Mokmer along the ridge route encountered slight opposition, but the Japanese still barred the easier shore road approach where the first American thrust toward the airfield was beaten back a week ago. Yanks moving down that road reached within half a mile of Mokmer before the Japanese cut them to pieces from dominating cliffs.

Liberators Ranging Toward Philippines Sink Jap Destroyer

By the Associated Press.

ADVANCED ALLIED HEADQUARTERS, New Guinea, June 6.—The sinking of a Japanese destroyer by Liberators ranging toward the Philippines from advanced bases was reported by Allied headquarters today along with the probable sinking of another destroyer off Dutch New Guinea and a 19-to-1 margin of victory over the enemy's air force.

The reports also told of a successful flanking of Japanese airdrome defenses in the bitter battle for Biak in the Schouten Islands and coordinated attacks on Truk by Southwest and Central Pacific planes during which a supply convoy was heavily hit.

19 Jap Planes Bagged.

The bag of 19 enemy planes was added to more than 30 listed in yesterday's communique of Gen Douglas MacArthur. The destroyers were the first reported caught under the bombsights of Southwest Pacific planes since March 21.

One destroyer was sunk and two small enemy vessels were damaged Saturday night off Halmahera Islands at a point 300 miles from the Philippines, and a Japanese bomber was downed.

To the southeast, Catalinas that same night left an enemy destroyer sinking 50 miles off Manokwari, Dutch New Guinea, and attack planes sank a small freighter. In the same Geelvink Bay area, Mitchells blew up two barges loaded with Japanese soldiers.

The Japanese kept pouring more planes over the Biak invasion scene. Headquarters said today that Thunderbolts shot down four and probably a fifth out of 42 enemy fighters encountered Sunday.

Another enemy fighter was bagged over Noemfoor.

Convoy Blasted West of Truk.

Southwest Pacific Liberators from the Admiralities shot down seven of 20 interceptors as they blasted Truk Saturday for the second straight day, expending 79 tons of explosives.

At Pearl Harbor, Admiral Chester W. Nimitz said search planes in two days definitely sank one, probably sank another and heavily strafed other units of a small supply convoy west of Truk. He also announced new air raids on the Kuriles.

On Biak, where American invasion forces since May 27 have been struggling to capture three airfields, a column moving across treacherous terrain has flanked Mokmer airfield from the north.

PORTUGAL AGREES TO STOP SENDING WOLFRAM TO NAZIS

WASHINGTON, June 6.—(AP) Acting Secretary of State Stettinius announced tonight that Portugal has stopped all export and production of wolfram as a result of negotiations with the United States, Britain and Brazil.

"The action of the Portuguese government should prove a factor in shortening the war inasmuch as it will deprive the enemy in Europe of important quantities of a vital war material," Stettinius said.

Portugal has been producing 6,000 tons of the strategic ore from which Tungsten steel hardening is made, and sending about 2,000 tons to the Germans.

Spain, a less important source of Wolfram, has signed a compromise agreement cutting its exports to Germany to about 300 tons for the rest of this year.

The Portuguese action, taken yesterday before the invasion, was at considerable sacrifice since Wolfram has become an important source of income during the war.

Portugal is the first of the neutral countries to accede completely to Allied requests for absolute cessation of vital war aid to the Nazis.

The Allied nations did not need their own former share of the Portuguese wolfram, which they had been buying at heavy cost to keep it out of German hands.

Army Bombers Pound Truk, Ponape, Nauru

Washington, June 6 (AP)—American bombers, carrying out a half dozen week-end raids against Japanese positions in the Central Pacific, battered airfield runways and gun positions at Truk, Ponape Nauru and in the eastern Marshalls.

The attacks, hitting islands in the atolls, were announced today in a press release issued by Admiral Chester W. Nimitz, commander in chief of the Pacific fleet.

Text Of Press Release

The text:

"Truk atoll was bombed during the night of June 3-4 by Liberators of the Seventh Army Air Force. The airfields at Moen and Paran islands were hit. Four enemy fighters were airborne but did not attack our force. Anti-aircraft fire was meager and inaccurate.

"Ponape Island was attacked on the night of June 3 by Seventh Army Air Force Liberators and on June 4 by Seventh Army Air Force Mitchells. Installations on Langar Island and anti-aircraft batteries were hit.

"Nauru Island was bombed by Seventh Army Air Force Mitchells during daylight on June 3, and by Ventura search planes of Fleet Air Wing 2 on June 5. Gun positions were the principal targets. Anti-aircraft fire was intense.

"Enemy positions in the Marshalls were bombed and strafed on June 3-4 by search Venturas of Fleet Air Wing 2, Corsair fighters and Dauntless dive bombers of the Fourth Marine Aircraft Wing, and navy Hellcat fighters. Gun positions and runways were hit. Anti-aircraft fire was meager."

NAME RELIEF PORT

Washington, June 6 (A. P.).—The Soviet Government has agreed to permit a Japanese ship to enter a specified Russian port near Vladivostok to pick up relief supplies for American prisoners in the Orient.

In making this announcement today the State Department said stocks of supplies sent to Russia last year have been awaiting transportation, and it is hoped that they will be distributed in the near future.

Moscow also offered to forward the supplies to the Japanese overland presumably through Manchuria, and named another port near Vladivostok, where the Japanese can pick up future shipments which will be sent to the United States through Russia.

The Japanese Government has been informed of Russia's offer through the Swiss Government, the State Department said, and word now is awaited from Tokyo that arrangements have been completed.

Casualties Are 'Light' In Atlantic Sinking Of Escort Carrier

By the Associated Press.

Sinking of the escort carrier Block Island in the Atlantic by enemy action was announced late yesterday by the Navy Department. It was the second vessel of its type and the 158th Navy ship of any class to be lost in the war.

The Navy Department reported that casualties in the Block Island sinking were "light" and that the next of kin of those lost had been notified. The sinking occurred during May. The Navy did not specify in what manner—whether by submarine, air attack or mines.

Commander of the Block Island, presumably on duty protecting a convoy at the time of its loss, was Capt. Francis M. Hughes, Selma, Ala., a native of Charlottesville, Va.

The Block Island was launched June 6, 1942. Escort carriers of this type usually are converted merchant vessels, made by superimposing a flight deck on a conventional hull. A similar type of ship, the Liscome Bay, was lost during action in the Gilbert Islands in the Pacific last November.

Since the outbreak of the war the United States Navy has lost one battleship, the Arizona; six heavy cruisers, three light cruisers, 41 destroyers, 23 submarines and 77 miscellaneous craft.

AGREE ON COTTON WITH BRAZILIANS

Washington, June 6 (A. P.).—The combined Production and Resources Board has announced that a "record of understandings" has been reached with Brazil whereby that South American country may supply a considerable volume of cotton goods through the United Nations Relief and Rehabilitation Administration for the relief of European occupied countries which are now being liberated.

The board called the result of the two weeks' discussions with a Brazilian textile mission, now in Washington, an "important step toward easing the present acute world shortage of cotton textiles."

The Brazilian mission, the announcement stated, indicated that Brazilian textile mills would make every effort to increase their exports of cotton textiles ni the interest of the joint war effort of the United Nations. Furthermore, the Brazilian experts, in conjunction with officials of the board, have worked out a broad program under which it is hoped that Brazil will supply a substantial portion of the needs of those areas where the present shortage of textiles is most acute. One of the most important results of these conferences, the board disclosed, is the possibility that cotton textile exports of Brazil can be more effectively co-ordinated with those of the United States, the United Kingdom, Canada, India, and Mexico.

Warning On Sabotage Renewed By Hoover

Washington, June 6 (AP)—J. Edgar Hoover, director of the Federal Bureau of Investigation, said tonight the European invasion should be regarded as a signal for increased alertness and vigilance against sabotage.

Finn Calls Blacklisted Company No Nazi Organ

Washington, June 6 (AP)—Urho Toivala, counselor of the Finnish legation, denied today that the Finland - Hamburg - Befraktningskontor Company is " a center of Nazi propaganda in Finland."

Official sources applied that description to the concern last Saturday when it was included in a blacklist. It is headed, those sources said, by Henrick Ramsay, Finnish Foreign Minister.

"This company," Toivala said, "was founded in 1922 to handle shipbroking for vessels in the Finland-Hamburg trade. It is a tiny organization employing only five persons, and the Finnish foreign office advises us that it is not—and never has been — engaged in spreading Nazi propaganda."

New Regime in Ecuador Is Recognized by U. S.

Stettinius Calls It Friendly to United Nations

WASHINGTON, June 6 (AP).—The United States has extended full recognition to the new government of Ecuador, established by a brief revolution on May 28.

Edward R. Stettinius jr., acting Secretary of State, said in a statement that the United States has full confidence in the friendly attitude of the new Ecuadorian regime toward the cause of the United Nations and in its announced purpose to fulfill its international obligations.

Coffee Cups Bounced On U-Boat Crew Heads

Washington, June 6 (AP)—Coffee cups were among weapons used by American destroyer men to repel a boarding attempt of a German U-boat crew, Admiral Royal E. Ingersoll, commander of the Atlantic fleet, related today at a news conference.

The destroyer, which he did not identify, rammed the submarine and rode up onto her decks. Then, he said, members of the U-boat's crew poured out of the conning tower and attempted to board the destroyer. The destroyer crew "opened up with everything, including coffee cups," he said, in the fight to repel the boarders. The cups bounced off the heads of some of the German crewmen during the sharp and desperate fight.

The only casualty to the American crew, he said, came "when a husky seaman bruised his fist in knocking an enemy seaman over the side."

Army Requests War Cemetery In Every State

Preparations Are Made for Home Burials of Service Men Killed in the War

WASHINGTON, June 6 (AP).—The War Department, on the "hypothetical assumption" that 100,000 American fighting men will die overseas in this war, wants sixty-nine new national cemeteries.

This was disclosed today in a report by the department to the House Military Committee in support of a bill to establish a national cemetery in every state.

The department emphasized that the 100,000 is just a round figure settled on for purposes of calculation, that there is no telling how many may be killed before peace comes.

Records show 20,176 overseas deaths of American military personnel between Dec. 7, 1941, and Nov. 17, 1943, New York topping the list with 1,746, followed by Pennsylvania with 1,479, California with 1,276, Illinois with 1,200, Ohio with 1,034 and Texas with 1,011.

The department plans to return all overseas dead after the war, if the next of kin request. Others will be interred in national cemeteries abroad. In only three cases so far have the next of kin requested burial abroad.

The cemetery development program, the report continued, contemplates establishment of burial grounds as accessible as possible to survivors of deceased service men. Many of the seventy-seven existing cemeteries would be discontinued, some immediately and others as soon as available graves are filled, and placed in a caretaking status.

There are now an estimated 14,271,524 veterans of all wars eligible for burial in national cemeteries, and the department said need for facilities for their burial should continue until the year 2028.

Among the existing cemeteries to be retained should the development program win Congressional approval are those in Arlington, Va.; Baltimore; Fort Bliss, Tex.; Maxwell, Neb.; San Antonio, Tex.; Fort Snelling (Minneapolis-St. Paul); San Francisco, Louisville, and Long Island, N. Y.

The report recommends establishment of new cemeteries in these cities:

Birmingham, Phoenix, Ariz.; Little Rock, Los Angeles, San Diego, Sacramento, Denver, Hartford, Conn.; Dover, Del.; Washington, Gainesville, Fla.; Macon, Ga.; Boise, Idaho; Chicago, Springfield, Ill.; Centralia, Ill.; Indianapolis, Des Moines, Topeka, Frankfort, Ky.; Baton Rouge, La.; Augusta, Me.; Annapolis, Md.; Boston, Springfield, Mass.; Detroit, Grand Rapids, Duluth, Jackson, Miss.; St. Louis, Kansas City, Mo.; Helena, Mont.; also Lincoln, Neb.; Carson City, Concord, N. H.; Newark, Trenton, Albuquerque, New York, Buffalo, Syracuse, Albany, Raleigh, Charlotte, Bismarck, N. D.; Cleveland, Columbus, Oklahoma City, Portland, Ore.; Philadelphia, Pittsburgh, Harrisburg, Providence, Columbia, S. C.; Pierre, S. House Passes Pearl Harbor Bill, Trial Must Be Held in 3 Months

WASHINGTON, June 6—(AP) With Republicans demanding early action, the House today approved 305 to 35 legislation requiring that court martial proceedings as a result of the Pearl Harbor attack Dec. 7, 1941, must be started within three months.

The vote came after a bitter party fight in which Democrats futively sought a 12-months extension of the statute of limitations, which would mean that any trial would not be held until after the November election.

The Senate yesterday voted for a 12-months extension, beginning at midnight tomorrow.

Unless the two branches compose their differences quickly, there was a legal possibility that the statute of limitations would preclude action after tomorrow, although General Walter C. Short and Admiral Husband E. Kimmel, the commanding officers at Pearl Harbor in 1941, have waived their right to immunity. The statute originally expired on December 7, 1943, but an earlier extension continued it until June 7, 1944.

In refusing to accept the House version of the bill, the Senate asked that a joint committee be named to work out a compromise before tomorrow night's dead line.

Senate Approves Bill Increasing Debt Limit

Washington, June 6 (AP) — The Senate today approved compromise legislation raising the public-debt limit from $210,000,000,000 to $260,000,000,000, and cutting the cabaret tax from 30 to 20 per cent.

The House still must approve the conference committee version before the bill goes to President Roosevelt.

Government Agencies Charged With Causing Labor Troubles

WASHINGTON, June 6 — (AP) Barking his replies and pounding his fist, Sewell L. Avery told a House committee today that government agencies siding with "union racketeers," helped foment the labor troubles that led to seizure of Montgomery, Ward & Co.'s Chicago plant.

The chairman of Wards, who was ejected bodily from the plant, charged that the NLRB and the WLB "conspired" to bring about the seizure of the plant; that President Roosevelt enforced the order even though it was "illegal and unfair" in order to "help the C.I.O."

Styling himself a "black Republican," Avery declared he was a patriotic citizen and as such was defending his legal rights when he resisted government seizure. The mail order house, Avery said, is not essential to the war effort.

He criticized the makeup of the War Labor board and its practices. He said Wards is in favor of unionism but not "unioneering," which is a better word than racketeering."

The government, he declared, is "forcing a closed shop" on employees who don't want it and that is what Wards was protesting.

He was sardonic when he described his ejection, commenting that he "rode" out of the building on the hands of soldiers with bayonets after Attorney General Biddle said: "what are you waiting for? Throw him out."

"A thousand photographers sprang up from nowhere," Avery mused.

"Thank God I did it; that photograph made the public appreciate the realites of the situation."

Rep. Clark (D.-N. C.) sought to establish that the WLB settlement of 6,700 strikes was a good record but Avery insisted that the machinery and the practices themselves led to that many strikes.

"How is it we have had so many strikes?" he asked.

"The politicians are on their way to turning over management controls to the union racketeers. It has obviously become a political machine."

Avery said the whole Ward dispute stemmed from his company's resistance to a WLB order imposing a "closed shop"; that the NLRB then "gerrymandered" the bargaining units "to insure a union victory."

EXCHANGE SHIP DOCKS IN U. S.

Gripsholm Bears 131 Passengers In 6th Repatriation

Jersey City, N. J., June 6 (AP)—The sixth diplomatic exchange of repatriates between the United States and Axis countries was completed today when the Swedish liner Gripsholm arrived here with 131 passengers, 51 of them ill or wounded American soldiers who were prisoners of war in Germany.

The liner docked at 3.40 P. M. after a nine-day voyage from Belfast which navy officials said was without incident. She left here May 2, carrying 700 German prisoners and civilians who were exchanged at Barcelona. In addition to the American soldiers, she also brought back 37 Canadian soldiers and 43 civilians.

"Tickled To Death"

The American soldiers, first to disembark, were smiling and appeared in high humor. With other passengers they had received the invasion news by wireless at sea and as one soldier expressed it, "We're tickled to death!"

Most of the doughboys walked down the gangplank unassisted, although some used crutches. Eight ambulances, driven by Negro WACs, were waiting to take them to Halloran Hospital, Staten Island, where they will be permitted to give interviews tomorrow. The Canadian soldiers will go directly to Canada.

No Relatives Present

A military police band played "Roll Out the Barrel" and other fast-stepping tunes as the soldiers came ashore, but otherwise the scene at the pier was quiet in marked contrast to previous dockings of the liner. There were no relatives of passengers present.

Of the civilian repatriates, only eight were United States citizens. Among them was Larry Allen, Associated Press correspondent, who was captured by the Italians at Tobruk, September 13, 1942, when the British destroyer to which he was assigned was sunk.

Allen told interviewers the German people were confident their war machine could repel the Allied invasion and "force a stalemate."

"That would be as satisfactory to Germany as victory," he said. "The average German still has great confidence that Hitler has a trump card to play. There is nothing wrong with German morale.

"They won't worry until the Allies set foot on German soil. Then I think they will capitulate."

Allen said the German air force was still powerful and that Germany had deliberately led the Allies to believe that its strength was waning.

Rocket-Powder Output Put Ahead of Warplanes

Hercules Rushing New Plant in Wisconsin

WILMINGTON, Del., June 6 (AP).—The Hercules Powder Company announced today the supply of rocket powder will be increased materially in the latter part of 1944 when it starts operation of its $24,000,000 Badger Ordnance Works in Wisconsin. The date for completion of the plant was not scheduled, but Hercules officials said rocket powder production is so vital the Army has placed it on the critical list ahead of planes, aviation gasoline, tanks and ships.

The new propellant is being produced at Hercules-operated Sunflower Ordnance Works in Kansas and production is being increased, the announcement said, adding that research work in this field was begun six years ago and stepped up three years ago.

The announcement said the rocket became an important military weapon after its accuracy had been improved and added it was used to blast the enemy from strongly fortified positions in the Marshalls, Kwajalein and other Pacific islands to prepare the way for landings.

The company said the rocket is propelled by ejection of powder-generated gases from the base of the projectile and that tubes used to launch rocket-propelled projectiles are solely aiming devices.

WORLD UNIT TO CONTROL NATIONS URGED

Balance Of Power, Free Competition Dead As Principles, I. E. A. Told

Frederick, June 6 (AP)—Declaring free competition and the balance of power as principles of international relations are dead, Dr. Alexander Meiklejohn proposed tonight "a world government which will control the nations . . ." and industry.

Dr. Meiklejohn, professor of philosophy of education at the University of Wisconsin and chairman of the San Francisco school of social studies, told the International Education Assembly at its opening session that not only is the balance of power as a principle dead, but "so is any society which holds this."

Free Competition

Of free competition, he said "industry cannot be allowed to go on in free competitiv espirit. . . . The notion of self-government is coming to life again. . . . We're going to make a world in which a man can say "Yes, this is the right thing to do.'

"The world that is dead is . . . the world of the salesman, of the propagandist. . . .

"There is such a thing as human justice. There is such a thing as human freedom—not your freedom, not my freedom, but the freedom of humanity. That's what those boys went into France for this morning."

Dr. Meiklejohn said he believed where industry—or any private power—was in control, the remainder of the people were enslaved.

Appeals For Understanding

"It is the function of our Government," he declared, "to create and maintain freedom."

He appealed for a common understanding among the peoples of the world, but asserted that "people can be free only if they understand what is going on. Can people of the world understand? Yes, but only if they are educated to know what is going on.

"We can have a free humanity only if we have an educated humanity."

His theory was the subject of considerable criticism and questioning from the floor.

International Organization

Earlier the establishment of a systematic organization of international education, possibly through a part in the writing of the peace treaty, was expressed as one of the primary objectives of the assembly.

William G. Carr, of Washington, chairman of the liaison committee for international education and I. E. A. secretary, said in an interview that the conference of Allied and Associated nations, representatives convening tonight hoped to set up "something in the field of education similar to the International Labor Organization in the economic field.

BRITISH SHIP SUNK IN SOUTH ATLANTIC

JUN 7 1944

Miami, Fla., June 6 (A. P.)—In the first reported flareup of submarine warfare in the Atlantic in many months, a British freighter manned by Frenchmen was torpedoed and sunk early in May. Six men are missing.

Forty-seven others sailed 500 miles to the South American coast in two lifeboats.

Robert Arthur Nutton, 19-year-old United States Navy signalman, of South Portland, Me., aboard the ship, said that two torpedoes struck shortly before sundown, and that he saw the submarine when she came alongside a lifeboat, but saw no identifying marks. He thought it was German, however, he added.

Union Asks Mariners To Give Up Shore Leaves

JUN 7 1944

San Francisco, June 6 (AP)—The National Maritime Union called upon its entire seafaring membership today to report to the nearest hiring hall and to voluntarily surrender shore leave, in order to stand by to man any ship in any of the nation's ports.

The call came from Ralph D. Rogers, of San Francisco, director of the CIO NMU.

In a telegram to President Roosevelt, Rogers said: "The National Maritime Union pledges again to you . . . utmost support for your win-the-war program. Now that the invasion of Europe has begun, we have an additional incentive to keep those ships sailing, and we will keep them sailing into any port in the world."

WHILE THE ALLIES DESCRIBED GERMAN NAVAL ACTIVITY AS NEGLIGIBLE, THE GERMANS CLAIMED A FURIOUS SEA BATTLE HAD DEVELOPED OFF LE HAVRE BETWEEN NAZI MOTOR TORPEDO BOATS AND THE INVASION FLEET.

LOW-HANGING CLOUDS AND ARTIFICIAL FOG WITH WHICH THE ALLIED FORCES COVERED THE LANDINGS MADE IT DIFFICULT TO OBTAIN A CLEAR PICTURE OF THE GREAT ASSAULT. JUN 7 1944

THE CHANNEL WEATHER WAS SOMEWHAT UNSETTLED, BUT SUN BROKE THROUGH OCCASIONALLY, AND THE WIND HAD MODERATED.

ALLIED SOURCES SAID THE PARACHUTISTS DROPPED THROUGH LOW CLOUDS, WHILE THE GERMANS COMPLAINED THAT IN SOME PLACES DUMMIES HAD BEEN HEAVED OVER TO CONFUSE THE GROUND DEFENSES.

AN ASSOCIATED PRESS CORRESPONDENT WHO FLEW OVER THE SCENE IN A B-26 BOMBER REPORTED HE SAW HUNDREDS OF PARACHUTES AND GLIDERS ON THE GROUND.

WHILE MAKING NO EFFORT TO MINIMIZE THE SCOPE OF THE ONSLAUGHTS, THE GERMANS MADE THEIR EXPECTED CLAIMS TO HAVE WIPED OUT MANY OF THE AIRBORNE TROOPS AND TO HAVE SCORED HITS ON NUMEROUS WARSHIPS AND TRANSPORTS AT SEA. ALL THESE CLAIMS WERE WITHOUT CONFIRMATION.

HE AND OTHERS SAID THERE WAS "LOTS OF SHOOTING GOING ON" AT THE BEACHES BUT THE TROOPS GOT ASHORE WELL AND MANY OF THE FIGHTER PLANES DID NOT EVEN HAVE TO FIRE THEIR GUNS.

A HIGH OFFICER AT ALLIED HEADQUARTERS DESCRIBED THE LANDINGS AS ACTUALLY THE THIRD PHASE OF THE BATTLE TO CRUSH HITLER, THE FIRST HAVING BEEN THE GIGANTIC AIR ASSAULT AND THE SECOND THE OFFENSIVE

THE AIR ASSAULT HIT A NEW HIGH TODAY, WITH CONSTANT STREAMS OF BOMBERS OF EVERY DESCRIPTION DUMPING REPEATED LOADS ON THE CHOSEN COASTAL AREA FROM WHICH FRENCH PATRIOTS HAD BEEN WARNED BY ALLIED RADIOS TO WITHDRAW AT LEAST TO A DEPTH OF 35 KILOMETERS (22 MILES).

WHILE THE FRENCH THUS WERE WARNED AWAY FROM THE IMMEDIATE ATTACK AREA, AN ALLIED OFFICER AT HEADQUARTERS DECLARED, "WE HAVE HIGH HOPES OF THE UNDERGROUND IN FRANCE WHICH WE HAVE AIDED SO LONG."

SUPREME HEADQUARTERS, ALLIED EXPEDITIONARY FORCE, JUNE 6-(AP)- MILLIONS OF AMERICAN AND BRITISH CIVILIANS, WITHOUT KNOWING IT, STARTED TWO YEARS AGO IN JUNE, 1942, FORGING THE WEAPONS AND SUPPLIES FOR TODAY'S OPENING OF THE WESTERN FRONT.

FOR THE PAST TWO YEARS WHILE THE CRY FOR A "SECOND FRONT" WENT UP FROM RUSSIA, THE CIVILIAN POPULATIONS OF BRITAIN AND AMERICA AND EUROPE'S ANXIOUS AND OPPRESSED, MILITARY MEN OF BRITWIN AND AMERICA HAVE BEEN CEASELESSLY WORKING ON A SINGLE OPERATION FOR SMASHING THE GERMAN WESTWALL.

JUN 7 1944

TODAY'S GREAT BLOW CARRIES OUT THE SAME PLAN, WITH SLIGHT MODIFICATIONS, THAT GEN.DWIGHT D.EISENHOWER CAME TO EUROPE IN JUNE, 1942, TO EXECUTE. IT IS THE AMERICAN AND BRITISH COMBINED CHIEFS OF STAFF PLAN.

HERE FOR THE FIRST TIME IS THE STORY OF WHAT MIGHT BE CALLED "K" PLAN, AND THE GREATEST SUPPLY PROBLEM IN THE HISTORY OF WARFARE AND HOW IT WAS SOLVED BY MILITARY AND CIVILIANS COMBINED.

IT IS LARGER THAN THE NORTH AFRICAN, SICILIAN AND ITALIAN OPERATIONS COMBINED--LARGER NOT ONLY IN NUMBER OF MEN EVENTUALLY TO BE INVOLVED BUT IN THE VARIETY AND QUANTITY OF WEAPONS AND MATERIALS. BECAUSE OF THE NECESSITY OF STORMING HEAVILY FORTIFIED SHORE POSITIONS WEAPONS NEVER DREAMED OF AT THE ORIGINAL LANDINGS IN NORTH AFRICA A YEAR AND A HALF AGO ARE BEING CARRIED INTO TODAY'S BATTLE.

WHEN GEN.EISENHOWER CAME TO ENGLAND IN 1942 HIS ORDERS WERE TO CARRY OUT "K" PLAN. IT PRESENTED A TREMENDOUS SUPPLY PROBLEM AND THE AMERICANS AND BRITISH STARTED CARRYING IT OUT. FEW OF THE WEAPONS NEEDED WERE READY AT THE TIME BUT THE U.S.ARMY STARTED BUILDING THE VAST RESERVOIR OF FOODSTUFFS REQUIRED.

FOR EXAMPLE, ENOUGH TOMATOES FOR A MILLION MEN WERE SHIPPED IN ONE CONVOY. THEN IN AUGUST, 1942, AS A RESULT OF THE ROOSEVELT AND CHURCHILL MEETING "K" PLAN WAS TEMPORARILY SHELVED AND THE PLAN FOR THE INVASION OF NORTH AFRICA WAS GIVEN PRIORITY.

THIS DIFFERENT TYPE OF SMALLER SCALE OPERATION DISRUPTED THE

PRELIMINARY WORK DONE ON "K" PLAN. SUPPLIES BUILT UP IN ENGLAND WERE TORN DOWN PIECEMEAL AND FED INTO THE NORTH AFRICAN OPERATION.

THE MEDITERRANEAN HAD TOP PRIORITY AND OF NECESSITY ENGLAND AND THE "K" PLAN WERE FAR DOWN THE PRIORITY SCALE BUT NEVER FORGOTTEN.

WHILE WAITING FOR THIS THEATEV TO REGAIN TOP PRIORITY A HANDFUL OF ALLIED SUPPLYMEXPERTS DREW UP ONE OF THE MOST DETAILED AND GIGANTIC PLANS OF THE TYPE EVER CONCEIVED.

JUN 7 1944

THE AMERICAN END WAS UNDER LT.GEN.JOHN LEE OF SERVICE OF SUPPLY.

THERE WAS MORE TO IT THAN JUST PILING UP MILLIONS OF TONS OF SUPPLIES HERE AND THERE IN ENGLAND. EACH SHELL, EACH BOOTLACE, EVERY IMPLEMENT FROM 30-TON TANKS TO SURGICAL INSTRUMENTS HAD TO BE PLACED IN A CERTAIN SPOT. THERE WERE MORE THAN 250,000 TYPES OF SPARE PARTS FOR MECHANICAL VEHICLES ALONE.

THIS MEANT DISLOCATING FOR MONTHS THE LIFE OF A GREAT NATION. HUNDREDS OF SQUARE MILES WERE EVACUATED. IN OTHER AREAS MOVEMENTS OF THE CIVILIAN POPULATION WERE RESTRICTED.

SUPPLIES HAD TO BE TAKEN FROM SHIPS LOADED ON AN ALREADY OVERCROWDED RAILROAD SYSTEM TO NEAREST UNLOADING POINTS, THEN ON TRUCKS TO DUMPS ON LONELY ROADS WHERE AT CAREFULLY MAPPED SPOTS GUNS WERE LINED UP AT ONE PLACE, CANNED SALMON AT ANOTHER, AND SO ON THROUGH COUNTLESS THOUSANDS OF ARTICLES.

JUN 7 1944

MONTHS BEFORE THE JUMPOFF THOUSANDS OF TONS OF ARTICLES HAD TO BE PLACED AT POSITIONS SO THEY COULD BE LOADED ON INVASION SHIPS AGAIN IN A CERTAIN ORDER.

YOU GET A ROUGH IDEA OF THE PROBLEM IF YOU VISUALIZE AN ATTEMPT TO TAKE A CITY THE SIZE OF SAN FRANCISCO AND MOVE EVERYONE IN IT, INCLUDING EVERY HOUSEHOLD ARTICLE, AUTOMOBILE AND DIAPER BY SHIP TO ALASKA, ACROSS ALASKA AND INTO RUSSIA.

BRITISH BARRACKS AND WAREHOUSES WERE EVACUATED AND TURNED OVER INTACT TO AMERICANS. WHOLE AREAS BECAME OVERNIGHT 100 PER CENT AMERICAN OR 100 PER CENT CANADIAN OR POLE.

ALL THIS WORK WAS WELL UNDER WAY EVEN BEFORE THE INVASION OF ITALY. IT WAS CARRIED OUT BY UNSUNG AMERICAN AND BRITISH SERVICE OF SUPPLY TROOPS. BOOKKEEPING ON JUST WHAT MATERIALS ARRIVED AND WHERE LOCATED MADE NECESSARY OFFICE FORCES MANY TIMES LARGER THAN THE BIGGEST BUSINESS IN THE WORLD.

JUN 7 1944

ONLY A HANDFUL OF AMERICAN COMBAT TROOPS WERE SENT TO ENGLAND UNTIL AFTER THE CAIRO AND TEHERAN CONFERENCES WHICH SAW EISENHOWER NAMED WESTERN FRONT COMMANDER. THEN THE VAST MACHINERY SWUNG INTO HIGH GEAR. AMERICAN COMBAT TROOPS POURED IN BY THOUSANDS TO REAP THE FRUITS OF SOS' WORK. AS THEY ARRIVED THEY FLOWED SMOOTHLY TO SELECTED STAGING AREAS PREPARED MONTHS IN ADVANCE.

BRITISH TROOPS--SOME VETERANS FROM OTHER THEATERS--FLOWED INTO THEIR OWN JUMPOFF AREAS.

THESE TROOPS FOUND EVERY ARTICLE THEY REQUIRED WAITING FOR THEM. BUT MANY CRISES DEVELOPED AS TROOPS POURED IN AND EISENHOWER'S STAFF PUSHED INVASION PLANS.

FIRST THERE WAS A SHORTAGE OF LANDING CRAFT OF A NEW TYPE WHICH WAS UNRECOGNIZABLE AS COMPARED WITH THOSE USED A YEAR AGO. THE BRITISH STARTED BUILDING THEM AT A HUNDRED POINTS ALONG THE THAMES, AND AMERICA GAVE NO.1 PRIORITY TO THE ODD-SHAPED SHIPS UNTIL THE SHORTAGE WAS MET.

JUN 7 1944

EACH COMMANDER WAS ALLOWED TO DECIDE WITHIN CERTAIN LIMITS WHAT EQUIPMENT HE WANTED TO TAKE WITH THE FIRST WAVE, THE SECOND, ETC.

SOME COMMANDERS DECIDED THEY WANTED MORE SMOKE SHELLS INSTEAD OF HIGH EXPLOSIVES, WHILE OTHERS DID NOT WANT ANY SMOKE SHELLS. IT IS TO THE EVERLASTING CREDIT PLANNING OF THE SERVICE OF SUPPLY TROOPS THAT THE GREAT SYSTEM OF SUPPLY DUMPS WAS ABLE TO MEET EVERY IMPORTANT DEMAND. THIS ISLAND SEETHED WITH PREPARATIONS AND CONFUSION.

ON TOP OF THE WESTERN FRONT PREPARATIONS BRITISH HOME DEFENSES WERE BEATING OFF NAZI AIR ATTACKS ON LONDON. RAF AND AMERICAN AIRFORCES WERE DELIVERING THE GREATEST AIR BLOWS IN HISTORY AND CREATING SUPPLY PROBLEMS OF THEIR OWN.

JUN 7 1944

AT SOME TIME TWO OR THREE MONTHS AGO ON THE WEST COAST OF AMERICA SOME TRAINS' CREWS "SAW" THE WESTERN FRONT REALLY OPEN ALTHOUGH THEY DID NOT KNOW IT. THEY HANDLED THE FIRST WAR MATERIALS DESTINED NOT TO BE STOCK-PILED IN ENGLAND BUT TO BE UNLOADED IN EUROPE "BEHIND" THE WESTERN FRONT. GOODS HAVING TO COME THE FARTHEST STARTED FIRST. NOW FROM EVERY PART OF AMERICA--EVEN AT THIS MOMENT--ON RAILWAYS, CANALS AND SHIPS MUNITIONS AND MATERIALS FOR CIVILIAN AND MILITARY USE ARE FLOWING EASTWARD TOWARD ATLANTIC SEAPORTS ENROUTE TO EUROPE. THEY WERE ORDERED MONTHS AGO, EVEN AS ARMCHAIR CRITICS GRUMBLED BECAUSE THE WESTERN FRONT HAD NOT BEEN OPENED.

SO MUCH FOR MILITARY SUPPLY PROBLEMS. BUT IT DOES NOT END THERE BECAUSE PILED ON TOP OF MILITARY NEEDS AND BEING HANDLED BY THE ARMY IS THE JOB OF FEEDING STARVING EUROPE.

NEEDLES AND THREAD, DIAPERS, CORNED BEEF AND LOCOMOTIVES ARE FLOWING IN A GREAT SUPPLY TIDE TOWARD EUROPE. "K" PLAN TODAY BECAME OPERATION TWO YEARS AFTER IT STARTED UNDER THE MAN WHO FIRST WAS CHARGED WITH CARRYING IT OUT--EISENHOWER.

SUPREME HEADQUARTERS, ALLIED EXPEDITIONARY FORCE, JUNE 6-(AP) GEN.DWIGHT D.EISENHOWER'S HEADQUARTERS ANNOUNCED TODAY THAT ALLIED TROOPS BEGAN LANDING ON THE NORTHERN COAST OF FRANCE THIS MORNING STRONGLY SUPPORTED BY NAVAL AND AIR FORCES.

AT GEN. MONTGOMERY'S HEADQUARTERS, JUNE 6-(AP)-BRITAIN'S GEN. SIR BERNARD L.MONTGOMERY, WHO WHIPPED MARSHAL ROMMEL IN THE AFRICAN SANDS, PREDICTED ON MAY 15---22DAYS BEFORE THE INVASION---THAT "I THINK ROMMEL WILL COMMIT HIMSELF ON THE BEACHES."

MONTGOMERY SAID HE FORESAW BITTER FIGHTING ON THE BEACHES BECAUSE HE HAD COME TO KNOW ROMMEL AS AN IMPULSIVE COMMANDER WHO PREFERRED TO REACH A QUICK DECISION RATHER THAN ENGAGE IN A SLOW SLUGGING MATCH.

HE DESCRIBED HIS OLD FOE AS A "DISRUPTER" AND A "DISORGANIZER" WHO LIKED TO CREATE CONFUSION.

JUN 7 1944

"HE WILL TRY TO KNOCK US BACK INTO THE SEA. HE IS A DISRUPTER AND TO DISRUPT THE INVASION HE WILL TRY TO HIT US EARLY."

"IT IS TERRIFICALLY IMPORTANT TO KNOW HUMAN NATURE," HE ADDED.

THE COMMANDER WHO HEADS THE GROUND INVASION FORCES MADE THE STATEMENTS IN A TALK WITH A GROUP OF CORRESPONDENTS ASSIGNED TO HIS COMMAND.

WEARING HIS FAMILIAR BATTLEDRESS, HE SPOKE IN SHARP, CLIPPED SENTENCES AND DECLARED "I HAVE SUPREME CONFIDENCE" IN THE OUTCOME.

IN PRAISING THE LEADERSHIP OF GEN.DWIGHT D.EISENHOWER IN DRAWING BRITISH AND AMERICAN FORCES CLOSE TOGETHER FOR THE INVASION HE DECLARED, "WE ARE THE ONLY TWO PEOPLES IN THE WORLD WHO COULD HAVE DONE IT--TEAMED UP FOR THIS GREAT SHOW."

HE GAVE WARNING, HOWEVER, THAT THE BATTLE WILL BE HARD.

"PUT A GERMAN ON SOME GROUND AND LET HIM STAY THERE LONG ENOUGH AND IT TAKES A BIT OF DOING TO GET HIM OFF. IT TAKES A BIT OF DOING."

ABOARD A BRITISH WARSHIP, JUNE 6--SIX HUNDRED NAVAL GUNS, OPENING FIRE ON THE FRENCH COASTAL STRETCH WEST OF LE HAVRE, LAID DOWN A MIGHTY BARRAGE OF 2,000 TONS OF SHELLS EACH TEN MINUTES BEGINNING AT 5:15 A.M. TODAY AS THE ALLIED INVASION OF EUROPE BEGAN.

APPARENTLY TAKEN BY SURPRISE, THE GERMANS REPLIED FROM UNDER A SMOKE SCREEN LAID DOWN BY OUR AIRCRAFT TO HIDE US. THE RED GLARE OF FLAMES ENVELOPED TARGETS.

COVERED BY THE TORNADIC BOMBARDMENT, BRITISH ASSAULT TROOPS SUCCESSFULLY STORMED ASHORE AT 7:30 A.M. AND WERE CLEARING THE BEACHES BY 7:45. BEGINNING AT 7 A.M., ONE OF THE MOST SUSTAINED BOMBARDMENTS STRUCK. IT MUST HAVE STUNNED THE GERMANS AND APPARENTLY SILENCED THE MAJORITY OF THE SHORE BATTERIES.

THE LUFTWAFFE WAS ABSENT. THE ALLIED AIR FORCES APPEARED TO HAVE COMPLETE SKY MASTERY.

JUN 7 1944

DURING THE NIGHT, MINESWEEPERS CLEARED WIDE PASSAGES FOR THE FLEET. THEN DESTROYERS DARINGLY ESCORTED LANDING CRAFT TO SHORE WHILE OVERHEAD AIRBORNE PARATROOPS PASSED INTERMITTENTLY.

INVASION, SPEARHEADED GEN.DWIGHT D.EISENHOWER'S ASSAULT ON THE CONTINENT TODAY WITH AN AUDACIOUS DASH RIGHT UP TO THE FRENCH COAST.

THE SPECTACULAR MISSION IN WHICH THE PT'S WERE ASSIGNED WAS TO SCREEN ALLIED MINESWEEPERS.

THE TWIN-SCREWED MAHOGANY HULLS WERE BROUGHT ACROSS THE ATLANTIC IN GREAT SECRECY WHERE AND TO BE THROWN INTO THE INVASION AS A COUNTERWEAPON AGAINST THE GERMANS' ELUSIVE AND DEADLY E-BOATS.

THE INVASION-PACING RUN BY THESE FASTEST FIGHTING CRAFT IN THE WORLD WAS BELIEVED TO HAVE GIVEN THE GERMANS THE FIRST BAD NEWS

THEY HAD FROM THE NEW INVASION FRONT.

UNDER A WARM JUNE MOON THE COMMANDER OF THE PT'S SLIPPED OUT OF HIS BRITISH BASE AND RENDEZVOUSED WITH THE SLOW MINESWEEPERS ASSIGNED TO THE "COFFIN JOB" OF CLEARING THE WAY FOR INVASION CONVOYS TO THE BEACHES.

JUN 7 1944

TO GUARD THE SWEEPERS THE PT'S MADE DANGEROUS RUNS UNDER THE VERY MUZZLES OF THE GERMAN GUNS TO WITHIN SWIMMING DISTANCE OF THE FRENCH SHORE.

"I BELIEVE WE ARE ABLE TO STOP THE E-BOATS," SAID THE COMPACTLY BUILT, SERIOUS FACED COMMANDER AS H-HOUR APPROACHED.

"FROM OUR EXPERIENCES WITH THE JAPANESE WE KNOW IT'S A FIGHT TO THE FINISH ON THIS SIDE OF THE WORLD, TOO. WE ARE GOING TO CHASE THE E-BOAT TO ITS DEATH."

ALTHOUGH MUCH SMALLER THAN THE E-BOAT AND OUTGUNNED, THE PT CAN OUTRUN THEM--62 KNOTTING BLAZE--HE ADDED.

"PART OF THE INVASION?" ANSWERED LT.HENRY ALDRIDGE, OF MOBILE, ALA. "WELL, WE START THEM!"

CAL HUBERTON, SPORTS WRITER FOR THE LOS ANGELES TIMES BEFORE HE BECAME A PT SKIPPER, SAID HIS ONLY PREVIOUS SEAGOING EXPERIENCE WAS RIDING A FERRY BOAT TO SEE A HYDROPLANE RACE.

JUN 7 194

LONDON, JUNE 6-(AP)-THE BEACHES ACROSS WHICH THE AMERICANS DROVE INTO FRANCE TODAY WERE SELECTED MANY MONTHS AGO BUT ONLY RECENTLY DID THE GERMANS SERIOUSLY START TO BUILD UP THE DEFENSES THERE AND THE ATTACK FOUND THEM FAR LESS HEAVILY GUNNED AND FORTIFIED THAN THE GREAT PORT AREAS IN DENMARK, THE NETHERLANDS, BELGIUM AND FRANCE.

THIS CHOSEN STRETCH REMAINED ALMOST WITHOUT BEACH OBSTACLES AND THE INSHORE DEFENSES WERE NOTHING LIKE AS MASSIVE AS THOSE STRETCHING FOR HUNDREDS OF MILES ON EITHER SIDE.

THIS LEFT A BREECH OF ABOUT 60 MILES BETWEEN THE NORTHERN WING OF THE DEFENSES KEYED AROUND THE ELBE AND WESER ESTUARIES HOOK OF HOLLAND AND THE PORTS OF DUNKERQUE, CALAIS, BOULOGNE, DIEPPE AND LE HAVRE, AND THE SOUTHERN CHAIN RUNNING FROM CHERBOURG THROUGH ST.MILO, BREST, LORIENT, NANTES AND BORDEAUX.

THE LOW PRIORITY WHICH KEPT MATERIALS AND WEAPONS AWAY FROM THIS AREA AND MADE IT THE ACHILLES HEEL OF THE NAZI DEFENSES WAS DUE LARGELY TO THE URGENT NECESSITY FOR PROTECTING EVERY PORT FIRST AND ALSO TO THE LACK OF MANPOWER, TRANSPORTATION AND SUPPLIES TO CREATE A CONTINUOUS WALL FROM DENMARK TO SPAIN.

WEEK BY WEEK THROUGH THE WINTER ALLIED RECONNAISSANCE SHOWED THE SLOW PROGRESS IN CONVERTING SCATTERED HOUSES INTO STRONGPOINTS AND FINGERS WERE KEPT CROSSED IN HIGH PLACES AS THE GERMANS AGAIN AND AGAIN SHOWED MARKED SIGNS OF NERVOUSNESS ABOUT THIS SPOT OR THAT BUT NEVER ABOUT THE CHOSEN STRETCH.

NOT UNTIL FIELD MARSHAL ERWIN ROMMEL'S FIRST EXTENSIVE WESTERN INSPECTION IN FEBRUARY DID THE ENEMY SHOW INCREASED INTEREST IN THESE INVITINGLY BARE BEACHES. EVEN THEN HE GAVE FIRST ATTENTION TO MULTIPLYING MINEFIELDS IN THE IMMEDIATE INSHORE AREAS, TO LENGTHENING AND DEEPENING ANTI-TANK DITCHES CLOSE TO THE WATER LINE, TO EMPLACEMENT OF MANY LIGHT FIELD GUNS TO FIRE EACH WAY ALONG THE BEACHES AND TO GENERAL IMPROVEMENT OF THE DEEPER DEFENSES.

ONLY AFTER THE WINTER'S STORMS HAD BLOWN OUT ALONG TOWARD THE MIDDLE OF APRIL DID THE FOUR COMMONEST TYPES OF OFFSHORE BEACH OBSTACLES BEGIN TO APPEAR. THEY WERE THICK ALONG OUR TARGET AREAS ALTHOUGH STILL NOT AS NUMEROUS AS AT MANY OTHER POINTS.

SUPREME HEADQUARTERS, ALLIED EXPEDITIONARY FORCE, JUNE 6-(AP)-GERMAN DESTROYERS AND E-BOATS ARE RUSHING INTO THE OPERATIONAL AREA OFF THE NORTHERN COAST OF FRANCE AND "NO DOUBT ARE BEING DEALT WITH" BY THE ALLIES, IT WAS SAID HERE JUST BEFORE 1 P.M. (7 A.M. EASTERN WAR TIME).

AN ALLIED MILITARY COMMENTATOR ANNOUNCED THAT H-HOUR FOR THE INVASION TODAY RANGED FROM 6 TO 8 A.M. (MIDNIGHT MONDAY TO 2 A.M. TUESDAY, E.W.T.).

GERMAN BROADCASTS SAID A FURIOUS BATTLE BETWEEN NAZI E-BOATS AND ALLIED WARSHIPS WAS RAGING OFF LE HAVRE.

SUPREME HEADQUARTERS, ALLIED EXPEDITIONARY FORCE, JUNE 6-(AP)-IT'S "MONTY" VERSUS DESERT FOX ROMMEL AGAIN ON THE SHORES OF NORMANDY.

MARSHAL ERWIN ROMMEL, WHO WAS CHASED OUT OF AFRICA, IS IN COMMAND OF THE GERMAN ARMY GROUP IN NORTHERN FRANCE NOW OPPOSING THE AMERICAN-BRITISH-CANADIAN INVASION UNDER GEN.SIR BERNARD L.MONTGOMERY OF EIGHTH ARMY FAME, ACCORDING TO INFORMATION AT SUPREME HEADQUARTERS.

FIELD MARSHAL KARL RUDOLF GERD VON RUNDSTEDT IS IN OVERALL COMMAND OF GERMAN GROUND FORCES IN WESTERN EUROPE WITH ROMMEL IN CHARGE OF THE NORTH AND FIELD MARSHAL JOHANNES BLASKOWITZ LEADING ANOTHER ARMY GROUP IN SOUTHERN FRANCE AND THE BAY OF BISCAY AREA. BLASKOWITZ WAS RAISED FROM THE RANK OF COLONEL GENERAL ON MAY 11, IT WAS REPORTED AT HEADQUARTERS.

ADMIRAL KRANCKE IS COMMANDING THE GERMAN NAVAL FORCES WHICH OFFERED ONLY FEEBLE RESISTANCE TODAY, WHILE FIELD MARSHAL HUGO SPERLLE COMMANDS THE GERMAN AIR FORCE IN THE WEST, ACCORDING TO THE LATEST INFORMATION HERE.

BEFORE D-DAY BEST ESTIMATES PLACED GERMAN STRENGTH IN THE LOW COUNTRIES AND FRANCE AT BETWEEN 54 AND 60 DIVISIONS WHICH WITH SUPPLY TROOPS WOULD BRING TO APPROXIMATELY 1,000,000 THE FORCE BEHIND THE NAZI WESTWALL FACING THE ALLIED ASSAULT.

ABOARD P-T BOAT "STRATUS", JUNE 6-(AP)-AGAINST AN AMAZING SCARCITY OF INITIAL OPPOSITION THE COMBINED UNITED STATES AND BRITISH NAVAL FORCE JARRED OPEN THE WESTERN FRONT AT DAWN TODAY WITH AN EARTH-ROCKING BOMBARDMENT WHICH SEARED AND LEFT AFLAME THE WEST WALL OF NORTHERN FRANCE.

AT THE FIRST BROADSIDE THE ALLIED INVASION ARMIES FREIGHTED ACROSS CHANNEL IN A MULTIPLE DOUBLE DECKER BRIDGE OF SHIPS AND PLANES IMMEDIATELY BEGAN STORMING ENEMY FORTIFICATIONS.

WE WATCHED A MASSED FLEET, FROM BATTLESHIPS FIRING SIXTEEN-INCH GUNS, TO DESTROYERS USING FOUR-INCHERS, THROW EXPLOSIVE STEEL AT THE GERMANS AT THE RATE OF 2,000 TONS EVERY 10 MINUTES.

WHETHER GERMANS WERE CAUGHT WITH THEIR BREECHES LOCKED OR WHETHER THEIR BATTERIES WERE KNOCKED OUT BY THE NIGHT-LONG AIR ASSAULT REMAINS TO BE SEEN, BUT THE FACT IS THEY WERE SLOW TO REACT AND WHEN THEY DID IT WAS SPASMODIC.

THE INITIAL SALVO SEEN FROM THE DECK OF "STRATUS" STABBED THE SLATE GREY SKY AT 5:40 A.M. AND, IN A MATTER OF SECONDS, BOMBARDING SHIPS RANGED AROUND THE COAST OF NORMANDY WERE SPOUTING GIANT POMPOM LIKE FLASHES OF LIVID ORANGE. NAZI FORTIFICATIONS SPOUTED TOWERING SHEETS OF JAGGED FLAME AS WARSHIPS IN FRONT AND BEHIND AND ON EITHER SIDE OF US LOBBED OVER SALVO AFTER SALVO. ALLIED SPOTTING PLANES DRONED OVERHEAD BLINKING SIGNALS TO THE BOMBARDING SHIPS.

WHEN THE BOMBARDMENT WAS HALF AN HOUR OLD THE SUN BROKE THROUGH LOW-HANGING CLOUDS AND A BRILLIANT RAINBOW ARCHED ACROSS THE HEAVENS. DURING THE ENTIRE HOUR THAT WE WATCHED THE SHOW WE DID NOT SEE A SINGLI GERMAN HIT AN ALLIED SHIP.

CREWS OF A SQUADRON OF P-T BOATS DESCRIBED THE GERMAN OPPOSITION AS FAR LESS THAN EXPECTED AND SAID SHORE GUNFIRE WAS LESS THAN IN SICILY.

HERE IS THE BEACHHEAD SCENE AS IT WAS DESCRIBED TO ME BY P-T SKIPPER CHARLES TWADELL OF LIBERTYVILLE, ILL.:

A138

JUN 7 1944

AS THE HUGE INVASION FLEET OF 4,000 ASSAULT SHIPS AND NUMEROUS SMALLER CRAFT MOVED TOWARDS THE FRENCH COAST ALLIED BOMBERS HAMMERED THE BEACHES FURIOUSLY FOR THREE HOURS. INCENDIARIES POURED DOWN FROM THE SKY LIKE RAIN. P-38 LIGHTNING FIGHTERS SWOOPED OVER THE SCENE KEEPING NAZI PLANES FROM GETTING ANYWHERE NEAR THE BEACHES. WE SAW THE LIGHTNINGS BUZZING AROUND IN CIRCLES DARING JERRIES TO COME UP AND FIGHT AND FROM WHAT I SAW THE NAZIS WERE AFRAID TO ACCEPT

THE CHALLENGE.

LT.TWADELL SAID THAT WHEN HIS TORPEDO BOAT WAS WITHIN A MILE OF THE FRENCH COAST, WEAVING IN AND OUT OF THE INVASION ARMADA, THE GERMANS SENT UP STARSHELLS WHICH LIGHTED UP THE WHOLE BEACH.

GERMAN BATTERIES BEGAN TO HURL SHELLS FROM POSISITIONS BEHIND THE BEACHES BUT MOST OF THESE WERE QUICKLY SILENCED BY ALLIED BOMBERS.

ENSIGN WARREN YOUNG OF DENVER, COLO., WIPED THE CAKING OF SALT BRINE FROM HIS FACE AND DECLARED: "I WOULD NOT HAVE MISSED IT FOR THE WORLD"...

THE ONLY SHOOTING DONE BY GUNNERS ON THIS BOAT WAS WHEN MIKE LESHOCK OF BROOKLYN; LUTHER LEARY OF PLYMOUTH, N.C., AND FORD REEDY, BEL-AIR MARYLAND, GOT IN SOME TARGET PRACTICE AT EIGHT GERMAN MINES.

"EVERYTHING HAS GONE ACCORDING TO PLAN," RAMSAY SAID, "AND WE HAVE WON THE FIRST ROUND. I CAN SEE NO SIGN THAT THE ENEMY WILL BE IN A POSITION TO BEAT US IN THE SECOND ROUND.

"OUR PLAN WAS A SET PIECE OF SUCH MOMENTUM THAT WE HAD NO DOUBT WE SHOULD REACH THE OTHER SIDE, BUT THERE WAS SOME DOUBT ABOUT OUR LOSSES. WE HAVE GOT 100 PER CENT OF THE ASSAULT ACROSS. A MARAUDER BASE IN ENGLAND, JUNE 6-(AP)-I RODE IN ONE OF THOUSANDS OF PLANES WHICH RAINED EXPLOSIVES ON THE FRENCH COAST IN SUPPORT OF THE ALLIED LANDINGS TODAY--EACH PILOT HAVING THE KNOWLEDGE THAT A SLIGHT MISCALCULATION WOULD ADD THE FIRE OF ALLIED BATTERIES TO THAT OF THE GERMAN GUNS ALREADY BLASTING AWAY AT US.

ALLIED AIRMEN SUPPORTING THE LANDINGS WERE GIVEN PRECISE COURSES TO AND FROM THE INVASION AREA AND IT WAS EXPLAINED TO THEM THAT ANY DEVIATION FROM THESE ROUTES--EVEN IN THE UNFORTUNATE CASE OF AN AILING PLANE TURNING BACK--WAS LIKELY TO DRAW ALLIED FIRE.

ALTHOUGH ALL KINDS OF SHOOTING WAS GOING ON OUT THERE--WARSHIPS SHELLING THE SHORE, THE SHORE SHELLING WARSHIPS AND HEAVY AND MEDIUM BOMBERS EXPLODING IN THE AIR AT INTERVALS--IT IS A TRIBUTE TO THE AIRPLANE MANUFACTURERS, THE AIR FORCE AND THE COORDINATION OF A

M

JUN 7 1944

AIRPLANE MANUFACTURERS, THE AIR FORCE AND THE COORDINATION OF ALLIED FORCES THAT NOT A PLANE NOR A MAN WAS LOST TO OUR OWN GROUND FIRE, IN CONTRAST TO THE SICILIAN LANDING, WHERE OUR OWN GROUND GUNS SHOT UP TROOP CARRIER PLANES, GLIDERS AND PARACHUTISTS.

EXTRAORDINARY PRECAUTIONS WERE TAKEN IN TODAY'S GREAT LANDING PLANS TO PREVENT BOMBARDMENT OF ANYTHING BUT ENEMY FACILITIES.

GEN. DWIGHT D.EISENHOWER'S INVASION MESSAGE PLACED STRONG EMPHASIS ON THE POINT THAT NOTHING SHOULD BE DONE TO JEOPARDIZE THE SAFETY OR THE FRIENDSHIP OF THE FRENCH PEOPLE. THE AIR COMMANDERS' ORDERS STRESSED THAT BOMBING MUST BE "ACCURATE," AND THAT NO "GROSS" ERRORS, SUCH AS MIGHT BE ACCEPTED AS INEVITABLE IN OCCASIONAL ORDINARY OPERATIONS, WOULD BE TOLERATED.

FINALLY, TO AVOID HITTING OUR OWN TROOPS, A DEADLINE OF 6:30 A.M., HALF AFTER H-HOUR---WAS SET ON ANY BOMBING OF INSTALLATIONS CLOSE TO OUR LANDING POINTS.

OVER THE SHORE I SAW THE TREMENDOUS NAVAL AND SHORE ENGAGEMENT DEVELOPING, AND A FEW MILES INLAND I COULD SEE FIELDS STREWN WITH HUNDREDS OF PARACHUTES, WHERE THE ALLIED FORCES HAD DROPPED. THE FIELDS WERE DOTTED, TOO, WITH AIRCRAFT---PROBABLY GLIDERS---BEARING THE DISTINCTIVE ALLIED INVASION BLUE-AND-WHITE ZEBRA-LIKE STRIPE WHICH WAS HURRIEDLY SLAPPED ON ALL AIRCRAFT YESTERDAY.

IN THE CHANNEL, ON EVERY HAND, THERE WERE GREAT FORCES OF SHIPS, BATTERING THE COAST OR BRINGING UP REINFORCEMENTS TO SUPPORT THE INITIAL INVASION THRUST.

THE LUFTWAFFE WAS NOT IN EVIDENCE BUT FROM THE GROUND THE GERMANS PUT UP A TREMENDOUS FLAK BARRAGE AGAINST A SKY FULL OF COURSING PLANES, RUNNING THE GAMUT FROM SINGLE-ENGINED THUNDERBOLT FIGHTERS TO BRITISH FOUR-ENGINED HALIFAX BOMBERS.

TO OUR RIGHT AS WE DROPPED BOMBS ON COASTLINE DEFENSES, A LIBERATOR HIT BY A BURST OF FLAK EXPLODED IN A GREAT BURST OF FLAME, AND A FEW SECONDS LATER A MARAUDER FROM A FORMATION AHEAD WAS SIMILARLY BLASTED TO PIECES. BUT THE PARACHUTES BLOSSOMED FORTH FROM THE SMOKE, AND OTHER FORMATIONS MANAGED TO DODGE MOST OF THE FLAK.

INLAND, HUNDREDS OF PARACHUTISTS PLOPPED NEATLY INTO FIELDS WITHOUT A SIGN OF OTHER LIFE AROUND, AND ONE CONCENTRATION OF CHUTES MADE A MODEL LANDING. CHEERING EVIDENCE OF THE SMOOTHNESS WITH WHICH THE OPERATION WAS COMING OFF.

THE OPENING OF D-DAY, DESPITE THE FACT THAT ALL FELT IT WAS IMMINENT, HAD BROUGHT A TREMOR OF EXCITEMENT THROUGH OUR BASE. AFTER OUR 11TH HOUR ORDERS THE RUMOR SPREAD THROUGH THE SQUADRON OF A BRIEFING IN JUST A FEW HOURS--THE EARLIEST BRIEFING IN THEIR WHOLE YEAR OF OPERATIONS.

TENSE FLIERS WHO PACKED THE ROOM GAVE LOW WHISTLES WHEN THEIR COMMANDER ANNOUNCED:

"MAY I HAVE YOUR ATTENTION, PLEASE? THIS IS WHAT WE HAVE BEEN WAITING FOR. THIS IS INVASION MORNING. THIS IS THE INVASION. I CAN'T TELL YOU ALL ABOUT IT, BUT YOUR GENERAL PICTURE IS TO SUPPORT LANDING OPERATIONS OF THE GROUND FORCES."

--DASH--

GAULT MC GOWAN, NEW YORK SUN CORRESPONDENT WHO ALSO MADE A FLIGHT REPRESENTING THE COMBINED AMERICAN PRESS, TOLD OF AN IMPRESSIVE "SIGN" IN THE DAWN SKY OVER THE INVASION AREA.

"IT WAS JUST AN ORDINARY RAINBOW WHICH GIRT THE INVASION AREA AT DAWN WITH BRILLIANT COLORS," HE WROTE. "AS AN INSIGNIA FOR SUPREME HEADQUARTERS OF THE ALLIED EXPEDITIONARY FORCE, IT WAS A HEARTENING SIGN FOR THE ATTACKING INFANTRY. THE RAINBOW STREAKED RIGHT ACROSS THE COMBAT ZONE, ONLY FADING FROM SIGHT AFTER THOUSANDS OF MEN HAD SEEN IT. OUR AIRPLANE IN THE BOMBING SPEARHEAD FLEW STRAIGHT THROUGH THE MIDDLE OF IT.

"IT STOOD OUT AS PLAIN AS COULD BE. I WATCHED IT QUITE A WHILE," SAID THE TURRET GUNNER OF OUR MARAUDER, SGT.LESLIE YOUNG, A FORMER HEIGHTSTOWN, N.J., DAIRY FARMER, WHOSE WIFE RESIDES NOW AT 301 GRANITE AVE., REEDSBURG, WIS.

WILLIAM WILSON, REPRESENTING THE COMBINED BRITISH PRESS, SAID THE MAIN JOB OF THE PLANES WAS TO SLOW DOWN NAZI MARSHAL ERWIN ROMMEL'S ATTEMPTS TO RUSH UP REINFORCEMENTS TO MEET THE LANDINGS, BY BLOCKING THE ROADS LEADING TO THE COAST.

A MARAUDER BASE IN ENGLAND, JUNE 6-(AP)-FROM THE COCKPIT OF ONE OF MANY HUNDREDS OF PLANES WHICH SUPPORTED THE ALLIED LANDING IN NORTHERN FRANCE EARLY THIS MORNING I WATCHED A BATTLE ROYAL RAGE ON THE SEA AND IN THE AIR.

THE FIELDS ALONG THE FRENCH CHANNEL COAST WERE DOTTED WITH PARACHUTES OF ALLIED AIRBORNE FORCES WHO HAD LANDED A FEW MINUTES BEFO AND INTERSPERSED AMONG THE PARACHUTES WERE AIRCRAFT-- PROBABLY GLIDERS

THE FIRST SIGNS OF BATTLE WERE FLASHED FROM THE CHANNEL BELOW, WHICH THROUGH THE MIST AND A NAVAL SMOKE SCREEN GRADUALLY BECAME DISTINGUISHABLE AS GUN DETONATIONS ON WARSHIPS SHELLING THE COAST

THE CHANNEL WASN'T "JAMMED WITH SHIPPING" AS MIGHT HAVE BEEN EXPECTED. THE CHANNEL IS A BIG PLACE, BUT ON EVERY HAND THERE WERE FORCES OF SHIPS EITHER BATTERING THE COAST LINE OR BRINGING UP FORCES TO TAKE ADVANTAGE OF BREACHES.

THE AIRCRAFT DOTTING THE FIELDS BORE THE DISTINCTIVE ALLIED INVASION BLACK AND WHITE ZEBRA STRIPE, WHICH WAS HURRIEDLY SLAPPED ON THE AIRCRAFT LATE YESTERDAY.

(A BROADCAST FROM SUPREME HEADQUARTERS SAID THE BLACK AND WHITE IDENTIFYING STRIPES ON THE PLANES WERE ONE STEP TOWARD PREVENTING CONFUSION AND REPETITION OF SUCH MISTAKES AS ALLIED GUNNERS FIRING ON FRIENDLY PLANES, AS HAPPENED IN SICILY.)

UNITED NATIONS CONVOYS ARE BRINGING UP ADDITIONAL REINFORCEMENTS TO SUPPORT THIS INITIAL INVASION DRIVE, AND THOUSANDS OF ALLIED PLANES ARE HAMMERING THE COAST.

FOR FLIERS, THE O ..NG OF D-DAY WAS A STRANGE COMBINATION OF ROUTIN AND UNUSUAL THRILL.

LIKE EVERYONE ELSE THEY HAD FELT IT WAS IMMINENT. TASKS ASSIGNED WERE SIMILAR TO MISSIONS THEY HAVE BEEN EXECUTING FOR MONTHS IN THE AERIAL SOFTENING CAMPAIGN. THEY EXECUTED THEIR INITIAL ASSIGNMENTS WI EXPERT ASSUREDNESS, YET A TREMOR OF EXCITEMENT RAN THROUGH THIS BASE WHEN-- AFTER 11TH HOUR ORDERS-- THE RUMOR SPREAD THROUGH THE SQUADRON-MESS COFFEE SESSIONS OF A BRIEFING IN JUST A FEW HOURS-- THE EARLIEST BRIEFING IN THEIR WHOLE YEAR OF OPERATIONS.

FIFTEEN MINUTES BEFORE BRIEFING TIME, THE MESS HALL FOR THE FIRST TIME IN HISTORY WAS DESERTED. EVERYONE HAD HURRIED DOWN TO CATCH SOMETHING BIG.

A WAVE OF EXCLAMATIONS AND LOW WHISTLES RAN THROUGH THE PACKED RO OF MOTLEY-CLAD FLIERS, TENSE IN THEIR CANVAS CHAIRS, WHEN THE COMMANI SAID SIMPLY:

"MAY I HAVE YOUR ATTENTION PLEASE? THIS IS WHAT WE HAVE BEEN WAI FOR. THIS IS INVASION MORNING---- THIS IS THE INVASION. I CAN'T TELL YOU ALL ABOUT IT, BUT YOUR GENERAL PICTURE IS TO SUPPORT LANDING OPERATIONS OF THE GROUND FORCES."

LONDON, JUNE 6-(AP)-GEN. CHARLES DE GAULLE HAS ARRIVED IN BRITAIN AND ALREADY HAS CONFERRED WITH PRIME MINISTER CHURCHILL, IT WAS DISCLOSED TODAY SHORTLY AFTER ANNOUNCEMENT OF THE ALLIED INVASION OF FRANCE.

DE GAULLE'S ARRIVAL HAD BEEN KEPT SECRET FOR MILITARY REASONS. HE MADE THE TRIP FROM ALGIERS TO DISCUSS THE STATUS OF HIS FRENCH COMMITTEE OF NATIONAL LIBERATION WHICH SEVERAL DAYS AGO DESIGNATED ITSELF AS THE PROVISIONAL GOVERNMENT OF FRANCE.

BY AUSTIN BEALMEAR

AN EIGHTH AIR FORCE RECONNAISSANCE BASE, JUNE 6-(AP)-CAPT. JOHN T. CAMERON, EIGHTH AIR FORCE PHOTOGRAPHIC RECONNAISSANCE PILOT, SAW MANY THRILLING SIGHTS TODAY DURING THE HOUR HE SPED UP AND DOWN THE PORTION OF THE FRENCH COAST INVADED BY EISENHOWER'S ARMIES, BUT BEST OF ALL WAS THE AMERICAN FLAG FLYING OVER A FRENCH TOWN.

"I COULDN'T SEE ANY TOO WELL, BUT I COULD TELL IT WAS AN AMERICAN FLAG, ALL RIGHT," SAID CAMERON, WHO LIVES AT 10461 WILKINS AVE., WEST LOS ANGELES, CALIF. JUN 7 1944

CAMERON AND CAPT. JACK CAMPBELL, OF 1959 NORTH TAMARIND AVE., LOS ANGELES, ARRIVED OVER THE FRENCH COAST ABOUT MIDDAY AND FOUND THAT ALLIED LANDING FORCES WERE MAKING "GOOD HEADWAY" WITH APPARENTLY NO OPPOSITION FROM THE ENEMY.

"THERE DIDN'T SEEM TO BE OPPOSITION OF ANY KIND," DECLARED CAMERON. "THERE WAS NOTHING IN THE AIR BUT OUR PLANES AND I DIDN'T EVEN SEE ANY FLAK."

THEIR COMMANDER, LT. COL. C.A. SHOOP, OF 122 NORTH OAKHURST DRIVE, BEVERLY HILLS, CALIF., HAD SEEN ACTION FIVE HOURS EARLIER.

SHOOP DISCLOSED THE ALLIES HAD ESTABLISHED SEVERAL BEACHHEADS BY 7 A.M. HE SAID THE GERMANS WERE THROWING UP SOME FLAK AND FIRING ON ALLIED NAVAL VESSELS OFF SHORE.

30. 24— 15997

"WE COULD SEE A LOT OF NAVAL GUNFIRE BUT WE DIDN'T SEE ANY REPLY FROM SHORE," SAID CAMPBELL "OUR WARSHIPS LOOKED LIKE THEY WERE SHELLING RAILROADS AND OTHER TARGETS INLAND."

JUN 7 1944

CAMERON SAID THEY FLEW OVER THE SAME AIRFIELD WHERE SHOOP ENCOUNTERED WITHERING GROUND FIRE, "AND THERE WASN'T A SHOT FIRED AT US."

"SEVERAL RAILROAD YARDS WERE BURNING," CAMERON CONTINUED. "LANDING CRAFT WERE ON THE BEACHES AND TANKS WERE LINED UP AS IF READY TO GO INTO OPERATION."

"IT SURE LOOKED LIKE WE WERE DOING DAMNED WELL," SAID CAMPBELL. "WE COULD SEE MEN ON THE BEACH AND THEY SEEMED TO BE SETTING UP COMMUNICATIONS THERE AND FARTHER BACK."

NEITHER CAMPBELL NOR CAMERON SAW ANY CIVILIANS IN THE TOWNS OR ON THE HIGHWAYS.

WHILE THEY WERE TAKING HUNDREDS OF PICTURES OF THE LANDING ACTIONS, MAJ. WALTER WIETNER, OF 126 NORTH HILDRETH PLACE, YONKERS, N.Y., FIRST AMERICAN PHOTO PILOT TO FLY OVER BERLIN, RANGED AT LEAST 200 MILES INLAND TO SHOOT PICTURES OF RAIL FACILITIES AND HE, TOO, ENCOUNTERED NO OPPOSITION.

"IT WAS VERY QUIET ALL ALONG," HE SAID.

BY MID-AFTERNOON PHOTO PILOTS AT THIS BASE HAD FLOWN 35 SORTIES OVER THE INVASION AREA, TAKING 540 TO 720 PICTURES EACH TIME, AND THE STATION'S HUGE PHOTO LABORATORY, UNDER THE DIRECTION OF CAPT. CONLEY HAYSLIP, OF 734 WEST PAGET ST., DALLAS, TEX., IS PLANNING TO TURN OUT 40,000 PRINTS AS ITS SHADRE IN THE DAY'S WORK.

AN ADVANCED U.S. ARMY FIELD HOSPITAL ON THE SOUTHERN COAST OF ENGLAND, JUNE 6-(AP)-THE MEN AND WOMEN AT THIS ARMY FIELD HOSPITAL WHOSE JOB IT IS TO PATCH UP THE WAR'S INJURED SOLDIERS HEARD THE NEWS OF THE INVASION'S START TODAY WITH A GASP OF EXCITEMENT AND CONCERN--CONCERN BECAUSE THEY EXPECT TO RECEIVE THE FIRST CASUALTIES.

MOST OF THE OFFICERS, INCLUDING LT. COL. LEON BLUMBERG, 31, PITTSBURGH, PA., THE COMMANDING OFFICER, AND THE NURSES WERE AT BREAKFAST WHEN LT. JAMES ENGER, RIVER GROVE, ILL., ADJUTANT, ENTERED AND SAID QUIETLY:

"IT'S ON THE GERMAN RADIO THAT THE INVASION HAS BEGUN."

AFTER THEIR FIRST AUDIBLE INTAKE OF BREATH, THE OFFICERS AND NURSES LEFT THEIR HOT CAKES, SAUSAGES AND COFFEE AND WENT INTO THE HEADQUARTERS ROOM.

PVT. CLAUDE HAMILTON, O'NEILL, NEB., AN AMBULANCE DRIVER WHO WAS ON DUTY IN THE BREAKFAST ROOM SPED TO THE KITCHEN WITH THE NEWS THAT THE INVASION HAD BEGUN.

"THAT'S GOOD NEWS," COMMENTED PFC. ROBERT GOODROW, BUFFALO, N.Y., A COOK.

"WHEEEE," EXPLODED PFC RUSSEL DREYER, MILWAUKEE, WIS., ANOTHER COOK.

LT.ROBERT RADMAN, MILWAUKEE, VISITING THE AREA WHERE AMBULANCE DRIVERS, WARD MEN AND COOKS WERE QUARTERED, CALLED ASIDE SGT. CLOY

D.CORLEY, BIG STONE GAP, VA., AND SAID "IT'S UNOFFICIAL BUT FOR YOUR INFORMATION THE INVASION HAS STARTED."

CORLEY TURNED WITH A GRIN TOWARD HIS MEN BUT HIS FACE WAS SOLEMN AS HE TOLD THEM "IT LOOKS LIKE IT HAS STARTED."

AT THE HEADQUARTERS ROOM CAPT. JOSEPH APRILE, ORIGINALLY FROM NEW YORK, SAID "LET'S GET READY FOR TONIGHT" SO THE OFFICERS AND NURSES WENT TO THEIR APPOINTED TASKS.

PVT.LIBERO P.VACCARO, BROOKLYN, N.Y., AN AMBULANCE DRIVER AND TAILOR, PRESSED TROUSERS IN HIS SPARE TIME.

LT.MILDRED LANG, CANTON, O., LOOKED UP FROM HER SWEEPING AND SAID "NEXT STOP SOME PLACE IN FRANCE."

ATTRACTIVE CHIEF NURSE LT. MARTHA JANE JORDAN, 29, CINCINNATI, WHOSE PARENTS, MR. AND MRS.MORRIS JORDAN, LIVE IN WEST VIRGINIA, MADE AN INSPECTION TOUR WITH CHIEF SURGEON, TALL MAJ. J.B.MARSHALL, LOUISVILLE, KY.

ON THE BEACH WHERE FIRST PATIENTS WERE LIKELY TO BE RECEIVED, CAPT. BEE DAILY, ELCHO, WIS., NOTIFIED HIS UNIT TO STAND READY.

CAPT. GREGORY CAREY, JOLIET, ILL., CHIEF SURGEON, CHECKED HIS OPERATING TENT. LT. MARY LINKEL, BROOKVILLE, IND., HEAD NURSE AND EIGHT OTHER NURSES WENT OVER LAST MINUTE DETAILS.

FROM A NEARBY HILLTOP THE HOSPITAL PERSONNEL COULD SEE WARCRAFT AND BARGES FOR MILES OUT IN THE CHANNEL.

U.S. AMBASSADOR GEORGE S. MESSERSMITH WAS INTERESTED IN DETAILS.

MEXICO CITY, JUNE 6-(AP)-THE USUAL CALM OF MEXICAN NIGHTS WAS BROKEN EARLY TODAY AS THE RADIO CARRIED NEWS OF THE INVASION AND LATE SITTERS TELEPHONED THEIR FRIENDS TO LISTEN.

THE GERMAN ANNOUNCEMENT, GENERALLY DISBELIEVED UNTIL CONFIRMED TWO HOURS LATER BY ALLIED HEADQUARTERS, CAME EARLY ENOUGH TO CATCH MANY MEXICANS STILL BY THEIR RADIOS.

NO PAPER ISSUED EXTRAS AND IT WAS CONSIDERED PROBABLE THERE WOULD BE NO PUBLIC DEMONSTRATION UNTIL THE BULK OF THE POPULATION COMES ON THE STREETS AND READS THE REGULAR EDITIONS. MOST FOREIGNERS STAYED UP LATE LISTENING TO THE TEXAS STATIONS WHICH CARRIED THE NEWS. JUN 7 1944

MEXICANS, HARD HIT BY RISING PRICES AND WITH THE THREAT OF A GENERAL STRIKE SET FOR THURSDAY HANGING OVER THEM, WERE STILL MORE PREOCCUPIED WITH AFFAIRS AT HOME THAN IN EUROPE. NEVERTHELESS, THE TAXI DRIVER WHO PICKED UP THE NEWS ON HIS RADIO PROBABLY SUMMED UP THE GENERAL FEELING:

New York, June 6-(ap)-- At gen. dwight d. eisenhower's JUN 7 1944 pre-invasion press conference, allied correspondents sat "in a tiny tent some 15 feet square" and "listened to the most amazing delivery of dynamic facts I have ever heard," NBC correspondent merrill mueller said today in a broadcast from eisenhower's headquarters.

Details of what the supreme commander said cannot be told, meuller said, but as to the actual invasion plan itself, "I have been in on all ~~th~~ of the general's amphibious ~~op~~ assaults, but none was as invol or as ~~x~~ mammoth as this one."

Eisenhower didn't show any nervousness, he added, but in

NEW YORK, JUNE 6-(AP)-WRIGHT BRYAN, NBC CORRESPONDENT WITH THE AIR BORNE TROOPS, DESCRIBED THE DROPPING OF THE FIRST PARATROOPERS ON OCCUPIED EUROPE TODAY IN A BROADCAST DESCRIBED BY THE NETWORK AS THE FIRST ON-THE-SCENE RADIO REPORT OF THE ALLIED INVASION.

HE TOLD OF HIS PLANE, THE "SWEETY," WITH MANY OTHERS STREAMING BEHIND, DROPPING THE PARATROOPERS. HE DESCRIBED THE RETURN TRIP OVER THE CHANNEL AND SAID HIS PLANE PASSED COUNTLESS HUNDREDS OF OTHERS MAKING THEIR WAY TOWARD EUROPE.

HE SAID HE ALSO SAW MANY SHIPS ON THE WATER BELOW, ALL WITH PROWS POINTED TOWARD AXIS SOIL.

BRYAN, SAID BY NBC TO BE THE FIRST RADIO CORRESPONDENT TO RETURN TO ENGLAND AFTER THE LANDINGS, TOLD OF TALKING WITH THE MEN BEFORE THEY PARACHUTED EARTHWARDS.

BRIEFING PERIODS BEFORE THE TAKEOFF WERE DESCRIBED BY THE NBC REPORTER WHO ALSO IS A STAFF MEMBER OF THE ATLANTA (GA.) JOURNAL. HE RELATED HOW THE MEN WERE PLACED UNDER STRICT GUARD MANY HOURS BEFORE THEY LEFT ON THEIR ASSIGNMENT.

THE MEN FILED INTO TRUCKS AFTER THE BRIEFING, HE SAID, AND WERE TAKEN TO PLANES WHICH LINED THE AIR FIELD FOR THE TAKE-OFF.

GENERAL EISENHOWER VISITED THE AIR BORNE TROOPS THE AFTERNOON OF D-DAY, BRYAN ADDED, AND WENT ABOUT THE CAMP ASKING NAMES AND PATTING THE BOYS ON THE BACK.

BUFFALO, N.Y., JUNE 6-(AP)-NINETY-TWO NURSES HAVE BEEN DECORATED FOR WOUNDS RECEIVED IN ACTION AND FOR ACTS OF HEROISM DURING WORLD WAR II, COL.FLORENCE M.BLANCHFIELD OF WASHINGTON, SUPERINTENDENT OF THE ARMY NURSE CORPS, SAID TODAY.

JUN 7 1944

COL.BLANCHFIELD, WHO ADDRESSED MORE THAN 3,000 DELEGATES ATTENDING THE NATIONAL BIENNIAL NURSING CONVENTION, DECLARED:

"NINETY-TWO NURSES HAVE SHARED WITH OTHER MEMBERS OF THE MILITARY PERSONNEL IN DECORATIONS AND AWARDS FOR WOUNDS RECEIVED IN ACTION, OUTSTANDING DEVOTION TO DUTY, HEROISM AND EXCEPTIONAL ABILITY IN ORGANIZATION. THE AWARDS INCLUDE THE PURPLE HEART, THE SOLDIER'S MEDAL, LEGION OF MERIT, AIR MEDAL WITH OAK LEAF CLUSTER AND THE SILVER STAR."

WILLIAM C.SCOTT OF NEW YORK, GENERAL COUNSEL FOR THE AMERICAN NURSING ASSOCIATION, SUGGESTED YESTERDAY THREE POSSIBLE AMENDMENTS THAT WOULD ALLOW NURSES TO "SHARE MORE EQUALLY" IN THE BENEFITS OF THE SOCIAL SECURITY LAW.

THE AMENDMENTS CALL FOR EXPANDING OF THE ACT TO INCLUDE EMPLOYES OF NON-PROFIT AND CHARITABLE ORGANIZATIONS AND TO INCLUDE STATE AND MUNICIPAL EMPLOYES UPON CONSENT OF THE STATES INVOLVED, AND SETTING UP OF VOLUNTARY PARTICIPATION, ENABLING PRIVATE DUTY NURSES, WHOSE WORK NOW COMES UNDER THE HEADING OF CASUAL LABOR, TO SHARE IN THE BENEFITS.

JUN 7 1944

A DRAMATIC 10-SECOND INTERVAL PRECEDED THE OFFICIAL ANNOUNCEMENT TODAY THAT THE INVASION HAD BEGUN.

OVER A TRANS-ATLANTIC RADIOTELEPHONE HOOKUP DIRECT FROM SUPREME HEADQUARTERS, ALLIED EXPEDITIONARY FORCE, TO ALL MAJOR PRESS SERVICES AND BROADCASTING NETWORKS IN THE UNITED STATES CAME THE VOICE OF COL. R.ERNEST DUPUY, GEN.EISENHOWER'S PUBLIC RELATIONS OFFICER.

"THIS IS SUPREME HEADQUARTERS, ALLIED EXPEDITIONARY FORCE," DUPUY SAID. "THE TEXT OF COMMUNIQUE NO.1 WILL BE RELEASED TO THE PRESS AND RADIO OF THE UNITED NATIONS IN 10 SECONDS."

THEN THE SECONDS WERE COUNTED OFF -- ONE, TWO, THREE. . . . . AND FINALLY 10.

"UNDER THE COMMAND OF GENERAL EISENHOWER," SLOWLY READ COL.DUPUY. "ALLIED NAVAL FORCES SUPPORTED Y STRONG AIR FORCES BEGAN LANDING ALLIED ARMIES THIS MORNING ON THE NORTHERN COAST OF FRANCE."

THUS, OFFICIALLY, THE WORLD WAS TOLD THE NEWS WHICH IT HAD BEEN AWAITING FOR MONTHS.

DUPUY BEGAN READING IN BRITAIN AT EXACTLY 7:32 A.M., GREENWICH MERIDIAN TIME (3:32 A.M., EASTERN WAR TIME). HE READ THE 26-WORD COMMUNIQUE TWICE.

THE AMERICAN NEWS SERVICES AND BROADCASTING CHAINS HAD BEEN ADVISED SOME 15 MINUTES BEFORE THAT AN IMPORTANT ANNOUNCEMENT WAS FORTHCOMING. EARLIER GERMAN BROADCASTS OF ALLIED LANDINGS INDICATED WHAT THE ANNOUNCEMENT WOULD BE.

UNDATED GERMAN

BY THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

THE GERMAN NEWS AGENCY DNB AT 10 A.M. TODAY GAVE THIS VERSION OF THE ALLIED INVASION:

AN ANGLO-AMERICAN LARGE SCALE ATTACK AGAINST THE SEINE BAY AND NORMANDY BEGAN EARLY IN THE MORNING OF JUNE 6 WITH THE DROPPING OF MAJOR AIRBORNE FORMATIONS BETWEEN THE ESTUARIES OF THE SEINE AND ORNE, IN THE AREA OF ISIGNY, CAEN AND NEAR BARFLEUR AT THE NORTHEASTERN TIP OF THE PENINSULA OF NORMANDY.

WHILE THE PARACHUTISTS DROPPED BETWEEN THE SEINE AND ORNE AS WELL AS STRONG GROUPS OF PARACHUTISTS DROPPED NEAR BARFLEUR WERE ANNIHILATED, FIGHTING IN THE AREA OF ISIGNY AND CAEN IS IN PROGRESS STILL.

ABOUT TWO HOURS AFTER THE FIRST PARACHUTISTS' LANDING, LARGE-SCALE AMPHIBIOUS OPERATIONS COMMENCED ON A WIDE FRONT BETWEEN LE HAVRE AND CHERBOURG, WITH THE FOCAL POINTS AGAIN DIRECTED AGAINST THE RIVER'S ESTUARIES.

ANOTHER FOCAL POINT DEVELOPED AT DAWN TODAY IN THE DISTRICT BETWEEN CAEN AND ISIGNY, WHERE THE ATTACKING ANGLO-AMERICAN FORCES WERE FAVORED BY TERRAIN CONDITIONS. THEY SUCCEEDED AT TWO PLACES IN REACHING THE COAST, AND IN ADVANCING WITH THEIR TANKS SEVERAL KILOMETERS SOUTHWARD.

ACCORDING TO THE FIRST REPORTS RECEIVED SO FAR, EIGHT OF 35 ENEMY TANKS ALREADY HAVE BEEN DESTROYED.

FURTHER VERY STRONG DISEMBARKMENTS TOOK PLACE AT THE SMALL COASTAL PLACE AT ST.VAAST LA HOUGUE, WHERE A VIOLENT ARTILLERY DUEL DEVELOPED BETWEEN GERMAN COASTAL BATTERIES AND NAVAL FORCES OF THE ALLIED LANDING FLEET. AS ALREADY REPORTED, ONE CRUISER AND ONE MAJOR LANDING VESSEL HEAVILY LADEN WITH TROOPS AND HEAVY ARMS WERE SUNK BY DIRECT HITS.

GRIM FIGHTING IS TAKING PLACE IN THE DISTRICT OF THE ESTUARY OF TH ORNE AND VIRE.

PROTECTED BY NUMEROUS LIGHT NAVAL FORCES AND ARTIFICIAL FOG, LANDING BOATS OF VARIOUS TYPES ENTERED THE RIVER ESTUARIES, ATTEMPTING TO CARRY OUT MAJOR SCALE LANDING OPERATIONS IN THE REAR OF THE ATLANTIC WALL.

NORTH OF CAEN A GROUP FROM A LANDING VESSEL WAS COMPLETELY ANNIHILATED BY THE SURPRISE ATTACK OF A GERMAN RESERVE FORMATION, IN WHICH THE INVADERS SUFFERED HEAVY CASUALTIES AND CONSIDERABLE LOSSES IN MATERIAL.

REGARDING THE FIGHTING ON THE VIRE ESTUARY NO DETAILS ARE AVAILABLE SO FAR.

THE NAVAL AND AIRBORNE OPERATIONS WERE SUPPORTED BY STRONG ALLIED FIGHTER FORMATIONS. HOW MANY ALLIED TROOPS HAVE BEEN EMPLOYED IN THE AMPHIBIOUS OPERATIONS CANNOT BE SAID SO FAR.

GERMAN MILITARY CIRCLES ASSUME THAT INVASION OPERATIONS WILL BE EXTENDED TO A WIDER COASTAL STRIP BEFORE LONG.

IN THE BAY OF ST.MALO ATTEMPTED MAJOR ATTACKS AGAINST THE ATLANTIC WALL ARE EXPECTED. AN ATTACK AGAINST THIS DISTRICT WILL BE THE MORE ALLURING TO THE ALLIES SINCE IN THE BAY OF ST.MALO ARE THE WELL-KNOWN CHANNEL ISLANDS OF GUERNSEY, JERSEY, AND SARK, WHICH UP TO JUNE, 1940, REPRESENTED BRITISH CLAIMS TO THE WESTERN FRENCH COAST.

IT IS ALSO POSSIBLE THAT THE ANGLO-SAXONS WILL EXTEND THEIR INVASION ATTEMPTS TO THE COASTAL DISTRICT BETWEEN THE SOMME AND SEINE ESTUARIES, WHILE AN ATTACK AGAINST THE COAST ZONE OF BOULOGNE AND CALAIS NEXT TO THE BRITISH ISLES IS NOT EXPECTED FOR THE TIME BEING.

THE AREA OF THE ALLIED LANDINGS IN FRANCE YESTERDAY (TUES) IS ROUGHLY THE SAME AS THAT IN WHICH THE BRITISH ARMY OF KING HENRY V LANDED IN 1415 IN THE CAMPAIGN CLIMAXED BY THE BATTLE OF AGINCOURT.

AS MIGHT HAVE BEEN SUSPECTED, SHAKESPEARE HAD AN APPROPRIATE LINE OR TWO FOR THAT INVASION OF MORE THAN 500 YEARS AGO AND FOR THE PRESENT AS WELL.

IN HIS HENRY V, HE ADDRESSED THESE WORDS TO HIS AUDIENCE:

"AND THENCE TO FRANCE

(NY)--AMERICANS REACTED WITH COOL CONFIDENCE TO THE NEWS THAT LONG-AWAITED D-DAY HAD ARRIVED.

REVELRY WAS CONSPICUOUSLY ABSENT. THE PEOPLE WERE AWARE THAT THE HARDEST FIGHTING LAY AHEAD.

THE ONLY DEMONSTRATIONS YESTERDAY WERE THOSE OF PRAYER FOR THE MEN WHO CRASHED THROUGH THE ENEMY'S DEFENSES TO LAND IN FRANCE.

HOUSES OF WORSHIP IN MANY CITIES AND TOWNS WERE OPEN FOR SPECIAL PRAYERS FOR SPEEDY VICTORY.

PRESIDENT ROOSEVELT, DURING THE EARLY HOURS OF THE INVASION, WROTE A PRAYER TO READ TO THE NATION LAST NIGHT. IN IT HE ASKED FOR DIVINE GUIDANCE FOR THE MEN ON THE BATTLE FRONT, FOR THOSE AT HOME AND FOR "A PEACE THAT WILL LET ALL MEN LIVE IN FREEDOM, REAPING THE JUST REWARDS OF THEIR HONEST TOIL."

WAR WORKERS ON SWING SHIFTS GREETED THE INVASION NEWS WITH WHOOPS OR A MOMENT OF QUIET REFLECTION, THEN TURNED BACK TO THEIR JOBS.

STREET SCENES WERE MUCH THE SAME AS ON ANY OTHER DAY EXCEPT FOR SMALL CLUSTERS OF PEOPLE LISTENING TO OUTDOOR RADIOS OR QUEUED UP AT NEWSTANDS.

JUN 7 1944

WHISTLES, SIRENS OR CHURCH BELLS SIGNALLED THE NEWS IN SOME CITIES AND TOWNS.

A BABY BORN IN DALLAS, TEX., AS SIRENS HERALDED THE INVASION WAS NAMED INVASIA MAE RENFROW.

A DAUGHTER BORN TO A NEGRO COUPLE IN NORFOLK, VA., WAS GIVEN THE NAME OF DEE DAY EDWARDS.

MOST MAJOR RACE TRACKS CANCELLED TODAY'S PROGRAMS. SEVERAL BASEBALL GAMES ALSO WERE CALLED OFF.

A NUMBER OF BIG DEPARTMENT STORES IN NEW YORK CITY CLOSED EARLY SO EMPLOYES COULD "PRAY AND HOPE FOR VICTORY."

SERVICE MEN WHO HAD BEEN RETURNED TO THIS COUNTRY GENERALLY EXPRESSED REGRET AT MISSING "THE BIG SHOW."

ONE OF THE QUIETEST PLACES OF ALL WAS IN NEW YORK CITY'S YORKVILLE SECTION, WHERE FRITZ KUHN ONCE MAINTAINED HEADQUARTERS OF THE GERMAN-AMERICAN BUND. THE PLACE WAS VACANT. KUHN WAS IN PRISON.

AT WEST POINT, THE DAY WAS A DOUBLE-THRILLER FOR THE CLASS GRADUATING SIMULTANEOUSLY WITH THE BEGINNING OF THE INVASION.

ONE OF THE GRADUATES WAS JOHN EISENHOWER, SON OF GEN.DWIGHT D. EISENHOWER, SUPREME COMMANDER OF THE INVASION FORCES.

RED CROSS OFFICIALS REPORTED A SHARP UPSWING IN TELEPHONE CALLS FROM PERSONS OFFERING TO DONATE BLOOD.

IN PITTSBURGH, PA., 1,000 STEEL WORKERS ON STRIKE RETURNED TO THEIR JOBS.

JUN 7 1944

GEN.GEORGE C.MARSHALL, CHIEF OF STAFF, AND WAR SECRETARY STIMSON, AWARE THAT ALL HAD BEEN DONE THAT COULD BE DONE IN ADVANCE, WERE AT HOME WHEN WORD OF THE INVASION REACHED THE UNITED STATES.

"I DID MY WORK BEFORE," SAID MARSHALL.

BY THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

(NY)...AMERICA RECEIVED NEWS OF THE INVASION OF EUROPE CALMLY TODAY AND TURNED TO THE ALTARS OF ITS FAITHS TO PRAY FOR PEACE WITH VICTORY.

IN THE NATION'S HAMLETS AND GREAT CITIES PEOPLE WENT TO CHURCHES, TEMPLES AND SYNAGOGUES TO MEDITATE AND TO PARTICIPATE IN THE SERVICES OF PRAYER SCHEDULED FOR D-DAY.

THERE WERE FEW DEMONSTRATIONS. GROUPS GATHERED AT NEWSSTANDS AND STOOD BEFORE RADIO LOUDSPEAKERS. COMMENT GENERALLY REFLECTED THE COMBINATION OF HOPE AND TREPIDATION WHICH MARKED THE END OF THE TENSE WAITING PERIOD.

THOUSANDS OF MEN AND WOMEN IN WAR PRODUCTION PLANTS OBSERVED A BRIEF MOMENT OF SILENCE, FOLLOWED BY AN IMMEDIATE RESUMPTION OF THE FLOW OF MATERIALS OF WAR. PLANT OFFICIALS ANNOUNCED UNIFORMLY AND PROUDLY THAT THE ANNOUNCEMENT CAME WITHOUT A SLACKENING OF OUTPUT.

IN NEW YORK A PUBLIC PRAYER OBSERVANCE, TO BE HELD AT 5:30 P.M. AT THE MADISON SQUARE ETERNAL LIGHT, WORLD WAR I MEMORIAL, WAS ANNOUNCED, CEREMONIES WHICH WILL BE REPEATED IN COMMUNITIES IN ALL PARTS OF THE COUNTRY.

SOME CITIES, SUCH AS ALBUQUERQUE, N.M., ANNOUNCED D-DAY AND H-HOUR WITH SIRENS AND WHISTLES, SUMMONING MEN AND WOMEN TO THEIR PLACES OF WORSHIP.

AT THE UNITED STATES VETERANS HOSPITAL IN NEW YORK, 1,800 MEN STILL HOSPITALIZED 25 YEARS AFTER WORLD WAR I WERE GIVEN THE NEWS BY NURSES. PATIENTS, IN PAJAMAS AND BATHROBES, WALKING ON CRUTCHES AND CANES, GATHERED ON THE HOSPITAL LAWNS AND BOWED IN SILENT PRAYER.

NEWSPAPERS ISSUED EXTRAS AND RADIO BROADCASTING COMPANIES PUSHED ALL SCHEDULED PROGRAMS ASIDE. THE NEW YORK DAILY NEWS THREW OUT ITS REGULAR EDITORIALS AND PRINTED INSTEAD THE LORD'S PRAYER. SPECIAL PRAYERS, PREVIOUSLY MADE PUBLIC BY CHURCH LEADERS, WERE PROMINENTLY DISPLAYED IN ALL NEWSPAPERS.

30. 24— 16005

THE NEW YORK STOCK EXCHANGE HALTED ITS ACTIVITIES FOR A TWO MINUTE PRAYER PERIOD.

EMERGENCY ORDERS FOR AUGMENTED PERSONNEL WENT OUT FROM THE NATION'S TELEPHONE COMPANIES.

AS AMERICAN SERVICE MEN ACCEPTED THE NEWS IN THEIR STRIDE A LIGHT NOTE WAS STRUCK BY A GROUP OF FRENCH SAILORS IN NEW YORK WHO LINKED ARMS AND JOYOUSLY DANCED DOWN BROADWAY.

AMERICAN RED CROSS OFFICIALS REPORTED THAT THEIR OFFICES WERE FLOODED WITH TELEPHONE CALLS FROM PROSPECTIVE BLOOD DONORS.

MAJOR RACE TRACKS SUSPENDED THEIR PROGRAMS, BUT GENERALLY SPORTS EVENTS WENT ON AS SCHEDULED.

VIRGINIA CIVILIAN DEFENSE OFFICIALS SENT OVER THE CIVILIAN AIR RAID WARNING SYSTEM A SUMMONS TO 8 P.M. PRAYER MEETINGS IN ALL CITIES AND MOST TOWNS.

LORD & TAYLOR, NEW YORK SPECIALTY SHOP, CLOSED FOR THE DAY AND ITS 3,000 EMPLOYES WERE GIVEN THE DAY OFF "TO PRAY AND HOPE FOR VICTORY."

NEW YORK, JUNE 6-(AP)-JOAN ELLIS, THE GIRL WHO STARTLED MILLIONS WITH HER FALSE FLASH REPORT OF ALLIED LANDINGS IN FRANCE TWO DAYS IN ADVANCE OF THE ACTUAL EVENT, WAS CHEERED TODAY BY CABLED EXPRESSIONS OF ENCOURAGEMENT TELLING HER "YOU DIDN'T MISS IT MUCH."

A CABLEGRAM FROM THE MIAMI DAILY NEWS ADDRESSED TO THE 22-YEAR-OLD BRITISH GIRL AT THE ASSOCIATED PRESS' LONDON OFFICE, SAID "CHEER UP. ALL IS FORGIVEN. YOU DIDN'T MISS IT MUCH."

THE MESSAGE WAS TELEPHONED TO HER HOME WHERE SHE WAS REPORTED STILL RESTING.

NEWSPAPER EDITORS ACROSS THE NATION RALLIED WITH EXPRESSIONS OF GOOD WISHES FOR THE GIRL WHOSE CARELESS TELETYPE PRACTICE FLASH, "EISENHOWER'S HEADQUARTERS ANNOUNCE ALLIED LANDINGS FRANCE," WAS NOT FAR FROM THE ACTUAL FLASH SOME 60 HOURS LATER READING "EISENHOWER'S HEADQUARTERS ANNOUNCES ALLIES LAND IN FRANCE."

TYPICAL COMMENTS FROM EDITORS:

SOUTH BEND (IND.) TRIBUNE: "PLEASE CABLE JOAN ELLIS OUR EXPENSE THAT INDIANA THINKS YOU KNEW IT ALL THE TIME. CONGRATULATIONS."

MAYFIELD (KY.) MESSENGER: "TELL THE BRITISH GIRL WHO FLASHED THE INVASION SATURDAY THAT WE ALL LOVE HER AND THAT SHE SCOOPED THE WORLD."

FREDERICKSBURG (VA.) FREE LANCE STAR: ".....JOAN ELLIS SHOULD BE THANKED FOR PUTTING US ON ALERT."

PARIS, (KY.) DAILY ENTERPRISE: "TELL JOAN ELLIS LONDON NO ONE HERE INTERESTED IN FLASH. ALL FORGIVEN. GOOD LUCK. CARRY ON."

PORTLAND (ORE.) OREGONIAN: "TO JOAN ELLIS, TO ERR IS HUMAN."

HARTFORD (CONN.) COURANT: "TODAY IS ANOTHER DAY. IT'S EYES FRONT AND GOOD LUCK."

FREDERICK (MD.) NEWS: "TELL JOAN WE THINK SHE WAS ON HER TOES AND NO ONE WILL HOLD ANYTHING AGAINST HER."

THE NEW ORLEANS STATES COMMENTED EDITORIALLY:

"JOAN, SO FAR AS THE NEW ORLEANS STATES IS CONCERNED, THERE IS NOTHING TO FORGIVE. PERHAPS YOU WERE WISHFULLY THINKING, AS WE ALL WERE. PERHAPS YOU WERE IMPATIENT FOR D-DAY, AS WE ALL WERE.

A U.S. HEAVY BOMBER BASE IN SOVIET UNION, JUNE 6-(AP)-STRIKING FROM BASES IN RUSSIA FOR THE FIRST TIME IN HISTORY, HEAVY BOMBERS OF THE FIFTEENTH U.S. AIR FORCE TODAY BLASTED A GERMAN AIRPORT AT THE ROMANIAN CITY OF GALATI, AT THE MOUTH OF THE DANUBE RIVER. JUN 7 1944

IT WAS THE SECOND PHASE OF THE SHUTTLE BOMBING OVER THE RUSSIAN-GERMAN BORDER BY THE MEDITERRANEAN-BASED AMERICAN HEAVY BOMBERS WHICH LANDED IN RUSSIA AFTER HAMMERING DEBRECEN, HUNGARY, LAST WEEK.

THE ATTACK WAS ON A TARGET IN DIRECT SUPPORT OF THE RED ARMY AND THE FLYING FORTRESSES WERE ESCORTED BY BOTH SOVIET AND AMERICAN FIGHTERS, AS THEY WERE WHEN THEY CROSSED THE GERMAN-RUSSIAN FRONT IN THE INITIAL PHASE OF THE SHUTTLE BOMBING TRIP.

TODAY IT WAS A COMPLETE JOINT OPERATION FOR RED ARMY GROUND CREWS WORKED SHOULDER TO SHOULDER WITH GI'S IN LOADING BOMBS AND SERVICING THE SHIPS.

A COMMUNIQUE SAID SIX ENEMY INTECCEPTOR PLANES WERE SHOT DOWN AND TWO AMERICAN FIGHTERS HAD NOT YET RETURNED.

LT. GEN. ALEXEI PERMINOV, WHO SAT IN ON THE AMERICAN BRIEFING LAST NIGHT, SMILED AND SAID "VERY WELL DONE," AS THE LAST BOMBER LANDED.

JUN 7 1944

"THE TARGET WAS WELL HIT," SAID THE COMMANDER FROM CHICAGO AFTER PUTTING DOWN ON RUSSIAN SOIL AGAIN. "I BELIEVE YOU WILL FIND THE AIRFIELD COMPLETELY DESTROYED. IT WAS PRACTICALLY A MILK RUN."

ASKED IF HE'D HEARD ABOUT THE INVASION HE GASPED AND SAID:

"BOY! HAS IT REALLY COME OFF?" THEN HE ADDED LAUGHINGLY "WELL, I'M GLAD I'M HERE."

MAJ. JOHN MORRIS, OAKLANDON, IND., A PILOT, SAID HE HEARD OF THE INVASION WHILE RETURNING TO THE BASE AFTER DROPPING HIS BOMBS.

"NO, WE DIDN'T TELL THE CREW. THEY'D HAVE DONE NOTHING BUT LISTEN TO THE RADIO, I EXPECT," HE SAID.

MORRIS AND OTHERS SAID FLAK WAS LIGHT OVER THE TARGET. NO PLANES WERE HIT.

CAPT. BILL JETT, LAS CRUCES, N.M., SAID BOATS ON THE DANUBE SCURRIED FOR COVER WHEN BOMBS BEGAN FALLING.

SGT.WILLIAM UMSTEAD, WASHINGTON, D.C., FORMERLY OF WASHINGTON UNIVERSITY, SAID HE LEARNED ABOUT THE INVASION FROM THE RUSSIANS WHEN HE LANDED.

LT.HARRY T.LEIGNER, NASHOTAH, WIS., SAID HE LEARNED ABOUT THE INVASION ABOUT THE TIME HE WAS CROSS[illegible] THE RUSSIAN-GERMAN FRONT.

"WHAT DID I SAY? WHY I SAID: 'THAT'S WONDERFUL. WE'VE JUST PUT OUT BOMBS DOWN FROM RUSSIAN BASES AND HERE'S THE SECOND FRONT. FELLOWS, THINGS ARE GOING FINE.'"

Allies Drop Fiery Curtain of Bombs

Warplanes Have Flown a Total of 31,000 Sorties Against Europe Since June 1— Road Junctions Heavily Attacked.

By Austin Beaucar

JUN 8 1944

SUPREME HEADQUARTERS, Allied Expeditionary Force, June 7 (AP)—Allied warplanes, which have flown a total of 31,000 sorties against Europe since June 1, threw down a blazing curtain of bombs and bullets intended to cut off both help and escape for German troops on the perimeters of the expanding beachheads in France.

South of Caen 250 to 500 Flying Fortresses and Liberators heavily attacked road junctions to block off German reinforcements. In this unusual front-line use of heavy bombers, neither anti-aircraft fire nor German fighter opposition was encountered.

NIGHT

Clouds prevented assessment of the damage done.

U. S. government monitors heard a German radio broadcast that Allied "nuisance raiders" were approaching southwest Germany possibly presaging a return of RAF night attacks on the Reich which has been spared recently while bombers concentrated on tactical targets).

Allied fighter planes were holding an aerial cordon around the beachheads that spelled a virtual death warrant for enemy aircraft trying to attack, while swarms of other planes of nearly every sort scourged the German reinforcement routes.

Weather Bad

Flying weather continued bad and enemy resistance slowly increased, but the Allied airmen flew lower than customary to pour explosives and airborne reinforcements down on the Germans.

Fighters in a 50-mile arc strafed and bombed in advance of the Allied ground forces and shot up oil tank cars, trucks, airfields and flak towers.

During the forenoon medium bombers struck Rennes, Le Mans and Laval, rail junctions on a main east-west line to the Brest peninsula, where the Germans said new landings had been made.

The Germans said flying weather was improving somewhat, but this broadcast statement may have been by way of excuse for their belated air reaction to the invasion. They apparently either were caught flat-footed by being concentrated in the wrong places, or lacked usable airfields in northern France.

The effects of the tremendous Allied pre-invasion attacks on Nazi communications was reflected in the disclosure that on D-day only one railroad bridge and five highway bridges were undamaged over the Seine between Paris and the sea.

Every railroad bridge and all except two highway bridges between Paris and Rouen had been destroyed. Some bridges still intact were captured by Allied air-borne forces before the Germans could damage them.

Nazi Planes

The German air force, absent from the skies through most of D-day, began to rise slowly to Reichsmarshal Hermann Goering's order to fight or perish and its losses mounted to at least 58 planes since invasion began.

Allied losses in a like period reached 70 as air units threw caution to the winds and defied weather and ground defenses alike to bomb and strafe enemy columns, armor, convoys of trucks, trains, railyards and air fields.

Half of one armored convoy of 75 to 100 vehicles was reported wiped out by 16 Thunderbolts.

Fighters mounted guard while troop carrier planes, many towing gliders filled with fighting men, dumped more parachute troopers behind the enemy lines last night and early today. A headquarters announcement said 12 carriers and 12 gliders were missing in these new thrusts.

At least 200 fighters were on constant patrol over a 60-mile sector of Normandy where troops were fighting inland and a dozen Junkers-88 bombers were routed with the loss of four when they tried to break through in the first attempt to raid the beachhead.

Mosquitos on offensive patrol caught five German troop carriers attempting to move up reinforcements and shot them all down.

In a thunderous climax to D-day air operations in which the Allies flew an amazing total of over 12,000 sorties, the Royal Air Force sent more than 1,000 heavy bombers in two waves, drenching targets just behind the invasion area with more than 5,600 tons of bombs last night.

Lost 13 Bombers

They lost 13 bombers as some of them dived to the suicidal level of 2,000 feet to get under cloud cover and make sure their bombs fell true. They carried orders to get down below if they found clouds over their objectives.

Long before dawn today the Eighth Air Force was out in force, patrolling the beachhead, strafing and bombing. More enemy planes were in the air than were seen all during yesterday.

One formation bombed a train of fuel cars and a pilot said he had just counted 27 of them when they all disappeared in one big explosion. This same group shot up four locomotives, other tank cars and several radio towers.

RAF bombers had expected German night fighter packs to be out in force as they set out last night to hit road and rail junctions and bridges 15 to 40 miles beyond the coast—key points through which reinforcements for the front line were expected to be pouring.

While enemy fighters appeared at some points, the opposition generally was so light that the heavy bombers went in for the unusual activity of ground strafing, gunners setting their sights in the hope of finding a supply train.

Allied air officers admitted surprise at the lack of German air opposition and some predicted huge battles would be raging over France before many weeks pass.

Knocked Out Bases

One idea advanced is that Allied aerial bombardment knocked out operational bases on which the Germans had counted for close support of their troops along the coast. Some also may have been captured by Allied parachute forces. The Germans have an estimated 1,750 fighters and 500 bombers in the west.

The Allied warplanes continued to deal out punishment to air bases today. A group of Mustangs shot up an air field and left four FW-190s riddled and burning. Another just coming in to land was shot down by Capt. Lewis Peter Jr., San Antonio, Tex.

One Thunderbolt unit after bombing a railroad yard and rail bridges met about a dozen ME-109s and shot down three. One was bagged by Capt. Ben Mayo, Jr., Little Rock, Ark., who found on returning to base that he had gone through the dog fight with a bomb still hanging under his wing.

Capt. James Cheney Briggsdale, Ohio, tangled with four FW-190s at 6,000 feet and saw one hit the ground and explode.

Knock Out Gun

One ninth airforce Thunderbolt group, hitting objectives on the Cherbourg peninsula close to the fighting and where naval fire also was concentrated, put a gun emplacement out of action, attacked a highway pass and a railroad bridge. The same group knocked out four to six trucks in a convoy moving toward the front and shot up six locomotives at a roundhouse at Airel.

While one force of mediums was hitting rail targets, other Marauders and Havocs struck targets directly in the path of invading ground forces, including gun positions along the invasion coast and communication objectives behind the enemy's front lines.

In attacks on communications, these medium and light bombers ranged from close behind the enemy lines to as far as 50 miles inland.

Weather forced some flights down below 2,000 feet, where they encountered machine-gun fire, but no medium or light bombers were lost.

A U. S. Eighth Air Force Thunderbolt group headed by Col. Glenn E. Duncan of Houston, Tex., blocked at least three railway tunnels in France during the day, throwing further obstacles in the path of enemy troops and supplies.

JUN 8 1944

"We came in very low and skipped our bombs into the opening," said Lt. Kenneth Chetwood, Guernsey, Wyo., who led one flight down almost to the mouth of a tunnel. "The whole thing just caved in like an eggshell."

The other two tunnels were sealed at both ends. One of them by a flight led by Lt. Leslie Cles, Powell, Wyo. Flights led by Lt. Joseph Furness, 83 Bradford road, Schenectady, N. Y., and Capt. Dewey Newhart, 102 South 19th street, St. Joseph, Mo., each blocked an end of the third tunnel.

American Havocs bombed a German army field headquarters while Lightnings armed with 1,000-pound bombs demolished another as bombers of all sizes, fighters and fighter-bombers swarmed to the close support of the embattled beachhead forces.

A Thunderbolt group headed by Col. Glenn E. Duncan, Houston, Tex., blocked at least three railway tunnels in France to multiply the troubles of the enemy.

The air ministry said two German E-boats trying to interfere with landing operations were destroyed last night by RAF Coastal command planes, another probably was destroyed and three were damaged.

The supreme command said operations were on the same scale as yesterday's, which indicated total sorties for the two days would reach the 24,000 mark since the invasion began if night attacks match those of the previous night.

The headquarters hit by Havocs was located in a wooded area near the front. The light bombers then sprayed concentrations of troops with machine-gun fire.

At the same time Marauders struck further inland, about 25 miles from the coast, hitting railroad yards and loading platforms on a main line paralleling the shore.

Hit Ammunition Train

Marauders attacking a rail center near Vire caught the Germans unloading a freight train and a tremendous explosion indicated an ammunition car had been hit.

INVADERS WIN TOWN IN HEAVY FIGHTING

GALLAGHER JUN 8 1944

Every Railroad Bridge and All but Two Highway Bridges Between Paris and Rouen Reported Smashed.

Supreme Advance Command Post, Allied Expeditionary Force, June 7 (A. P.).—German armored counter-attacks have been thrown back near Caen and the Allied forces are advancing on a broad front along which heavy airborne reinforcements have been thrown into the fighting, Allied Headquarters said tonight.

At the same time German accounts told of airborne landings at other points, not confirmed by headquarters. The Germans indicated that a bold attempt eo cut off the Cherbourg peninsula and seize the vital trans-Atlantic port of Cherbourg may be in progress. The Berlin radio declared that a new Allied seaborne landing off Le Havre, where a hundred or more Allied warships had been previously reported, had been beaten back by coastal guns.

This report was not confirmed here, nor were other German reports that an entire Allied air division had been landed on the west coast of the Normandy Peninsula and other airborne forces dropped at Lessay and Coutance, thirty and forty-four miles below Cherbourg.

With the enemy cleared from their landing beaches, many of which had been linked into a solid front, the Allies sent from 250 to 500 Flying Fortresses and Liberators—part of a day-long aerial parade—to bomb the road intersections south of Caen and block off the German reinforcements rolling northward.

JUN 8 1944

Reports from the Cherbourg Peninsula invasion front showed decided improvement at midday after being "disappointing" early this morning, headquarters said. The Allies are making considerable progress now on the whole front despite bad weather and stiffening resistance, a headquarters officer said.

DAY

[In a broadcast picked up at New York this afternoon by NBC, the Berlin radio said that the Germans had given up the town of Bayeux, six miles inland on the Cherbourg Peninsula and sixteen miles northwest of Caen. Atlantic, the German underground radio station, said that the town was lost by the Nazis after a night battle.

[The British Information Service, in a cable from London, said that aerial reconnaissance showed that all railroad bridges between Paris and Rouen were down and that only two highway bridges remained. Only one railroad bridge and five highway bridges over the Seine between Paris and Le Havre were said to be intact.]

Meanwhile today both sides dropped airborne troops into the battlefront, with Allied parachutists and glider troops pouring down from a fifty-mile-long reinforcing sky train.

The huge numbers of airborne Allied troops seized key positions and helped throw back Nazi tank-led counter-blows. The Germans likewise rushed in parachutists.

The British Sixth Air Force Division captured bridges north of Caen, headquarters said. There was no official comment on a German report that a whole Allied airborne division had been landed on the west coast of the Cherbourg Peninsula.

Wholly unconfirmed reports said penetrations as deep as twelve miles had been made by the Allies. Headquarters said reports early this morning indicated Allied forces had accomplished less than scheduled, but that later word made the situation a cause for neither pessimism nor optimism, but "sober satisfaction."

Heavy German counter-attacks may be expected, and Berlin said Field Marshal Erwin Rommel was rushing up reserves of the German Seventh and Fifteenth armies. Skyborne troops were thrown in directly and quickly.

For four months the Germans have been building an airborne army for just this purpose, led by Lieut.-Gen. Murt Student, who engineered the landings in Crete. R. A. F. Mosquitoes last night destroyed five Junkers-52 troop carriers.

The peninsula, aflame with fighting again supported by Allied sea and air power, was strewn with colored parachutes of troops and engineers, rations and equipment dropped from the sky. Two of the reinforcing air waves were two-plane glider combinations.

Nazis Report New Thrusts.

The Germans said they beat off new landing attempts near Calais, 150 miles northeast of Cherbourg, but later their reports indicated German coastal guns merely fired at Allied ships in the area, and there were no indications Supreme Headquarters was trying to invade there.

Allied invasion task forces have been sailing in feints past many points, keeping the Germans in doubt where the next landings would come.

In their fifty-mile-long aerial train, three waves of United States Ninth Air Force gliders carried "a steady stream of men, equipment and supplies" to forces already fighting inland on Cherbourg Peninsula, Supreme Headquarters said.

Airborne troops have seized bridges and roads, and joined sea-landed troops at some points, front dispatches said, and some towns have been captured.

Nazis Admit Allies Are Stronger.

The German High Command admitted superior forces had established beachheads more than forty miles apart, at the mouth of the Orne River and north of Carentan, and a DNB broadcast said American troops, steadily being reinforced, were engaged near St. Mere Eglise, between Carentan and Cherbourg near the peninsula's tip.

DNB said the Allied bridgehead at the Orne River was about twenty-one miles wide and six miles deep at points, but declared a thrust to seize the town of Caen, nine miles inland, had been repulsed. There were consistent reports of heavy fighting at Caen. Berlin also reported heavy fighting at Bayeux between the Orne and Carentan, and late today the Germans said they had given up the town.

Lieut. Oliver E. Crespo of Corsicana, Tex., C-47 pilot who flew over the peninsula, said: "I saw our ground forces moving inland in single file to contact the enemy. Farther west our troops were engaging him."

The American Ninth Air Force announced thirty-three hours after H hour that its troop carrier command had completed its first assignment. The sky trains returned to Britain this morning after almost a day and a half of constant movement across the channel. More than 900 air-borne sorties were flown in addition to those by the British.

In the first specific report of airborne losses, the Ninth Air Force said twelve C-47 troop carriers and twelve gliders were missing from the reinforcing operations last night and early today.

JUN 8 1944

31,000 Sorties.

Air headquarters declared the Allied air forces in mammoth support of the invasion thrust had flown more than 31,000 sorties between June 1 and last night.

Thousands of Allied planes swept over the continental beaches again today. The communique announced that a total of more than 13,000 sorties had been flown up to dawn.

The Germans reported vigorous fighting over a broad front, and one Nazi broadcast suggested new Allied landings north of Le Havre, but Supreme Headquarters flatly declined to give any details of the land fighting on the grounds the Germans were fishing for information and did not know yet the exact extent of the Allied attack.

30.24 — 160 11

Staff officers at this morning's conferences here spent most of their time warning correspondents what they could not say, but did state that there had been "heavy landing fighting on many beaches" but that most of these beaches now were out of direct fire. A few, however, may still be in German range.

Staff officers explained their taciturnity here by saying that the German Command thus far probably was ignorant of the true strength and disposition of the invading troops. At points where the Germans think they might be engaged by a division there may be only a handful of Allied troops, they said. The opposite situation also could occur.

JUN 8 1944

It is certain, however, that some towns already are in Allied hands, since pilots have reported seeing Allied flags flying over them. But their names have not been given out officially.

It was apparent that the German High Command still was in doubt as to Allied intentions and had not yet brought the full weight of its armies to bear, although more Axis divisions were being committed to the unfolding struggle.

Bad weather hampered air operations, but the flyers struck with unprecedented power in the greatest series of attacks ever carried out on any war front. Most of the more than 13,000 sorties (individual flights) were flown by Americans yesterday, and a complete report recorded the destruction of fifty-three German planes for a loss of thirty-one Allied aircraft.

Nazi Communications Hit.

The attacks were concentrated in support of ground troops and on communications "choke" points behind the breached Atlantic Wall.

The completely successful air coverage included heavy bomber attacks on railways, communications and bridges in the general battle area and low-flying fighter-bomber and fighter assaults on the enemy's truck columns.

Military objectives were attacked at Serques in the Pas de Calais area by medium and light bombers and also at Abancourt, thirty-five miles inland from the coastal city of Dieppe; at Amiens and also at Vire, thirty-five miles southwest of Caen on the Normandy peninsula. Vire is on the road along which the Germans could move reinforcements into northern Normandy from Brittany.

Heavy night bombers also struck road targets behind the invasion area, including the junction at Chateaudun, seventy miles southwest of Paris.

Some reports r ching here said the troops fighting in the Caen area had already severed the Paris-Cherbourg railway, major feeder route for the Germans garrisoned on the 5,000-square-mile Normandy peninsula. One report said the Allied troops had advanced 13 miles inland at the base of the peninsula.

A Vichy broadcast said that Rouen, ancient French cathedral city 41 miles east of Le Havre, is now "almost completely deserted." It was north of Rouen that the Vichy radio last night said a vicious fight was raging "between powerful Allied paratroop formations and German anti-invasion forces."

Nazi Stories Of Battle Areas Conflict

German broadcasts still gave conflicting versions of the battle areas, in some cases saying the Allies had been thrown back into the sea except for the Caen area, and then later putting them astride the main road leading into Cherbourg at a point only ten miles from that major port.

Caen is a rail and road hub controlling routes to all of northern Normandy. It also has landing docks and they apparently are an immediate goal of the Allies since the Germans said that landing craft had already pushed up the river from the coast.

The German high command in its broadcast communique declared heavy fighting continued on both sides of the mouth of the Orne river, above Caen, and north of Carentan, a town farther west. Berlin claimed most of the Allied beachheads had been "smashed," with most of the air-borne formations "wiped out."

JUN 8 1944

British Gain Bridges Above Caen

(In New York the British Information Service said the British Sixth Air-Borne Division has captured and is holding bridges north of Caen.)

The Vichy radio reported that Allied paratroopers had established a hedgehog position astride the road linking Carentan and Valognes. Berlin reported heavy fighting at Bayeux, between the Orne and Carentan.

Field reports placed United States troops well in the fore of the advance, striking inland after establishing beachheads at several points, but said they were under heavy counter-attack early today.

Lieut. Oliver E. Crespo, of Corsicana, Texas, a C-47 pilot who flew over the peninsula, said: "I saw our ground forces moving inland in single file to contact the enemy. Farther west our troops were engaging him."

Nazis Indicate Confusion

The Berlin radio clearly indicated that the air-borne assaults were spreading great confusion behind German lines, and said again that the Nazis had been duped by parachuting sacks of straw loaded with explosives that blew up when they were touched.

"Satisfactory progress" is being made in the invasion under thundering blows by great sea and air fleets, headquarters announced, and officers described the tricky air-borne operations as "a complete success."

Great bomber fleets droned out to blast Nazi defenses and troops today, possibly in strength equaling or surpassing the stupendous total of 13,000 sorties yesterday.

German broadcasts said fierce counterattacks had been made against the Allies east of Cherbourg, apparently a major Allied objective, 65 miles northwest of Caen.

(In Stockholm, Aftonbladet's Berlin correspondent said the Germans acknowledged that the fighting was violent and hard, but claimed the defenders were largely battle-tried veterans of the Eastern front. Another dispatch said the Germans failed to send up any effective air resistance because of "poor weather over the invasion coast.")

200-Mile Air-Invasion Train

It was disclosed that more than 900 of the Ninth Air Force's C-47 troop transports and gliders were used in the opening invasion thrust, forming a train nine planes wide and 200 miles long.

Berlin dispatches to Stockholm said six Allied air-borne divisions totaling 25,000 men had been landed since yesterday morning.

Headquarters still did not identify the initial objectives of the American, British and Canadian infantrymen and air-borne troops.

The weather brightened in Dover strait early this evening, with sunshine, patches of blue sky, and the barometer rising. There was a fairly strong northwest wind but the sea was smooth on the English side. This morning there had been gray, cloudy skies.

Nazi Fleet Out Of Picture

"No further attempt at interference with our sea-borne landing was made by enemy naval forces," the third invasion communique said. "Those coastal batteries still in action are being bombarded by Allied warships."

Most of the communique was devoted to the tremendous aerial assistance being given the Allied ground troops.

While noting increased enemy air operations, there still was no sign that Reichsmarshal Goering had begun to risk his weaker sky arm in big-scale attacks

'Heavy Fighting On Many Beaches'

The Germans reported vigorous fighting over a broad front and one Nazi broadcast suggested new Allied landings north of Le Havre.

But supreme headquarters flatly declined to give any details of the land fighting, on the ground the Germans were fishing for information and did not know yet the exact extent of the Allied attack.

Staff officers at this morning's conferences there spent most of their time warning correspondents what they could not say. However, they did state that there had been "heavy landing fighting on many beaches," but that most of these beaches now were out of "direct" fire.

JUN 8 1944

Many veterans are in the American assault group led by battle-tried officers whose names have not been announced.

The American navy announced there had been no more American naval losses since President Roosevelt's statement yesterday that two destroyers and one landing craft had been sunk.

Bad weather hampered air operations, but the flyers delivered the greatest series of attacks ever made on any war front.

(A German broadcast heard in New York this morning claimed 94 Allied planes were downed yesterday.)

The attacks were concentrated in support of ground troops and on communication "choke" points behind the breached Atlantic Wall.

Nazis Claim Air Blow Dealt

The Berlin radio said that strong Nazi bomber formations had attacked Allied warships and landing craft just after midnight off the coast north of Le Havre. "Results were good," the German Transocean News Agency said.

German long-range guns on the French coast some 150 miles above the Allied invasion beachheads fired across Dover Strait for nearly two hours today. For half an hour batteries between Boulogne and Calais sent over as many as four and six shells at a time. The explosions shook coastal towns on this side.

Le Havre, France's second seaport, already is threatened by Allied troops attacking south of it on the lower side of the Seine estuary, Berlin has indicated.

New Allied Fleets Reported

Before telling of the fight between German bombers and invading landing craft north of Le Havre, the Berlin radio quoted a high-command statement that "fresh, strong enemy naval units" were off the Calais-Dunkirk coast — the French shore nearest Britain.

The Axis-controlled Paris radio said another armada had been spotted off Boulogne, south of Calais.

The German International Information Bureau broadcast that German naval forces surprised and attacked three Allied destroyers in the mouth of the Seine river at 3.38 A. M., setting one of them afire. There was no Allied confirmation.

The Paris radio meantime claimed "annihilation" of parachute troops on the Channel islands of Jersey and Guernsey. There has been no Allied confirmation of landings on these islands.

Allied troops already have cleared Norman beaches of shell-dazed Axis coast defense units and are pushing on inland with the apparent objective of seizing the peninsula with its prize port of Cherbourg on the tip, returning airmen said.

Engineers were using big bulldozers, landed in the first hours of D-day, to hack out landing strips for the succeeding waves of reinforcements which Berlin said hit the beaches during the night.

Canadians Gain Beachhead

One fighter-bomber flight leader yesterday reported:

"The American beachhead was going along very successfully, but the British and Canadians were getting the hell beat out of them for a while. In the afternoon their position eased off."

A dispatch from Ross Munro, Canadian Press correspondent, said the Canadian invasion force won its beachhead and moved inland after just two hours and forty-five minutes of fighting. Munro's dispatch was the first received here from the soil of France.

Fortified Town Of Bayeux in Net

Cathedral City Falls in Heavy Fighting—Eisenhower and British Admiral Ramsay Cruise Off Invasion Beaches—All Coastal Guns Silenced—Over 12,000 Air Sorties Flown in Day—Situation Satisfactory.

By Wes Gallagher

JUN 8 1944

SUPREME HEADQUARTERS ALLIED EXPEDITIONARY FORCE, Thursday, June 8 (AP)—The Allies announced today capture of their first French city, the Nazi-fortified town of Bayeux, five miles inshore in the ter of the Normandy coast, and said they also had cut highway from Bayeux to Caen as they moved inland i nerally heavy fighting against counter-attacking Germa erves.

Caen, 18 miles southeast of Bayeux a e miles from the sea, was the scene of a German arm ounter-attack which has been hurled back, headqua isclosed, and the Allied forces were said to be doi ally "better than expected."

Other Towns Not Mentioned

Aside from these two towns, supreme headquarters gave no place-names, ignoring a continuing stream of German broadcasts which reported new Allied attacks all the way from the Pas De Calais area on Dover Strait to Nantes at the base of the big Brittany peninsula jutting out into the Atlantic.

A headquarters communique said the Allied landing beaches had been cleared of the enemy and had been linked up by flank extensions in some cases during the second day of the invasion while steady reinforcements poured in by sea and air.

The supreme commander, Gen. Dwight D. Eisenhower toured the beach areas in a British vessel for four and one-half hours Wednesday conferring with Gen. Sir Bernard L. Montgomery and other operational chieftains less than five miles from Ger man-held territory.

Germans Fishing

The German accounts, many apparently designed purely to provoke replies, claimed the British sixth parachute division had been "annihilated;" that a beachhead on the right bank of the Orne River had been wiped out; that a new amphibious attack had been made on the Calais area nearest Britain and heaviest bombed spot prior to the invasion; that new Allied airborne operations were directed against Lorient, Nantes and St. Brieuc—all on the Brittany peninsula, and on Falaise and Argentan, 30 miles south of Caen and 40 miles inland.

The Germans spoke at length of the "surprising" strength of airborne operations, and Allied headquarters confirmed that these were continued Wednesday on a large scale, without mentioning localities.

The Germans said Caen was aflame, and Allied accounts inferentially confirmed this by describing heavy air attacks in that area and shelling of it by the 16-inch guns of the British battleship Nelson.

Bayeux Town of 9,000

Heaviest fighting apparently centered around Caen and Bayeux, the latter a cathedral town, once of 9,000 population.

Reports from the front mentioned many casualties, although there was no solid evidence of the actual number or proportion. Both the U. S. and British navies reported their casualties in personnel and ships were so far very small.

Resistance of the German navy and air force continued relatively light, with E-boats driven off in two attacks and 51 German planes downed Wednesday by the overwhelming Allied air cover, which lost 23 of its own planes. Lightning fighter-bombers demolished a German headquarters Wednesday afternoon.

One returning flier said the Germans had flooded three large lowland areas near the beaches in efforts to hold up the Allied advance.

The German land forces put up increasing resistance that was expected to become still stronger as the Nazi command struggled to discern and meet the Allied strategy.

Allied airborne operations, a feature of the initial landings, were resumed Wednesday on a "very large scale," the Allied communique stated, while supplies and men moved constantly to the beaches despite strong northwest winds, which moderated somewhat tonight.

Remaining Coastal Guns Silenced

Clearing the beaches of the enemy freed the supply and reinforcement convoys and men from small arms attack, while naval forces silenced remaining German coastal guns which had escaped the first furious air and sea assault Tuesday.

Headquarters conservatively stated; "It is not yet known whether all have been finally reduced." The U. S. battleship Texas and the British cruiser Glasgow were officially credited in this work with aircraft spotters.

Air headquarters announced operations Wednesday were on as big a scale as Tuesday, which would mean that by Thursday morning the 48-hour total of sorties flown would possibly reach the nearly incredible total of 25,000.

Caen Road Junctions Bombed

Aircraft of all types participated in guarding the troops and attacking enemy positions, particularly in a 50-mile arc south of Caen, the high spot coming with a bombing raid on Caen road junctions by 250 to 500 American Flying Fortresses and Liberators to block German reinforcements.

It was disclosed during the evening that the supreme Allied commander, Gen. Dwight D. Eisenhower, had visited the beaches during Wednesday, going in a British vessel with the supreme naval commander, Admiral Sir Bertram Ramsay.

The Berlin radio said Field Marshal Erwin Rommel had rushed reserves of the German 7th and 15th armies into the mounting struggle.

The DNB German news agency said an Allied airborne division had been landed on the western coast of the Cherbourg peninsula—on the opposite side of the 30-mile strip of land from where the original sea and airborne landings were carried out. The landings were said to have been between Lessay and Coutance, 30 and 44 miles below Cherbourg.

Berlin Says One Landing Beaten Off

Another Berlin broadcast said an Allied landing attempt had been beaten off at Le Havre this afternoon.

Picked American combat teams that were pinned down on the beaches by fierce German fire for the first 24 hours of the offensive broke out and drove inland. Unconfirmed reports said penetrations had been made to a depth of 12 miles in some places, but the fighting was confused and no definite lines yet had been established.

The German high command admitted that "superior" forces had established beachheads more than 40 miles apart, at the mouth of the Orne river and north of Carentan on the Cherbourg peninsula. A Berlin news broadcast said the Allies held a bridgehead about 21 miles wide and six miles deep at the mouth of the Orne.

Stiffening Resistance Natural

Allied officers were loath to give specific details of the fighting, as they believed the Nazis still were somewhat bewildered by the multiple landings by sea and air. The stiffening enemy resistance was the natural result of Rommel having rushed reinforcements into individual localities where he had been able to size up Allied attacks.

Reflecting the enemy's expectation of Allied landings at new points, a German news broadcast declared that a vast armada of more than 100 Allied warships and countless smeller vessels had been standing off Le Havre since last midnight, probably foreboding a "major bid against Le Havre."

Capt. Ludwig Sertorius, Nazi military commentator, broadcast that American airborne troops dropped between Valognes and Carentan yesterday had been reinforced from the air and had fought their way toward the coast and joined with seaborne forces. Valognes is 10 miles southeast of Cherbourg, on the Norman peninsula.

Both Sides Drop Air-Borne Troops

Both sides dropped airborne troops into the flaming battlefront, with Allied parachutists and glider troops pouring down early today from a 50-mile-long sky train. Allied headquarters disclosed that more than 31,000 aerial sorties were flown between June 1 and last night in preparation for and in support of the invasion.

American troops fighting through the maze of German defenses were under the command of Lt. Gen. Omar Bradley, the "doughboys' general," who directed the successful final drive on Bizerte at the climax of the Tunisian campaign.

Early today there was some pessimism around the command post, reports having indicated that Allied forces had accomplished less than had been expected of them and that the weather was interfering with the flow of reinforcements and supplies across the channel. But as the day wore on and additional advices came in from the front, this mood changed to one of sober satisfaction.

All Tasks Carried Out

It was announced that Allied airborne forces had carried out "all the tasks allotted" them. Their part of the operation was considered so markedly successful, in fact, that the Allied command was encouraged in respect to their future use.

Twelve C-47 carriers and 12 gliders were reported missing from last night's reinforcing operations beyond the beachheads. Returning fliers today said the entire Cherbourg peninsula was a mass of white and colored parachutes where the troops had descended.

12,000 Air Sorties in Single Day

In all, the Allied air forces flew well over 12,000 sorties from dawn yesterday until dawn today, with more than 1,000 British heavy bombers pouring a stream of explosives upon German reinforcements moving toward the fighting front during the night. Allied losses were reported as 13 British heavy bombers, one American heavy bomber and 17 Allied fighters.

Nazi aerial resistance began to increase gradually during the day and 53 enemy planes were shot down. The German radio said thick weather kept the Luftwaffe out of the skies in any strength during the early hours of the invasion. Some Allied air officers looked for a battle royal to develop over France before many days had passed. The Allies were maintaining a constant fighter patrol over the battle zones, with at least 200 planes overhead at any given moment.

Flying Weather Improves

Flying weather improved considerably on the second day of the big push, with the sunshine breaking through at times and patches of blue sky showing as the barometer rose during the afternoon. There still was a fairly strong northwest wind, but the channel was much smoother than yesterday when landing craft thumped through and over six-foot waves enroute to the beaches and thousands of soldiers suffered horribly from seasickness.

British Take Bridges

The British Sixth Airborne Division was disclosed to have captured several bridges over the Orne river in the nine miles between Caen and the sea, and to be holding them strongly against Nazi counter-attacks. Caen also is connected with the sea by a canal and has docks which would be of great value to the Allied forces.

There still was no Allied confirmation of a German report that Allied airborne troops had landed on the channel islands of Jersey and Guernsey just off the Cherbourg peninsula.

No additional American naval losses had been reported since the announced loss of two destroyers and a tank landing craft up to noon yesterday. The veteran U. S. battleship Arkansas, as well as the Nevada, was disclosed to have participated in the pre-invasion bombardment of German costal defenses.

The Nazis had warned the French people, under penalty of death, not to leave their homes from dusk to dawn.

Eisenhower Makes Trip To France

JUN 8 1944

SUPREME HEADQUARTERS ALLIED EXPEDITIONARY FORCE, Thursday, June 8—(AP) For four and one-half hours yesterday Gen. Eisenhower and Admiral Sir Bertram Ramsay, commander of Allied naval forces, cruised off the invasion beaches of northern France and held conferences with operational commanders, it was announced today.

Gen. Sir Bernard L. Montgomery, commander of the invasion ground forces, and Rear Admiral Alan Goodrich Kirk, commander of the U. S. naval task force in the operations, were among the high officers who attended the sensational conclave in the midst of an armada of thousands of ships as the supreme commander obtained an up-to-the-minute picture of the progress of the invasion.

A meeting was held within five miles of the enemy at one point because Eisenhower felt that he could thereby get better communications.

Upon his return the general showed satisfaction at the results of the conferences.

As Montgomery, in corduroy trousers and fleece-lined jacket, clambered down from the warship into his launch at the end of the session Eisenhower grinned, stuck up his thumb and called:

"Good luck to you."

Eisenhower also had a historic conference Sunday night with Prime Minister Churchill, Gen. Charles De Gaulle, Foreign Secretary Anthony Eden and Prime Minister Jan Christiaan Smuts of South Africa.

The meeting lasted two hours and the supreme commander subsequently reported complete agreement was reached on military matters with the French.

It was not detailed how much of the touchy zone of transitional administration of liberated territories was included in "military matters."

Bradley, 'Doughboys' General,' Commanding Infantry in France

JUN 8 1944

SUPREME HEADQUARTERS, ALLIED EXPEDITIONARY FORCE, June 7 — (AP) Lanky Omar N. Bradley—the "doughboys' general" who has killed more Germans than any other U. S. general officer—is commanding all U. S. ground forces participating in the attack in France, it was announced today.

The Germans know this simple, kindly lieutenant-general as a master tactician who outsmarted them in the climactic battle of North Africa and who ushered them unceremoniously out of the mountains in the epic 38-day conquest of Sicily.

In the initial stages of the landings in France, Gen. Bradley was tied by the need for communications to the deck of the flagship U.S.S. Augusta—birthplace of the Atlantic Charter—off the French coast, but before the western Europe front opened he indicated he would move right in with the troops at the earliest possible moment.

It is a tribute to Bradley's proud record as a teacher as well as fighter that one officer who wasn't happy about this, "when we are bivouacking today."

30. 24 — 16013

leader that he picked to direct this momentous engagement many men he personally trained as officers as head of the infantry officers' school at Fort Benning, Ga.

He also has trained more "shave tails" than any other U. S. general officer, for Fort Benning graduated second lieutenants at the rate of 40,000 a year under the methods which he supervised.

This 51-year-old Missouri-born commander, the greatest military contribution of the "show me" state since "Black Jack" Pershing, contrasts sharply with his imperious, colorful opponent, Field Marshal Erwin Rommel, a Nazi veteran of slam-bang advances and long retreats.

Gen. Bradley is known as the "Doughboys' General" because he is sparing of the lives of men under command.

Tough Fighter

But he is a tough, knotty fighter with the tenacious, sledge-hammer persistence of Gen. U. S. Grant, the shrewdness of a New England horse trader, but with a personal dignity and integrity that can be compared with that of Gen. Robert E. Lee.

A native of Clark, Mo., he was in Gen. Dwight D. Eisenhower's class of 1915 at West Point and it was Gen. Eisenhower who gave him his first chance to show what he could do in the field in North Africa. He responded with the smashing offense that captured Bizerte.

Gen. Bradley is not one to underrate the enemy. Of the German he says: "cunning and unscrupulous—somebody to be exterminated."

West Point Athlete

The bespectacled commander stands six feet and weighs about 180 pounds. One of the best rifle shots in the army, he also is known for his athletic record at West Point. A good hitter, he also could throw a ball farther than any man who ever attended the academy.

Gen. Bradley is plain to look at—as homely as a Missouri corn cob pipe—but carries himself with the same honest, awkward grace that characterized him as a small-town boy.

Although he takes pride in the fact he keeps losses among his men to the absolute minimum in achieving objectives, he was genuinely distressed when he was quoted recently as assuring one division that invasion casualties would be small.

That, he asserted, was impossible to tell in advance of battle because none could fortell the conditions under which the two armies would lock horns. But he thought it was equally unreasonable to be pessimistic and predict huge losses.

It is axiomatic, Gen. Bradley said, that battle deaths and wounds are lower among troops properly trained and utilized.

Before the sailing day he remarked that the American troops in the huge amphibious operation were superbly trained and equipped with the best arms borne by any force in history and he was confident in their fighting ability.

"Beyond that," he said, "we cannot ask."

Bradley is cool in battle and so personally courageous that he is a source of constant worry to two young captains who act as aides. He always moves his staff up as close as possible to the frontlines and in both Tunisia and Sicily his headquarters were bombed and shelled.

U. S. GENERAL IS SENT HOME

JUN 8 1944

Miller Reduced in Rank for Invasion Talk.

Supreme Headquarters, Allied Expeditionary Force, June 7 (A. P.).—One of America's best known major-generals was demoted to lieutenant-colonel and sent home for indicating in advance the time of D day.

The Supreme Command allowed this information to be cabled abroad today after holding it up several weeks for security reasons.

Supreme Headquarters would not permit the officer's name to be cabled to America. He was one of the commanders of the United States Air Forces. An Army man of long standing, he swiftly felt the Supreme Command ax after talking indiscreetly at a London cocktail party.

The conversation was said to have taken place almost two months ago when the invasion was expected almost daily. The general was reported to have said in the presence of several persons: "On my honor, the invasion will take place before June 15."

His action was reported to security police by a woman guest and Gen. Eisenhower immediately ordered him reduced to the permanent rank of lieutenant-colonel and sent home after an investigation.

Identified as Miller.

Washington, June 7 (A. P.).—The Major-Gen. who was reduced to his permanent grade of lieutenant-colonel and sent home for indicating in advance the time of D day was identified today by the War Department as Lieut.-Col. Henry J. F. Miller of Miami, Fla.

The War Department in a brief memorandum said that it was making the identification public in response to inquiries, and referred to Col. Miller's action as a violation of security. He is an Air Force officer.

Col. Miller was born in Salem county, N. J., on September 10, 1890, and after his graduation from the United States Military Academy was appointed a second lieutenant of cavalry on June 12, 1915.

Rated as a command pilot and combat observer, he was commander of the Air Service Command of the Army Air Forces in the European theater of operations. Before being made a major-general (temporary) on February 27, 1942, he served as commanding officer of Brooks Field, Tex, as commanding officer of the San Antonio air depot, and chief of the maintenance command at Patterson Field, Ohio. In March, 1942, he was made commanding general of the Air Service Command in Washington.

DOUGHBOYS RELAX ON FRENCH ROADS

JUN 8 1944

Supreme Headquarters, Allied Expeditionary Force, June 7 (A. P.).—American soldiers were leaning on their rifles along the French roads taking it easy and waiting for chow as Lieut. James Crawley of Springfield, Ill., flew his C-47 transport over the beachhead last evening.

"It's looks mighty good from overhead. The craters looked less than 100 feet apart and they were deep. No enemy planes, no flak."

MONTGOMERY GETS AMERICAN SUIT

JUN 8

Supreme Headquarters, Allied Expeditionary Force, June 7 (A. P.).—Gen. Sir Bernard L. Montgomery has a couple of new gifts from Americans with whom, he said, "I always get along well."

They are a battledress, "straight from New York and the finest suit I ever had," and a watch—"a good one, it keeps time."

London, June 7 (AP)—DNB said in a Berlin broadcast today that an entire Allied air-borne division has been landed on the western coast of the Normandy peninsula.

Nazis Admit Allies Threaten Cherbourg

German Broadcasts Claim Coastal Guns Repulse Landing Attempt Off Le Havre—Say New Airborne Landings Have Been Made.

JUN 8 1944

By Alex H. Singleton

LONDON, June 7 (AP)—The Germans reported tonight that a full Allied air-borne division ferried by 300 planes had dropped to earth on the west side of the Cherbourg peninsula and conceded the Allies had made gains which threatened to isolate the prize port of Cherbourg.

Claim Repulse

Nazi broadcasters declared coastal guns had repulsed an Allied landing attempt off Le Havre; that long-range batteries fired upon smoke-screened ships during "a second daylight invasion attempt" at Pas de Calais, but results were not observed.

The Germans said new airborne landings were made at Coutances and Lessay, across the Cherbourg peninsula from the main Allied assault positions but only 25 miles from the nearest of these holdings.

Altogether, between two and five new Allied divisions have been landed since Tuesday from air and sea and "very strong paratroop forces" and glider formations continue to drop, Berlin reports said.

The German radio conded that Allied air-borne troops which were astride the main highway leading from Cherbourg down the peninsula toward Paris had linked up with forces from the coast.

The radio reported Allied tanks had plunged through the Atlantic wall in a drive southeast upon Bayeux from approaches on the coast. Caen was "burning like a blazing torch," these accounts said.

Planes In Action

DNB asserted the German air force had swung into action and was directing uninterrupted machine-gun fire at British and American landing units lying offshore between Cherbourg and Le Havre.

In a potential preliminary to a full-scale counterattack, Field Marshal Gen. Karl Rudolf Gerd von Rundstedt reportedly was pitting his own air-borne troops against those of the Allies.

A heavy stream of comment from the German radio, however, reflected Nazi speculation over the possibility of landings elsewhere. The Allies were said to be waging "highly mobile and aggressive" warfare.

Marshal Erwin Rommel, German field commander, was reported rushing up reserves of the Seventh and Fifteenth armies and battles were declared rapidly increasing to a grand scale.

"Now Given Orders"

Capt. Ludwig Sertorius, German commentator, said "the German high command has now given its orders.

"Super heavy tanks are accompanying German tanks which have hitherto not been used in battle. German elite formations—are rushing against the enemy."

A report from von Rundstedt's headquarters carried by the German radio said parachute troopers, grenadiers and armored forces, as well as mobile troops "are engaged in grim fighting with American, British and Canadian troops."

In an apparent attempt to spread dissension among the Allies, the same broadcast made the unconfirmed declaration that U. S. losses after 36 hours of battle "have been estimated at three times those suffered by the British."

The chief German admission of Allied success came from the Berlin radio, which said the Allies had occupied a strip 34 kilometers (21 miles) long to a depth of ten kilometers (6.21 miles) in "some places."

Another enemy report said Nazi E-boats under orders to "disturb" the Allied invasion fleet sank a 3,000-ton craft last night.

DNB said the Germans had pierced a British bridgehead on the east bank of the Orne estuary, liberated a garrison which had been cut off for 36 hours, and then fought on up the east bank of the river "and took many prisoners and captured considerable quantity of arms."

Nazis Tell of Counter-blows

JUN 8 1944

Say Their Reserves Last Night Penetrated to Some Allied Landing Points.

London, June 7 (A. P.).—Transocean, German official news agency, quoted a war reporter at Field Marshal von Runstedt's headquarters today as saying that last night the invasion armies for the first time came into contact with German tactical reserves between Le Havre and Cherbourg, and that the German infantry and tank formations at some points penetrated to the landing places—especially at Grand Camp, west of the mouth of the Vire River.

DAY

In a broadcast account of the fighting Transocean also said that the German forces had penetrated to the east of the mouth of the Dives River, between Villers and the Orne River.

"The enemy tactic at the end of the first day was marked by new air landings which sought to confuse German counter-actions," the agency added. "Dramatic fighting developed between enemy airborne troops and German marching columns."

Allied Planes Rain Bombs On Nazis Behind Beachheads

JUN 8 1944

HERCHE

London, June 7 (A. P.).—Allied air forces, taking supreme command of the air over invaded France, flew well over 13,000 sorties from dawn yesterday until dawn today in support of assault forces and surged out again today in new attacks beyond the beachhead.

Last night more than 1,000 heavy British bombers poured a stream of explosives upon German reinforcements moving toward the fighting front. As they returned United States raiders headed out over Dover Strait toward the small portion of France which has been recaptured.

Night crews found the sky moonlit over the battle area, with patches of cloud. Through clear spots they saw a heavy traffic of ships crossing the channel in both directions, the smaller ones escorted by naval craft.

Over France fires flickered and the air was cut by arcs of star shells.

Driven down by unfavorable weather and a determination to put their bombs where they will count most, almost all types of Allied aircraft operated at lower levels than usual. Almost total lack of opposition in the air made these tactics possible although danger from anti-aircraft fire increased considerably.

53 Nazi Planes Destroyed.

The measure of the almost incredibly weak opposition from the German air force was reflected in the loss of thirteen British heavy bombers, one American heavy bomber and seventeen Allied fighters. As resistance in the air began to increase slowly yesterday fifty-three enemy planes were destroyed.

Marauders and Havocs of the Ninth United States Air Force flew five major operations yesterday and released more than 1,600 tons of bombs in the greatest tactical operation in history.

The losses were five Havocs and three Marauders.

In semi-darkness last night Ninth Air Force bombers attacked gun posts and communication lines close to the fighting zones, and railway yards behind the German lines at Amiens and between Amiens and Paris. The Havocs encountered a furious opposition from the German ground defenses as they swept low to bomb their targets.

First enemy air attack on the beachhead was made by twelve JU-88s which attempted a surprise raid under low clouds. Spitfires knocked down four and the Nazis retreated without causing any damage.

Bomb Roads and Rail Lines.

The R. A. F. four-engined craft, in numbers at least equaling the force that paved the way for the ground invasion forces Tuesday morning, dropped an estimated 6,100 tons of bombs last night, concentrating their attack on roads, railways in the space fifteen to forty miles behind the Normandy landings.

Each strong air attack was designed to block or delay the movement of men and material which the enemy is attempting to bring up by every available means of transport. Flying only short distances from their bases, the big British Lancasters and Halifaxes carried tremendous loads of explosives.

Mitchells Out At Night

In another departure from usual tactics, the RAF's medium Mitchells—the same type of ship that bombed Tokyo—flew for a second time as night bombers, battering roads, bridges and railways in a large feeder area behind the battlefront.

Mosquitos, out with them, flew very low to pick out pinpoint targets. Mitchell crewmen reported a great ring of fires at Lisieux and a sinister glow over Caen.

The RAF heavies dropped an estimated 6,100 tons last night, concentrating their attack on roads and railways in the space 15 to 40 miles behind the landings.

Because of the short distances from their bases, the Lancasters and Halifaxes carried tremendous loads.

Ludwigshafen Raided

In addition to blasting French targets, the night raiders penetrated into Germany to bomb Ludwigshafen, a British announcement said. The announcement declared that all planes returned safely from operations, which included laying of mines.

American planes alone yesterday flew more than 9,000 sorties as the Allied armada of some 12,000 frontline planes held undisputed sway of the skies over the invasion area.

More than 1,000 troop-carrying aircraft delivered parachute troops into France.

NAZI AIRPORTS ARE DESTROYED

Allied Bombers Prevented Fighter Action.

London, June 7 (A. P.).—Destruction of German operational air bases by Allied aerial bombardment was advanced today as a possible reason for the failure of the Luftwaffe to show in force as the invasion of western Europe began and quickened in pace.

With the lack of air opposition still a matter of surprise to Allied air officers, it was thought possible that these bases upon which the Germans depended for close support of their troops had been knocked out.

It also was believed that paratroopers probably had captured other fields.

Up until noon today the Nazis had sacrificed only 53 aircraft in attempting to defend the beaches while American and British air forces hurled more than 13,000 planes across the channel in support of ground operations.

Some air officers are convinced there will be a battle royal over France before many weeks pass. The Germans are known to have 1,750 fighters and 500 bombers in the west with about three-quarters of the fighters based in the Reich to defend the homeland from strategic bombing attack. The Luftwaffe also is suspected of having built up some sort of a reserve to repel invasion although there is no sign of it yet.

Allies Ignore Weather.

While the weather during initial operations might have made some Nazi air units cautious, the Allied Air Forces braved it. Flying through thunder clouds and smoke screens to carry out their attacks. If the Luftwaffe allowed planes to be grounded by weather, it let many crucial moments slip by.

There is no doubt that one of the major reasons the Allies were able to land in daylight without fearful casualties was the lack of air opposition but if the Germans had thrown their full air strength over the channel yesterday they might have a very small Luftwaffe left today.

NAZIS RAID BRITAIN

LONDON, Thursday, June 8—(AP) The German air force struck a weak blow at England early today, the first since D-Day. Some bombs were dropped in an area near an east coast town. One of the raiders was believed to have been shot down. There was no indication of the size of the invading force.

R.A.F. RAI... FRANCE

LONDON, Thursday, June 8—(AP) R.A.F. bombers, sweeping across the channel in support of Allied invasion forces, blasted targets in France again last night, the British announced today, and Axis broadcasts indicated that vital communications centers were among the targets. A Paris broadcast said the suburbs of that city, a vital rail hub, had been bombed and also reported attacks on Nantes and Lorient on the French coast.

Nazis Moving Troops By Air to Beaches

Move Being Made in Effort to Cope With Constantly Reinforced Allied Airborne Divisions—Savage Fighting for Key Points.

By W. W. Hercher

SUPREME HEADQUARTERS, Allied Expeditionary Force, June 7 (AP)—Savage fighting for key points behind the Normandy beachheads was developing tonight as the Germans began moving troops by air in efforts to cope with the constantly-reinforced Allied airborne divisions whose successes highlighted the invasion.

Complete Success

The Allied airborne operation, largest ever undertaken anywhere, was a complete success, at least as far as its shock phases were concerned, and parachutists and airborne infantry were ranging swiftly behind the German frontlines, it was said at supreme headquarters.

Authorities were tight-lipped about the progress of troops that landed from the sea but stated the airborne soldiers had carried out every assignment given them, and in some cases had seized bridges which the command had been almost certain the Germans would have time to demolish.

Capture Bridges

It was confirmed tonight, for example, that the British sixth airborne division had captured a series of bridges north of Caen.

Front dispatches said airborne troops had joined those from the sea in some places after capturing towns, roads and various bridges, and that reinforcements poured in today aboard a 50-mile long train of ninth air force gliders.

The German radio yesterday listed four to six Allied airborne divisions as having landed behind the Atlantic Wall defenses, and said tonight that another British division had landed during today.

It was learned at supreme headquarters that both Americans and British reinforcements had been flown in.

The continual mass attacks left the entire Cherbourg peninsula dotted with white and colored parachutes as the fighting flared up over a constantly widening area.

During last night and today hundreds of transport planes flew in reinforcements in men, artillery, jeeps, ammunition, gasoline and food, to the beachhead forces as well as to the airborne troops deep inside the peninsula. Many tons of vital supplies were thus delivered by parachute.

A highly-placed officer declared the success of the airborne forces was one of the most satisfactory points of the whole invasion.

Losses

Twelve C-47 transports and 12 gliders were reported missing from the overnight reinforcing operations, these being the first specific losses announced. If fully loaded, they would have been carrying slightly less than 500 men, including crews.

The U. S. Ninth Air Force announced that its airborne units had flown more than 900 sorties on D-day and had completed a reinforcing operation in mid-morning. In addition, British planes and chutists contributed to the hundreds of sorties.

The zebra-striped gliders were escorted across the channel by Mustang fighters whose pilots kept watch as the motor-less ships skimmed silently down to their selected areas.

"Futuristic"

The four-abreast strings of towed gliders, with their weird paint and dim navigating lights looked "like something from a futuristic film," one flier said.

First reports of German airborne counter-operations came from British Mosquito fliers, who on night intruder operations shot down five Junkers-52 transports over France.

It was known that Germany's airborne expert, Lt. Gen. Kurt Student, who planned the Crete operations of 1941, has been training new forces in western Europe for four months, and was reported in France less than six weeks ago in connection with Nazi plans to move troops by air to threatened points on or behind the lines.

The Allied airborne operations, however, were on a gigantic scale never employed by the Germans, and included new wrinkles never before tried.

Private Sleeps Way Into Air Invasion

LONDON, June 7—(AP) A Ninth air force private unwittingly stowed away in a glider and slept his way into history's greatest military operation, air force headquarters related today.

He was Charles Schmelze of Pittsburgh, Pa., who helped to service troop-carrying gliders for the flight behind enemy lines. Unnoticed, he climbed into the tall glider and fell asleep.

The glider towed by a plane piloted by Flight Officer E. G. Borgmeyer, St. Louis, Mo., last was seen landing in a zone of heavy fighting.

FIGHTERS DESTROY 43 GERMAN PLANES

SUPREME HEADQUARTERS, ALLIED EXPEDITIONARY FORCE, June 7 — (AP) With a triple kill to his credit, Lt. Wade James, Crockett, Calif., headed a list of 39 American airmen and one Polish flyer who among them accounted for 43 German planes in yesterday's invasion assault, announced today by the United States strategic airforce in Europe command.

It included Capt. Fred Kelley, Arlington, Mass., who had a double victory.

FLIERS TOLD FRENCH SABOTAGE DIRECTIONS

SUPREME HEADQUARTERS ALLIED EXPEDITIONARY FORCE, June 7—(AP) French communications workers were supplied by Allied airmen of D-day with instructions for sabotage, it was disclosed tonight.

Maps showing rail and other communication lines, the instructions and an "urgent message" from Supreme Headquarters Allied Expeditionary Force were dropped.

"From now on there cannot be any 'secondary' railroads, roads or waterways," the message said. "From the enemy's point of view, all communications are vitally important."

The instructions added that, in event the Germans attempted to route traffic through so-called "secondary lines, you must see to it that they get into a dead-end street."

Sights Fires in Caen Area

Reporter Views Battle Behind Beachhead on Pre-dawn Bombing Flight

JUN 8 1944

By PETER GLADWIN.

Representing the Combined Allied Press.
Distributed by the Associated Press.

An Airbase in England, June 7.—We flew over a naval battle in the channel before dawn today and crossed the French coast to find the country behind the Normandy beachheads blazing with great fires.

The mission of our Mitchell medium bombers was the same as yesterday's—to cut communications behind the beachhead and impede the reinforcement of German forces attempting to drive back the Allied thrust for Caen.

As we scudded across the channel below the low cloud ceiling, underneath we could see a group of destroyers astern, and farther over, a line of enemy E-boats. We watched the destroyers open fire but we could not see the effects. In a few moments the E-boats were hidden in their own shroud of smoke-screen.

We flew the entire trip from base to target and back at an altitude of 3,000 feet, made necessary by the low ceiling of extremely thick clouds. Icing conditions were bad on top. It was a significant indication of the extent of Allied mastery of the skies of northern France that the Mitchells completed this mission successfully and without loss.

As we crossed the French coast searchlights picked us up. I sat waiting for the flak to arrive, but Pilot Phil Creeke of Sydney, Australia, weaved up into the clouds and shook off the lights.

Gun Flashes Glow.

When we came out of the clouds again we could see away over on the Normandy battlefield. The night was torn with gun flashes and the dull glow of fires against the dark horizon. Nearer great blazing fires marked the path of the bombers which had been over earlier in the night.

Caen was burning in the distance. As we approached our target we could see heavy bombers at work on Lisieux. We could not see the bombers themselves, but there was plenty of evidence of their presence.

I saw one terrific explosion as we turned to our own target. It was a railway bridge across a river. On our port side a little town was burning like one enormous bonfire.

We circled our target while another Mitchell dropped his bombs. Then we went in and let go a stick of 1,000-pound bombs.

Weaving our way back to the coast we encountered some light flak, but we were through before the Germans had the range. We crossed the coast in a heavy rain which drove the ceiling lower. Through the murk over the channel I could see the Aldis signaling lamps blinking.

but nobody was hurt.

We were lucky. Some came home with dead and wounded aboard. Some didn't come home. The Germans were ready this time. Hundreds of planes had been in ahead of us and it seemed that we flew down an avenue lined with machine-guns and fountains on both sides.

Huge Arcs Of Tracers

Red and green tracers overlapped in huge arcs that reminded you of an old-fashioned grape arbor.

Flares from flak bursts made you jump, but they were so far off that there was no noise and didn't seem to matter much—at least not like the 20-millimeter shell which sawed through the fuselage next to my window and then went off like an indoor firecracker explosion.

This may sound as if I were scared. Well, I was. It was the first time any of us had been under fire.

I had an invitation to fly on the invasion-opening paratroop operation, but I explained that it would be pretty dark and there would not be much to see and write about. I really had thought that after a day or so it would be a little more like a sight-seeing tour.

DAY

A Whale Of A Time

It was that—until we reached the French coast. Our P-51 fighter escort had a whale of a time playing tag over and under, dodging in and out of our column and a formation of homeward-bound B-17s and other C-47s.

Little air-sea rescue launches were skittering about on the calm Channel below just for exercise. A cloud curtain was hoisted enough along the horizon to frame the first sunset I'd seen since I left home.

But it was a different story when the Cherbourg peninsula came in sight. From a tiny island off shore came the first ack-ack, but the bursts were far away.

Counts A Dozen Fires

Now we were over. The door was opened and dust and acrid smoke like that from a burning building swirled inside. I counted a dozen fires on the perimeter at this end of the beachhead. Occasionally there was a big flash and puffs of smoke, but that was about all there was to see on the ground.

Then we got over enemy lines and the machine guns started. We hadn't touched loose the glider yet and our speed still left something to be desired. I was on my knees peering out a window, bundled up in Mae West life preserver, parachute and flak suit.

The latter garment isn't a suit at all but a steel-ribbed canvas vest fashioned along the lines of an umpire's chest protector.

Protects The Back

Only it also takes care of your back from the collar button down to the tip of your spine. That sure leaves arms, legs and ribs feeling awful naked.

Red and green tracers—they are not as fast as in the movies—drifted up on the right at an angle of about 45 degrees well ahead of our ship. For every one of those colored lights there are four bullets you can't see.

"Those guys in front are catching it," said Crew Chief Sergt. Dennis Halpeska, of Texas, who left dairy farming to join the army.

Just then we zipped through a fusillade like a train passing switch signals. It sounded as if the plane had run into a hailstorm and somebody was trying to cut it in two with a meat saw.

Glider Cuts Loose

I drew my neck into the flak suit until my tin hat just balanced on my shoulders. All of a sudden the plane lurched forward with a jerk and I looked back in time to see the glider rope go limp. The glider soared upward a moment, then banked and coasted down gracefully.

On both sides 20-millimeter shells were coming up now, beating a tattoo on the ship that rose above the roar of the engines.

It was easy to tell by the increased pitch of the engines that we were going places—fast.

I looked back at multi-colored tracers still criss-crossing the path of the plane which followed us. Almost supernaturally they seemed to plow through and away off to the left a big rocket shell was wandering across the sky.

Pretty To Watch

It didn't seem to be aimed at anything particularly. It was a far piece away and thus pretty to watch.

The racket and display stopped abruptly and the crew chief pointed down. Lieut. Eugene A. Waterfill, of Kentucky, came back to see if Halpeska and I were okay. We were.

Halpeska sheepishly picked up a loaded tommy gun which had been sliding around on the floor between us. He had intended to poke it out the door and empty it at the Germans.

"I plumb forgot about it," he grinned.

Besides Neale others in the crew were Co-pilot Capt. Bob Creamer, Tulsa, Okla., and 3305 Fairfield avenue, Shreveport, La.; Navigator Lieut. Charles F. Chester, Santa Barbara, Cal.; Lieut. Eugene A. Waterfill, Lawrenceburg, Ky.; Sergt. Norman Sabloff, 101 Eaton Place, East Orange, N. J., and Crew Chief Sergt. Dennis Halpeska, Route 3, Victoria, Tex.

The pilot of a big force of gliders was Lieut. Joe Herriage, Bonham, Tex., and Flight Officer Howard M. David, Hollywood, Cal., his assistant.

New Air Landing 'No Milk Run', Cowan Says

JUN 8 1944

By Howard Cowan

At a Ninth United States Air Force Troop Carrier Base, June 7 (AP)—The Allied expeditionary air force had just completed another air-borne landing behind enemy lines in Nazi-occupied France; but, unlike the first operation, this was no "milk run."

I know. I flew in the leading ship of a group commanded by a crackerjack pilot from my home town—Lieut. Col. John Neale, of Shawnee, Oklahoma.

Metal Hide Messed Up

When we came back to England the metal hide of our powerful twin-engined C-47 was messed up like a bride's first entry into a can of early June peas. The radio and electrical systems were damaged,

GLIDER LANDINGS REPORTED DOUBLED

JUN 8 1944

A U. S. FIGHTER BASE IN ENGLAND, June 7.—(AP) Thunderbolt fighter-bomber pilots who furnished the top cover for Allied invasion craft said the number of American gliders landed in fields along the beachheads had doubled today.

NIGHT

"They landed a lot of them since yesterday," said Lt. Hubert Edwards, Clarkesville, Tenn. "There were hundreds of them there and many appeared to be smashed up." Lt. Charles Labno, Chicago, estimated that two or three of every five gliders were damaged.

The pilots reported yesterday most of the gliders descending on D-Day appeared to have reached the ground intact.

Report Six Airborne Divisions.

Stockholm, June 7 (A. P.).—Six Allied airborne divisions totaling 25,000 men have been landed on the French invasion coast since the start of operations yesterday morning, Berlin dispatches said today.

DAY

The Aftonbladet's Berlin correspondent said that the Germans acknowledged that the fighting was violent and hard, but claimed that the defenders were largely battle-tired veterans of the Eastern Front.

Another dispatch said that the Germans had failed to send up any effective air resistance because of the poor weather over the invasion scene.

More Allies Landed By Air, Nazis Say

JUN 8 1944

[By the Associated Press]

The German radio acknowledged today that additional Allied airborne troops had been landed on the French coast between Le Havre and Cherbourg during the night but asserted they had immediately been attacked by German forces and that hard fighting was still in progress.

A Berlin DNB broadcast recorded by the Associated Press gave this version of the situation:

"The British and Americans during the evening hours yesterday, as had been expected, further intensified their attacks against the coast of Normandy. Strong waves of transport gliders appeared over the area between Cherbourg and Le Havre. The bulk of the enemy airborne troops again was landed on the coastal stretch.

Heavy Casualties Claimed

"German formations which earlier yesterday had already thrown the first waves of enemy airborne troops into the sea or had pressed them together on the narrow strip of coast, immediately attacked the newly landed Anglo-Saxon formations.

"Hard fighting with the invasionists continued all night, with extremely heavy casualties inflicted on the enemy landing troops.

"British parachutists landed during the evening yesterday east of Le Havre and were immediately engaged by German forces. The majority of these enemy troops were wiped out at Deauville and south of Le Havre. "More than 200 English soldiers, including numerous officers, were taken prisoner."

Germans Claim Advances

Transocean, German news agency, quoted a war reporter at Field Marshal Karl von Runstedt's headquarters today as saying:

"During last night the invasion armies have for the first time come into contact with German tactical reserves between Le Havre and Cherbourg."

FIRST FLIER TO LAND

SUPREME HEADQUARTERS ALLIED EXPEDITIONARY FORCE, June 7—(AP) The Ninth U. S. Air force announced tonight the first Allied fighter pilot to land on Allied territory in France was Lt. Norman J. Johnson of Vernal, Utah, a Thunderbolt pilot, who made a crash landing near the coast while escorting troop carriers and gliders.

MINEOLA FLYER CRUSHES NAZI GUN

Supreme Headquarters Allied Expeditionary Force, June 7 (A. P.).—Capt. Edward M. Boles of 244 Harrison street, Mineola, L. I., told today how a Ninth United States Air Force Thunderbolt group, standing by over the beachhead in support of the ground troops, knocked out a German gun emplacement that was delaying the Allied advance yesterday.

Heavy flak was defending the position, and with Allied troops in the target area the chore called for pinpoint bombing. "I had to look very closely to differentiate between our men on the ground and the enemy gun position, but we really hit that gun on the button," said Capt. Boles.

NEW YORK, June 7, (AP)—Allied parachute troops in hitherto unknown strength have landed 30 miles south of Caen in the region between Argentan and Falaise, the German radio said tonight in a broadcast recorded by the CBS.

NEW YORK, June 7, (AP)—A Bulgarian broadcast recorded by U. S. government monitors said Allied planes were over southwestern Bulgaria tonight.

Canadian Forces Storm Beaches In Daylight

JUN 8 1944

By Ross Munro

[Canadian Press War Correspondent; Distributed by the Associated Press]

With Canadian Forces Landing in France, June 7—Canadian assault forces bounced through the stormy sea in landing craft yesterday and in broad daylight stormed the French beaches and battled their way inland.

There was some stiff opposition on certain sections of this particular beach, but 1½ hours after the landing, reports of success came in rapidly to this headquarters ship.

One Canadian regiment after another flashed back messages that it was advancing through the coastal defense strip, part of the Germans' so-called West Wall. Hard fighting was expected inland, however.

DAY JUN 8 1944

Strong Points Resist

A number of enemy strong points on the beach zone resisted and they were being fired on by naval craft.

The big surprise in the attack was that it went in during daylight.

(Another dispatch from Munro reported that in 2 hours and 45 minutes' fighting the Canadians won their beachhead and shoved on inland. Some stiff fighting was met in the little coastal towns, Munro added.)

The heavy sea running off the French coast was not what authorities wanted but the attack went in anyway and the small assault craft plunged headlong through six-foot high waves to reach the beaches and land troops.

Attack "Tremendous"

Between 4,000 and 5,000 ships and craft of many types participated and for miles along the French coast this fleet was lying offshore, shoving men, supplies and vehicles ashore.

Earlier, naval bombardment and air-force bombing blasted the French coast until it shuddered. From the deck of this ship I watched the whole incredible scene from the start to the finish and never have I witnessed anything so tremendous in any seagoing attack.

As we were crossing the Channel, RAF heavy bombers struck at the beach defenses and specific targets up and down the coastline. When daylight came, United States medium bombers took over the attack and hundreds of planes dropped high explosives all along the beaches.

After that, United States heavy bombers went in with a roar that drowned out the sound of the naval gunfire and struck other targets.

Cruisers Start Shelling

I saw gigantic flashes along the coast as the bombs exploded.

Cruisers started off the naval bombardment, which was by far the heaviest coastal shelling of the war. For 40 minutes hundreds of guns were shelling without a letup. The coast was clouded with smoke as warships, destroyers, gunboats and support craft plied up and down the coast and hit every target that could be seen.

Under cover of this colossal barrage, Canadian infantry and engineers in the first assault waves plunged through the white-capped Channel water in small landing craft.

Some units came under heavy machine-gun fire and shelling. They fought their way forward and gained their first objectives on scheduled time.

Allied Tanks Land

Allied tanks also landed with the assault force and went into action with the infantry.

The deliberation with which the huge invasion fleet stopped off the coasts after dawn and formed up for the assault was astounding. The navy had everything under control and there wasn't the slightest interference in the early part of the morning from enemy surface craft.

Fighter patrols were over the fleet right from daylight and no enemy aircraft appeared. Spitfires and American fighters carried out patrols, however.

Sea Begins To Calm

In midmorning the sea began to calm. Black rain clouds and high wind, which threatened to upset the operation in the early stages, gave way to clearing skies, while the wind lessened.

After the landing, destroyers and gunboats cruised up and down the coastline, banging away at the last coast points of resistance on our beach. Smoke drifted over the coast, partly obscuring the green fields and tiny towns.

All the way across the Channel there was no interception for our Canadian convoy, in which landing craft of the Royal Canadian Navy carried some Canadian infantry.

Veterans of Sicily Unload Assault Troops Skillfully as Ship Shakes From Bombs.

By JOHN A. MOROSO.

Associated Press War Correspondent representing the combined American Press.

With Invasion Forces Off Normandy, June 6 (Delayed) (A. P.).—While Allied planes mercilessly pounded enemy beaches, the gallant veteran Navy transport Thomas Jefferson unloaded a spearhead battalion of mixed infantry and artillery today and sent them scurrying ashore in LCVP's in the pre-dawn darkness to assault the hostile shore near French towns.

Fierce fires broke out ashore as our planes dropped flares on targets and then accurately released their bombs. The whole shoreline and this ship shook from the concussion.

Four of our planes were seen to fall flaming from the sky. They exploded when they hit the ground. German anti-aircraft defenses in the main appeared weak. Some batteries were silenced.

We brought many troops here from a British port without trouble from the enemy. A convoy mixup delayed our arrival in the transport area about one hour.

Then right into the face of Hitler's vaunted Atlantic Wall we arrived with other transports at 3:23 A. M. Four minutes later our troops began unloading and this ship became a beehive of movement and noise as the first of our thirty-nine LCVP's (landing craft, vehicle, personnel) went down to the water with troops. Cables hummed in the darkness, machines creaked, men cursed, some laughed, some cried, some whistled.

Boats Are Lowered.

In the dim light all seemed confusion as the veteran sailors of the invasions of Morocco, Sicily and Salerno worked as smoothly as a clock getting boats off the chocks into the air and over the side.

Our skipper is Commander Joseph R. Barbaro, 44, Winchester, Mass. The executive officer is Commander E. F. Keefer, 53, Milwaukee. Both paced the bridge calmly. Their work of training the men had been done.

We were not molested by submarines, E-boats or mines. At 4:15 A. M., the Navigator, Lieut. Charles H. Steiner, Mobile, Ala., reported everything was going according to schedule. Five minutes later a new wave of bombers dropped flares and then made a direct hit on an object which burned so furiously it might have been an ammunition dump. The smell of powder was strong and it came to our ship ten miles offshore. The bombers plunged tons of bombs all around the target area, but anti-aircraft fire increased.

At 4:30 A. M., another wave of bombers hit the beach to the left of us and set another raging fire. Minutes later, a third fire was started.

Blockbusters Rain Down.

The boats had been launched in utter darkness and sent to the rendezvous area where they circled in the dark to keep wave formation.

Blockbusters began raining down on the beaches at 4:55, starting more fires. Moments later, one of our own planes burst into flames and disappeared in a cloud momentarily. Finally, it crashed into the land with a tremendous explosion.

Our last landing craft left this ship at exactly one hour and six minutes after the unloading started. At 5:04, another of our planes burst into flames and plunged to a fiery grave. It was followed by yet another one minute later. Enemy anti-aircraft fire was proving more effective because the low ceiling was forcing the planes down low over the target area.

Our first fighter planes, P-38s, arrived over the area at 5:30 A .M., followed by Spitfires. They had a ceiling of about 2,500 feet.

A few minutes later came the naval bombardment. The Luftwaffe was absent.

Reporter on Rescue Boat Tells of First Assault

JUN 8 1944

WITH A U. S. COAST GUARD RESCUE FLOTILLA IN THE ENGLISH CHANNEL, June 7—(AP) This little flotilla of 50-odd 50-ton ships, weary and knocked about after 40 hours of fighting in the high waters of the channel, is heading temporarily to port this morning and aboard this boat the men are cheered by one thing—that we have seen an Allied beachhead go in and stay in.

When we left the French coast last night at 9 p.m. that beachhead was slowly building up, American troops were landing in long columns without interruption and Allied warships, after hours of shelling German defenses, still were at it unceasingly.

In our area the enemy up to that time had offered no resistance of any consequence on the sea or aloft, but was pouring in heavy fire from his batteries behind the beach ridges which our troops were storming.

He was being hammered by overwhelming Allied sea and air concentrations—including battleships and cruisers — and there was every indication that this initial beachhead was going to be a success.

Our success in the landing operations was achieved yesterday in spite of high and rough seas which made it difficult to lead and dispatch smaller craft from the transports. Some of these smaller craft had to go out only partly loaded.

Watching from this cutter just off the beach itself we saw a number of mine explosions in the early phase of the attack, but the area was soon cleared of these explosives by powerful fleet action.

Just to the right of our main landing strip Nazis soon took refuge in a little French village that looked like a postcard painting of any pastoral scene and was dominated by a rural church.

Hot enemy fire was coming from the village until one of our battleships lying several hundred yards off turned a broadside and, with five successive rounds, sent steel marching up the slope until that enemy refuge lay in ruins.

Aside from this the fleet's part of the operations was almost one of reaching far in behind the fighting line to smash German batteries. We could see dust and smashed rock particles rising like a sandstorm. Whole areas were ground fine. Of all the Allied craft we saw in action over a period of many hours not one was observed to have been hit.

Here was the pattern of assault as it was prepared, launched and developed as seen by those of us aboard the coast guard cutter commanded by Ensign Edwin E. Smith of New York city, a part of the flotilla commodored by Lt. Cmdr. Alexander Stewart of Mamaroneck, N. Y., a former advertising man:

We had been "sealed" aboard the cutter until Monday, June 5, and got our first indication that we were going across as Allied planes of all types flew slowly over our little splinter fleet to show us their new, distinctive markings.

Our flotilla sailed that day unnoticed. Dock workers were not even looking as we went out in a long beautiful line. The first thing we saw was an arc of transports around the horizon of the sea and then row upon row of transports slipping forward gray and silent and infinitely menacing in the haze.

Then we joined the landing craft themselves, each crowded with soldiers sitting still, like brown little dots under the open sky. Just a few minutes later our own planes began to wheel overhead in great strength.

Burn Confidential Papers

Soon small fires were burning on the sterns of some of the transports—men were burning confidential papers.

At 9:08—This is still Monday night—we heard the first sounds of firing. It was far off to our starboard where earlier we had seen motor torpedo boats dashing across the channel.

At 3:20 a.m. Tuesday we got between the vast line of Allied battleships and cruisers just as moonlight broke momentarily through the overcast.

At 3:40 hundred and hundreds of flares went up above or along the enemy coast. We didn't know whether we had thrown them into the skies or whether the Nazis had set them off in the expectation of an immediate attack.

Then in the faint light just after dawn we saw our troops going quietly off the transports onto assault landing craft. Shortly great fires began to spread along the beach — we thought from Allied bombing action.

By 5:45 our shelling from the sea was well under way and landing craft were heading out in thick droves from the transports. The fleet's guns were making a dull roar exactly like distant thunderclaps and the exploding shells looked like falling stars along the shore.

At 6:08 firing was coming from the enemy shore. We saw smoke rise from a transport, but she ploughed on, a destroyer by her side.

At 7:00 close alongside a transport we heard an officer clamly calling out over the ship's loudspeaker telling the landing craft when to come up for men and where. "Come up to the port side in five minutes," we heard him say.

At 11:15 we turned from our central position in the area of action and headed fast for the assault area where our troops were going in and somebody in the crew observed with a slight laugh, "always, all my life, I want to come to France. Ain't this a hell of a day for it, though?"

We saw big sections of the beach covered by smoke, some white and some dusty rust color, as we drove fast toward it. As we went in we passed through a lane of Allied cruisers and battleships. From more than one of these big fellows the French tri-color was blowing out stiff in the breeze — French ships coming home to France.

By 12:15 we were within a few hundred yards of the beach and the air was full of rushing, booming sound from the shells our big warships were laying beyond our beach assault forces.

Just ahead of us on the beach tracer fire was showing red against patches of green on the hillside. Our troops in single file and slightly stooped under their burdens were plodding along with a terrible patience and strange unreal lack of any visible excitement. Now and again enemy shels fell among the little group: it dissolved, slightly shrunk; formed again and went on.

Lieut. Abe Condiotti Had Command of First Wave of Assault Boats.

JUN 8 1944

By B. J. McQUAID.

Chicago Daily News Correspondent. Representing the Combined Allied Press.

Aboard the United States Transport Barnett in the Transport Area, June 6 (Delayed) (A. P.).—Junior Grade Lieut. Abe Condiotti, 22-year-old Brooklyn boy, commanded the first wave of small assault boats that set our troops ashore in this section of Adolf Hitler's Europe.

Lieut Condiotti's own boat was actually the first to touch on the beaches of this assault area, between Cherbourg and Le Havre. It hit the beach within less than a minute of H hour, so it may well have been the first ashore of the entire Channel invasion armada.

The boat carried members of

an infantry company commanded by Capt. Leonard T. Schroeder, 25 years old, of Baltimore, Md., who is of old German-American stock.

Just as Lieut. Condiotti's was the first boat to hit the beach, Capt. Schroeder may have been the first American, or even Allied, soldier to invade Europe. He and his men were scheduled to land simultaneously with a detachment commanded by Capt. Howard S. Lee of Chicago, but Capt. Lee's first-wavers were held up ten minutes by current conditions.

Warships Help Stranded Unit

JUN 8 1944

By Lewis Hawkins

[Associated Press Correspondent: Representing the Combined American Press]

Aboard Flagship off the French Coast, June 6 (AP—Delayed)—American infantrymen, landing on France's Normandy coast between Cherbourg and Le Havre, plunged inland quickly at one point today while another unit was pinned to the beach by machine-gun fire before it could advance.

Hitting the beaches slightly behind schedule shortly after 6.30 A. M., one regimental combat team on the right flank chose a three-and-one-half-mile stretch on which to operate. It cut through some enemy forces, by-passed others and sent word it was moving inland an hour after landing.

In Foxholes

Other combat troops were immobilized at the start by fierce machine-gun fire poured on them from behind a ridge some 800 yards beyond the highwater mark.

For several hours the men were forced to hold on in foxholes but finally they fought their way out.

The unit suffered from mines which knocked out several waterproofed tanks which managed to get on or close to shore. Artillery fire also was a problem, although this seemed largely neutralized by prolonged bombardment before landings.

The battleship Arkansas and the French cruisers Montcalm and George Leygues moved into an amazingly short range to help bold little destroyers give all possible help to the temporarily stranded force.

DAY

Control Of Air, Sea

Meanwhile, Allied air and sea dominion remained complete with the Luftwaffe not even represented by a single hostile plane over the fleet that was spread over hundreds of square miles of sea. The German navy was equally conspicuous in its absence.

Late this afternoon an incompletely relayed message said that the Ranger outfit, which moved in on the right flank, was calling for reinforcements.

Meanwhile, another landing unit was moving to the support of the second group, which had been held up at the start in front of a village.

Another Ranger unit took a position atop a cliff four and half miles west of the landing areas. It achieved its primary objective of taking over a battery pounded by bombs and naval guns, but nothing more had been heard up until late afternoon.

Weather Clearing

From reports available here, one force between another American force to the west and a British force to the east hit the toughest spot of all three, but, with reinforcements going in, air cover remaining perfect and weather clearing, there was no sign of gloom aboard this ship and the feeling seemed to be that the Germans had little chance to establish another Salerno or Anzio seal-off.

Casualties, apparently, were moderately heavy, being caused about equally by foundering and capsizing of landing craft, by mines, defensive artillery and small-arms fire during landings and by sniping, machine-gunning and some artillery fire after the men were ashore.

JUN 8 1944

More Landings

Throughout the day the admiral in command continued to land personnel and equipment and by 12.30 P. M. more than half of the day's scheduled personnel landings had been completed and more than a third of the vehicles put ashore. By later afternoon the number landed obviously had risen sharply, because another combat unit was in action.

There were unconfirmed reports of an eastward advance along the beach of more than a mile toward a coastal hamlet.

These first forces of foot soldiers were light and helped the tanks, which fired from shallow water, to pin down the enemy beach defenses so demolition teams could blast out the obstacles in this section of Hitler's Atlantic wall.

Before the troops went ashore the battleships and cruisers bombarded points along the forty to fifty-mile stretch of the coast from west of the Seine estuary to the tip of the Cherbourg peninsula.

"What Philip of Spain failed to do, what Napoleon tried and failed to do, and what Hitler never had the courage to do we are about to do—and with God's grace we shall," an American admiral told his officers as the operation began. The crews cheered as his words were relayed to them.

All Creeds Pray.

Before leaving a British port the soldiers, representatives of many creeds, turned to ritual on the broad, windswept gun deck.

Army Capt. Meyer Miller of Greenwich, Conn., recited the ancient ritual of Israel. The Protestant communion prayer was given by naval Lieut. R. H. McConnell of Charlotte, Mich., and Lieut.-Col. F. B. Henry of Chambersburg, Pa.

Finally, absolution en masse was given by Capt. L. B. Deery, who then administered the Catholic sacrament of communion.

With his priestly vestments worn over his Army field uniform, Capt. Deery told the men that although they wore no shining armor they were embarking on a "second crusade as surely as men long ago fought under the sign 'In hoc signd vinces.'"

24 TROOP CARRIERS AND GLIDERS LOST

JUN 8 1944

With the Ninth Air Force, June 7 (A. P.).—Twelve C-47 troop carriers and twelve gliders were reported missing today from overnight reinforcing operations beyond the beachheads in Normandy. This was the first specific report of losses from airborne operations since the invasion began.

In three waves the C-47 skytrains and gliders flew equipment and reinforcements to the beachheads late last night and early today. Two of the waves were towplane-glider combinations.

DAY

The first glider to land on enemy-held territory was the Fighting Falcon, purchased with $20,000 paid for War Bonds by pupils of the Greenville (Mich.) schools. Lieut.-Col. Mike Murphy of Lafayette, Ind., piloted the glider, and Lieut. William May of Cairo, Ill., was co-pilot.

Airborne engineers were among the troops dropped. The planes also released parapaks filled with rations, ammunition and other supplies.

Returning flyers said the whole Cherbourg peninsula was a mass of white and colored parachutes [illegible] the troops descended today.

Each C-47 is capable of carrying twenty-four fully equipped soldiers together with pilot, co-pilot and navigator. CG-4A gliders can seat fifteen men but are seldom loaded that heavily.

INVADERS LANDED UNDER A RAINBOW

JUN 8 1944

A Marauder Base in England, June 7 (A. P.).—Sergt. Leslie Young, a former dairy farmer of Hightstown, N. J., who is a turret gunner on a Marauder, was greatly impressed by a rainbow in the dawn sky over the invasion area as the Allied troops landed yesterday. "It stood out as plain as could be," he said.

Gault MacGowan, The New York Sun correspondent, who rode in Sergt. Young's plane as a representative of the combined American press, gave this description:

"It was just an ordinary rainbow that girt the invasion area at dawn with brilliant colors. As an insignia for supreme headquarters of the Allied Expedition force, it was a heartening sign for the attacking infantry. The rainbow streaked right across the combat zone, fading from sight only after thousands of men had seen it. Our plane in the bombing spearhead flew straight through the middle of it."

promptly fled when American fighters dived on it.

A few shells were lobbed over by German gun batteries after the landing but casualties were described as light.

Member Of Combat Team

That was the story of one beachhead as told by wounded evacuees who reached this port at 6 A. M. Among them was Corporal Johnny La Cognata, 22, of Brooklyn, N. Y., who suffered a slight fracture of the left wrist.

Johnny hit the beach with the first wave as a part of a demolition team of 22 combat engineers carrying explosives to destroy the barricade. They had been carefully briefed as to its precise location and just how to breach it.

"We crossed the Channel in an assault transport and were put overside in a Higgins boat for a 10-mile run to the beach," Johnny said.

"I was scared on the transport but once we got into the little landing craft and started toward the beach I forgot all fear. We were all soaking wet and almost seasick. As I saw the beach loom up ahead I was so mad I just wanted to get in there and fight."

Timed To Perfection

Johnny and his buddies said that the bombardment which preceded the landing was "magnificent." Bombs thundered down so thick and fast that it seemed impossible for anything to survive under them. So perfectly was the operation timed that the Higgins boats hit the beach within a minute after the last bomb fell.

A few of the Higgins boats hit underwater mines as they plowed through shallow water and were capsized, throwing their loads into

First Assault Wave Near Cherbourg Saw No Nazis In First Hour

JUN 8 1944

By Howard Whitman

[New York Daily News reporter, representing the combined American press. Distributed by the Associated Press]

An Invasion Port, June 7—The first assault troops to hit the beach near Cherbourg did not see a single German in their first hour of demolition work, during which they destroyed a concrete tank barricade according to a pre-arranged plan.

DAY

With dynamite charges, they blasted the barricade so that a tank column could charge through.

Lone Plane Chased

The only evidence of the enemy they saw was a lone Messerschmitt which appeared overhead and [illegible] the water, but few personnel was lost, most men wading to the beach.

"Our engineer team found the wall we were to demolish as easily as if we had rehearsed the whole show on this very beach," Johnny reported.

Hit By Shrapnel

"We planted our charges and blasted the wall without losing a single one of our men. Then—zing—a shell came over and exploded near by. A hunk of shrapnel smacked my right hand and—well, I guess my part in the show was over. I was ordered back to the Higgins boat for evacuation."

The transport which evacuated Johnny brought the first large load of evacuees back to this port. On board were survivors of a destroyer sunk by the enemy. One of them said "this invasion was by far the biggest and most spectacular of any we have been on but also the easiest."

Expected 'Blood Bath' Fails To Materialize

JUN 8 1944

By Tom Yarbrough

[Associated Press Correspondent, Representing the Combined American Press]

Aboard a British Destroyer off France, June 6 (AP—Delayed)—This little ship with four hot guns is going back to England now after spending 12 incredible hours in the front ranks phase of the Allied invasion of France—an operation that came off ten times as smoothly as anyone aboard expected.

From where we sat—about a mile and a half off shore—it seemed too easy and too smooth to be true. The men of this ship, through several tense and expectant months, had soce to refer to this thing (the invasion) as the "blood bath," and not altogether face tiously.

But it was not a blood bath at all.

Thankful For Good Fortune

They thank God—several of them told me so—that it was not as well as it did this first day, though they know full well the hardest part is yet to come. It's still almost incredible, though, that this force of men and ships spent 12 hours within easy shooting distance of Hitler's Europe and did not encounter a single German plane or ship.

DAY

It was like seeing a play in which some of the leading actors failed to show up. With strong binoculars, standing on the bridge, I saw thousands of men and machines tumble safely across beaches bristling with ugly spikes driven into the sand at crazy angles and topped with mines—beaches smoking from the terrible plastering of bombs and naval shells. The glasses brought the scenes up close in spectacular detail.

Only One Sector Observed

This account deals primarily with only one sector of the beach assaulted by men from the United Kingdom and covered by the British navy and embraces only the things we could see and which were reported to us from the shore immediately ahead.

Here are the salient highlights of what occurred around us—one of four small Hunt class destroyers in the front row center of one of the two major assault forces.

At 7.29 this morning 27-year-old Royal Navy Lieutenant William D. O'Brien, his eyes fixed on the beach, said, "The first vehicles are touching down. This is H-hour now."

One Close Call

Opposition was so weak generally—thanks to the seemingly complete tactical surprise—that this ship and others were still asking for targets when no more targets were available. One enemy shell exploded within about 50 feet of us, but caused no damage.

Landing troops moved across the beaches and advanced about 300 yards inland before noon, pushing ahead with tanks over green, tree-lined fields sloping up from the shore. Our sector included little Normandy towns with Caen farther back from the coast area immediately east of the Cherbourg Peninsula.

Civilians Apparently Evacuated

At the height of the assault a pall of black and gray smoke hung over the beaches in an area of five or six miles and at times whole towns appeared to be burning. We could see our own men moving along, but couldn't make out figures of Germans or Frenchmen anywhere. It looked as if civilians had been moved out long before. Windows of many buildings were bricked up as if to fortify them.

The weather seemed shaky at first, but went through some changes in our favor. In an operation involving so many ships—more than 4,000—some collisions seemed inevitable in even the best weather, but we had considerable northwest wind at certain stages and still heard of no collision.

Sees War Over in 4 Months

JUN 8 1944

Elmhurst Veteran of Three Invasions Declares 'We Can't Miss.'

By JOHN A. MOROSO.

Aboard a United States Assault Transport at a British Invasion Port, June 6 (Delayed) (A. P.).—Here are some of the things the fellows say about being aboard a ship waiting to assault Nazi-occupied France:

Lieut. William Nicholsen, 35 years old, of 4222 Ketchan street, Elmhurst, N. Y., native of Sandusky, Ohio, and a veteran of three invasions—"I want to get it the hell over with and get home. We can't miss. I think the European war will be over in four months. I don't think anybody gets scared in the daytime but they can get scared at night."

Lieut. (j. g.) William Dixon Seidler, 23, of 16 Plymouth street, Montclair, N. J., decorated for gallantry in Sicily—"Concussion and sheer power will do it. They figured beforehand how much naval firepower would erase our objectives and they doubled the amount."

Ensign Reed McCandless, 27, of Omega, Okla., making his third invasion and taking a boat load of TNT ashore—"We'll keep throwing the stuff in there till we get it."

Lieut. (j. g.) Albert McIntyre, 25, of 112 Lincoln street, East Orange, N. J., a 1942 Princeton graduate—"It will be tough but let's get it over with."

Lieut. (j. g.) Jack Bruckner, 25, of Durham, N. C., a veteran of the Sicily landing—"This one is going to take us marching down Broadway. I'm praying to get home to my wife."

Aboard Admiral Kirk's Flagship in the Baye of the Seine, June 6 (Delayed).—The Allied assault upon Hitler's Festung Europa was made at numerous beaches between Cherbourg and Le Havre, all of which differ considerably in topographical and terrain characteristics, some being strongly defended by anti-tank ditches, barbed wire, mines and strong points.

Inland, where British and American parachute troops landed, the country is higher, wooded and cut up. The Allied invaders may, therefore, encounter all sorts of terrain problems in their invasion.

DAY

Combat demolition units had about twenty minutes or somewhat more to blast lanes through the seaward row of beach obstacles before the tide rose and covered these obstacles. The demolition parties, each man of which carried TNT, then had the job of destroying other obstacles in the inner lines and some of them were then earmarked to blast passages through the concrete or masonry sea walls which are many feet thick and in many places almost twenty feet high.

The initial assaults therefore had to be made, if possible, in a period of protracted good weather, preferably on a rising tide sometime after daylight, but well before the tide had reached the flood. This meant that there were only about two periods during June that were expected to meet all these conditions.

It also meant that landing craft and small boats had to be lightened as much as possible so that they could get as far up on the beach as possible. The state of the tide was only one reason for this. The shoals were another major reason and still another important reason was the beach gradient.

Some of the beaches are very gradual, the gradient being about one in 150 or one in 200 as compared to the more normal one in 50.

INVASION TROOPS HAVE FRANC NOTES

JUN 8 1944

By W. R. HIGGINBOTHAM,

Representing the Combined American Press

Aboard a U. S. Coast Guard Transport, June 7 (A. P.).—American invasion troops were made ready financially for the assault on France with a pay day in franc notes, some dated in 1944 and bearing the authority of the Bank of France.

The notes were issued in four denominations—5, 50, 100 and 500 francs. They were based on an exchange rate of two American cents per franc, making the largest note worth $10 and the smallest equal to about a dime.

The smallest note, about three by two inches in size, bore the printed notation, "Serie de 1944" and "Emis en France" (issued in France) on one side and on the other the Tricolor with the motto of the French Republic, "Liberte, Egalite, Fraternite."

Of the four, only the large 500-franc note was exactly like its pre-war French equivalent. It bore the date of 1939 and was about four by nine inches.

Each note carried a warning against counterfeiting.

U. S. 'REJOICING' OVER INVASION BAFFLES WRITER

JUN 8 1944

By HANSON W. BALDWIN

New York Times Correspondent Representing the Combined American Press

Distributed by The Associated Press

ABOARD ADMIRAL KIRK'S FLAGSHIP OFF THE FRENCH COAST, June 6—(Delayed)—The press news received by radio aboard this naval vessel declared Sunday morning, June 4, that "millions of persons were thrown into premature rejoicing late yesterday when an American Press service falsely reported Allied invasion troops had landed in France."

(The writer refers to a flash issued by the Associated Press last Saturday afternoon erroneously reporting that General Eisenhower's headquarters had announced Allied landings in France.)

This report coming at a time when some of the Allied invasion convoys had actually left British ports but had not yet approached the French coasts—they were subsequently recalled because of unfavorable weather and the invasion was delayed—was serious enough as a possible "tipoff" to the enemy of impending operation.

But one word that particularly caught the eye of many officers aboard this ship was the word "rejoicing."

DAY

That word strikes an incongruous, almost a brutally callous note here in the bay of the Seine in waters where American bodies lie fathoms deep near beaches whose blood-drenched names will be forever emblazoned on the battle streamers of regimental colors, forever recorded in the history of our people.

Hard Fighting Ahead

It is a word which epitomizes a lack of comprehension of the grim issues here involved, of the long chances and hard struggles still ahead. It signifies a sense of overconfidence and hence it is repugnant to the men who are doing the fighting and who know the hard and relentless strength of the enemy.

In one sense the word "rejoicing" is understood. This operation has been so long prepared and tension of the "war of nerves" that preceded it has been so great that there is a positive sense of relief when the first shots are fired and when one knows that now at long last the grapple to the death has been started.

But in this correspondent's deliberate opinion this is no time for rejoicing but rather for prayer. Let us beat the enemy first and then rejoice. The main part of the job is still to be done.

It will be a hard, tough, brutal job. The landings now being made and the battles on the beaches—bloody though they undoubtedly will prove to be—are only the first part and perhaps the easier part of the job. The German coast defense batteries and beach positions are very, very strong but it has always been hoped that we could effect landings, break through this strong coastal crust and establish beachheads. But the main test then comes.

DE GAULLE ATTENDS PRE-D DAY SESSION

JUN 8 1944

L. V. ROBERTS

Allied Advanced Command Post, June 7.—This quiet, tree-shaded spot was the scene of an historic pre-D Day conference last Sunday, it may now be disclosed.

Gen. Dwight D. Eisenhower met here then with Prime Minister Churchill and the French leader, Gen. Charles de Gaulle. Also present were Field Marshal Jan Christian Smuts, South African Premier, British Foreign Secretary Anthony Eden and other important Allied public officials and military figures.

DAY

The group spent nearly two hours here, largely in the ward room tent where the walls were hung with detailed maps of the planned liberation of France.

Apparently the conversations between the supreme commander and De Gaulle were entirely satisfactory, because twenty-four hours later Gen. Eisenhower told us there was complete agreement with the French on military levels.

Apparently the tricky question of the French political situation was successfully divorced from military aspects of the Allied liberations effort and the required French co-operation for this effort.

Nazi Broadcasts Reflect Uneasiness

London, June 7 (A. P.).—German broadcasts reflected uneasiness throughout the night with Axis announcers predicting that more Allied landings were imminent.

JUN 8 1944

BRITISH HUMOR

NEW YORK, June 7—(AP) The British Information Service said today that the British general post-office had apologized for not extending registered parcel service to the invasion beachheads and had expressed its regrets that some delay in the delivery of mail to the invasion troops "is to be expected."

First Man in France Is Syracuse Officer

JUN 8 1944

AN AMERICAN PARACHUTE CARRIER BASE, June 7 (AP).—The first Allied soldier to set foot on the soil of France in the invasion from the west was a cigar-smoking parachute troop officer, Captain Frank Lillyman, of Syracuse.

Lillyman, twenty-nine years old, was the first man to jump from the lead plane of the parachute troop carriers which went in by the light of the moon before the assault from the sea.

Vichy to Enforce Order.

London, June 7 (A. P.).—Joseph Darnand, Vichy's director-general of public order, has called his militia to arms to enforce Marshal Petain's order that Frenchmen remain calm and obey the government a Vichy radio broadcast said today.

DAY

Residents of the principal cities of France have been warned by German occupation forces not to leave their homes between dusk and dawn on pain of death at sight, according to a British Broadcasting Company report heard today by the Blue Network.

JERSEYMAN THRILLED

JUN 8 1944

London, June 7 (A. P.).—Returning from yesterday's big invasion air assault, Fighter Pilot Capt. Alex R. Johnston of Essex Fells, N. J., said: "The biggest thrill I had was when four American Mustangs came to within 200 yards of me in the clouds. If they had been Germans they could easily have shot me down.

"The way the weather held right down to the whitecaps, I should say the invasion was a perfect job in timing."

Capt. Johnston was so excited he forgot about a seven-day operational leave he was supposed to start later yesterday.

"I knew I'd forgotten something," he said.

Among returning pilots who reported fierce opposition from ground defenses was Capt. Charles W. Schober, 2053 Ellery avenue, Fort Lee, N. J.

"Every Jerry in France who had a gun has been shooting this morning," he said.

Germans Have 2 Questions

JUN 8 1944

STOCKHOLM, June 7 (AP).—Swedish travelers said today that Germans at home, well prepared for the invasion by the propaganda of Dr. Paul Joseph Goebbels, appeared to take the news of the start of the Allied Western drive with resignation and calmness. In discussions of the invasion, two questions worried the Germans, the travelers said. First was, will the Russians now open a crushing offensive? Second, what's happening to the German Air Force?

UNDERGROUND FORCES JOIN

JUN 8 1944

Italians Use Smugglers' Trail Into France.

DAY

Barcelona, June 7 (A. P.).—Italian guerrilla forces, estimated at 12,000, were reported from the French border today to have moved from the Italian Piedmont along smugglers' trails into French Savoy where they have joined French guerrillas awaiting orders to take the offensive.

In this region, which would be vital in event of an Allied landing from the Mediterranean, a considerable force of German troops was reported pinned down.

Invasion Mail Delivered

JUN 8 1944

LONDON, June 7 (AP)—The first delivery of British mail to France since Dunkerque was accomplished by the British Army Postal Service today when it placed letters from home in the hands of the invasion army 24 hours after the landing.

FLEET OFF GENOA

LONDON, June 7 — (AP) A report to the London press through Switzerland said today that a large Allied fleet was cruising off Genoa and that "An Allied landing on the Ligurian coast (Italy), or even on southern France, was expected hourly."

Lorient and Nantes Bombed

LONDON, June 8 (Thursday) (AP).—The German radio said today that major enemy air attacks had been made against Lorient and Nantes, on the west coast of France, in the early morning hours today. Straw dummies attached to parachutes were dropped over the area of St. Brieux at the same time, the broadcast by the International Information Bureau, Nazi propaganda agency, said.

TURKS SAY ALLIES LAND IN GREECE

London, June 7 (A. P.).—Wholly unconfirmed reports of an Allied landing in Greece came last night from Ankara.

Direct Turkish advices located the reported landing in the Peloponnesus, that part of Greece south of the Isthmus of Corinth, and the United Nations radio at Algiers said Berlin had broadcast an Ankara report placing it more specifically at Patras, on the northwest coast.

LONDON, Thursday, June 8 (AP)—The Paris radio said early today that several Paris suburbs had been raided during the night by Allied bombers and that two of the attacking planes had been shot down by anti-aircraft fire.

London, June 7 (AP)—Allied air forces have lost 70 aircraft in this theater since the invasion started, today's announcements showed. Various announcements gave this breakdown:

Seventeen Allied fighters, 12 American C-47 troop carriers, 12 American CG-42 gliders, 13 British heavy bombers, 6 American Thunderbolt fighters, 4 American Havocs, 2 American Lightning fighters, 2 American medium bombers, 1 RAF Beaufighter, 1 American heavy bomber.

Berlin Reports Prisoner Incidents

London, June 7 (A. P.).—A camp for Allied prisoners has been established at Rouen in the invasion area, the Berlin radio said today, adding cryptically:

"When the prisoners were transferred there were some incidents with the population."

Churchill Persuaded Not to Go With Troops

LONDON, June 7 (AP) — It took a lot of persuading to keep Prime Minister Churchill from accompanying the invasion forces when they stormed the beaches of France, it was disclosed today.

Admiral Sir Bertram Ramsay, Allied naval commander, told a correspondent that he convinced the statesman "only with much difficulty" not to go along.

Ramsay said he pointed out to Churchill that the extra work involved in safeguarding him would be very great—and the Prime Minister finally relented.

Berlin Says Genoa Is Hit.

London, June 7 (A. P.).—A Berlin broadcast declared today that Genoa in northern Italy and several points along the Italian Riviera had been heavily bombed from the air last night.

'Germans Drop Ontg Allied Gliders'

London, June 7 (AP)—The German radio declared today that German parachutists were used in combatting Allied airborne troops even before they landed in France.

These Nazi parachutists, the radio said, "dropped onto Allied gliders and set them afire, as well as shooting their occupants."

INVASION FIGURES

By Associated Press.

Some figures on the invasion of France:

More than 900 C-47 troop transports and gliders were used in the opening blow. The train, nine planes wide, was 200 miles long as it went across the English Channel 300 feet above water. Today another train, fifty miles long, poured in reinforcements.

Thirteen thousand individual flights were made by Allied planes in the first day of invasion. Premier Churchill said 11,000 planes were available. On the seas were 4,000 ships and many more lighter craft.

Invasion at-a-glance

By The Associated Press

Invasion troops are officialy declared to be "doing better than expected" against stiffened German resistance.

Allies announce capture of Nazi-fortified cathedral town of Bayeux, five miles inland, and cutting of the Caen-Bayeux highway.

Allied leaders Eisenhower, Montgomery and Ramsay confer aboard cruiser off the invasion coast.

Invasion casualties still "lighter than expected."

Troops and supplies continue to reinforce units storming inland.

Allied airforce maintains solid cover over invasion beaches; planes hammer at German gun emplacements, communications and troop movements. Nazi airforce offers slightly stronger resistance. Fifty-three German planes are destroyed Wednesday and 23 Allied planes fail to return.

Weather improving with wind moderating and seas calmer.

Axis radios report additional Allied landings on French coast, but all unconfirmed by Allied sources.

Naval forces continue bombardment of coast and escorting of troops and supply vessels.

CLOSE MOUNTAIN FRONTIER

IRUN, Spain, June 7 (AP) The Germans have closed French frontier posts in the Pyrenees mountains to all traffic and no one is permitted to enter or leave occupied France. German border officials said the ban would last at least four days.

Inter-Allied Messages

WASHINGTON, June 7 (AP).—Following are the texts of cablegrams and acknowledgments exchanged between President Roosevelt and various government and military officials of the United Nations:

From Premier Stalin: "The news of the capture of Rome was received in the Soviet Union with great satisfaction. I congratulate you upon this great victory of Allied Anglo-American troops."

From Marshal Badoglio: "To you, Mr. President, to the great and free North American people, and to your gallant troops, on the day when the victorious troops pursuing the fleeing enemy are restoring Rome to the new Italy, I send my ardent wishes for the future as well as my gratitude. Today Rome, the first European capital to be liberated from the Germans, occupies her place in the world of justice and liberty. There can be no surer guarantee of renewed and lasting friendship between the United States and Italy than the sacrifices of American soldiers for the liberation of Rome."

From President Roosevelt to Marshal Badoglio: "I thank you for your message of June 6. The American people found it a good augury to that cause of world freedom and progress for which they are fighting that the first capital of the European continent to emerge from the black shadow of tyranny should be Rome, with all its universal significance. Its liberation was a fitting prelude to that mighty invasion launched from the north. Just as Rome and the other historic cities of Italy are felt to be the inheritance of all the civilized world, so, I am sure, the Italian people have never been more keenly aware than today that the cause of the civilized world is their cause and demands the complete dedication of their powers of mind and heart."

From Prime Minister Curtin of Australia: "Joyfully Australia tenders its congratulations on the Allied liberation of Rome and pays deep tribute to the gallant forces of the United Nations whose devotion has evoked this marked advance toward the final victory which will free all the world from despotism and tyranny. My deepes personal regards."

From the President to General Sir Henry Maitland Wilson, Allied commander in the Mediterranean: "We are all thrilled by the splendid success in Italy. My very warm congratulations to you."

From General Wilson: "I certainly appreciate and want to thank you for your message. Our success during the last few months is due to the fine fighting qualities of the Allied troops, the constant harassing operations of the Allied air forces, and the support received from the Allied navies. The 85th and 88th United States Divisions showed dash and fighting spirit in this, their first battle, and I should like to record my admiration of these fine troops."

From the President to General Sir Harold Alexander, Allied commander in Italy: "I am very happy to be able to send to my old friend unstinted praise and congratulations on the fall of Rome. Grand job."

From General Alexander: "Your kind message of congratulations is greatly appreciated. The United States' 5th Army played a magnificent part in this victory. I am immensely proud of it."

From the President to Lieutenant General Mark Clark, the 5th Army's commander: "You have made the American people very happy. It is a grand job. Well done. Congratulations to you and the men of the 5th Army."

From General Clark: "All members of the 5th Army are inspired by your deeply appreciated message of congratulations, and we reaffirm our pledge to deliver unrelenting blows until the enemy is finally defeated."

From the President to Lieutenant General Sir Oliver Leese, commander of the 8th Army: "My very warm congratulations to you and the men of the 8th Army."

From General Leese: "I thank you, Mr. President, on behalf of all ranks of the 8th Army, for your most kind congratulations which we value greatly. It has been an inspiration to fight alongside the 5th Army. With all my respects and grateful thanks to yourself."

From the President to Admiral Sir John H. D. Cunningham, Allied naval commander in the Mediterranean: "My hearty congratulations to you, to the officers and men under your command. The navies of Britain and the United States have lived up to their reputations. Well done."

From Admiral Cunningham: "I wish to thank you for your message on behalf of the officers and men of the Allied navies. All of us appreciate it very much."

From King George II of Greece: "On the victory of Rome, the first great success in Europe, I send you my sincere congratulations with real pleasure and satisfaction. We are filled with confidence that the magnificent American and Allied troops will in a short while complete their task of bringing the world final victory and freedom."

From President Vargas of Brazil: "I congratulate your excellency on the first day of the invasion of Europe, decisive step for the final victory of Allied arms, liberation of oppressed nations and restoration of tranquillity to the world. The Brazilian government and people follow with emotion and enthusiasm, hour by hour the march of events, certain that for the heroic American forces of land, sea and air the decisive days which follow will be ones of glory during which they represent on the fields of battle the peoples of our continent yearning for peace and justice. I beg that your excellency, leader of the American people, accept my most cordial salutations and transmit to General Eisenhower the most ardent wishes of myself and of Brazil for the complete success of the arms under his supreme command."

From President of Costa Rica: "The Costa Rican Congress agreed in today's session to send the Congresses and chiefs of the Allied nations engaged in struggle for democracy a message of encouragement and friendship on the occasion of the invasion of the European continent which was begun today."

From President Calderon Guardia of Honduras: "The news of the Allied offensive against the fortress of Europe has stirred the Honduran people who are fully confident of the triumph of the United Nations in the struggle against totalitarianism. The Honduran nation expresses the most fervent wishes for the success of the Allied arms in this great battle and associates itself with the feelings of the North American people and other friendly nations. I have the honor to present to your excellency the recognition of my government and that of the Honduran nation for the gigantic efforts which that government and people are making for Victory. Your warm Friend."

From President Prado Ugarteche of Peru: "It is very pleasing to me to convey to your excellency the congratulations of the Peruvian people and of myself for the success achieved in the Italian campaign upon the occupation of Rome by the forces under the command of General Clark saving from destruction a historic city and its cultural and religious monuments. The glorious feat of war which has just been accomplished has brought new laurels for the armed forces of the United States and the Allies and constitutes a decisive step toward the final triumph over the aggressor hordes which have not been nor shall be able to resist the valor of the men who are fighting for the liberty of the world. On this pleasing occasion I renew to your excellency the testimony of my highest personal esteem."

From Generalissimo Chiang Kai-shek: "On the historic occasion of Rome may I convey to you and the gallant American forces my warmest congratulations. This signal feat of arms demonstrates anew the might of the United Nations, which foreshadows in quick succession the liberation of all countries suffering under Axis occupation."

From President Higinio Morinigo of Paraguay: "On this day so glorious for the arms of the United Nations, on which heavy forces of the army of your country are taking part in the invasion of the Continent, I repeat to you my wishes that the most complete victory will crown so much daring and so much effort displayed in the cause of the freedom of the peoples of the world."

From King Faruq I of Egypt: "The so brilliant exploits of the valiant Allied forces crowned by their triumphant entry into Rome offer me a happy occasion to renew to Your Excellency the sincere expression of all my admiration and my most sincere felicitations, together with my cordial wishes for an early final victory."

From President Lopez of Colombia: "When the soldiers of the United Nations under the command of an American general are beginning one of the greatest military enterprises in history, I wish to be the interpreter to Your Excellency of the very keenly felt emotion which grips the people of Colombia, now, as never before, linked to the American nation in interest in victory and in concern for the sacrifices which must precede it. The Colombians would, at any time, have observed with astonishment and enthusiasm this extraordinary military campaign of its operations, the application of modern science to the liberation of the oppressed peoples. On this occasion our people feel, moreover, a legitimate pride that it is American-born officers and soldiers who are fighting such extraordinary battles, carrying to the old world not only the invincible force of a civilization which they prepared and strengthened for the service of humanity, but also their generous spirit, which does not permit them to vacillate in the determination to shed their blood for the liberty of the enslaved nations and for the defense and definitive establishment of the great political and social principles which have had their birth and such splendid development. The Colombians, Excellency, the Allies and brothers of the Americans who are fighting in France today against a common enemy, regret that they cannot offer yet greater aid to this great enterprise of free humanity nor a more effective direct contribution to the liberation of the European peoples. All are today sending up their Christian prayers for the success and final victory of the Allied troops and hope, as do your countrymen, that the compensation for the incalculable efforts, unmatched in the history of the world, which the United States is making in behalf of humanity may be a prompt victory which will save the greatest number of American lives and crown with glory the armies of all the nations which are beginning to lay siege, from the west, east and south, to the fortress of political barbarity. Receive, Excellency, the sentiments of solidarity of the Colombian people and my sentiments of friendship and admiration."

From Jose Francisco Urrejela, President, and Fernando Altamirano Z., pro-secretary of the Chilean Senate: "On the occasion of the beginning of the liberation of Europe by the Allied armies the Chilean Senate decided unanimously to express to your excellency the joy which seizes it and the certainty it has that the most complete success must reward this effort on behalf of liberty and right."

From President Elie Lescot of Haiti: "On the occasion of the liberation of Rome by the valiant and glorious American troops, I feel the need, as chief of an Allied and Catholic state, of expressing to your excellency the congratulations and sentiments of the Haitian people and government. I desire also to add my wish to those formulated by all the United Nations, that the liberation of Europe, inaugurated by the landing of the Allied troops on the coast of France, may continue rapidly and lead to the final victory. In the name of the Haitian people and government, which are more than ever united with the great American republic, I send your excellency the assurance of our unfailing attachment."

From Prime Minister Pierlot of Belgium: "The Belgian government begs your excellency to accept its most ardent felicitations for the brilliant part played by the valiant American Army in the liberation of Rome. This glorious feat of arms, which constitutes an important step on the road to the liberation of Europe, will be deeply felt by my fellow countrymen, who suffer under the yoke of the enemy."

From President Trujillo Molina of the Dominican Republic: "Receive my most cordial and effusive message of congratulations and sympathy on the occasion of the success obtained by the Allied armies in beginning the offensive with which it is intended to liberate the European peoples from the oppression to which the pitiless Nazi tyranny now holds them subject. I very fervently hope that the final success of this glorious undertaking will crown the aspirations of those of us who have placed all our faith in the triumph of democracy and liberty. All this to the honor and glory of the North American armed forces."

LEHMAN PLEDGES RELIEF FOR EUROPE

JUN 8 1944

Washington, June 7 (A. P.).—The Nazi-enslaved people of western Europe were promised by radio today that relief is on the way "even as the tidal waves of armed retribution consigns the tyrants to history's hall of infamy."

Herbert H. Lehman, director-general of the United Nations Relief and Rehabilitation Administration, gave the assurance in an adress prepared for a short-wave broadcast.

Asserting, "The world knows that your desire is to become as soon as possible self-sustaining and self-determining," Mr. Lehman added, "UNRRA has laid the plans for giving you a lift along the road to a secure and free new life."

PREDICTED NAZI DEFEAT IN 1941

JUN 8 1944

Eisenhower Said U. S. Army Could Rout Blitz.

Washington, June 7 (A. P.).—Almost three years ago a then obscure Army officer said that American troops were being taught to stand up and fight with weapons designed to knock out everything the Germans have to offer, and added:

"One day, watch and see! We'll do it."

And today, that officer—Dwight D. Eisenhower—has risen from the rank of lieutenant-colonel to a four-star general and is carrying an echo through continental Europe.

It was in August, 1941, that deep in Louisiana's pine woods Eisenhower said that the German forces never had met their equal, never been sorely pressed, but that the day would come when democracies would field armies sufficient to rout Hitler's cohorts.

At that time, as chief of staff of the Third Army in training for just such an all-out attack against the Axis as has now been undertaken, he strongly resented the popular idea that the German blitzkrieg was well nigh invincible.

"Why, Hitler never has faced any real opposition," Eisenhower said. "He has had his own way overrunning France and the Low Countries and all Europe." This was before the Germans had collided with Russia.

"His tanks never have met up against any defenses designed to stop them," Eisenhower continued. "We are teaching American troops to stand up and fight, with weapons designed to knock out everything the Germans have to offer."

At the maneuvers then, higher officers had referred the writer to Eisenhower for the answers to questions of what our own Army was cooking up as an antidote for blitzkrieg. He had lately returned from the Philippines where he helped Gen. Douglas MacArthur set up the defenses which later gave the Japs such stubborn resistance.

Halifax, F. D. R. Discuss War News

JUN 8 1944

Washington, June 7 (AP)—Lord Halifax, the British Ambassador, came from his first invasion conference with President Roosevelt today to report they had discussed "the war news, which is pretty good so far."

"We must expect a tough comeback from the Germans," he continued. "But it is a great thing that we got over there."

Halifax told newsmen he had compared notes about the war with the President in a meeting which was "just a chat, quite informal."

The Ambassador said he hopes to return to England for a visit sometime this summer.

Big Bond Buying Rush Is Started By Invasion

JUN 8 1944

WASHINGTON, June 7 (AP)—The invasion of western Europe brought a rush of war bond buying, the treasury reported today.

In Brooklyn alone, special booths set up by New York City's civilian defense organization have netted $3,000,000 in bond pledges and stamp sales, the War Finance Division said.

National Director Ted R. Gamble said other figures were not immediately available, but that wires from War Finance Chairmen in all states indicated a spontaneous outpouring of dollars.

Major Johnson, U. S. Fighter Ace, Sorry He's Missing 'Big Show'

JUN 8 1944

WASHINGTON, June 7. — (AP) A stubby Oklahoma boy, Major Robert Johnson, who went to war about two years ago well known as a Golden Gloves boxer and football player, came back today as America's fighter ace of the European theater, full of regret that he is missing the "big show" just begun.

Johnson told a press conference that the "way I look at it," teamwork is destroying the German Luftwaffe, and every wingman "is a leader" in his own right.

A radio announcement as he was preparing to leave England was Johnson's first intimation that the liberation of Europe had begun, and he said leaving then was like "twisting an ankle" on the eve of a Rose Bowl game.

Johnson would not say that he hoped to get back before the invasion ends—"I just wish it had started sooner."

The Oklahoman, who has 27 combat "kills" and several probables to his credit, shot down his 26th and 27th planes May 9 on his last mission a little less than a year after he bagged his first.

The first victory came June 13, 1943, on his thirteenth mission.

"Thirteen days later I got shot up," he grinned.

In his combat tour he piloted five fighters, including his good-luck ship, appropriately named "Lucky," in which he "got 19, one probable and four damaged."

Praises Ground Crews

Lack of recognition accorded air force ground crews is one of "my principal sore points," Johnson said.

"Those men watch us take off, think we aren't coming back and that we take all the risk, while we think we have all of the fun and all they get is stripes . . . We get the citations.

"I just put my crew chief, Walter Gould, West Virginia, in for a bronze star, and I hope he gets it."

Sixteen decorations adorn the Oklahoman's chest, one being the Purple Heart, which he received last June 26 when shot up in combat, tried to bail out, broke his fist against the canopy, and finally managed to fly his plane back to England when he could not get out to jump.

Twice after that his ship was hit but he was not seriously hurt.

He told of another flight in which Capt. Johnny Eaves, Edmond, Okla., with whom he has buddied since their training days, tackled 30 Messerschmitts, "got a couple of them, one probable, and hit three others."

His first warning of the battle, Johnson said, was Eaves voice on the radio:

"I'm down here with about 30 of them. It's going to be a hell of a fight."

It was, with the Jerries routed, and Johnson told a reporter that "Eaves will be coming home soon, probably."

About a year ago, when "Goering's outfit" was at its height, Johnson said German fliers were almost a match for Americans, but the "longer we go the more wary they become." After a pilot has been "knocked out of the skies two or three times" he becomes cautious, the flier said.

He "wouldn't trade" his Thunderbolt for any other type of combat plane.

Greatest Battles Lie Ahead Coast Guard Graduates Told

JUN 8 1944

NEW LONDON, June 7.—(AP) The United States Coast Guard gained 232 ensigns today as the Coast Guard Academy observed its 59th commencement, and a high naval officer told the graduates that "the greatest battles and the saddest losses still lie ahead."

"We are a long way from final victory," said Vice Admiral Richard S. Edwards, Chief of Staff to the Commander in Chief of the United States Fleet, the commencement speaker.

"In western Europe," he continued, "we have now just taken the first step in our long journey. The invasion has gone well, but only a very little distance. In the Pacific we have cracked the outer shell of the island defenses north of the equator. These defenses were tremendously powerful. Fortunately for us the Japanese fleet was, I may say, bent by the battle of Midway and by the number of actions that occurred in the Solomons area.

"The ability of the Japs to support the island garrison was altered by the Allied fleet, but we still have two long roads ahead of us—one in Europe and one in the Pacific."

Admiral Edwards, indicating that most of the graduates would be assigned either to the anti-submarine or the amphibious service, two types of warfare in which he said the Coast Guard had made an especially good record, added:

"Suffice it for me to say that, as an integral part of the Navy in this and other wars, the men of the Coast Guard have and will continue to have not only the esteem and admiration of the rest of the sea services, but also the grateful thanks of the country as a whole."

Ninety five of the graduates were members of the class of 1945, receiving their bachelor of science degrees a full year ahead of schedule because of the academy's accelerated wartime program, and the other 137 were graduated as temporary ensigns in the academy's reserve class.

The top three men in the graduating class, respectively, were: Kenneth H. Langebeeck of Santa Ana, Calif., Robert D. Johnson of East Orange, N. J., and George E. Williams of Bartow, Fla.

Vice Admiral Russell R. Waesche, commandant of the Coast Guard, presented the new ensigns with their commissions and Rear Admiral James Pine, the academy superintendent, awarded the degrees to the members of the class of 1945 and certificates denoting completion of the course to the graduates of the reserve school.

Forrestal Tells Annapolis Class Of Navy's Feat

JUN 8 1944

Its Control of Sea Lanes Made Invasion Possible, He Says at Graduation

ANNAPOLIS, Md., June 7 (AP).—Accumulation of tremendous force for the invasion of Europe "could not have occurred without the control of the Atlantic sea lanes" achieved by the American and British Navies over the last two and a half years, Navy Secretary James V. Forrestal declared today.

30. 24 — 16021

This control, he told the 104th graduating class of the United States Naval Academy in a prepared address, "was accomplished through constant and unremitting study of enemy tactics and through the most extraordinary co-ordination of surface vessels, land-based aircraft and the baby flat-tops."

The class of 914 members was the largest to receive diplomas in the history of the naval academy.

To illustrate the success attained in sweeping the enemy from the sea lanes, Secretary Forrestal disclosed that since Jan. 1, 1942, the American Navy has convoyed 7,400 vessels across the Atlantic, with a loss of only ten.

"And in this list of casualties, there is not a single troop transport," he said.

Discussing the new striking power of America's "balanced fleet," the Secretary asserted that "unlike the Germans, we did not count on any single weapon, such as the submarine."

"The thinking which preceded the construction of the vast forces which we have at sea today rested on the concept that no one weapon or class or kind of vessel alone can win a war," he said.

"The American Navy long before the start of this war recognized the tremendous impact that the airplane would have on sea power. . . . The dive-bomber, the torpedo plane, the co-ordinated use of the dive-bomber with the torpedo plane—these were conceptions and developments of American naval tactics."

Referring to the letdown that sometimes turns apparent victory into defeat for sports competitors, Mr. Forrestal warned that failure to exert continued pressure "can be equally fatal in war."

"We have come a long way on the road to victory and we are on the eve of great and historic events," he said. "But the rhythm and tempo of victory which is ours now must not be lost, against neither the Japs nor the Germans. We cannot afford for a moment to relax the iron pressure which we are applying with steady and inexorable power."

The oath of office was administered to the graduates by Admiral Ernest J. King, commander of the United States fleet and chief of naval operations, whose son, Ernest Joseph King jr., was a member of the graduating class.

Other important guests at graduation exercises today were Artemus L. Gates, Assistant Secretary of the Navy for Air; vice-Admiral Aubrey W. Fitch, deputy chief of naval operations; Vice-Admiral Randall Jacobs, chief of naval personnel; Admiral A. J. Hepburn, chairman of the general board, and Lieutenant General A. A. Vandegrift, Marine Corps commandant.

Three former Naval Academy superintendents present were Rear Admiral A. H. Scales, Admiral D. F. Sellers and Vice-Admiral Russell Willson.

Plea Of Invasion Need Fails To Halt Strike

JUN 8 1944

Cincinnati, June 7 (AP)—An estimated 450 workers, described by a company official as "bona fide strikers," held most of the huge Wright Aeronautical Corporation plant idle for a third day today in disregard of an AAF officer's plea to "help invasion and halt this monkey-business."

Between 12,000 and 15,000 workers have been absent since Monday, stalling production of airplane engines and parts.

Negro Transfer Blamed

The strike and resultant sympathetic walkout—as it was described by the company—resulted Monday after transfer under armed guard of seven Negro workers into a shop hitherto manned entirely by white personnel.

One shop, whose production is confined to engine cylinders, and three foundries remained in full-time operation, manned by approximately 6,000 employes. The south and center shops, employing between 12,000 and 15,000, were idle and halted assembly-line work of completed power plants.

Negroes Called Bona Fide Strikers

A company spokesman said the only bona fide strikers, "so far as we know," were in the cylinder department, where the Negroes were transferred Monday.

The appeal to help the invasion was made by Col. George Strong, of the AAF Central District Procurement Office in Detroit, in two speeches to milling workers on company grounds this morning.

One man was suspended after officials reported he "hecklingly argued" with Colonel Strong at the conclusion of one of his appeals.

A majority of 3,000 early morning shift employes completed their accustomed tour of duty in compliance with earlier appeals by Colonel Strong and F. L. Innis, of Columbus, sub-regional director of the United Automobile Workers (CIO).

Chinese General Believes Invasion Jap Death-knell

SAN FRANCISCO, June 7 (AP)—An official Chinese government radio broadcast from Chungking's "Voice of China," picked up here today, quoted Gen. Ho Ying-Chin, minister of war and chief of the general staff, as stating that the Allied invasion of Europe "is the death knell for Japan."

The general said after Germany collapses "the Allies will be able to concentrate their strength on liquidation of Japan. Undoubtedly Japan will break down. . . . The invasion is the death knell for Japan."

Germans Report Death of General

JUN 8 1944

London, June 7 (A. P.).—A DNB dispatch heard broadcast by the Berlin radio today said that Gen. Glokke of the German Sixth Army had died unexpectedly of a heart attack.

The dispatch did not identify Gen. Glokke further. He is not listed in available copies of the German "Who's Who."

Russians Say Nazi Attacks Diminishing

JUN 8 1944

Indication Seen German Drive Above Iasi Is at An End.

LONDON, Thursday, June 8 (AP)—The Russians announced today that German attacks in Romania north of Iasi have "diminished considerably," indicating that the Nazis' drive there was at an end.

Offensive Coming

A midnight communique said that Soviet troops, which Red Star, the army newspaper, reported were ready to launch the promised offensive against the Nazis from the east, had captured two heights from the invaders.

The communique broadcast from Moscow and recorded by the Soviet Monitor, said minor actions had been fought northwest of Tiraspol on the lower Dnestr and near Vitebsk on the central front.

The abortive German attacks in the province of Moldavia cost the Nazis more than 10,000 dead and tremendous losses in equipment during the savage fighting from May 30 to June 6, Moscow announced tonight. A Berlin foreign broadcast claimed at least ten Soviet rifle division had been "wiped out or decisively mauled."

The Berlin broadcast said the battle north of Iasi ended yesterday and added that only mopping up operations were in progress. This coincided with tonight's broadcast Russian communique, which said that action today involved only small forces and that all German attacks were repulsed.

Mass Bombing

The Russians also announced another mass bombing attack had been made last night on Iasi itself, smashing military trains and other objectives at the rail junction. Two planes were lost.

In its recapitulation of the damage inflicted on the Nazis during the week-long battle, Moscow said 315 tanks were knocked out, 451 planes shot down, 62 field guns destroyed and that 29 armored cars and troop carriers, 400 trucks and 240 machine-guns had been demolished.

With the German attacks smothered, there was a growing belief that the Russians' long-awaited plunge westward might begin at any time. Red Star said Russia is prepared to throw its full weight into the growing offensive against Germany and stated "a strong, mounting attack of all the armies of the United Nations will be fully developed."

London, June 7 (A. P.).—A slackening of German attacks in the eight-day battle near the Romanian city of Iasi was reported by Moscow today amid mounting indications the Russian Army is massing for a new offensive co-ordinated with the western invasion.

Berlin itself obviously expects a new Russian westward thrust. One Nazi commentator said "a strong Soviet offensive army has taken action stations" along the lower Dnestr.

Ready and waiting to lend support to any such attack are bombers and fighters of the United States air forces now based in Russia. Striking out from these bases yesterday for the first time, American heavy bombers supported by both American and Soviet fighters attacked a German airport at the Romanian city of Galati, at the mouth of the Danube River.

The flyers then returned to Russia to report that little was left of the airfield. A communique said six enemy intercepter planes were shot down, and two American fighters had not yet returned.

In the fighting northwest and north of Iasi the Germans yesterday "brought into battle considerably smaller forces of tanks and infantry," said a broadcast Russian communique.

Heavy fighting occurred only on one sector, Moscow said, declaring that "Soviet units have successfully repelled all Hitlerite attacks."

The great armies which at Teheran gave solemn promises not to make a separate peace are beginning to move forward for a meeting in Berlin, the newspaper added.

Russ Celebrate

Muscovites got up early this morning to read the freshest invasion bulletins, despite one of the wildest nights of celebration during the war. The radio blared forth the latest details and the Soviet press in an unprecedented display turned over whole pages to the momentous military operations Russia had long awaited.

All newspapers published a picture of Gen. Dwight D. Eisenhower, the supreme commander of the Allied Expeditionary Force.

Troops Are Praised

Pravda, in addition to a three-column picture of Eisenhower before an American flag, gave similar space to a picture of an Allied landing barge.

Maj. Gen. Mikhail Galaktionov, writing in Pravda, said, "Bloodshed in the name of the common countries in the east, west and south will solidify even more the understanding of the great alliance.

"We are fascinated by the intrepidity of the fighters who stormed the coastal fortifications and the heroism of the parachutists who dropped in the rear."

All newspapers followed the battle with detailed maps.

There were parties celebrating the invasion all over the city last night, with singing in the streets a part of the gayety. The Russians love occasions and this was one they had been awaiting for months.

By early evening all the vodka had disappeared from commercial stores, where prices for this commodity are high.

Many toasts were lifted to the Americans and the British and particularly to General Eisenhower, who seems to have fired the imagination of the people.

Army Set For New Blow, Russians Say

JUN 8 1944

Moscow, June 7 (AP)—Russia is prepared to throw the great weight of the Red army into the growing offensive against Germany, Red Star, the Soviet army newspaper, said today.

fast single-seater down here today and asked cautiously "is this Russia?"

"Sure," said a sergeant.

"You're really sure?" said Meyers.

"Of course, why?"

"Well," said the 21-year-old pilot climbing out of the plane, "the last place I tried to put down it wasn't. It turned out to be Iasi, Romania."

Meyers said that on his way to this airbase here he saw a field about five miles ahead of him and dropped down.

"The next thing I knew, I saw five Messerschmitts after me," he explained.

He said he eluded them, then figured they just happened to be in the vicinity, and tried again for a landing at the same field, still thinking it was a Russian base.

"This time they really let me have it—flak and everything," he said. "To what I owe my luck for getting away, I don't know—but we ought to put up signs or something—it's not easy to tell Russia from the air."

SWEDISH EXPORT PACT IS REPORTED

JUN 8 1944

Stockholm, June 7 (A. P.).—The Syndicalist newspaper Arbetaren reported today that Stanton Griffis, Foreign Economics Administration representative, had reached a compromise with Swedish exporters on the exportation of ball bearings to Germany.

The newspaper said Sweden would continue to export bearings to Germany in the same quantities as required in contracts, but they would be of "different dimensions." This was interpreted to mean that the Swedes would refrain from supplying Germany the type of ball bearings most vital to her war machine.

Fifth Army Smashes Toward Key Seaport

Driving North and West of Rome in Direction Of Tyrrhenian Port of Civitavecchia—Nazis Admit 'Major Break'

JUN 8 1944

By Edward Kennedy

ROME, June 7 (AP) — The Fifth Army smashed ahead north and west of Rome toward Lake Bracchiano and the key Tyrrhenian port of Civitavecchia tonight in a drive so rapid and powerful that the Germans themselves described it officially as a "major break" through their lines.

NIGHT

Fan Out

Fanning out above the city the Allies advanced so far along the vital coastal highway No. 1 that one official announced this evening that they "continued a rapid advance in the direction of Civitavecchia," the closest port to Rome, 40 miles to the northwest by road.

This morning's communique placed the Allied armies more than 10 miles above Rome on a wide front, and today's advances apparently were well beyond these lines. Gen. Sir Harold Alexander, commander-in-chief in Italy, proclaimed that "the strength of the German armies has been broken."

The German High Command said that the Allies had "succeeded in achieving a major break" north of Rome and had "succeeded in breaking into our positions" west of the capital.

Light Resistance

The Allied command described German resistance as "only light." It had dwindled to disorganized activity by delaying infantry units and self-propelled guns.

The advance was along all main highways west and northwest of the city, including the routes numbered 1 and 2 and the Magliana Coastal Road, the Allied troops covering a distance of 10 miles from Rome as they reached northward to within five miles of Lake Bracchiano. The march reached the important peaks Mount Grossara, Mount Agulro, and Mount Forno, commanding the Brachiano route for two miles.

To the west advance patrols reached points three to five miles from the sea and nearly a dozen miles north of the mouth of the Tiber.

As the battered German Tenth and Fourteenth German armies fell back, Gen. Alexander broadcast to Italian patriots urging them to rise up and do all they can to disrupt the retreat. "In less than a month the strength of the German armies has been broken," he said, adding that "the liberation of Italy now is well under way."

Small Groups

The disorganized resistance the Allies were encountering was from small battle groups made up of elements of various beaten units. Already more than 18,000 prisoners had been taken by the Fifth Army alone, and the total was growing.

More thousands were captured by the British Eighth Army which still was meeting strong enemy defenses northeast of Rome as the Germans threw heavy demolitions and minefields into the path of the advance. The Germans played for time to retreat from the mouth of a net closing in the hills above Rome.

"The hardest fighting is now centered northeast of Rome," said today's Allied communique. The Germans were described as "offering strong resistance" in this area.

On the front 50 miles east of Rome New Zealanders slashed forward from Sora and captured Balsorano seven miles to the north.

Caught Napping

It was apparent tonight that the new Allied offensive had caught the Germans napping and had come as a complete surprise to Field Marshal Albert Kesselring. As a result the campaign has roared from the Garigliano river to Rome in less than a month and at a cost of comparatively light casualties.

It was announced officially today that battle casualties had "been on a considerably lower scale than expected" and that a great proportion of the wounds was not serious.

The Mediterranean air force flew more than 2,300 sorties yesterday in operations which carried east to the oil refineries at Ploesti, Rumania, which were attacked by heavy bombers along with Romanian and Yugoslav rail points.

In Italy tactical forces attacked German communications in the areas north and northeast of Rome and shipping and other coastal objectives farther north. Altogether 16 Allied heavy bombers and 17 other aircraft were missing in the day's operations, and 34 enemy aircraft were destroyed.

Allies Push On Civitavecchia

JUN 8 1944

MORNING HERALD

Allied Headquarters, Naples, June 7 (AP) — Fifth Army troops pounding after the retreating Germans are advancing rapidly in the direction of Civitavecchia, 40 miles northwest of Rome, it was announced tonight.

Civitavecchia is the nearest important port to Rome on the Tyrrhenian Sea.

The advance on this sector parallels drives north and west of Rome, which had already reached more than ten miles.

DAY

Nazis Admit Break

It was noted that the German communique said the Allies achieved "a major break" in the German lines on the coastal road west of Rome, and had "again launched a big attack" with superior infantry and tank forces.

One column pushing beyond Rome earlier was reported only five miles from Lake Bracchiano.

Another column has driven at least ten miles northwest of the Italian capital after crossing the Tiber and still is forging steadily ahead behind enemy rear guards.

Drive Close To Sea

Patrols probing west from Rome reached points three to five miles from the sea and nearly a dozen miles north of the Tiber's mouth.

Only spotty resistance was being encountered by the Fifth Army forces, but the Eighth Army was engaged in brisk battles with strong German delaying forces in the mountainous sectors east of the capital.

New Zealand troops captured Balsorano, about six miles north of Sora, in their advance up Highway 32 toward Avezzano.

Uprisings Urged

The newest gains were reported after General Sir Harold Alexander, Allied commander in chief in Italy, in a broadcast to Italian Patriots, declared that "in less than a month the strength of the German armies has been broken."

Alexander urged the Patriots to se against the Nazis and do all in their power to sabotage enemy communications and hinder Kesselring's efforts to retire northward.

"The liberation of Italy now is well under way," the Allied commander declared.

The total of prisoners taken in the Allied Italian offensive still was rising steadily, with the Fifth Army alone now claiming more than 18,000.

Ploesti Hit Again

The Mediterranean Allied air force joined yesterday in the many-front assault on Hitler's Europe by sending between 500 and 750 Flying Fortresses and Liberators into the Balkans. Targets included the oil refineries at Ploesti, rail yards at Brasov and Pitesci and the "Iron Gate" canal at Turnu-Severin in Romania, and rail targets at Belgrade, Yugoslavia. Thirty-four enemy planes were destroyed against a loss of 16 heavy bombers and 17 other aircraft.

(A Berlin broadcast declared meanwhile that Genoa, in northern Italy, and several points along the Italian Riviera had been heavily bombed last night.)

Targets north of Rome were attacked from the air last night, the daily communique said.

staffs.

Arrangements have been made for the Japanese ambassador to the Vatican, whose legal residence is outside Vatican City, to visit the Vatican whenever he chooses but his liberty is restricted to a direct route from his residence.

AMG also announced the Germans had liberated all convicts in the city's penitentiaries and jails but that at least a third of them had been rounded up.

1,000 Wounded Nazi Soldiers Are Found in Rome Hospitals

JUN 8 1944

TUCKER

ROME, June 7.—(AP) A thousand wounded German soldiers have been found in the hospitals of Rome, Allied military government officials said today.

More than 25,000 casualties were being treated here just before Allied occupation, but the Germans succeeded in evacuating many of them, it was ascertained.

MORNING

The transition of Rome from a combat city to near normalcy began within a few hours after occupation, and within 48 hours soup kitchens capable of feeding 400,000 persons were opened.

AMG health officials said there was not a single case of malaria in the city. 16,000 hospital beds were available, large quantities of coal were obtained for power and some parts of the city had electricity within a few hours.

The University of Rome, courts, libraries and elementary schools all were opened within the first two days.

It was announced that two well-known Fascist newspapers, Popolo Di Roma and Giornale d'Italia had been suppressed. Others continued publication but under new editorial

FIFTH ARMY GETS CLARK'S PRAISE

JUN 8 1944

Rome, June 7 (A. P.).—Lieut.-Gen. Mark W. Clark, in a congratulatory message to the American, French and British divisions of the Fifth Army, said today that through the capture of Rome "you have again proved you form a great Allied fighting team, ready to launch new assaults on new objectives that lie between us and complete victory."

15 LABOR LEADERS SLAIN BY GERMANS

JUN 8 1944

ROME, June 7.—(AP) The Socialist newspaper Avanti said today the retreating Germans had slain Bruno Buozzi, secretary-general of the Confederation of Labor, and 14 of his associates.

The bodies were said to have been found six miles from Rome.

Pope Urges Correspondents To Write of a Just Peace

JUN 8 1944

TUCKER

ROME, June 7.—(AP) Pope Pius XII urged correspondents today "to write of a peace that can meet the approval of all well-meaning peoples" in his first press conference since becoming Pope.

"You are most welcome. You have a mission of tremendous importance," his Holiness said in greeting the newsmen as he entered the throne room of the Vatican.

"If it would be well to have a message for you, it would be those words spoken back in 1940 on the eve of Christmas:

"If a man is sincerely interested in securing spiritual and moral conditions for future collaboration between nations he will direct his force toward duty, truth, justice and goodwill, and even more, toward the supernatural idea of brotherly love that Christ gave to the world."

His Holiness, thin and pale but appearing surprisingly strong, then urged the correspondents to let the ultimate general purpose of their writing be for peace.

"The war should be only a means to peace," he said, "write for a peace that can meet the approval of all well meaning peoples—that can assure one and all those conditions necessary so that they may live in a manner befitting the dignity of a human being.

"Good bye and bless you all."

U. S. Red Honors Given Yank

JUN 8 1944

Algiers, June 7 (AP)—Before thousands of his fellow troopers assembled in Saint Eugene Stadium, 32-year-old Corporal James D. Slaton, of Laurel, Miss., today received American and Russian decorations to add to his British Military Medal.

Lieut. Gen. Jacob L. Devers, deputy commander in the Mediterranean, presented the 45th Division hero with the Congressional Medal of Honor for his exploit of September 23, 1943, when he wiped out three Nazi machine-gun nests single-handed with bayonet, grenades and rifle near Oliveto, Italy.

Alexander Bogomolov, Soviet delegate to the French National Committee, then pinned on the Russian Order of Patriots, second class—the highest Russian award for enlisted personnel. The British Government already had bestowed its award.

DAY

Lifetime Pension

As holder of the Russian decoration, Slaton receives a lifetime passport into the Soviet Union, including free passage on all Russian transportation, and a lifetime pension of $4 monthly.

The father of four boys, Slaton worked himself up to army weight after rejection in December, 1941. He was somewhat fussed by the honors bestowed upon him, and remarked: "I don't deserve this medal. The guys who deserve it are my buddies—all dead now."

He was wounded November 12 at Venafro, taking five machine-gun bullets in the right hip and one in the right leg.

His widowed mother, Mrs. M. P. Slaton, lives at Gulfport, Miss.

Japs Retreat Rapidly In Kohima Area

Leaving Too Swiftly for Allies to Keep Up With Them.

JUN 8 1944

SOUTHEAST ASIA COMMAND HEADQUARTERS, Kandy, Ceylon, June 7 (AP)—Their forces in northeastern India sapped by heavy losses, the Japanese are retreating so swiftly from the Kohima area that Allied patrols cannot keep pace, Allied headquarters announced today.

NIGHT

Allies Attack

In addition to occupying a village six miles east of Kohima, the Allies attacked northwest of Bishenpur, an enemy stronghold below Imphal, and gained their first objectives.

With the help of Allied artillery and aircraft, Lt. Gen. Joseph W. Stilwell's forces made slight advances on the Japanese Burma base of Myitkyina while Chinese forces to the west in the Mogaung valley closed to within five miles west of the threatened enemy base of Kamaing.

Japs Flee Kohima Area

JUN 8 1944

DAY

Southeast Asia Command Headquarters, Kandy, Ceylon, June 7 (AP) —The Japanese are withdrawing rapidly in the Kohima area of northeastern India owing to their heavy losses, and the British have occupied a village six miles east of the town, Allied headquarters announced today.

The Japanese retreat was said to be so rapid that the British were unable to keep contact.

British gains also were recorded on the Aradura spur to the south and to the northwest of Bishenpur, the area below Imphal to the south.

30. 24 — 16023

At Myitkyina, in North Burma, Lieut. Gen. Joseph W. Stilwell's line was advanced slightly in the southern part of the town, while to the west in the Mogaung Valley the Chinese closed in to within five miles west of Kamaing and drew up to within three miles of Lonkin in the jade mine area.

Japs Nearer Changsha

CHUNGKING, June 7 (AP)—A Japanese force moving from the north on Changsha has advanced to a point within nine and a half miles of the city, the Chinese high command announced tonight. Another enemy force was 12 miles east of the city, a communique said.

The bulletin said a group of Japanese from the forces east of Changsha slipped behind Chinese defense lines but were wiped out.

Between Tungting Lake and the Yangtze, the communique said, Chinese troops had recovered more ground, including part of a town. This advance, the high command said, partially restored positions prevailing when the Japanese began their drive in this region on May 27.

In Honan province, the Chinese said heavy losses were inflicted on Japanese troops attacking west of Shanhsien, 43 miles from Tungkwan.

Chinese units fighting along the Burmese border in Yunnan province captured a number of points in the vicinity of the Burma Road near Lungling, the bulletin said, and other troops, by forced marches over winding mountain trails, advanced within two miles of Lungling itself.

Due north, other Chinese were said to have destroyed a bridge blocking a motor highway leading to Tengchung, the enemy's main base in Yunnan.

JAP TROOPS NEAR CAPITAL OF HUNAN

Chungking, June 7 (A. P.).—Japanese troops were reported today to have reached the outskirts of Changsha, their major goal in the renewed offensive in Hunan province.

Previous dispatches told of bitter resistance by the Chinese against the Japanese drive on the province capital, a bar against enemy control of the Hankow-Canton railroad.

Six Japanese columns had been reported slashing southward against the thrice-ravaged city.

Earlier a Chinese communique said that in continued attacks along the Salween front in Yunnan Province, the Chinese forced the Japanese out of Chiaotou, and that Chinese troops reached Chiangtso and Watien in the drive toward Shweli River valley.

Watien is an important Japanese base about seven miles below Chiaotou, where Japanese have now occupied fortified positions in the hills south and southwest of the town, the announcement said. Supported by fighter bombers of the Fourteenth United States Army Air Force, and the heaviest artillery yet employed on the Salween front, the Chinese have attacked the Japanese in the vicinity of Lameng, about twenty airline miles northeast of Langling and overlooking the Salween River crossing of the Burma Road, the communique added.

Vital Mokmer Airdrome In Allied Hands

Falls After Many Days of Bitter, Bloody Fighting.

ADVANCED ALLIED HEADQUARTERS, New Guinea, Thursday, June 8 (AP)—The Mokmer airdrome on Biak Island, giving Gen. Douglas MacArthur a base within bombing range of the Philippines has been stormed and captured, headquarters announced today on the 13th day of the invasion of the Schoutens.

From Rear

Stalled and bloodily repulsed earlier in a frontal stab from the initial beachhead, established May 27, MacArthur got in behind the enemy positions and swept on to the airfield from the rear.

The airfield is within 880 miles of the Philippines to the northwest and is within good fighter range of Palau, western Carolines naval base of the Japanese, guarding the approaches to the Philippines.

Headquarters said the Japanese were routed Wednesday and that American losses in the victorious move were light.

After the May 27 landing, two battalions of Yanks were caught in murderous fire of Japanese on ridges and in caves while attempting to move west along a shore road to Mokmer.

Biak, which is in a group of islands in Geelvink Bay, Dutch New Guinea, also has two other airfields desired by the Sixth Army invaders.

Push On

Mokmer's captors are pushing toward the Borokoe airdrome a few hundred yards to the west.

The hard-won Mokmer coral strip fell at 11 a. m. Wednesday to Yanks who had made their way slowly over the same line of ridges from which the Japanese earlier had poured down machinegun and mortar fire. Warships and planes supported the attack.

The Japanese apparently had counted on the Yanks resuming their coastal road drive and had massed their strength there.

"By a wide encircling movement through difficult terrain, our troops were enabled to attack the enemy's prepared positions from the rear," today's communique said.

"Surprise was thereby attained and the enemy's forces were routed with light losses to ourselves."

To pin down Japanese air opposition, which has been persistent since the May 27 landing approximately 10 miles from Mokmer, Allied planes pounded all available enemy fighter bases in the Geelvink Bay perimeter.

Headquarters also reported that American forces, who have been on Bougainville in the northern Solomons since last November, extended their position Monday southeastward until they hold virtually all of the more than 25-mile length of Empress Augusta Bay. Although the Japanese occupy the bulk of that island, it is dominated by American air bases along the bay and other invasion moves to the north long since have cut the enemy supply line to Rabaul.

One column pushing along inland ridges reached positions a mile and a half from Mokmer. A parallel coastal force met heavy resistance northwest of Ibdi village, five miles from the field, and failed to advance.

Boston attack planes wrecked several grounded enemy aircraft at Babo, on the Dutch New Guinea mainland southwest of Biak, and destroyed two coastal vessels off Monakwari. A Liberator on patrol shot down a Japanese plane near Halmahera Island, major enemy base between New Guinea and the Philippines.

Japanese Planes Repulsed At Biak

Allied New Guinea Headquarters, June 7 (AP)—Japan's crippled air arm struck desperately as Americans inched nearer a bitterly defended airfield in the Schouten Islands, but the assault from the enemy's few remaining fighter bases in the Dutch New Guinea area was unsuccessful, a headquarters communique disclosed today.

Nipponese planes twice attacked Allied positions, while a Yank column drove toward cliffs overlooking Mokmer airstrip and two neighboring landing fields on Biak. The raids were ineffective and one plane was shot down.

TRADE UNION FROWNS ON WORK STOPPAGES

Melbourne, June 7 (A. P.).—The Australia Trade Union convention applauding the opening of a second front in France, called upon trade union members throughout the Commonwealth today to refrain from any action which would hamper the struggle to destroy Nazism.

Convention spokesmen said that the resolution was directed particularly at miners in New South Wales, where they said mine stoppages have caused curtailment of transport and other essential services.

Tokyo Protests Death Of Interned Jap

New York, June 7 (AP)—The Japanese have launched what was described as a strong protest with the United States on the death of a Japanese last month at the Tule Lake internment camp, said a Tokyo broadcast heard today by NBC.

The broadcast claimed the death was a "shooting" and called it an "overt act against humanity."

U.S. PLANES ATTACK TRUK AND GUAM

Washington, June 7 (A. P.).—American planes attacked a group of enemy cargo ships northwest of Truk on Monday, and damaged one of the vessels, while other planes not far away were battering the enemy installations at Guam.

The Guam base, captured by the enemy early in the war, put up a heavy resistance the last time bombers struck there but the Navy said today the Japanese did not send any planes into the air to intercept the bombing flight Monday.

The Navy reported also that on Monday other planes attacked Nauru to the southeast and Ponape to the east of the enemy base at Truk, once considered the strongest Japanese position in the Central Pacific.

The Pacific press release No. 435 told also of an attack by dive bombers and fighter planes on airfield runways on Mille, one of the Japanese positions cut off from reinforcement and support on the eastern fringe of the mid-Pacific Marshall Islands group.

AMERICAN CRUISER LOANED TO RUSSIA

WASHINGTON, June 7 (AP) Transfer of an American light cruiser to Russia under lend-lease was confirmed today by Chairman Walsh (D-Mass) of the Senate Naval Affairs committee.

Title to the vessel, he said, remains in the United States.

Senator Bridges (R-NH) told the Senate May 23 he had heard that "one or more" units of the United States Navy had been transferred to the U.S.S.R. He said he had been unable to get either a confirmation or denial, and that he thought the American people and their congress "are entitled to know the truth."

Walsh said in a statement today the Navy department had informed him that the authority for the transfer was the lend-lease act which empowers the President, in the interest of national defense, to authorize the secretary of the Navy to lend-lease defense items, including ships.

"The Navy department has informed the committee that the vessel in question was only leased, and title still remains in the United States," Walsh said.

He did not name the cruiser.

POLISH MINISTER IS GUEST OF FDR

WASHINGTON, June 7.—(AP) President Roosevelt conferred with Prime Minister Stanislaw Mikolajczyk of Poland today and was his host tonight at a White House dinner attended by cabinet and diplomatic officers, military and congressional leaders.

The Prime Minister said he could not disclose details of his first conference with Mr. Roosevelt. The two meetings, however, may advance British and American efforts to rebuild friendship between Russia and the Polish government in exile.

The Soviet objects to some polish government officials it regards as hostile to Russia. The two governments also are at odds over territorial questions.

Stettinius Lauds Portuguese Move

Washington, June 7 (AP)—Portugal became today the first of the European neutrals to give full compliance to Allied requests for stoppage of vital war aid to the Nazis. It imposed a complete ban on export and production of wolfram.

The prohibition, it was disclosed, was undertaken Monday, before Allied landings in France.

Threat To Nazi Effort

As Portugal is Europe's largest supplier of the strategic wolfram used in high-grade steel and armor-piercing shells, the ban could deal a heavy blow to the German war machine.

In the words of Acting Secretary of State Edward R. Stettinius, it "should prove a factor in shortening the war."

Portugal's yearly production of wolfram has been 6,000 tons, an important source of war-time income for the country. Germany got about 2,000 tons a year, which was the bulk of Nazi supplies.

Capture of Rome Praised In Messages to Roosevelt

WASHINGTON, June 7—(AP) Congratulatory messages saluting the liberation of Rome and opening of the European invasion are pouring into the White House from Allied governments and military leaders all over the world.

Messages from a host of governments were made public late today at the White House together with congratulations President Roosevelt sent to military leaders of the Italian campaign.

"The news of the capture of Rome was received in the Soviet Union with great satisfaction," Premier Stalin told the president. "I congratulate you upon this great victory of allied Anglo-American troops."

Marshal Badoglio of Italy sent his "ardent wishes for the future as well as my gratitude" and added:

"Today Rome, the first European capitol to be liberated from the Germans, once again occupies her place in the world of justice and liberty."

Replying, President Roosevelt said "the Italian people have never been more keenly aware than today that the cause of the civilized world is their cause."

Among messages from Latin-American countries, that from the president of Brazil was representative:

"Accept my most cordial salutations and transmit to General Eisenhower the most ardent wishes of myself and of Brazil for the complete success of the arms under his supreme command."

The fall of Rome, Generalissimo Chiang Kai-Shek of China told the President, "foreshadows in quick succession the liberation of all countries suffering under Axis occupation."

PRISONER EXCHANGE COMMISSION URGED

WASHINGTON, June 7—(AP) Establishment of a seven-member commission designed to secure an agreement between the United States and Japan for exchange of wounded war prisoners was proposed today in a bill by Rep. Pfeifer (D-NY).

Under his plan the group, to be known as the Wounded American War Prisoners Relief commission, would be authorized to arrange for exchange of disloyal interned Japanese in this country for Americans held as war prisoners by the Nipponese.

TYPHUS IS LICKED AS ARMY SCOURGE

WASHINGTON, June 7.—(AP) Typhus, the scourge of armies since the dawn of history, has been licked by the American armed forces.

That's the report made today by Brig. Gen. Leon A. Fox, field director of the United States of America Typhus Commission.

"Typhus," he told a news conference, "has been removed from the death list of the American soldier."

The removal has been accomplished by a new vaccine, and by the use of DDT, a new delousing agent in both powder and liquid form.

With the vaccine, immunization of American soldiers was so complete that only a single mild case occurred in the army during a typhus epidemic in Naples.

And with the DDT powder, Fox and the typhus commission ended the epidemic among the civilian population in less than two months. In a single day, 582 men deloused 73,000 people in Naples with DDT powder.

49 BILLION FUND FOR ARMY SET BY HOUSE GROUP

JUN 8 1944

Appropriations Committee Cuts 242 Millions Off Budget Estimates.

12 BILLIONS FOR AIR FORCES

Hearings Reveal American Pilot Losses Are Below the Early Replacement Appraisals.

Washington, June 7 (A. P.).—America's army fighting its way through western Europe toward the heart of Hitler's homeland won a $49,109,002,795 vote of confidence today from the House Appropriations Committee. That amount was recommended by the Committee to Finance the War Department for the year starting July 1.

While not a record for the department, the new fund exceeds by some $8,500,000,000 current fiscal year obligations and includes a carry-over of $33,672,971,000 from the record $74,211,249,961 voted the Army a year ago. It skyrockets to approximately $390,000,000,000 the total obligations voted by Congress for the war effort since July 1, 1940.

The amount recommended by the committee was $241,837,905 below budget estimates. The largest single allotment was $12,610,200,000 for the Air Forces.

Almost $5,000,000,000 was earmarked by the committee for transfers of defense articles under the lend-lease program and for aid to civilians in recaptured areas before the United Nations Relief and Rehabilitation Administration (UNRRA) takes over. For lend-lease items $4,335,269,629 was allotted, and for civilian aid $562,556,900. To finance activities of the Wasps, the Army's women civilian pilot organization, the committee recommended $6,391,250.

The committee wrote into the bill a prohibition against the use of any funds for the training of ne wstudents in mediine, dentistry and veterinary medicine unless they actually were being trained by the Army for that purpose as of today.

Some Air Force Facts.

During its study of the bill the committee learned from Gen. H. H. Arnold, commander of the Army Air Forces, that the A. A. F. dropped 174,719 tons of bombs against Germany and 43,085 tons against Japan during the first four months of 1944. To do it they flew 218,877 sorties against Germany and 83,292 against Tojo, and during that period destroyed 5,783 German and 1,397 Jap planes. The tonnage dropped during the four months was greater than for the whole of 1943.

Losses of American pilots are much lower than estimates on which training of replacements was based, and Gen. Arnold believes that about 50 per cent of Air Force personnel listed as lost will turn up later as prisoners of war.

He considers the Focke-Wolfe 190 and the Messerschmitt 109 and 110 "worthy antagonists in the air" and said the big German Junker bombers "compare very favorably with ours," while the Focke-Wolfe long-range bombers compare favorably with our B-24s and B-17s.

Only 3 per cent of casualties reaching Army medical facilities have died during this war, compared with 8 per cent in the last war.

New Tank Type Coming.

The War Department disclosed that a new tank, superior to the M-4, able to "outmatch any similar weapon which the enemy can put in the field against us" with greater fire power, heavier armor and a lower silhouette, "soon" will be available—and that was several weeks before the invasion started.

Discharges among the Women's Army Corps are averaging 400 monthly, with physical disability accounting for most of them. During the last three months of 1943, there were thirty-four Wacs discharged under other than honorable conditions.

Army divisions that have left this country to date have averaged slightly more than two years of training.

The Army's mortality rate in 1943 from disease and non-battle injuries was 2.6 men per 1,000 in the United States and 3.8 overseas. Of all patients admitted to hospitals and quarters overseas during 1942 and 1943, 89 per cent were returned to duty by the end of 1943.

Casualties among Army chaplains by the end of 1943 totaled 103, of whom nineteen were killed in action and thirty-three were taken prisoner.

STIMSON ASKS PAY RISE FOR INFANTRY

Washington, June 7 (A. P.).—Emphasizing the great and dangerous task of American soldiers driving into western Europe, Secretary of War Stimson told Congress today that when it comes to casualties, the infantry suffers most.

He reported, for instance, that in the North African theater, including the hard-fought Italian campaign, the infantry represented only 19.8 per cent of the total strength, but suffered 70 per cent of the casualties.

Mr. Stimson gave the figures in a letter to Speaker Rayburn asking legislation for increased pay to specially skilled infantrymen. Mr. Stimson urged action to provide a $5 a month salary boost for doughboys holding the expert infantryman's badge and $10 a month for those with the combat infantryman's badge.

Cost of the increase would total approximately $55,000,000 to $71,000,000 yearly, he said.

He commented, however, that "the proposed pay increases are not intended as money compensation for the hazards and hardships involved—such things can not be paid for in money."

Regarding the casualties Mr. Stimson gave the following figures:

In the Southwest Pacific the infantry represented 15 per cent of the total strength, but suffered 26 per cent of the casualties; in the South Pacific, 33 1-3 and 50 per cent, respectively; and in all the listed theaters combined, 25 and 50 per cent, respectively.

ADOPT COMPROMISE ON COURT MARTIALS

JUN 8 1944

WASHINGTON, June 7—(AP) House democrats repulsed a renewed Republican effort today and adopted compromise legislation extending for six months the statue of limitations governing prosecutions growing out of the Pearl Harbor attack.

The present extension expires at midnight tonight.

A conference recommendation setting aside an earlier house requirement that Court Martial proceedings be instituted within three months was adopted by a record vote of 213 to 141, with most Republicans opposing and virtually all Democrats supporting the compromise.

House republicans only yesterday succeeded in passing the three-months extension measure but refusal of the senate to accept it sent the measure to a conference committee. The senate originally had voted for a twelve months extension for military trials against rear admiral Husband E. Kimmel and Maj. General Walter C. Short, Navy and Army commanders at Pearl Harbor.

The senate still must act on the conference agreement.

Biddle Asks Extension Of War Powers Act

JUN 8 1944

WASHINGTON, June 7 (AP)—Attorney General Biddle asked Congress today in a letter to Speaker Rayburn (D-Texas) to extend the second War Powers Act for two years.

Biddle said the act did not expire until December 31, 1944, but "it appears now the powers which it grants will be needed beyond that time and there is no way of telling when the need for them will expire."

Among powers granted by the act are the ones to the War Production Board to allocate materials and establish a priority system and to give the Army, Navy and Marine Commission the authority to buy real property and facilities needed in the war effort.

Industry Must

Find Own Work When War Ends

JUN 8 1944

Nelson Uses Brewster Aeronautical Corp. Cancellation as Illustration.

WASHINGTON, June 7. —Industry must find its own work when peace ends war contracts—the government can't do it—Chairman Donald M. Nelson of the War Production Board said today.

Recent Cancellation

Using the recent cancellation of Navy contracts with the Brewster Aeronautical corporation and the subsequent government hunt for new war work for the plants as an illustration, Nelson told the House Postwar committee:

"Companies such as Brewster must depend on private ingenuity and initiative in planning their postwar program. After the war it won't be the government's job to find work for each company in its present expanded position. It's impossible to find a postwar market for the 8,900 airplanes we now produce monthly."

On the labor aspect of cancellations, Nelson pointed out that on the day the War Manpower Commission was notified of the Brewster shut-down, that agency's officials offered 11,000 jobs to the 8,000 workers affected. but were turned down because of salary differences and commuting problems.

Wants Companies' Plans

"We don't want to set up a WPA for small business," he said. "We want companies to give us their plans and policies for reconversion. I am 100 percent in favor of helping them, but not running them."

The Brewster affair was cited by the current issue of NAM News, publication of the National Association of Manufacturers, as showing that the country "faces the imminent reconversion of American industry from war to peace with neither plans nor machinery to do the job."

The publication added that the flurry of government activity to find other war work for Brewster's plants at Long Island City, N. Y., and Johnsville, Pa., led to the "inescapable conclusion that there is still no broad, clear-cut policy or authority to handle similar situations.

JUN 8 1944

Suggests Streamlining

Nelson suggested a postwar streamlining of the WPB and other emergency agencies so that they can be incorporate din an existing government agency or disappear.

He envisioned an "expansionist" economy in the postwar era, sparked by private enterprise and with a minimum of government pump-priming.

"It's not going to be possible to shrink back to the economy of 1939", he said. " We have gone too far. After the war we must have full utilization of our resources and our facilities.' '

He urged exploration of foreign markets and said he would like to tell in executive session his plan for selling the capital goods that the world will need for rebuilding.

WOUNDED SOLDIERS BUYING WAR BONDS

JUN 8 1944

NEW YORK, June 7— (AP) Wounded soldiers repatriated on the Swedish liner Gripsholm, their fighting days done, put up cash today to back the invasion.

Fifteen of 49 wounded taken to Halloran Hospital here from Jersey City, N. J., where the vessel docked, bought a total of $4,000 in war bonds within four hours after arrival.

Most of them had been captured in North Africa and had substantial back pay awaiting them.

The soldiers said in their first mass press interview that news of the invasion coincident with their return here came as a surprise because "we heard rumors too often" in prison camps and hospitals.

They offered no criticism of their treatment by the Germans. Some said the enemy apparently gave them the best medical care available. They said mail arrived regularly and that one of their delights was the receipt of Red Cross packages.

Professor Lange Back From Visit to Moscow

JUN 8 1944

Statement by Polish Economist, Who Saw Stalin, Due Today

CHICAGO, June 7 (AP).—Professor Oscar Lange, University of Chicago economist, arrived today from Moscow, where on May 21 he conferred with Premier Marshal Joseph Stalin, presumably on Polish-Soviet relations.

The Polish-born professor told reporters he would issue a statement on his journey tomorrow, unless he was called to Washington today.

Professor Lange said in Moscow that he went to Russia as a private citizen and that the material he was gathering would be used in the United States. Moscow observers believed it would be the basis for a campaign to win the friendship of Polish Americans for the Soviet Union.

He was accompanied on his trip to Moscow by the Rev. Stanislaus Orlemanski, Roman Catholic priest, of Springfield, Mass., who announced on his return several weeks ago that Marshal Stalin had given him a written statement that the Soviets would not persecute the Roman Catholic Church.

SUPREME HEADQUARTERS, ALLIED EXPEDITIONARY FORCE, JUNE 7-(AP)-LT. GEN.OMAR BRADLEY IS COMMANDING THE FIRST AMERICAN ARMY IN THE ASSAULT ON EUROPE, IT WAS DISCLOSED TODAY.

BRADLEY WON FAME IN TUNISIA BY CAPTURING THE FRENCH NAVAL BASE OF BIZERTE IN MAY, 1943, WITH THOUSANDS OF GERMANS WHILE IN COMMAND OF THE AMERICAN SECOND CORPS.

THRIFTY OF HIS MEN'S BLOOD BUT A THOROUGH MASTER OF TACTICS, HE IS KNOWN AS "THE DOUGHBOY'S GENERAL."

BRADLEY WAS BORN IN CLARK, MO., 51 YEARS AGO (FEB. 12, 1893), AND WAS IN GEN.EISENHOWER'S CLASS AT WEST POINT, 1915.

LIKE EISENHOWER'S, HIS RISE WAS SLOW AT FIRST BUT RAPID IN RECENT YEARS. HE WAS A COLONEL AS RECENTLY AS FEBRUARY, 1941, BUT HAD CLIMBED TO A LIEUTENANT GENERALCY BY JUNE, 1943.

SLENDER, QUIET, STRAIGHT-FOWARD, AND GRAY, HE IS IN SUCH GOOD PHYSICAL CONDITION THAT HE HAS COMPLETED MARCHES AND OBSTACLE COURSES IN WHICH MANY YOUNG ENLISTED MEN FELL OUT FROM FATIGUE.

HIS WIFE, LIVING AT WEST POINT, REMARKED WHEN HE WAS APPOINTED TO HIS POST, "HE HAS ALWAYS DONE THE BEST HE CAN AND IT HAS ALWAYS BEEN ENOUGH. HE WILL DO THE BEST HE CAN AND I'M SURE IT WILL BE ENOUGH.

BRADLEY, HIMSELF, NOT AT ALL INCLINED TO UNDERRATE THE FOE, HAS DESCRIBED THE GERMAN SOLDIER AS "CUNNING AND UNSCRUPULOUS---SOMEBODY TO BE EXTERMINATED."

SUPREME ADVANCE COMMAND POST, ALLIED EXPEDITIONARY FORCE, JUNE 7--DOWN HERE THERE IS A SMALL TENT WITH A TOMMY-GUNNER ALWAYS ON GUARD, TO WHICH COME ALL THE RADIO REPORTS, COURIER DISPATCHES FROM THE BEACHHEAD IN FRANCE.

IT IS THE TEMPORARY WAR ROOM OF GEN.EISENHOWER'S HEADQUARTERS IN THE FIELD. EVEN THOSE OF US ATTACHED TO THE COMMAND STAFF ARE NOT PERMITTED INSIDE THE TENT FLAP WITHOUT A PROPER GUARD. ON HUGE FRAMES AROUND THE TENT INTERIOR ARE ALL THE LARGE SCALE MAPS COVERING EACH OF THE BEACHHEADS MADE TO DATE.

ONE MAP SHOWS THE DISPOSITION AND MOVEMENT AS REPORTED OF ENEMY FORCES. STILL ANOTHER CHART SHOWS IN CONSIDERABLE DETAIL THE POWERFUL DEFENSES OUR MEN GO THROUGH IN CONSOLIDATING THE BEACHES. WHEN THE SUPREME COMMANDER WANTS THE PICTURE OF HOURLY OPERATIONS HE STROLLS QUIETLY INTO THIS TENT AND STUDIES EACH CHART WITH GREAT CONCENTRATION. THOSE CHARTS SHOW THE DEFINITION OF OUR BEACHHEAD, THE REGROUPING OF THE ENEMY POSITIONS AFTER THE INITIAL WITHDRAWAL OF THEIR FORCES FROM THE BEACHES, AND THE DEVELOPMENT AREAS OF COUNTER-ATTACKS.

YESTERDAY, AS YOU KNOW, WAS A DAY OF SURPRISES. WE CERTAINLY WON A MAJOR VICTORY IN GETTING OUR TREMENDOUS FORCES ASHORE SO CHEAPLY ALTHOUGH ALL FEATURES WERE NOT AS EASILY WON AS ORIGINAL REPORTS INDICATE. THE GERMANS STARTED LOCAL COUNTER ATTACKS. ALL OF THESE WERE BEATEN OFF, OTHERWISE TODAY'S COMMUNIQUE WOULD NOT REPORT CONTINUED LANDINGS ALL ALONG THE FRONT.

THE DEFEAT OF ONE SUCH COUNTER ATTACK WAS AN OUTSTANDING BRITISH ACTION, OF WHICH MORE LATER. BUT GUARD AGAINST OVER-OPTIMISM. REMEMBER THIS: WE HAVE ONLY MET LOCALLY ORGANIZED COUNTER MEASURES. IN THE NEXT FEW DAYS WE FACE THE MAJOR ALL OUT EFFORT TO THROW US BACK INTO THE SEA. THAT EFFORT IS NOW IN MOTION, BUT I DO NOT KNOW WHETHER IT HAS BEEN ENGAGED BY OUR INITIAL FORCES AND THE FIRST LANDING FORCES BEHIND THEM.

TO MAKE MATTERS WORSE FOR THE RANGERS THE CLIFF WAS UNDERCUT AND JUTTED OUT AT THE TOP. IT FORMED SUCH A NATURAL OBSTACLE THAT IT HAD BEEN SAID AN OLD LADY WITH A BROOM COULD DEFEND THE POINT AND SWEEP INTRUDERS BACK.

TWELVE HOURS AFTER THE FIRST WAVES OF INVASION BITTER FIGHTING WAS STILL IN PROGRESS ON SOME OF THE BEACHES. AT OTHER POINTS THE GERMANS EITHER SURRENDERED OR RETREATED FIVE TO 10 MILES INLAND.

ABOARD THE BRITISH CRUISER SCYLLA, JUNE 6-(DELAYED)-SIX HOURS AFTER JUMPING ASHORE, BRITISH AND CANADIAN TROOPS OPERATING IN THIS AREA OF THE FRENCH COAST OFFICIALLY REPORTED THAT ALL OBJECTIVES HAD BEEN REACHED DESPITE A TOUGH FIGHT.

BY 2 P.M., THEY WERE MARCHING INLAND TO THEIR NEXT GOALS.

EARLY REPORTS OF RETURNING SOLDIERS INDICATE THE GERMANS USED FIELD ARTILLERY AND MACHINE-GUNS IN AN ATTEMPT TO REPULSE THE BEACH LANDINGS. THEY CONCENTRATED RESISTANCE IN THIS AREA AROUND THE COASTAL TOWNS, WITH MINES OF ALL SORTS PROVING ONE OF THE WORST OBSTACLES.

A BRITISH DESTROYER STRUCK A MINE AHEAD OF US AND WAS LOST.

SOME LAND BATTERIES WERE CAPTURED INTACT. OTHERS WERE FOUND WRECKED AS A RESULT OF THE COMBINED BLASTING FROM THE SEA AND AIR. IT IS ALREAD EVIDENT THAT GERMAN CASUALTIES WITHIN THE ASSAULT AREA ARE FAR HEAVIER THAN OURS.

ABOARD THE U.S.ASSAULT TRANSPORT THOMAS JEFFERSON, JUNE 6-(DELAYED)-THE LANDING OF OUR SPEARHEAD TROOPS ON BEACHES IN ONE SECTOR OF NORTHERN FRANCE TODAY WAS ALMOST TURNED INTO ANOTHER BLOODY SALERNO BY WEATHER CONDITIONS WHICH MADE PROPER SOFTENING UP BY BOMBERS AND WARSHIPS AN IMPOSSIBILITY.

THE ROUGHNESS OF THE WATER CAPSIZED LANDING CRAFT, SWIMMING "DUCKS" (AMPHIBIOUS VEHICLES) BROKE UP WAVE FORMATIONS AND DROWNED SOLDIERS AND SAILORS, WHO WERE SEEKING TO REACH SHORE THROUGH THE HEAVILY MINED AREA WHICH ALSO WAS STUDDED WITH UNDERWATER OBSTACLES.

THE GERMANS FOUGHT FIERCELY AND CAPABLY, OFTEN DRIVING OUR BOATS BACK TO SEA WHEN THEY APPROACHED. MANY TANKS WERE SHOT UP ALONG WITH THE LANDING CRAFT. BEACHES WERE STREWN WITH THE WRECKED EQUIPMENT.

FROM SIX-FOOT-THICK CONCRETE PILLBOXES DISGUISED AS ROCKS AND FROM BATTERIES HIDDEN IN CLIFFS THE NAZIS FIRED ANTI-TANK GUNS, 90, 88 AND 50 MILLIMETER WEAPONS, 155MM RIFLES AND 155MM HOWITZERS AS WELL AS SCORES OF MACHINE GUNS FROM EMPLACEMENTS IN FRENCH HOMES.

OUR ASSAULT BATTALION TOOK A HARD POUNDING FROM THE ENEMY FIRE AND ROUGH SURF. MUCH EQUIPMENT WAS LEFT IN THE LANDING BOATS BY GREEN TROOPS RUSHING TO DIG INTO THE SAND.

USING CROSS-FIRE, THE NAZIS TIME AND TIME AGAIN CUT OFF BEACHES AND ISOLATED TROOPS. NAVAL GUNFIRE SUPPORT FOR THE BELEAGUERED TROOPS FINALLY SAVED THE DAY.

THE BATTLESHIP TEXAS MOVED CLOSE INSHORE AND SILENCED A 155MM BATTERY IN A CLIFF WHILE DESTROYERS POUNDED CONTINUALLY AT PILLBOXES.

WITH THIS AID, TROOPS USING FLAME THROWERS AND GRENADES GRADUALLY CHOKED OFF THE DEFENDERS AND REINFORCEMENTS ARE NOW STREAMING ACROSS THE CHANNEL IN A SHUTTLE SERVICE EXPECTED TO CLEAR THE BEACHHEAD.

A125

SOME OF THE BEACHES TO THE RIGHT AND LEFT OF OUR OBJECTIVES HAD LITTLE OR NO RESISTANCE, SO WHEN OUR BOATS WERE UNABLE TO LAND WITH SUPPLIES THEY WERE DIVERTED TO OTHER BEACHES.

CAPT.JOHN D.SMALL, 5 WEST BLACKTHORN, CHEVY CHASE, MD., HERE ON A SPECIAL NAVAL MISSION, WENT IN ON THE FIRST BOAT WAVE AND RETURNED TO THE TRANSPORT, SAYING:

"IT IS ROUGH. TERRIBLE. AWFUL. PILLBOXES WERE UNTOUCHED. THE NAZIS HAVE A LOT OF FIRE-POWER THERE. BOXES WERE DISGUISED AS ROCKS. THE GERMANS CONTROLLED WATER MINES FROM SHORE."

LT.(JG) ROSS E.SCHUMANN, 23, OF 5842 NINA AVE., CHICAGO, SAID HIS PT BOAT NO. 568 STAGED DUELS WITH MACHINE-GUN NESTS ALONG THE BEACHES, KNOCKING OUT SEVERAL WITH THE SHIP'S THREE-INCH GUNS. HIS SHIP ALSO BLEW A MILITARY CAR OFF THE ROAD INLAND.

SCHUMANN, WHO IS PARTICIPATING IN HIS THIRD INVASION, SAID NAVAL FIVE-INCH SHELLS BOUNCED OFF ENEMY PILLBOXES BUILT IN THE CLIFF, DOING LITTLE DAMAGE TO THE HEAVY CONCRETE FACINGS.

HE SAID RANGERS CAPTURED THEIR BEACH QUICKLY, BUT FAILED TO SCALE THE CLIFFS AND SILENCE THE 155MM BATTERY.

THE RANGERS HAD BORROWED HYDRAULIC LADDERS FROM THE LONDON FIRE DEPARTMENT TO HELP SCALE THE CLIFFS. THESE LADDERS HAD 30 CALIBRE MACHINE GUNS LASHED TO THE TOP RUNGS.

SCHUMANN SAID THE AMERICAN FLAME THROWERS DID EXCELLENT WORK AGAINST THE FORTIFIED HOUSES, IN SOME CASES TURNING AREAS OCCUPIED BY THE ENEMY INTO A FLAMING HELL. THESE HOUSES HAD ENABLED THE NAZIS, HOWEVER, TO KILL NUMBERS OF SOLDIERS ADVANCING ACROSS THE BEACHES.

ONE OF THE FIRST HEROES BACK WAS LT.(JG) CHARLES E.LAVENDER, 24, OF NEW ZION, S.C., COMMANDER OF THE FIRST BOAT WAVE, WHO REPORTED VIA RADIO THE FIRST LANDING OF U.S.TROOPS. HE SAID THE GUNFIRE WAS HEAVY AND THE SEA ROUGH. HIS BOAT SAVED TWO SOLDIERS FROM CAPSIZED "DUCKS."

COXSWAIN JAMES WIMBERLY, 21, OF 510 SOUTH CONVERSE ST., SPARTANBURG, S.C., WHO TOOK THE FIRST WAVE OF TROOPS TO ONE OF THE MOST HOTLY CONTESTED BEACHES, SAID THE FRENCH LANDING WAS TOUGHER THAN THE MURDEROUS SICILIAN ASSAULT.

HE SAID THE FORTIFIED HOUSES WERE THE WORST OBSTACLES MET BY HIS LANDING PARTY.

SEAMAN 2ND CLASS ANDREW POLITI, 24, OF 318 WEST 26TH ST., NEW YORK CITY, BROUGHT BACK A BOAT HALF-SWAMPED FROM THE BEACHHEAD. HIS BOAT HAD RESCUED TWO HALF-DROWNED TANKMEN.

BOAT 13 RETURNED WITH THREE DEAD SOLDIERS.

SEAMAN 2ND CLASS JOSEPH E.POWELL, 19, OF CONNERSVILLE, IND., HIS TEETH CHATTERING FROM THE COLD WATER, SAID HE DIDN'T KNOW WHAT HAD HIT HIS BOAT. SOLDIERS WHO WERE NOT WOUNDED MADE THEIR WAY TO THE BEACHES, LEAVING THEIR EQUIPMENT, INCLUDING BANGALORE TORPEDOES, IN THE BOAT.

IN THE MIDST OF THE EXCITEMENT A MAN FELL OVERBOARD FROM OUR SHIP BUT WAS QUICKLY RESCUED BY A LANDING BOAT MANNED BY FROZEN, TIRED KIDS.

WHEN THE MAN FELL THE BOATSWAIN'S MATE, DONALD O'GRADY, 21, OF 83RD PLACE, EAGLE PARK, QUEENS, NEW YORK CITY, CALLED A WARNING WHILE TAKING TIME OUT FROM HIS JOB OF HAULING BOATS INTO THE AIR AND DRAINING THE WATER FROM THEM SO THEY COULD GO SHOREWARD AGAIN.

O'GRADY'S SWEARING KEPT THE DECK CREW GOING.

THE WATER BECAME SO ROUGH AT THIS POINT THAT THE BOATS BRINGING THE WOUNDED BACK WERE UNABLE TO GET THEM ABOARD.

REPORTS CAME IN THAT MINES HAD SUNK SOME OF OUR LANDING CRAFT, SENDING THE MEN TO DEATH AND WRECKING GUNS AND OTHER NEEDED EQUIPMENT. WE MANAGED TO TAKE ON SIX DEAD AND FOUR WOUNDED MEN.

AT 11:15 A.M., OUR WARSHIPS OPENED A FURIOUS BOMBARDMENT TRYING TO RELIEVE THE HARD-PRESSED TROOPS ASHORE. SOME HAD MIRED IN SOFT SAND AND WERE HELPLESS.

IT WAS A GRIM PICTURE NEAR THE BEACHES. WE COULDN'T LAND AND MANY BOATS SPUN IN AIMLESS CIRCLES WAITING HOPEFULLY FOR GUNFIRE TO CLEAR THE BEACHHEADS. RISING TIDES HID UNDERWATER OBSTACLES NOT REMOVED PREVIOUSLY.

LT.JACK BRUCKNER, 25, OF 1709 ROXBORO RD., DURHAM, N.C., WAS ON A CONTROL BOAT STATIONED OFFSHORE. HE SAID DIRECTION OF TRAFFIC FOR THE LANDING BOATS WAS MADE EXTREMELY DIFFICULT BY THE ROUGH WATER AND ENEMY SHELLING.

LT.(JG) JOHN KOLODY, 25, OF 1625 FIFTH AVE., ARNOLD, PA., WHO TAUGHT SCIENCE AT INDIANA (PA.) HIGH SCHOOL BEFORE JOINING THE NAVY, MADE TWO TRIPS TO THE BEACHES.

"THE BEACH," HE SAID, "WAS A BLOODY ONE EVEN ON THE FIRST WAVE. I MET ONE WAVE COMMANDER WHO SAID HIS WHOLE OUTFIT WENT DOWN. THERE WA HEAVY MACHINE-GUN FIRE. ARMY EQUIPMENT, TANKS AND NAVY BOATS WERE ON THE BEACH SHOT UP AND BURNING."

BEHIND THE ATLANTIC WALL, JUNE 6-(DELAYED)-THIS IS ONE OF THOSE STORIES THAT WILL HAVE TO WRITE ITSELF BECAUSE I AM TOO EXHAUSTED, EXCITED AND EXHILARATED TO HAVE ANY CONTROL OVER WHAT GOES DOWN ON THIS TYPEWRITER.

I PARACHUTED INTO EUROPE AT TWO MINUTES PAST 1 A.M., SIX AND A HALF HOURS BEFORE OUR SEABORNE FORCES BEGAN THEIR FULL-BLOWN INVASION.

I WAS NEAR THE SHORE, HIDING FROM NAZI PATROLS, AS I WATCHED OUR FIRST FORCES GO ASHORE FROM THE SEA AT 7:15 A.M.

I HAVE SEEN A FEW THOUSAND PARATROOPS AND GLIDER-BORNE TROOPS HOLD A BRIDGEHEAD AGAINST HITLER'S ARMIES FOR OVER 16 HOURS, DESPITE OVERWHELMING ODDS.

THERE'S A TERRIFIC BATTLE GOING ON HERE AS I WRITE AND BULLETS, MORTAR BOMBS AND SHELLS--NOT TO MENTION A COUPLE OF SNIPERS--ARE PRODUCING CONDITIONS WHICH ARE HARDLY CONDUCIVE TO CONSECUTIVE THINKIN

OUR JOB AS AN AIRBORNE FORCE WAS TO SILENCE A VITAL COASTAL BATTERY WHICH, IF STILL IN OPERATION, MIGHT HAVE BLOWN OUR SHIPS TO BITS AS THEY CAME TOWARD THE SHORE. WE SILENCED IT.

AND OUR OTHER JUST AS VITAL JOB WAS TO SECURE TWO IMPORTANT BRIDGES OVER A CANAL AND RIVER NORTH OF CAEN, TO PREVENT THEM FROM BEING BLOWN UP AND TO HOLD THEM AGAINST ALL COMERS UNTIL THE MAIN ARMIES ARRIVED.

WE ARE STILL HOLDING THEM AND THEY ARE STILL INTACT.

WITH THE ALLIED EXPEDITIONARY FORCE IN FRANCE, JUNE 7.-OUR FORWARD TROOPS, RESTED BY A FEW HOURS OF SLEEP LAST NIGHT, ARE MOVING STEADILY FORWARD THIS AFTERNOON AGAINST UNDIMINISHING GERMAN RESISTANCE.

WE ARE ON THE OUTSKIRTS OF CAEN AND ARE JOINING UP WITH THE CANADIANS A GERMAN TANK COUNTERATTACK HAS BEEN SMASHED. THE LUFTWAFFE IS MAKING DESPERATE EFFORTS TO HOLD UP OUR ADVANCE. THERE WAS CONSTANT BOMBING OF THE BEACH AREA LAST NIGHT, AND THE SKIES WERE NEVER WITHOUT THE ROAR OF PLANES--USUALLY MIXED, ALLIED AND GERMAN.

WE WERE WITNESSES TO THE ARRIVAL OF A GREAT ALLIED AIRBORNE ARMY LAST NIGHT. LITERALLY HUNDREDS OF PLANES SWEPT OVERHEAD, FLYING VERY LOW, AND DISGORGED COLORED PARACHUTES MARKING DIFFERENT PARACHUTE UNITS. THE SKIES WERE FILLED WITH THESE BUNCHES OF BRIGHTLY-COLORED SILK LIKE UNFOLDING FLOWERS.

FRENCHMEN NEARBY CHEERED THE SPECTACLE, PROBABLY THE LARGEST FORMATION OF AIRBORNE AND PARACHUTE UNITS USED IN ANY MILITARY OPERATION

GERMAN PRISONERS ALSO WATCHED, AND WERE STAGGERED BY THIS MANIFESTATION OF POWER. THEY LOOKED WITH WHAT ALMOST SEEMED TO BE ADMIRATION AT THE FANTASTIC SIGHT OF THOUSANDS OF ARMED MEN POURING FROM THE HEAVENS.

GERMAN SNIPERS ARE EVERYWHERE. ONE HAS BEEN HAUNTING US FOR HOURS NOW. HE APPARENTLY HAS TAKEN REFUGE IN A CHURCH STEEPLE. BREN GUNS HAVE OPENED UP ON HIM. WE HEAR HIS ANSWERING SHOTS, BUT CANNOT PLACE THEM PRECISELY.

THE WEATHER IS COOL AND CLOUDY. WITHOUT KIT, WE SPENT LAST NIGHT SHIVERING WITH COLD UNDER SKIES CRISS-CROSSED BY ANTI-AIRCRAFT SHELLS AND TRACER BULLETS.

IN THIS SECTOR THE ALLIES HAVE A PRETTY GOOD HOLD ON A BIG AREA EXTENDING WELL INLAND, AND OUR TROOPS ARE FIGHTING SUPERBLY TO EXTEND THEIR HOLD AND LIQUIDATE POCKETS OF RESISTANCE. SOME OF THESE POCKETS ARE TOUGH AND DANGEROUS. OTHERS ARE MERE NESTS OF SNIPERS.

AT OUR FARTHEST POINT INLAND A BATTLE OF ARMOR RAGED YESTERDAY EVENING FOR HIGH GROUND COMMANDING THE TOWN WHICH IS ONE OF OUR MAIN IMMEDIATE OBJECTIVES.

ALL AFTERNOON AND ALL LAST NIGHT OUR ARMOR ROARED UP FROM THE COAST TO THE FRONT IN A THUNDEROUS TORRENT TO REINFORCE OUR ALREADY CONSIDERABLE FORCE ENGAGED WITH GERMAN PANZERS.

IN ANOTHER PART OF THIS SECTOR OUR GLIDER-BORNE TROOPS, WHO LANDED YESTERDAY EVENING IN IMPRESSIVE STRENGTH, ARE FIGHTING TO BREAK ONE OF THE TOUGHEST

ERMAN DEFENSE AREAS.

PARACHUTISTS WHO LANDED EARLIER YESTERDAY TO SECURE BRIDGES ACROSS A CANAL AND RIVER ON OUR LEFT FLANK OBTAINED THEIR FIRST OBJECTIVES IN AN HEROIC VICTORY OVER SUPERIOR FORCES. THEY ACHIEVED THIS AT HEAVY COST, PARTICULARLY TO ONE OF THEIR BATTALIONS, BUT THEY SAVED FAR GREATER CASUALTIES WHICH MUST HAVE RESULTED FROM A FRONTAL PUSH, AND THEY DID VITAL JOBS IN SECURING OUR LEFT FLANK, WHERE THE DANGER OF GERMAN PRESSURE IS GREATEST.

ON A BEACHHEAD IN FRANCE, JUNE 6-(DELAYED)-HITLER'S ATLANTIC WALL CRACKED IN THE FIRST HOUR UNDER TEMPESTUOUS ALLIED ASSAULT.

AS I WRITE, DEEPLY DUG INTO A BEACHHEAD OF NORTHWESTERN FRANCE, GERMAN PRISONERS, MOSTLY WOUNDED, ARE STREAMING BACK. BUT THE BOCHE STILL IS PUTTING UP A TERRIFIC FIGHT.

SHELLS ARE EXPLODING ALL OVER THE BEACH AND OUT AT SEA AS WAVE AFTER WAVE OF ALLIED SHIPS, AS FAR AS I CAN SEE, MOVE INTO SHORE.

MY ESCORTING OFFICER, SIR CHARLES BIRKIN, WAS SLIGHTLY WOUNDED THREE TIMES IN THE FIRST 15 MINUTES ASHORE AND THREE MEN WERE KILLED WITHIN FIVE FEET OF ME.

OUR HEAVY STUFF IS NOW ROLLING ASHORE AND WE NOT ONLY HAVE A SOLID GRIP ON THE BEACHHEAD BUT ARE THRUSTING DEEP INLAND.

THE BEACH IS JAMMED WITH TROOPS AND BULLDOZERS FOR MANY MILES, AND NOW IT HAS BEEN QUIET FOR 15 MINUTES, WHICH APPARENTLY MEANS THE GERMAN BIG GUNS ARE KNOCKED OUT.

OUR CASUALTIES ON THIS SECTOR HAVE BEEN COMPARATIVELY LIGHT.

I LANDED AT 8:45 A.M. WADING ASHORE WAIST DEEP IN WATER UNDER FIRE TO FIND QUITE A FEW WOUNDED AND SOME KILLED ON THE BEACH--AND NAZI PRISONERS, VERY STIFF AND SOUR-LOOKING ALREADY COMING BACK.

BEFORE EMBARKING WE WERE TOLD THERE WOULD BE 10,000 ALLIED PLANES ATTACKING TODAY AND THERE IS EVERY SIGN OUR AIR MASTERY IS COMPLETE. SO FAR NOT A SINGLE GERMAN PLANE HAS BEEN SEEN.

THE NIGHT-LONG CHANNEL CROSSING ALSO WAS QUIET UNTIL THE LAST MILE.

GERMAN PRISONERS SAID HITLER VISITED THIS BEACH TWO DAYS AGO AND THEY ADMITTED THAT THEY WERE TAKEN BY SURPRISE.

ONLY A FEW HUNDRED NAZIS MANNED THE BEACH DEFENSES ON THIS SECTOR. THEY LAID DOWN A TERRIFIC MACHINE-GUN FIRE, BUT WERE QUICKLY OVERWHELMED.

AS FAR AS I HAVE SEEN THERE IS NO SIGN OF HITLER'S VAUNTED ATLANTIC WALL WITH ITS MASSIVE CONCRETE FORTIFICATIONS. GERMAN ARTILLERY DEEPER INLAND IS VERY FORMIDABLE, BUT THE BEACH DEFENSES ARE PIDDLING, RIFLE-SLITS AND STRANDS OF BARBED WIRE.

U.S. NINTH AIR FORCE BOMBER BASE, ENGLAND, JUNE 6-(DELAYED)-(AP)-DOWN BELOW THE FIRST GROUP OF MARAUDERS TO STRIKE THE CHERBOURG PENINSULA AT DAWN TODAQ WERE THE THIN LINES OF INVASION CRAFT PUSHING IN TO HIT THE SANDY BEACHES.

THREE MINUTES LATER, FROM BATTLESHIPS, CRUISERS AND DESTROYERS STANDING OFF SHORE VIVID FLASHES OF LIGHTNING CUT THE EARL DAWN AS THE WARSHIPS HURLED HUGE SHELLS INTO NAZI SHORE INSTALLATIONS.

IN CONTRAST, THE PENINSULA ITSELF WAS A DARK AND SOMBER SPOT IN THE EARLY DAWN LIGHT. ONLY OCCASIONALLY WAS THERE A SIGN OF ACTION. THE ENEMY SEEMED TO BE RESPONDING FEEBLY.

THIS CORRESPONDENT MADE TWO TRIPS TO THE PENINSULA TODAY WITH THE MARAUDERS OF THE NINTH AIR FORCE WHICH SYSTEMATICALLY WIPED OUT ENEMY GUN EMPLACEMENTS.

TONIGHT GREAT COLUMNS OF SMOKE WERE SPIRALING SKYWARD FROM THE VICINITY OF CAEN WHERE SOME SORT OF MOVEMENT, WHICH FROM THE AIR LOOKED CONFUSED, WAS TAKING PLACE.

OUR GROUP OF MARAUDERS APPROACHED THE FRENCH COCASTLINE TONIGHT SLIGHTLY TO THE LEFT OF A CONCENTRATED LANDING MOVEMENT. ASSAULT BOATS COULD BE SEEN SPITTING THEIR SHELLS INTO THE BEACH DEFENSES. ATTENDING VESSELS SWUNG AROUND SLOWLY IN THE WATER. ONE WAS SMOKING BADLY, APPARENTLY HIT BY SHORE BATTERIES. BUT LANDING CRAFT HAD PUSHED THEIR NOSES INTO THE SAND AND SOME HAD DISPATCHED THEIR LOADS AND ALREADY WERE HEADING BACK TO ENGLAND TO PICK UP ANOTHER CARGO.

LONG LINES OF HEAVILY ESCORTED FREIGHTERS SWEPT PAST EACH OTHER IN OPPOSITE DIRECTIONS. IN THE EARLY HOURS OF DAWN THEY ALL HAD BEEN TRAVELING ONE WAY.

THUNDERBOLTS, MUSTANGS, LIGHTNINGS AND SPITFIRES WERE EVERYWHERE, MOVING IN CRISS-CROSS PATTERNS ACROSS THE SKY. SOME SWEPT IN LOW TO DIVE-BOMB NAZI GUN EMPLACEMENTS. OTHERS RANGED FAR INLAND TO INTERCEPT GERMAN FIGHTERS. ALL DAY GERMAN FIGHTERS HAD BEEN FEW AND THOSE SIGHTED SOON SCUTTLED OFF.

THE MEN WHO HAD BEEN BRIEFED TO EXPECT EVERY TYPE OF GERMAN FIGHTER TO BE THROWN AT THEM WERE SURPRISED BY THE LACK OF GERMAN PLANES AND THE WEAK GROUND ANTI-AIRCRAFT DEFENSES.

THE HEAVILY-BOMBED PAS-DE-CALAIS AREA LIES ACROSS THE NARROWEST STRETCH OF THE CHANNEL FROM DOVER ON THE ENGLISH COAST, AND IS NORTH-EAST OF THE CHERBOURG PENINSULA.

THE GERMAN BROADCAST SAID "LONG-RANGE GUNS OF THE GERMAN NAVY FIRED ON ENEMY SHIPS" SEEKING TO LAND TROOPS ON THE FRENCH COAST. "RESULTS OF THE FIRING COULD NOT BE OBSERVED, AS THE ENEMY USED ARTIFICIAL FOG."

THE BROADCAST WAS PARTLY GARBLED AND UNCLEAR.

JUN 8 1944

ONE LISTENING POST RECORDED IT AS SAYING "THE ALLIES THIS MORNING MADE A FRESH ATTACK IN DAYLIGHT ACROSS THE STRAIT OF DOVER IN THE PAS-DE-CALAIS REGION TO LAND TROOPS ON THE COAST FROM AMPHIBIOUS LANDING CRAFT."

BY THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

LONDON, JUNE 7--SUCCESSFUL BEYOND ALL EXPECTATION IN THE FIRST ROUND OF ITS HUGE INVASION TASK, A GREAT COMBINED FLEET OF AMERICAN AND BRITISH NAVAL VESSELS DOMINATED THE INVASION ROUTES ACROSS THE ENGLISH CHANNEL TODAY, PROTECTING THE MASSES OF MEN AND MACHINES RUSHED TO SUPPORT YESTERDAY'S SUCCESSFUL LANDINGS.

BRITISH ADMIRAL SIR BERTRAM RAMSAY, ALLIED NAVAL COMMANDER-IN-CHIEF, DECLARED HIS FORCES WERE 100 PER CENT SUCCESSFUL IN THE CONVOY JOB AGAINST AN ANTICIPATED LOSS OF 10 PER CENT OF THE ASSAULT FORCES.

JUN 8 1944

"WE HAVE WON THE FIRST ROUND," RAMSAY SAID CONFIDENTLY. "I CAN SEE NO SIGN THAT THE ENEMY WILL BE IN A POSITION TO BEAT US IN THE SECOND ROUND."

HE ADDED IT WAS "REMARKABLE" THAT THE ALLIES HAD LOST ONLY A FEW COMBAT SHIPS AND THIS DID NOT AFFECT THE RESULT OF THE INITIAL INVASION ASSAULT.

PRESIDENT ROOSEVELT ANNOUNCED YESTERDAY IN WASHINGTON THAT AMERICAN LOSSES WERE TWO DESTROYERS AND ONE LST (LANDING SHIP, TANKS).

THE FLAGS OF TWO UNITED STATES ADMIRALS FLEW ON TWO UNITED STATES CRUISERS IN THE ASSAULT IN WHICH ALLIED WARSHIPS POURED THOUSANDS OF ROUNDS OF SHELLS INTO GERMAN COASTAL FORTIFICATIONS AND BEAT OFF WEAK ENEMY ATTEMPTS ON THE SEA TO FORESTALL THE INVASION.

REARADMIRAL ALAN GOODRICH KIRK, COMMANDER OF ONE OF THE TASK FORCES, DIRECTED PART OF THE OPERATION FROM THE U.S. CRUISER AUGUSTA. REAR ADMIRAL MORTON L.DEYO WAS IN THE TUSCALOOSA. THE STAUNCH OLD AMERICAN BATTLESHIP NEVADA, RE-ARMED AND RENOVATED AFTER HEAVFBO DAMAGE AT PEARL HARBOR, WAS IN THE VAN OF THE BIG NAVAL SHIPS.

AMONG THE SHIPS ENGAGED WAS THE FAMOUS BRITISH LIGHT CRUISER SCYLLA, HERONE OF MANY A SEA FIGHT, FLYING THE FLAG OF REAR ADMIRAL SIR PHILIP VIAN. WHO WAS IN OVERALL COMMAND OF THE TASK FORCES ENGAGED.

ALSO REPORTED IN ACTION WERE THE AMERICAN BATTLESHIPS TEXAS AND ARKANSAS, AS WELL AS THE BRITISH BATTLESHIPS NELSON, RAMILLIES AND WARSPITE, CRUISERS GLASGOW, ENTERPRISE AND ORION AND THE CANADIAN DESTROYERS SIOUX AND ALGONQUIN.

DEMONSTRATING ANEW THE NAVAL MIGHT OF BRITAIN AND THE UNITED STATES, 600 SHIPS BLASTED THE NAZI-HELD SHORE DEFENSES WITH A HURRICANE OF FIRE, POUNDING AWAY WITH EVERYTHING FROM 16-INCH RIFLES TO 4-INCHERS, POURING IN 2,000 TONS OF SHELLS EVERY 10 MINUTES TO PREPARE THE WAY FOR THE LANDINGS.

AS THE LANDING FORCES DASHED THROUGH GAPS BLASTED IN THE GERMANS' BOASTED ATLANTIC WALL, THE ALLIED SHIPS PLOUGHED ON TO SHATTER OTHER DEFENSE AREAS ALONG THE COAST.

POLISH, DUTCH, NORWEGIAN, FRENCH AND GREEK SHIPS JOINED IN TO MAKE IT A REALLY ALLIED NAVAL SHOW.

AFTER THE COMBAT SHIPS DID THEIR WORK THE CHANNEL SWARMED WITH LANDING CRAFT OF EVERY DESCRIPTION BEARING MEN AND YET MORE MEN AND ALL THE VARIED EQUIPMENT AND MUNITIONS NEEDED FOR MODERN WARFARE.

IT WAS SAID OFFICIALLY THAT NAVAL CASUALTIES WERE "VERY LIGHT."

"OUR PLAN WAS A SET PIECE OF SUCH MOMENTUM THAT THERE WAS NO DOUBT WE SHOULD REACH THE OTHER SIDE," SAID ADMIRAL RAMSAY. "THERE WAS NO OPPOSITION WHATEVER UNTIL THE PARATROOPERS LANDED ON THE OTHER SIDE, WHEN THE GERMAN COASTAL BATTERIES OPENED UP. THEIR OPPOSITION WAS MUCH LESS THAN WE EXPECTED. IT IS A VERY GOOD AUGURY FOR THE FUTURE."
BZ340AEW

DOVER, ENGLAND, JUNE 7-(AP)-THE ENGLISH CHANNEL WAS CLOUDED OVER TONIGHT AFTER A PERIOD OF SUNSHINE DURING THE EARLY EVENING, BUT THE BAROMETER WAS RISING STEADILY AND A NORTHWESTERLY WIND MODERATED SO THAT THE SEA WAS SMOOTHER.

HAZE DIMINISHED VISIBILITY. THE TEMPERATURE WAS 53 DEGREES FAHRENHEIT AT 11:30 P.M.

DURING THE DAY CHOPPY SEAS MADE MOVEMENT OF SMALL CRAFT DIFFICULT, AND SEASICKNESS CONTINUED AMONG TROOPS MAKING THE CROSSING TO FRANCE.

HIGH TIDES WILL COME AT DOVER AT 2:02 P.M. AND CALAIS AT 2:23 P.M. THURSDAY (8:02 AND 8:23 A.M., EWT).

JUN 8 1944

FRIDAY HIGH TIDES AT DOVER WILL BE AT 2:24 A.M. AND 2:42 P.M. (8:24 P.M. THURSDAY AND 8:42 A.M. FRIDAY, EWT), AND AT CALAIS AT 2:46 A.M. AND 3:04 P.M. (8:46 P.M. THURSDAY AND 9:04 A.M. FRIDAY, EWT)

LONDON, JUNE 7-(AP)-THE WEATHER BRIGHTENED IN DOVER STRAIT EARLY THIS EVENING, WITH SUNSHINE, PATCHES OF BLUE SKY, AND THE BAROMETER RISING.

JUN 8 1944

THERE WAS A FAIRLY STRONG NORTHWEST WIND BUT THE SEA WAS SMOOTH ON THE ENGLISH SIDE.

THIS MORNING THERE HAD BEEN GREY, CLOUDY SKIES.

THE SEA ON THIS SIDE OF TH[illegible] STRAIT ON THE SECOND DAY OF INVASION WA[illegible] MODERATE, BUT IT WAS BLOWING TOWARD THE FRENCH COAST, WHERE CONDITIONS WOULD NOT BE SO SMOOTH.

RAIN FELL FOR SOME HOURS DURING THE NIGHT. THIS MORNING TEMPERATURES WERE COOL, WITH A LIGHT NORTHWESTERLY WIND BLOWING AT TIMES, CARRYING MORE RAIN.

JUN 8 1944

VISIBILITY HAD IMPROVED A LITTLE SINCE DUSK, AND THE CLOUDS, BRAKING IN PLACES, WERE A LITTLE HIGHER. CONDITIONS GENERALLY WERE CHEERLESS FOR THIS TIME OF THE YEAR AND THE BAROMETER DROPPED SLIGHTLY AGAIN DURING THE NIGHT.

THERE WAS SUNSHINE OVER THE STRAIT AREA BEFORE 9 A.M., BUT SOON AFTERWARD MORE CLOUDS GATHERED AND THERE WERE PERIODS OF SUN AND OVERCAST SKIES.

CLOUD BANKS WERE MASSED HIGH OVER THE FRENCH COAST, ESPECIALLY IN THE CALAIS AREA. DURING THE NIGHT THE TEMPERATURE FELL TO 47 DEGREES, THEN CLIMBED JUST OVER 50 AT 9 A.M.

LONDON, JUNE 7-(AP)-THE PARIS RADIO SAID TONIGHT THAT THE ALLIES HAD MADE TWO NEW LANDINGS DURING THE DAY ON THE FRENCH ~~WEST~~ COAST -- ONE IN THE PAS DE CALAIS AREA AND THE OTHER AT CAP DE LA HAGUE AT THE TIP OF THE CHERBOURG PENINSULA.

THERE HAS BEEN NO ALLIED CONFIRMATION OF SUCH LANDING ATTEMPTS.

THE GERMANS HAD BEEN REPORTING LANDINGS IN THE PAS DE CALAIS AREA FOR MORE THAN 12 HOURS, AND THERE WAS NO INDICATION THAT THE NAZI-CONTROLLED PARIS RADIO WAS ENGAGING IN ANYTHING MORE THAN THE APPARENT FISHING EXPEDITIONS OF BERLIN.

"AT BOTH POINTS," THE BROADCAST RECORDED BY THE ASSOCIATED PRESS SAID, "THE ENEMY APPROACHED UNDER COVER OF AN ARTIFICIAL FOG. NO DETAILS ARE YET AVAILABLE, BUT BERLIN MILITARY CIRCLES ARE COMPLETELY CALM IN REVIEWING THE SITUATION."

PREVIOUSLY DNB, GERMAN OFFICIAL NEWS AGENCY, SAID THE ALLIES TWICE HAD TRIED LANDINGS ON PAS DE CALAIS -- THE OFT-BOMBED COAST ACROSS THE NARROWEST PART OF THE STRAIT OF DOVER.

Fall of Caen Believed Near; Allies in City

JUN 9 1944

By WES GALLAGHER

SUPREME HEADQUARTERS ALLIED EXPEDITIONARY FORCE, Friday, June 9.—(AP) The Allies were thrusting ahead along the whole expanding Normandy battle-front today, developing their threat to cut off the Cherbourg peninsula in heavy close-quarters fighting against fresh German tactical reserves whose advent brought the invasion into its second phase.

A single Allied division was credited by headquarters with having taken more than 1,000 Nazis prisoner since the European fortress was breached Tuesday, while it was disclosed that the Canadian infantry and armor had taken 600 prisoners and freed a dozen towns as they advanced rapidly southward through woodlands and farms between Caen and the captured town of Bayeux, often in house-to-house combat.

Allies in Caen

Caen, nine miles south of the Seine bay on the Orne river, was the center of bitter and protracted battle against strong German defenses, but the Nazis themselves acknowledged that the Allies were inside the city and had pushed five miles south and west of Bayeux, which is five miles from the coast. In general, however, the Allied command kept mum on exact locations.

NIGHT

An Allied communique issued shortly before last midnight said the Americans—who are on the west flank of the invasion front—gradually enlarged their beachheads during Thursday and that the British and Canadians were making steady progress.

"The enemy is fighting fiercely," the communique said. "His reserves have now been in action along the whole front."

Nazi Tanks in Battle

At least two German tank divisions have been identified in battle.

JUN 9 1944

It was disclosed early today that with better weather the Allied invasion schedule has regained most of the nearly 24 hours it was thrown off in the movement of supplies and reinforcements from England in the first two foul days.

It was indicated that the first forces ashore Tuesday could have pushed ahead more rapidly than they did, but Gen. Dwight D. Eisenhower's supreme command decided it was wiser to slow the advance somewhat Tuesday and Wednesday while awaiting more adequate strength, rather than make a temporarily spectacular gain and risk having the spearheads nipped off.

ALLIES GAIN ALONG WHOLE NORMANDY FRONT BATTLE TO SEAL OFF CHERBOURG PENINSULA; GERMANS RUSH FRESH RESERVES INTO FIGHT

30. 24— 16039

Now with improving weather the flow of supplies and new units to the front has almost caught up and is proceeding faster than ever.

First Step Accomplished

Announcing that the first step in the invasion had been accomplished, headquarters explained this as "the securing of a foothold and the defeating of local German reserves."

JUN 9 1944

The present second phase, it was explained, calls for defeating the German tactical reserves, which are those most immediately at hand, including the 7th and 15th armies now being met; and the third the task of crushing strategic reserves, which might come from Germany or other fronts and whose defeat would spell complete security for the Allied dispositions.

The British Sixth airborne division, which the Nazis claimed yesterday to have "annihilated" has held repeated German attacks, the communique said.

As the Allies thus fought inland in the Seine bay area and developed a threat to cut off the Cherbourg peninsula, headquarters disclosed that the "first phase" of the invasion had been completed successfully with defeat of the German local reserves and solidification of the beachheads.

The second step, now in progress, calls for defeat of the Nazi tactical reserves.

Amid strong indications that the Allies have captured or constructed an airfield in Normandy, the Allied communique dwelt on the powerful all-day and night air support given the troops with close tactical bombing, air cover over the constant streams of seaborne reinforcements, and wide-ranging fighter-bomber and strafing missions.

Locations attacked by the planes indicated expansion of the Allied hold on Normandy, although headquarters still was not naming specific points occupied by ground troops.

In Washington Secretary of War Stimson said the beaches were in a 100-mile strip between the Cherbourg peninsula and the Seine river mouth and that the Allies were beating back repeated counter-attacks which were expected to become intensified.

The Supreme Allied Commander, Gen. Dwight D. Eisenhower, back from a beachhead tour, expressed full confidence in the Allies' ability to continue with the second phase of the campaign on schedule. His confidence was clearly reflected by all concerned at headquarters.

Weather Not Ideal

The weather, still not ideal, but improving slowly despite showers, remained an important factor in the all-out campaign to build up the Allied reserves.

With better weather the Allies were expected to increase their already overwhelming air superiority, which has been more than 27,000 individual sorties flown despite dirty flying weather.

Presaging possible new Allied attacks elsewhere in Europe, the BBC, the American broadcasting station in Europe and North African stations warned the people of Norway, Denmark, Holland, Belgium and France not to fish in coastal waters from 9 p. m., Thursday night until 9 p. m. a week later, lest they "hinder the operations of the Allied forces." Fishermen now at sea were directed to return to port immediately, because "failure to do so may be fatal to yourselves."

The Germans about the same time broadcast that reconnaissance had shown "great concentrations of shipping in English ports farther north, including the Bristol channel, the Irish sea and Scotland."

The German radio, still constantly on the air with reports and propaganda accounts of the invasion, many of them obviously designed to gain information if possible, made a series of admissions as well.

These included acknowledgement that Bayeux had fallen, as announced by the Allies early Thursday; that fighting now was raging five miles south and southwest of Bayeux; that two additional Allied airborne divisions had landed Thursday by daylight north of Bayeux; that fighting was heavy east of Bayeux, where 10 Allied divisions were reported massed; and that the entire battle of France was "growing in depth."

This last was another way of saying that the Allies were advancing. Allied bombers were admitted to have "steamrollered" artillery and anti-tank coastal defenses to an unspecified depth.

Nazis Admit Setbacks

The Germans also acknowledged that at present their forces were on the defensive, and that fighting was going on inside the town of Caen, nine miles inland.

The Nazi-controlled Paris radio estimated present Allied strength in Normandy at 20 divisions, compared with 12 reported by the German radio a few hours earlier.

The Germans claimed the channel islands of Jersey and Guernsey had been cleared of Allied invaders. The Allies never have mentioned any landings there.

Adolf Hitler's own newspaper, the Volkischer Beobachter, told the German people that success for the Allied invasion would "simply mean the end." German papers for the first time in the war published an Allied communique, the communique No. 1 from Supreme Headquarters of the Allied Expeditionary Force, announcing the invasion.

Allied landings on the beaches continued constantly across a moderating sea while troops already inland beat back repeated German counter-attacks and captured numbers of Nazi "beetle" tanks and self-propelled "hornet" guns.

Against the Nazi piece-meal attacks which were the fore-runners of expected major counter-moves, the American, British and Canadian troops were reported holding or pushing back the enemy everywhere.

The Americans ran into heavy fighting for control of a lateral road while the British Sixth airborne division which the Germans yesterday claimed to have "annihilated" was actually beating off German attacks and solidifying its links with neighboring friendly forces.

JUN 9 1944

German Efforts Disorganized

The German efforts were described as showing a certain chaotic nature, with Marshal Erwin Rommel apparently throwing in his tactical reserves to try to contain the Allies until he could mount a major push with his strategic elements.

The third stage of the battle is to defeat the German strategic reserves, a victory which would spell complete security for the Allied positions.

The tactical reserves are those immediately at hand, including the 7th and 15th armies now being met, while strategic reserves include troops the Germans may move in from anywhere outside.

Gen. Dwight D. Eisenhower, supreme Allied commander, issued a statement declaring that his "complete confidence in the ability of the Allied armies, navies and air forces to do all they are asked to do has been completely justified."

He highly praised the preliminary and continuing airforce work, the brilliance of the naval operations that put the troops ashore and are continuing to maintain a bridge of ships across the English channel, and the ground soldiers, who under Gen. Sir Bernard L. Montgomery "are performing magnificently."

The Germans, maintaining the feverish pace of their radio bulletins, said 12 Allied divisions had been thrown into the battle thus far and indicated the Allies held a beachhead about 50 miles wide and more than 12 miles deep in some places from Caen to Ste. Mere Eglise, less than 20 miles from the great port of Cherbourg. The Germans said the Americans were engaged hand-to-hand at Ste. Mere Eglise.

Allied headquarters, adhering rigidly to the policy of saying nothing that might enlighten the enemy, gave no confirmation of any German claims, beyond the previous announcements that Bayeux had been captured and there was heavy fighting in the Caen area.

Nazis Report Street Fighting

The Germans said there was street fighting in Caen, nine miles in from the bay of the Seine, with big tank battles developing. They said the Allies had begun a heavy thrust from the bay beachheads to the southwest to cut off the entire Cherbourg peninsula, and that the Americans in the peninsula had won a foothold north of Carentan, a little more than 20 miles south of Cherbourg.

The German statements were replete with their customary claims that the Allies had suffered heavy casualties, that an Allied warship, probably a cruiser, had been sunk, and that 89 planes were downed overnight. They contended a new landing attempt had failed at the Bay of St. Martin, at the northwest tip of the Cherbourg peninsula.

Despite the terseness of Allied announcements, it was evident from air operations and other signs that the ground operations were advancing steadily.

American heavy bombers Thursday morning blasted rail facilities and airfield at Rennes, Le Mans, Laval, Tours, Angers and Nantes, ranging down south and southwest of the beachheads as far as 180 miles. The aim apparently was to prevent the German tactical reinforcements from coming up quickly.

American Marauders and Havocs in closer support of the American, British and Canadian ground troops, hit rail junctions at Valognes, Periers, Lessay and Pont Aubault, on the Cherbourg peninsula or on lines leading directly to it. They too hit Rennes and Laval.

Rocket-firing Typhoons attacked German Tiger tanks near Bretteville, nine miles south of Caen. Thunderbolts bombed Trevieres, nine miles west of Bayeux and four and one-half miles inland.

Caen itself was attacked at dawn by Marauders and Havocs which left at least 20 large fires blazing.

Hit Many Targets

Other targets included La Haye Du Puits and St. Lo. The latter is an important junction of four highways 16 miles inland on the Vire river.

Allied fighters maintained a widespreading umbrella over the beaches as German fighter-bombers attempted periodically to disrupt the flow of reinforcements and supplies.

As evidence that an airfield had been secured on the mainland, it was disclosed that U. S. Ninth Air force transports had landed jeeps and guns and that a British major gereral commanding an airborne division had been given a plane ride back to England.

Gen. Eisenhower continued to exploit his airborne strength tremendously, with four lanes of glider and two-plane traffic going each way across the channel during broad daylight.

As the Germans moved up air strength, it was reported that by this morning they had lost 174 planes since D-day, leaving them a total of about 2,000 fighters and bombers for the continuing struggle.

Allied losses in the same period were put at 177, including unarmed gliders and transports.

Field dispatches told of British and Canadian troops capturing a number of French villages and advancing along open roads to points "some miles from the coast." The Canadians engaged the 21st German Panzer division at an unspecified place.

Many Prisoners Taken

Hundreds of German prisoners were being herded back to the beaches for transport to England, while French country folk and villagers cheered.

The overall progress of the campaign was summarized authoritatively at headquarters Thursday night as better than expected in some places, as good as expected in others, and not quite so good in still others.

This survey corresponded with a warning by Prime Minister Churchill in the House of Commons to guard against "over-optimism" or "the idea that these things are going to be settled in a rush."

He declared that, "although great dangers lie behind, enormous exertions lie before us."

June 8 (A. P.).—Allied invasion troops, over the first hurdle of winning footholds in France and buttressed by reinforcements, threw back repeated Nazi armored counter-attacks today, fought inland beyond Bayeux, and menaced bomb-blasted Caen.

The Berlin radio declared tonight that the Allies had thrust into Caen, sixteen miles southeast of Bayeux, with tanks, mounted infantry and mobile troops, and that violent fighting raged in the city. Admitting the fall of Bayeux, it said that that city had been reduced to a heap of rubble.

The German radio indicated that an Allied pincers drive to the west to chop off the tip of the Normandy peninsula and its prize port of Cherbourg was developing, and said that the Allied wing below Cherbourg were only twenty miles apart.

American, Canadian and British troops repelled all the German blows—forerunners of heavier smashes yet to come—and were getting along with their advance all along the battlefront, a dispatch from Twenty-first Army Group Headquarters said.

Supreme Headquarters said that the first phase of winning invasion footholds and defeating local German reserves has been accomplished, and that the second step of defeating the Nazi tactical reserves is already under way. Gen. Eisenhower asserted that the ground troops were performing magnificently. Once their present task is accomplished, the third will lie ahead—the task of crushing the German strategic reserves, which are perhaps already massing for a powerful all-out counter-blow.

Tactical reserves consist of forces immediately at Field Marshal Rommel's disposal—the full forces of the Seventh and Fifteenth armies which are now in process of engaging the Allies, as well as the German Army group in the south of France. Strategic reserves would consist of as much of the whole German Army as the Germans might move in from anywhere outside the battle re-

Advance to Cut Off Cherbourg.

Meanwhile today from 750 to 1,000 American heavy bombers and other planes smashed at ten major railroad targets in a wide arc below the Cherbourg peninsula to hamper the flow of Nazi reinforcements. Improving weather sped the rush of Allied strength by sea and air.

In its references to the Allied pincers threatening Cherbourg itself, Berlin reported fierce house-to-house fighting in Ste. Mere-Eglise, twenty miles southeast of the port, and said that parachutists had landed on the west coast of the peninsula, south of Cherbourg and only twenty miles from the battleline at Ste. Mere-Eglise. There was no Allied confirmation of these actions.

Specific directions and progress in today's fighting were not officially disclosed, but headquarters announced that medium bombers had struck heavily at the town of Caen, sixteen miles southeast of Bayeux, starting fires. The Allies have plunged near Caen, nine miles inland on the peninsula's base.

Prime Minister Churchill said Tuesday that there was fighting in Caen, perhaps referring to parachutists who had reached there. Nazi counterblows near Caen were repulsed yesterday, headquarters said.

[The Allied forward troops were last reported joining the Canadians on the outskirts of Caen, the British radio declared in a broadcast picked up here today by CBS. Brig.-Gen. Horace S. Sewell, military commentator for the British Information Service, described this as a junction of British and Canadian troops. The British radio said that thousands of armed men were being dropped from the air to reinforce the troops already fighting on the ground in the Caen sector.]

Allied Landings Continue.

A dispatch issued at Allied Twenty-first Army Group Headquarters stated that fresh Allied landings on the French beaches continued today as the troops inland beat back repeated counter-attacks by German reserves and captured a number of Nazi "beetle" tanks and self-propelled "hornet" guns. An abating sea and improved weather conditions aided the Allied leaders in ferrying ashore steady streams of men, supplies and weapons to bolster the beachheads.

This dispatch stated that German pressure had increased as Marshal Rommel tried to smash through to the sea in piecemeal attacks, the forerunners of expected counter-attacks on a bigger scale, but that American, Canadian and British troops had held back the enemy everywhere.

The Yanks ran into heavy fighting for control of a lateral road. The British Sixth Airborne Division threw off German counterthrusts and firmly established their link with friendly forces.

The chaotic nature of the enemy counterthrusts indicated the Germans were doing everything possible to contain the beachhead until they could mount a major slambang attack of the type for which Rommel is famous. But in the meantime he was compelled to toss in every able reserve he could scrape up in the immediate area.

Bombers Raid Widely in Rear.

The American bombers blasted railway installations at Rennes, Laval, Tours, Le Mans, Nantes and Angers, in support of the beachhead forces, flying out 750 to 1,000 strong.

A German broadcast, totally without confirmation, said 300 gliders used to rush in a huge airborne army, had been destroyed or captured.

Capture of Bayeux snipped the railway between Paris and Cherbourg, forty-five miles to the northwest, and opened the way for a thrust deeper inland.

There was no Allied confirmation of these reports.

Heavy battles, with tanks and reserves rushed to the front by both sides, flared over the peninsula.

A Berlin broadcast said British troops pushed through Bayeux early today and are advancing southwest toward the Vire River, which cuts across the peninsula.

Field reports declared British-Canadian troops had captured a number of French towns and villages, advancing on open roads to points some miles from the coast. Infantrymen rode up to battle on bicycles and tanks to speed the advance.

Canadian and British troops have captured several hundred prisoners and shot up numerous Nazi 88-millimeter guns, field reports said. Canadian Press Correspondent Ross Munro, with Canadians in an unidentified sector, said the Germans were reported falling back in one area under persistent attacks, and "strength is being built up rapidly in the Allied bridgeheads for the big battles which should come any day, or even any hour."

Berlin said Americans who gained a foothold north of Carentan, some twenty-seven miles southeast of Cherbourg, had suffered heavy casualties. It also claimed successes near the Orne River mouth, above Caen.

Airport Seen Captured.

A landing attempt in the bay of St. Martin at the northwest tip of the peninsula, near Cap de la Hague, was frustrated, the enemy High Command said.

Engineer troops joined the flood of Allied reinforcements, helping in tearing down Atlantic Wall defenses, and a U. S. Ninth Air Force troop carrier report of flying in jeeps and guns disclosed the Allies had captured or built at least one airfield on the peninsula.

"Everything is going excellently," said Gen. Sir Bernard L. Montgomery, ground forces commander.

It is now apparent the Allies have several beachheads on a fifty-mile coastal stretch between Caen and Carentan, with some of them joined together.

Headquarters was silent on Berlin reports that parachutists in a deep, daring thrust had landed at Falaise and Argentan, thirty miles southeast of Caen, with street fighting flaring in Falaise. The Germans said eight to thirteen Allied divisions were fighting on the peninsula.

Villagers Greet Invaders.

Thundering naval support of the drive continued, and Allied airmen destroyed 102 Nazi planes yesterday.

Hungry French villagers greeted liberating troops with flags and kisses.

Gen. Eisenhower made the fullest use of his airborne troops, and an observer on a ship in the channel said at one time "the sky overhead became unbelievably crowded with aircraft. Four lanes of tow-plane traffic going each way spanned the channel."

The Germans likewise rushed in new strength, and Prime Minister Churchill warned against overoptimism, declaring "enormous exertions lie before us."

Some of the troops have been fighting continuously since Tuesday morning, and it is likely there may be a short lull in advances as they rest, regroup, and bring up supplies.

Supreme Headquarters described the capture of Bayeux, five miles inland from the central Normandy coast and first French city to fall to the invaders, as very important news because it opens up avenues for a new advance deeper into France.

Nazis See Cherbourg Threat.

The German High Command in its communique today said that the Allies had launched an attack southwestward from their bridgehead between Bayeux and Caen in a direction that would cut off the Cherbourg peninsula. The Nazis said that heavy fighting was in progress and that they had flung their reserves into counter-attacks against the Allies.

German aircraft began to appear in the battle areas in greater numbers. In the past twenty-four hours, headquarters announced, a total of 102 enemy planes were destroyed—eighty-two in air combat and twenty on the ground.

Allied air forces flew more than 9,000 sorties yesterday, bombing and strafing the enemy from the Normandy beachheads to 100 miles inside France. German reserves moving toward the battle scene were a particular target.

The enemy-controlled Vichy radio declared Marshal Rudolf Gerd von Rundstedt had told his German troops to defend the Atlantic Wall "to the last man," but nevertheless Berlin broadcasts conceded that in three days the Allies had steadily expanded the invasion bridgehead—which Axis sources said stretched from Valognes, near the tip of the Cherbourg Peninsula, to a point north of Caen.

The weather is definitely improving, it was announced here, but unloading on the beaches had to be halted at times yesterday because of rough waters. The lost time was almost made up by "superhuman efforts on the part of the landing craft crews," a spokesman said.

It was declared that the capture of Bayeux, a key road and rail junction between Caen and Cherbourg, was particularly important because troops advancing inland from there "have no rivers to cross as the rivers run north and south." The Drome River, near the town, provides a route that would help sever the peninsula and isolate the great port of Cherbourg—needed by the Allies to bring in heavy guns and equipment.

German Field Marshal Erwin Rommel, once again contending with his old and victorious foe, Gen. Sir Bernard L. Montgomery, threw an increasing number of tanks into his checking battles, but the Allies also were rolling lines of armor ashore and into the battle back from the coast.

Both French natives and German prisoners revealed Hitler and Rommel recently toured the Atlantic Wall in the very area where the Allies attacked.

The Allied Command permitted an announcement that rocket-firing ships were used to pound the landing beaches ahead of troops.

"This was the first secret development learned from the Dieppe raid to be announced," a headquarters officer said. "There will be others later."

Magnificent Performance, Eisenhower Says Of Troops

R. C. WILSON — JUN 9

Supreme Headquarters, Allied Expeditionary Force, June 8 (AP)—Gen. Dwight D. Eisenhower declared today in a confident appraisal of the first 54 hours of the Allied invasion of France that his faith in the sea, air and ground units had been "completely justified" and that the ground forces under General Sir Bernard L. Montgomery were "performing magnificently."

Back at his command post from a trip to the invasion area aboard a British naval vessel, the Allied leader acknowledged that one rather strong counterattack had developed, but he appeared confident that the ever-increasing Allied forces could repulse the thrust.

NIGHT

Well-Prepared Defenses Found

Correspondents at General Eisenhower's headquarters were told that the Allied troops had found scattered and well-prepared German field defenses in some sectors, but that Allied airpower dominates the skies.

The supreme commander was asked whether he was satisfied and he replied with a wry grin that no commander is ever completely satisfied but that the over-all performance of land, sea and air units had been magnificent.

"My complete confidence in the ability of the Allied armies, navies and air forces to do all they are asked to do has been completely justified," his formal statement said.

All Possible Achieved

The feeling at his headquarters on D-plus-two was that no one could have achieved more during the first phase of the attack, and that there was a grim determination to push through the second phase—which is building up forces to withstand a counterattack.

Of his trip to the beachhead yesterday he said he found things much as he expected. He had high praise for the seamanship of the navy men who made the landings possible in far from ideal weather conditions and did what he termed a "swell job." He stressed the importance of the weather and its possible effect on all military operations.

armies, navies and air forces to do all they are asked to do has been completely justified."

He added: "In the early landing operations, which are always naval, the two Allied navies—together with elements of navy units of the United Nations—under Admiral Ramsay have excelled, in the high standard of their planning and their execution, any prior venture in which I have seen them engaged.

DAY

"The long and brilliant campaign conducted in the past month by the combined air forces, including the commands of Air Chief Marshal Harris, Gen. Spaatz and Air Chief Marshal Leigh-Mallory, was an essential preliminary to the undertaking of the operation and has proved its effectiveness by the fact that the landing was made as planned. Their good work is continuing.

"Gen. Montgomery is in immediate and direct charge of all the assault ground forces. Under him all the troops are performing magnificently."

Nazis Tally 20 Allied Divisions.

London, June 8 (A. P.).—A commentator on the Nazi controlled Paris radio said tonight that twenty Allied divisions have landed in Normandy already and added that the battle was "growing in depth." It also said millions of leaflets were being dropped, "inciting the French to sabotage and espionage."

The French radio at Brazzaville, North Africa, said that since D-day French underground forces had "multiplied their attacks on German lines of communications north of Paris," which link the capital with Cherbourg, Brest and Le Havre.

ENEMY CLAIMS AS TO BATTLE

Germans Report Bitter Fighting Around Bayeux

JUN 9 1944

London, June 8 (AP)—The Germans asserted tonight that furious fighting with the Allies was reaching out on both sides of fallen Bayeux and contended their reinforced troops were biting into the western end of the Allied bridgehead in France and swinging into position to strangle two infantry-supported American air-borne divisions at the mouth of the Vire river.

The German claims continued to be ignored by Allied headquarters and lacked confirmation elsewhere as well.

The DNB agency said General Sir Bernard L. Montgomery, chief of Allied ground forces, had thrown 12 divisions into the battle and that his reinforcements, especially tanks, were arriving steadily from England. This, the German agency asserted, "explains the thrust to Bayeux and beyond, southeastward."

Bridgehead 38 Miles Wide

Later Berlin reported two more Allied air-borne divisions had landed north of Bayeux, while heavy arms were brought in by sea. Invasion troops were said to have penetrated as much as six miles south and southwest of the town. The Germans said fighting raged east of Bayeux, "where ten Allied divisions, including tank divisions, are massed."

A German broadcaster admitted widening of the Allied bridgehead to about 38 miles and said that its deepest point was in the Bayeux sector. One commentator said the German command, in view of the new air-borne landings, "had to withdraw German forces stationed on the coast north of Bayeux, in order to use them for reinforcing the southern defense barrier."

At the same time Jean Paquis, commentator for the Nazi-controlled Paris radio, estimated Allied strength in Normandy at 20 divisions, highest figure put out thus far by an Axis source.

Says Allies Use 1-10 Of Force

One German radio account said General Eisenhower "so far has brought into play only one tenth of the forces at his disposal."

The radio reports pictured the Allied tank drives from Bayeux as seeking to link up with air-borne forces in the Caen and Carentan areas.

The German accounts gave this general picture:

NIGHT

CAEN—The Allies increased their pressure on the road from Bayeux to Caen. Germans moving up from the south checked the advance. Super-heavy British tanks have landed north of Caen.

CARENTAN—British tanks, having broken through the German line at Bayeux, are advancing westward, trying to link up with two American air-borne divisions which are between Carentan and Ste. Mere-Eglise and exposed to German pressure from north, west and south. Allied reinforcements are being landed by air in this sector and hundreds of American tanks were thrown straight into battle.

STE. MERE-EGLISE — House-to-house fighting with the Americans.

The outpouring Axis radio reports, many of them obviously designed to extract information about Allied intentions, included fewer reports of "new landings" than were carried in the first two days of the invasion.

Claim New Landings Beaten Off

The radio at Rennes, France, said several new sea-borne attempts had been beaten off but added, "staff officers at (Field Marshal Karl) von Rundstedt's headquarters do not expect further Allied landings before Cherbourg has been captured."

The Paris radio also called Cherbourg "Eisenhower's immediate objective."

One DNB radio report carried a list of names which it said were those of British and Canadians captured "in the area of Bolbec," which is an important road center 18 miles east of Le Havre. This was the first suggestion that Allied troops might be in that area.

DNB also said air-borne landings on the west coast of the Cherbourg peninsula, "which began yesterday," continued all this morning in the areas of Countances and Granville," and declared stiff fighting was in progress there.

Bay Of St. Martin Named

Another German agency broadcast that a landing in the Bay of St. Martin on the northwest tip of the Cherbourg peninsula had been frustrated.

A Swiss telegraph agency report said the Germans had declared a state of siege in Rouen, 41 miles east of Le Havre, and that great fires were ravaging the city.

A German broadcast said that the entire Atlantic Coast defenses had been "placed in a state of alarm" and that German naval and air forces were patrolling the Bay of Biscay to guard against surprise landings there. In similar vein, another broadcast said shipping was concentrated in northern English harbors and Scotland and that "further landings must be expected in the near future."

agency, declared that large-scale airborne landings were taking place south of Azeville, five miles north of Ste. Mere Eglise, adding: "The center of Allied landings last night was the sector between Houlgate and Arromanches. These newly landed forces succeeded in pushing about seven miles inland."

Nazis Admit Fighting Is Heavy

Report Allies Driving From Beachhead to Cut Off Cherbourg Peninsula.

London, June 8 (A. P.).—The German High Command said today that the Allies had launched an attack to the southwest—in a direction that would cut off Cherbourg—from their beachhead between Bayeux and Caen and that heavy fighting was in progress as the Germans threw reserves into their counter-attacks upon the Allied flank.

The communique declared that the German counter-attacks were making progress, and that the Allies had been compressed into a narrow space east of the Orne, on the eastern flank, and "pushed away from the coast."

To the west, the Americans who had won a foothold north of Carentan, slightly over twenty miles south of Cherbourg, were declared to have suffered heavy casualties.

The Allies were trying to reinforce their beachheads but had attempted to establish no new ones except at the Bay of St. Martin, at the northwestern tip of the peninsula, the communique said. This latter attempt was declared to have been turned back by the coastal batteries.

Report House-to-house Fighting.

One such battery sank an Allied warship, probably a cruiser, east of the peninsula, the Germans asserted, adding that eighty-nine Allied planes, including thirty four-engined bombers, were shot down over the landing areas during the night.

Meanwhile today the German official International Information Bureau declared in a Berlin broadcast that house-to-house fighting was in progress in the village of Ste. Mere-Eglise, on the eastern shore of the Cherbourg Peninsula.

DNB, the German official news

" Houlgate is about four miles east of the mouth of the Orne River and Arromanches is about twenty miles west.

Waves of German heavy bombers last night sank four transport ships and a freighter and probably sent to the bottom another cruiser in attacks on shipping in the Orne estuary, while two light cruisers, another transport and two freighters were set afire, DNB added.

A German coastal battery sank an Allied warship, probably a cruiser, east of the peninsula, the Germans asserted. They said 89 Allied planes, including 30 four-engined bombers, were shot down during the night over the landing areas.

FIGHTING FIRST LEADS ATTACK

Victor In North Africa And Sicily Again In Line

By HAROLD V. BOYLE

London, Friday, June 9 (AP)—Two of the toughest, hardest-fighting divisions in the American and English armies—the famous American First Infantry Division and Britain's renowned 50th Northumbrian Division—are cracking the German again side by side, this time on the fields and beaches of French Normandy.

Headquarters officially announced today that these divisions, the First once a part of the Fifth United States Army and the Northumbrian an important cog in the British Eighth Army, spearheaded the Allied invasion from the sea and made excellent progress after smashing enemy counterattacks.

Their Third Joint Service

It is the third time these Americans and their buddies from England's North Lake country have muddled Nazi battle plans together.

First it was in the deserts of North Africa, then the mountains of Sicily. Now they're battling shoulder to shoulder again on France's coastal plain.

The American First Division for many weary battles in Tunisia was the only infantry force on the American front to prevent a Nazi break-through. A German colonel once paid it this grudging tribute: "The work of this division's infantry and artillery is worthy of the best army in the world."

Allen Commanded In Africa

The division, then under command of Maj. Gen. Terry Allen, now back in the United States with another command, landed in North Africa November 8, 1942.

Ask any man in the First Division who saved the American army at Kasserine Pass and threw back the Germans and his answer invariably will be "Why, the First Division, of course. Who else?"

After slamming back Rommel's last desperate try to break out of the Allied encirclement in Tunisia, the doughboys helped in battles which broke the German hold on Mateur and Bizerte and ended Hitler's North African hopes.

Broke German Tank Drive

Landing in Sicily less than two months afterward, the First caught a German tank drive full tilt in the battle of the beaches and stopped the Hermann Goering troops less than 1,000 yards from the landing craft. In the next 37 days the division captured 18 towns from German troops.

The division landed in England November 7, 1943, just one day less than a year from the day they hit the beaches at Oran.

Its total battle casualties before the present engagement have been announced as 6,885.

The "Fighting First" division was the first American division into action in France in World War I.

"Never Broken," Pershing's Tribute

Because the air-borne troops landed a few hours before the amphibious forces, it was not known exactly here whether an American air-borne division was first into battle in France in this war but at least the First Division, which General John J. Pershing once cited as "never broken by hardship or battle," was not far behind.

Made up of regular army men, the First Division made its third amphibious landing to go back to France "the hard way."

It first spearheaded the attack on Oran, captured it in three days, and then moved on into Tunisia where in the winter of 1942-1943 it was broken up and fought as separate units in mountain sectors.

Patton Reformed It

Lieut. Gen. George S. Patton, Jr., reformed the division, with Maj. Gen. Terry Allen and Brig. Gen. Theodore Roosevelt as commanding officers, for the big attack on Gafsa, in southern Tunisia, and the later battle of El Guetar, where the First fought in the front line for 22 days without relief.

The First was given the task of smashing into Gela in Sicily and defeated the Hermann Goering division in a beach battle which saw the Americans with backs to the sea firing over open sights at Nazi tanks.

The division also fought in the battle of Troina, which has been described as the toughest of the Sicilian campaign.

New General Now Commands

Several months ago the division moved secretly from Sicily to England under a new general for the great western-front assault. It was one of the first divisions Lieut. Gen. Omar Bradley asked for.

Since that time it had been engaged in special amphibious exercises.

The sturdy Northumbrians have gone a long way since they left their windy pastures to battle England's foe. They fought in France and Flanders and their rocky stand at Arras and along the Ypres-Comines canal gave other British and French troops precious time for the epic Dunkerque withdrawal. They back-stopped withdrawal of the South Africans to Tobruk during Rommel's last great plunge in Libya and then saved themselves by a spectacular frontal break through the German lines and a widespread sweep back to rejoin the Eighth army on Egypt's borders. Then they helped pursue the Nazis across Africa, Sicily and into Italy.

The men are determined to equal the record of their predecessors of the last war, which will take a great deal of going.

During 1917 and 1918 the First took every objective assigned to it, capturing 100 German prisoners for every man the Germans took from the division.

It was the first American division to land in France, the first to suffer casualties and the first to win a major American battle.

The division's motto is "no mission too difficult—no sacrifice too great. Duty first."

Its new commanding officer, whose name has not been announced, rose from the ranks.

Reinforcements Are Landed

TWENTY-FIRST ARMY GROUP HEADQUARTERS, June 8 (AP).—Fresh Allied landings on the French beaches continued today as the troops inland beat back repeated counter-attacks by German reserves and captured a number of Nazi "beetle" tanks and self-propelled "hornet" guns. An abating sea and improved weather conditions aided the Allied leaders in ferrying ashore steady streams of men, supplies and weapons to bolster the beachheads.

German pressure increased as Field Marshal Erwin Rommel, German commander in northern France, tried to smash through to the sea in piecemeal attacks, the forerunners of expected counter-attacks on a bigger scale. But American, Canadian and British troops held back the enemy everywhere.

The Americans ran into heavy fighting for control of a lateral road. The British 6th Air-Borne Division threw off German counter-thrusts and firmly established their link with friendly forces.

The chaotic nature of the enemy counter-thrusts indicated the Germans were doing everything possible to contain the beachhead until they could mount a major slam-bank attack of the type for which Rommel is famous. But in the mean time he was compelled to toss in every able reserve he could scrape up in the immediate area.

German troops fought with fury and surrendered only when surrounded or cut to pieces. Numerous pockets of resistance were bypassed by the swiftly advancing Allies in sweeping charges from the beach. These then were being methodically mopped up, with the Nazis resisting desperately.

ALLIED VEHICLES OPERATE IN WATER

Invasion Machines Were Equipped For Special Job

Supreme Headquarters, Allied Expeditionary Force, June 8 (AP)—Every Allied vehicle which landed on the invasion coast was equipped to travel through water under its own power and reach the beaches ready to fight.

Headquarters said tonight the job began when Allied military commanders concluded they might have to get their tanks, armored cars and other fighting vehicles ashore without the use of ports. The whole of Britain's sheet steel rolling capacity was required for three months to get the job done.

Experiments Began In '42

Experiments began as early as the Dieppe raid August 19, 1942. They were so unsuccessful that military engineers decided to start again almost from scratch.

Every new piece of assault equipment on wheels and treads went to a waterproofing team for application of "wading" devices.

It was not until a few months ago that engineers could work with definite knowledge of water depths, types and slopes of beaches on which the vehicles would be required to land. By then engineers had about one quarter of the time the job would have required under normal circumstances.

Handbooks Printed

No one factory made a complete wading kit. They didn't know what they were making. They were told simply to deliver it in a hurry.

There was so little time to teach crews of combat vehicles that handbooks were printed and the crews practically went ashore with a handbook in the left hand, and the steering wheel in the right.

The wading kits for tanks were made for six feet of water, with an allowance for weight. Since the water level sometimes reached the turrets, engineers had to provide air for crews, and an outlet for the exhausts. Every rivet joint had to be waterproof.

MARINES SHOT FLOATING MINES

Supreme Headquarters Allied Expeditionary Force, June 8 (A. P.).—Marines played a unique role in the invasion. Picked leatherneck sharp-shooters rode high in the masts of the big ships of the bombardment force and picked off floating mines with their rifles.

Eisenhower Aids Men Adrift

Calls Help for Troops as He Confers With Montgomery Off Invasion Coast.

Supreme Headquarters, Allied Expeditionary Force, June 8 (A. P.).—Gen. Eisenhower and Admiral Sir Bertram Ramsay, commander of Allied Naval Forces, interrupted a four-and-a-half-hour cruise off the French invasion beaches yesterday long enough to direct aid board conference with operation- to a handful of unknown, drift- al commanders, Eisenhower and ing soldiers. It was learned today. Ramsay were informed that a

On the way to their ship- landing barge had been sighted lurching helplessly at one side of the convoy.

The men aboard signaled that they needed help and the answering signal from the bridge of the fast British naval vessel carrying Eisenhower and Ramsay said that their plight would be relayed to the next home - going ship. A returning landing craft was passed only a mile or so nearer France and was given the location of the drifting barge.

Eisenhower's and Ramsay's conclave with high officers, including Gen. Sir Bernard L. Montgomery, commander of the invasion ground forces, and Rear Admiral Alan Goodrich Kirk, commander of the United States naval task forces in the invasion operation, was held in the midst of an armada of thousands of ships.

The supreme commander left an English coastal town to attend the meeting only twenty-four hours after the early landing operations. At one point the conference was carried on within five miles of the enemy because Eisenhower felt he could thereby get better communications.

30. 24 — 16043

At one stage of the cruise there was hardly room in the deck for the clustered generals and admirals to pass each other.

As Montgomery, in corduroy trousers and a fleece-lined jacket, bobbed away from the side of the ship in his launch at the end of the session a lieutenant had to break up the group of sailors crowding the rail. Eisenhower grinned, stuck up his thumb and called after Montgomery:

"Good luck to you."

The Supreme Commander showed satisfaction at the results of his conference upon his return. Early in the landing operations he had informed newsmen that he planned such a visit.

ALLIES ORDER IN NORSE FISHERMEN

JUN 9 1944

London, June 8 (A. P.).—The Allied Command in an appeal broadcast over the Brazzaville radio tonight asked Norwegian, Danish, Belgian, Dutch and French fishermen not to fish off their coasts between now and June 15 lest they hamper Allied operations.

DAY

The broadcast said:

"People of the Atlantic coasts—of Norway, Denmark, Belgium, Holland and France—the supreme commander orders you to cease fishing in the zones mentioned from Thursday, June 8, at 9 P. M., until June 15 at 9 P. M.

"In consequence those fishermen who are on land now must stay there. Those who are at sea must return immediately to port.

"Conform yourself to this instruction immediately. To not listen to this could be personally fatal and hamper the Allied operations.

of the Allied forces."

These instructions went out from London and North African stations as a German commentator, Martin von Hallensleben, wrote that the Germans were on the alert for invasions on northern coasts. Hallensleben said German reconnaissance had observed "great concentrations of shipping in English ports farther north, including the Bristol Channel, the Irish Sea and Scotland."

The text of the broadcasts, issued by the political warfare division of the Supreme Headquarters Allied Expeditionary Force:

"A warning addressed to fishermen who use Atlantic coastal waters of Norway, Denmark, Holland, Belgium and France:

"The Supreme Allied Commander requires that all fishing should cease in these waters for a period of seven days beginning at 9 p. m. Thursday, June 8 (3 p. m. New York time) and extending until 9 p. m. Thursday, June 15. Therefore fishermen now in port must remain there. Those at sea must return to port immediately. Follow this order strictly and quickly. Failure to do so may be fatal to yourselves and will hinder the operations of the Allied forces."

WEATHER CLEARS, AIDS INVADERS

JUN 9 1944

Eases Task of Troops Unloading from Light Landing Craft.

LONDON, June 8 — (AP) The blustery channel weather, which delayed the Western invasion 24 hours and at one time nearly caused an Allied disaster, began clearing during this third day of assault, easing the task of troops unloading from light, wave-tossed landing craft.

Improvement of the weather extended deep inland over the continent, and Allied airmen were able to cast their heaviest bomb tonnage upon the enemy since the first troops—many of them retching and seasick—struggled ashore on the Normandy coast under a chill, overcast sky.

JUN 9 1944

Warmer In Strait

It was much warmer in the strait, the sun shone for long periods and the seas moderated somewhat after forcing a suspension of unloadings at times yesterday along the invasion beaches. The thermometer registered 68 in midafternoon and visibility lifted to three or four miles.

Tonight rain pelted Dover strait but the southwesterly wind lessened and the sea moderated. Clouds sometimes lower than 1,000 feet reduced visibility. The barometer fell slightly and the temperature dropped to 55 at 10:30 p.m. (4:30 p.m., E.W.T.)

Although the channel was considerably quieter than on D-Day, its ruffled waters and always treacherous tides and currents still were far from ideal for the intricate amphibious operation. A southwesterly wind blew fairly strong in the early evening, and the sea was choppy with a swell close inshore.

The wind dropped from what the British navy described as "force four," which whipped up whitecaps and swamped smaller craft, to "force two," which was a brisk breeze off the bridgeheads.

Weather Almost Caused Disaster

Associated Press Correspondent John A. Morosco, who covered the Allied landings on North Africa and Sicily, reported from an invasion port today that "wind and a choppy channel almost caused disaster" in the invasion.

Vernon E. Brown, London News Chronicle correspondent writing for the combined American and British press, said he was told by Allied authorities that the invasion was undertaken despite the bad weather because further postponement, beyond the first 24-hour delay, would have been impossible.

The date was chosen, Brown wrote, because of a combination of tides, wind and sea, "and there were only three days in which all of these seemed likely to be combined favorably enough for the operation."

On D-Day itself, after the postponement, "the weather was still far from good," an Allied officer told Brown, "and we had to consider the possibility of a further postponement."

"It was actually possible," he continued, "to put it off for a maximum of another 24 hours, but our weather forecast said that although the weather was bad at the time it would improve later. It was decided to go ahead."

Many Men Seasick

For some of the Allied troops, many of whom had never seen salt water until they crossed the Atlantic, the channel trip was a more trying ordeal than facing the German guns.

During the night they lay off the beaches awaiting H-Hour they were tossed and buffeted continuously by the heaving seas. There were victims of seasickness among the seamen aboard one of the P-T boats which rode off the invasion beaches under command of Lt. Comdr. John D. Bulkeley, the hero of the Pacific.

Riding the channel on Monday, the day from which D-Day was postponed, was a far worse experience. The lines of the landing craft became separated and the craft milled about like lost sheep. Escort vessels did a good job in rounding them up, however.

It takes a little luck along with skill to make a successful invasion, and on Monday it looked as though Gen. Eisenhower's luck was running out.

NAZIS CLAIM SINKING OF CRUISER, DESTROYER

JUN 9 1944

LONDON, Friday, June 9.—(AP) The Berlin radio in a wholly unconfirmed report said tonight that an American cruiser had been sunk off the east coast of the Cherbourg peninsula by German motor torpedo boats.

NIGHT

The enemy report was entirely without substantiation in Allied quarters.

A similarly unconfirmed German report said a destroyer had been sunk.

'Not Larger Than Sicily'

JUN 9 1944

London, June 8 (AP)—John A. Moroso, Associated Press war correspondent, reported from an invasion port today that although "the assault was widely hailed as the largest in history, it actually was no larger in its initial phases than the Allied attack on Sicily." Moroso witnessed both the landings in Sicily and in North Africa.

"Weather prophets were the worst flops," he said. "Wind and a choppy Channel almost caused disaster."

Montgomery Never Took A Chance With Germans

As a Subaltern, He Picked Best Men for Football Match

JUN 9 1944

LONDON, June 8 (AP).—Lord Beaverbrook's "Daily Express" tells this story on General Sir Bernard L. Montgomery:

As a young lieutenant he was sports officer of his unit in India. When the German warship Gneisenau came to port on a courtesy call, a football match with the visitors was arranged. For diplomacy's sake, Monty's commanding officer suggested he pick only a "fairish team."

Monty listened, then selected his men. The British team trotted out and beat the Germans, 35—0. The angry regimental commander took Monty to task, and asked sternly why he had put the best possible British team into the field, against orders to the contrary.

"I didn't feel like taking a chance with the Germans, sir," Monty replied.

He still has the same philosophy.

Allies Warn Fishermen to Keep Off Sea From France to Norway

Bulkeley, Hero In Pacific, Now Stalking E-Boats

JUN 9 1944

By E. D. Ball

[Associated Press Correspondent Reporting for the Combined Allied Press]

With the United States Motor Torpedo Boat Task Force Off Normandy, June 6—(AP Delayed)—Lieut. Com. John D. Bulkeley, who fought Tojo's little boats in the Pacific, now is stalking Hitler's. He commanded the flag boat of a fleet of the United States Navy's plywood patrol torpedo boats spearheading today's western invasion.

For 24 blustery hours before the Allied naval bombardment burst upon the French coast this morning we shepherded the great fleet of a hundred-odd minesweepers clearing the way for the multiple lanes of invasion craft plodding behind us.

No Opposition

Bulkeley was a hero of the Philippine fighting and took Gen. Douglas MacArthur away from the islands when the Japanese were closing in on Corregidor.

All night long we swept up and down the beach approaches within shooting distance of the Germans. Late yesterday in broad daylight we swung toward Cherbourg Peninsula, our invasion fleet stretching out for endless miles.

Not a shot was fired at us. Since leaving our embarkation port early yesterday we have not seen any German air or surface craft. The only thing German we spotted were eight mines.

Atlantic Wall Seared

It is inconceivable that the Germans failed to spot this vast Channel traffic—solid lines of craft, big and small, some moving eight columns abreast and more than 30 miles long.

From the lurching deck of the PT boat Stratus, I watched the first broadside hurled shoreward at dawn this morning to jar open the western front. In minutes, the Atlantic Wall was seared and aflame. Lined up over the beaches, Allied spotter planes blinked signals to the bombarding ships.

Behind, in front and on either side of us, orange bursts like giant pompoms leaped from bombarding rifles. Whether the Germans were caught with their breeches locked or whether their batteries were knocked out by night-long air bombardment is a question yet unanswered.

The fact remains that enemy opposition was amazingly scarce. He was slow to react, and when he did, it was sposmodic. From the Stratus we did not see a single hit scored on an Allied ship.

Before the first broadside, Allied armies, freighted across the Channel in a multiple-lane, double-decker bridge of ships were storming enemy fortifications.

When the bombardment was a half-hour old, the sun broke through clouds and a brilliant rainbow arched over the incredible show.

"That's good luck for us," said Lieut. R. C. Burleson, of Temple, Texas, the Stratus skippr.

Called Good Sign

"Surely a good omen," added Signalman Kenneth M. Short, Providence, R. I.

For the PT crews brought over secretly to deal with Hitler's E-boats, the initial phase of the invasion has been a waterhaul.

The only shots we've fired so far were at derelict mines. That was a bit of target practice for gunners like Mike Leshock, Brooklyn; Luther Leary, Plymouth, N. C., and Ford Reedy, Bel Air, Md.

(Reedy, gunner's mate (third class) is the son of Victor and Ennis Reedy, of Bel Air. The family formerly operated a farm at Manchester, S. D., where Ford was born. The gunner's mate, 20, was graduated from the Bel Air High School in 1941 and entered the navy in January, 1943. Another brother, Jack, 19, aviation electrician's mate (third class), also in the navy, was home on leave today.)

Lieut. Jack Sheretz, of Roanoke, Va., took a few rifle pots at mines churning the water with their multiple fingers.

From then on it was routine patrolling.

Warships Turn Battle Tide

JUN 9 1944

By Everett Vilander

[Representing the Combined Allied Press: Distributed by the Associated Press]

Aboard H. M. S. Scorpion, June 8—Strongly-reinforced German detachments pinned down advanced Allied units in this area last evening and threw them out of two localities by determined counter-attacks. The Allied position appeared critical.

From the bridge of this destroyer I watched the great British battlewagon H. M. S. Rodney move majestically to a point directly opposite the threatened area. Her big 16-inch guns began to belch smoke and fire. The force of the concussions pressed against our faces and shook this ship like a terrier as scores of 2,000-pound shells hurtled into the German strong points.

DAY

Norse Ship Takes Part

The British cruiser HMS Mauritius and the Norwegian destroyer Stord joined the attack at the request of the armed forces. They bombarded two houses on the coast. I watched the shell bursts creep up the beach. When the ships found the range, they poured hundreds of shells into the houses until they were enveloped in smoke and dust.

Then British troops advanced through the shell holes and recaptured the localities they had lost.

Hundreds Of Craft Seen

The seafront of the little town off which we are patrolling today resembles one of the world's thriving ports. Hundreds of craft, including more than 30 big merchant vessels and LSTs are crowded along the beach.

The weather is ideal for landing reinforcements. Allied fighter planes buzz helter-skelter through the azure sky, like a swarm of flies.

Bayeux Greets Allies With Wine And Posies

By E. J. Gillings

[Representing the Combined British Press]

[Distributed by the Associated Press]

Bayeux, France, June 7 (Delayed)—It was just before midday today that our infantry and tanks entered this town.

While our infantry was wiping out enemy snipers the people came out cheering, flocking into the roadway which a few moments before had been completely deserted. Waving tricolors and shouting, "Welcome to the Allies," they flocked around a jeep, pelting it with flowers, and within a few moments the jeep was covered with roses and carnations.

Wine Given Troops

A tank coming up the street had to stop to avoid running into the crowds. The tank was showered with flowers. Bottles of wine were handed up to the crew by enthusiastic men and women. Children asked for souvenirs.

The people took us to the main hotel where one of them opened up a piano and they sang the national anthem.

The first contact with enemy tanks in the central sector of the front was made this morning east of Bayeux while our infantry was clearing some high ground. After our infantry got in among the enemy positions and was mopping up, a small group of enemy tanks appeared and opened fire.

The infantry anti-tank guns returned the fire and the enemy retired quickly. German infantrymen took advantage of the natural cover given by clumps of trees on high ground around Bayeux but tanks supported by infantry did excellent work in clearing them out.

Prisoners Taken

I saw groups of German prisoners being shephered across grain fields. They were formed into a column and marched to a prisoners' cage.

The people told us the main enemy force which occupied the town left at 7 o'clock this morning, leaving only a small rearguard of snipers. These snipers were liquidated.

The enemy blew up a big bridge on the southern extremes of the town on the main road to Saint Lo, which would seem to indicate the enemy already had given up the possibility of counterattacking up this road.

Defenses Destroyed

(Gault MacGowan, of the New York Sun, who flew over Bayeux before the attack was launched, said in a dispatch that "our mission was to destroy the enemy defenses of the town and our bombs wove a tapestry around it which historians may make as famous as the historic tapestries within the city itself." He said great care was taken to avoid any bomb damage to Bayeux itself.

("It's beautiful Cathedral of Notre Dame and its old houses were plainly visible as we made our bombing run and there was a knot of people outside the Hotel Luxembourg in 'the street of the butchers.'" MacGowan said. "Bayeux was a landmark to troops advancing from the beaches. Notre Dame, with its two great Romanesque towers, surmounded by 13th-century spires, was beckoning them on like fingers.")

Atlantic Wall Called War's Biggest Bluff

By Richard D. McMillan

[Representing the Combined Allied Press]

[Distributed by the Associated Press]

With the Allied Invading Forces in France, June 8—The so-called Atlantic Wall along this so-called stitutes the biggest bluff of the whole war, for it simply does not exist. Some prisoners said the Germans had been frantically trying to complete defenses but the task had been too vast for them.

Although we have pushed far inland without encountering serious opposition, it must not be imagined that the Germans will not react as soon as they have grouped their Panzer forces.

They tried to hold us in the region of Caen and Bayeux, but tanks were in greater force. We have thrown into the battle British and American tanks and self-propelled guns.

Tanks Widening Bulge

Some of these actions have been responsible for demoralizing the enemy. All the French people with whom I talked spoke of the Nazis' loss of courage. They may not be beaten but they are near to it.

Prisoners also said the defeats in Russia and Italy are known to the rank and file and they realize it is all up with their cause.

Our tanks are rapidly widening a great bulge.

I have just completed a tour of the front line covering nearly 30 miles. We have captured towns and villages and the whole countryside is beflagged with Union Jacks, Stars and Stripes and the French Tricolor.

People "Crazy With Joy"

Crowds are cheering the British and other Allied troops, shouting "Bravo, Tommies!" We knew you would come. We have been waiting for you. Now we will kill these hated Germans."

Bayeux inhabitants were crazy with joy. A squadron of our medium bombers flew over low. Crowds pointed upward, waving their hands as if the airmen could see them.

Tell Of German Fright

"That is what frightened the Germans most," the French folk said. "They scurried underground like rabbits whenever your flyers came over. During the last few days before the invasion, your air attacks were terrific. We could read fear on the faces of the Germans."

Driving into Bayeux, the first French town of consequence to be liberated, I passed long lines of German prisoners. On the roadside the bodies of German and Allied dead lay unburied. For the moment, every man was needed for fighting.

WOUNDED MEN GIVE DESCRIPTION OF LST LANDING

By THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

ABOARD AN LST RETURNING FROM THE NORMANDY COAST, June 8—More than 50 wounded soldiers and sailors were put aboard this LST (Landing Ship, Tanks) before she began her trip back to England.

Three doctors and a special group of naval medical men attended them. Surgical cases were handled on an improvised operating table in the ship's wardroom.

A sergeant from an engineer unit had a mortar fragment in his left thigh.

"When we got back to the beach the Germans started shooting at us with mortars and 88s," he said. "I think we could make only about five feet forward each time we tried, so we started digging in. Shrapnel knocked my helmet off and the next shell hit another fellow 15 feet away.

"Medical ratings reached us and got us to a landing craft."

A lieutenant colonel wounded in his left arm said: "we were trying to get some equipment from a landing craft at which they had been shooting. We just went ahead because we needed the stuff—having had equipment casualties."

There was a naval lieutenant, junior grade, whose landing craft was loaded with four field guns. He was wounded in one arm and a foot.

"We made a successful firing run," he said. "An infantry landing craft went in ahead of us and it went up in flames."

A private from New York said: "we hit the beach at 7 a.m. We had just been riding in nice until the sailors let the ramp down. Then we got it. Another fellow and I were bringing ammunition off. I fell on the boat floor when a bullet hit my arm. When we crawled into the water, mines blew up some of the fellows.

"When we got to the rocks, lots of us were gone. A couple of Navy fellows joined us. A sergeant told us to get up further.

"We separated and a fellow with me and I managed to dig a little hole. Then shell fire blew the two sailors to bits.

"Navy medical ratings told us to wait where we were. They brought us down to the beach after that, lots of us on stretchers."

GAINS SCORED BY CANADIANS

Infantry, Tanks Drive From Bayeux Toward Caen

By ROSS MUNRO

[Canadian War Correspondent]

With Canadian Forces in France, June 8 (AP)—Canadian infantry and tanks have fought their way forward in a rapid advance through wooded farmlands between Bayeux, captured by the British, and Caen, still strongly held by the Germans.

A dozen Normandy towns have been captured by the Canadians and more than 600 prisoners have been taken.

In several towns there has been stiff house-to-house fighting, but persistent attacks with strong artillery support forced the Germans back.

Enemy Tanks Withdrawn

Canadian tanks yesterday were in action against German Panzers, which were stopped. A Canadian infantry unit riding forward on the tanks also mixed into the melee.

After some fighting the enemy tanks withdrew toward Caen.

The Germans appear to have been slow to react to the invasion landings and evidently were caught by surprise, but they are now believed to be concentrating armor and infantry for an assault on the British-Canadian beachhead into which supplies and troops are pouring despite enemy air attacks at night.

Air cover by British, Canadian and American fighter planes was complete during the daytime and not a German plane was seen.

Warships of the Royal Navy are supporting Canadian and British troops by bombarding towns held by the enemy in the beachhead.

The front is extremely fluid here, where the country is excellent for tank warfare.

1500 PLANES HIT

RAIL JUNCTIONS, NAZI AIRFIELDS

Daylight Bomber Operations Greatest in Three Days of Invasion Warfare.

TROOPS HAMMERED

289 Allied Planes Lost in 54 Hours; 176 Germans Downed.

SUPREME HEADQUARTERS ALLIED EXPEDITIONARY FORCE, Friday, June 9 — (AP) Allied Air forces, surpassing the total of 27,000 sorties since the invasion of western Europe began, smashed at vital rail junctions well behind the battle zone and at scores of other objectives throughout the third day of the battle of Normandy.

As the weather improved steadily, daylight operations were the greatest today in all the three days of invasion warfare, and at noon the 27,000-sorties mark was passed by British-based aircraft.

Allied Losses Small

During this period, approximately 54 hours, Allied losses were 289 planes of all types — barely more than 1 per cent.

German planes destroyed in the period totaled 176 planes out of the meager forces which were dwarfed by the massive Allied bomber and fighter fleets thundering constantly through European skies.

An additional announcement early today said the Eighth and Ninth U. S. airforces had shot down a total of 22 planes in air combat Thursday and that the Eighth had destroyed 21 more on the ground. Four American bombers and 24 fighters were lost.

Topping the Eighth Air force fighters in kills was Lt. William G. Edens of Tyronza, Ark., with three combat victories.

As landing forces pushed forward to join airborne troops and expand newly-won territory, American Fortresses and Liberators, nearly 1,000 strong and escorted by up to 500 fighters, smashed at transport bottlenecks and airfields 100 to 150 miles behind the Normandy beachheads. Enemy opposition in the air continued on a limited scale. However, fliers reported ground fire was extremely heavy.

Ten rail centers, on main lines leading to the Brest and Cherbourg peninsulas were pounded by the Fortresses and Liberators and by Marauders and Havocs of the U. S. Ninth Air force, and the Ninth's fighter-bombers alone made ten separate attacks during the first six hours of daylight, losing only one Thunderbolt.

Attack, Armored Column

At the same time Eighth Air force Thunderbolt and Mustang fighters attacked an armored column, rail cars, 16 locomotives, eight bridges, 12 rail yards, a tunnel, oil dump, warehouse, factory, two hangars, canal locks on the Seine, seven military encampments and a heavy gun emplacement. Only two Thunderbolt and two Mustang groups in these operations met enemy planes in combat.

The American heavies hit rail installations over a wide area at Rennes, Laval, Tours, Le Mans, Nantes and Angers, meeting some opposition in the air and shooting down seven of one enemy formation of 12 planes. Simultaneously, the Marauders and Havocs sought out their targets at Valognes, Vieres, Lessay, Pontaubault, Rennes and Laval, all on the Cherbourg peninsula or on rail lines leading to it. Ninth fighters hit enemy vehicles and Typhoons lashed enemy traffic with rockets and stabbed nine miles below Caen to fire on enemy Tiger tanks.

R.A.F. Spitfires of the Second Tactical Air force, covering land forces, met 18 Nazi fighters attempting to bomb the Allied-held beaches, knocked down and forced the rest to jettison their bombs.

British pilots reported some German planes engaged by them had camouflage and recognition markings designed to make them appear as friendly.

German Planes Destroyed

In one aerial combat over the battle area five FW-190s and one ME-109 were shot down for a loss of four Allied planes, and two additional Messerschmitts were destroyed during an abortive Nazi attack against the beaches, during which the Germans were forced to jettison their bombs.

Frontline reports indicated the Allies had captured or constructed at least one landing field on the continent, although there was no headquarters confirmation of this.

One correspondent cabled that Dutch Mitchell bombers had landed in France, while the Ninth Air force troop carrier command revealed that such heavy equipment as jeeps and anti-tank guns were among the supplies now being flown to the battle area, suggesting also that landing ships were in Allied possession.

While heavy bombers smashed at installations far behind the front, Marauders opened this third day of invasion fighting with a dawn attack on Caen, leaving at least 20 fires burning.

The blows by these twin-engined medium bombers followed heavy RAF strikes last night on targets near Paris and at German transports 12 miles behind the invasion coast.

In the 24 hours ended last midnight, Allied air units flew 9,000 sorties, bringing to 22,000 the total number of sorties by all Allied aircraft since the channel assault began.

177 Planes Reported Lost

From this overwhelming battle fleet, 177 planes of all types had been announced as lost up to dawn today, while our air-gunners shot down 174 planes precious to the German air force, which was offering slowly increasing resistance. Supreme Headquarters made no attempt to give a full tabulation of Allied losses, letting statements come from individual commands.

Marauders, Havocs, Lightnings and Thunderbolts kept up a constant drenching of enemy objectives in and directly behind the front with bombs and bullets. Marauders and Havocs—hard working twins of the American tactical air force—after striking at Caen, spread out in a wide arc over Normandy for their bombing of a variety of rail and other communications targets just behind enemy lines. The Havocs struck at rail lines and yards at Periers and La Haye Du Puits, while the Marauders swarmed over similar objectives at Jessay, Pontaubault, Valognes and St. Lo. Pilots said they saw hits on freight cars and fuel tanks. Some formations encountered intense flak over the targets, but all the medium and light bombers returned to their bases.

Great numbers of the Ninth American air force's Thunderbolts and Lightnings guarding Allied troops on the Normandy beaches peeled off frequently from the massive umbrella formations and hit targets of opportunity within the zone of operations.

In addition to providing cover for the invading armies, the Lightnings and Thunderbolts searched the channel for enemy submarines. Other Tunderbolts struck behind the fighting front, dive-bombing and skip-bombing bridges on routes used by enemy reinforcements.

Attack Motorized Units

Ninth air force fighter-bombers made ten separate large-scale operations in the first six hours of daylight today. One Thunderbolt formation reported successful attacks on enemy motorized units and columns of trucks and armored cars near Valognes and another struck at German army encampments in the woods near Tervieres. One Thunderbolt was missing from the forenoon operations.

The Thunderbolt and Lightning fighter-bombers stopped only to refuel and rearm, not bothering to wait until bullet holes in the wings were repaired. They reported blasting a chateau used as a German headquarters and hitting 15 bridges among other targets.

Yank Air Fleet Strikes 100 To 150 Miles Inland

Supreme Headquarters Allied Expeditionary Force, June 8 (AP)—Between 750 and 1,000 American heavy bombers swept a wide arc of south Normandy early today, smashing bridges, airdromes and railyards and junctions in an effort to clamp an air seal on the beachhead battlefield.

Fortresses and Liberators, in the biggest aerial operation of the third day of the invasion, hit hard at installations from 100 to 150 miles behind the front, and Marauders pounded Caen.

Targets attacked today by the heavies, which carried out two missions yesterday, were located roughly in the regions of Chateaudun, Lemans, Rennes, Nantes and Tours, all large French towns and strategic communication points. They were accompanied by about 500 Mustangs, Lightnings and Thunderbolts.

Allied planes of all descriptions had flown 22,000 sorties in the last 48 hours and air operations were mounting today as weather improved.

Return, Refuel, Depart Again

Thunderbolt and Lightning fighter-bombers since 6 P. M. yesterday flew so continuously that they stopped only to refuel and rearm between flights, setting out again without waiting to repair bullet holes in their wings.

Among the fighter-bomber targets hit were 15 bridges and a chateau used as a German headquarters.

More than 2,000 of the 9,000 sorties flown by the Allies in the 24 hours ended at midnight were made by these fighter-bombers, which shot down 6 enemy aircraft and lost 21 of their own.

A total of 174 German planes had been destroyed since the invasion began.

Allied Losses Put At 177

The last tabulation showed the Allies had lost 177 aircraft, but supreme headquarters was not attempting to keep an up-to-the-minute tabulation and was leaving the announcements of losses to the individual commands.

Among the American losses were 2 heavy bombers and 48 fighters and fighter-bombers.

Nazi night fighters stalked the British formations last night and scored their biggest kill of the invasion, knocking down 29 of the RAF heavies.

One of the RAF's targets was a transport concentration in the forest of Cerisy where the road runs from Mayeux to St. Lo.

The Air Ministry said the wood target was of great tactical importance and had to be attacked at low level because of 7,000-foot clouds.

Cologne Raided

Other RAF formations attacked the German city of Colgone at the crossing of the Rhine and laid mines.

The Germans were putting up a stiffer fight in the air than they had previously.

It was announced that small formations had attacked Allied troops on the beaches yesterday for the first time, and the Air Ministry said that big British Lancasters and Halifaxes had encountered more enemy fighters than usual last night.

German planes struck a weak blow at England during the night, appearing over East Anglia and dropping some bombs in an area near a coast town. At least three of the enemy planes were destroyed.

Reinforcements Flown In

Additional reinforcements for air-borne troops were flown into France overnight. Jeeps, anti-tank guns, motorcycles, radios and medical equipment were among the supplies dropped by parachute and unloaded on landing strips.

The pattern of the Allied air attacks as the weather began improving over France followed that which had been built up during the last eight weeks, with the planes having the additional task of providing close support for ground troops.

American and British planes of every type have harried Nazi communication lines into the Cherbourg peninsula and blasted out the Germans' secret stores.

Naval aircraft, both American and British, flew 870 sorties yesterday, mostly spotting for naval gunfire.

Nazi Air Power Didn't Worry Eisenhower

General Eisenhower's Command Post, June 8 (AP)—Gen. Dwight D. Eisenhower wasn't at all worried about what the German air force would do on invasion day, being supremely confident that Allied power would handle anything with a swastika on its wings.

He told a group of Canadians just before they embarked: "If you see any planes, don't worry—they're ours."

U. S. Flyers Destroy 53 Planes

LONDON, June 9 (Friday) (AP).—An announcement early today said the 8th and 9th United States Air Forces shot down a total of thirty-two planes in air combat on Thursday and that the 8th had destroyed twenty-one more on the ground. Four American bombers and twenty-four fighters were lost.

Glider Pilot Gives Account Of Air-Borne Force Landing

Lieut. Alexis Neel, Little Rock, Ark., crash-landed his glider in enemy territory Wednesday morning. He made his way to a beachhead and was returned to his base.

BY. LIEUT. ALEXIS NEEL

A Troop-Carrier Base in England, June 8 (AP)—My glider was about the 25th in a formation which C-47s towed in yesterday (Wednesday) morning. We cut loose about four miles inland at 500 feet.

I started to land on a field and a flak tower started shooting at us. I got over to another field and it was full of wooden poles about 25 feet apart—some kind of anti-glider obstacles.

I saw another glider land in a near-by field, but it must have hit a mine. It blew up. We finally landed in tops of some trees about 35 feet high. Only three men were hurt and within two or three minutes after we landed some medics with stretchers came up and took them away.

German Shells Drop

At the same time German 88-mm. shells started dropping around us. I beat it out of there and got to the road. I met some parachute troopers and started walking back toward the beachhead.

I saw hardly any French people inland, but there were plenty of Germans—dead ones. Parachute troopers had taken care of them. I saw one riding around in a German half-track and wearing German boots.

I ran into an MP major about 11 A. M. and asked him whether to go to an air-borne command post or to the beachhead. Up to the command post, he said, there were a lot of snipers and mines. He advised me to go to the beachhead and I didn't argue. I, and seven other glider pilots, got into a trailer towed by a jeep and we rode down to the beach.

I saw about 150 German prisoners, a lot of them looking like kids, even as young as 13 or 14 years old. Others were about 45.

Finally I got out to an LST (landing ship, tanks).

Another fellow who came in with us was a Captain Adams, who landed with the air-bornes as a sort of glider expert to see what could be done about salvaging them.

He told me he was captured about 30 minutes after his glider landed Tuesday night. A direct hit from a German aviation gun on the glider killed his major and all the rest except three, who were taken prisoners.

No Care For Wounded

The Germans moved them to one prison camp and then to another. They were not taking care of the American wounded at all, he said.

"They left a glider pilot with his leg blown off bleeding to death," he told me. "They threw away their rifles and took ours."

He said he struck up a conversation with a German officer after giving him some of his rations. Adams told him the Germans ought to surrender and that they were surrounded on three sides.

The German said they wouldn't do it because they had been told the Americans would cut their throats.

157 Surrender

He kept on talking to this fellow and finally to another German officer and 157 of them surrendered. They were turned over to military police.

I didn't see any booby traps or hear of any; our fellows have been pretty cautious about them.

I never saw so much stuff being landed—everything you could imagine, big bulldozers moving in to build landing strips, all kinds of tanks, vehicles and supplies.

Syracuse Man Had Stogie Alight as Usual as He Jumped Over France—His Unit Specially Trained for Job.

By HOWARD COWAN.

A U. S. Parachute Carrier Base, June 8 (A. P.).—Capt. Frank Lillyman, the first Allied soldier to touch France in the assault from the west, didn't know when the invasion would come, but he had been informed days in advance that whenever it came he would draw the No. 1 spot.

The cigar-smoking 29-year-old parachute troop officer from Syracuse, N. Y., was told of his trail-blazing assignment along with Lieut.-Col. J. L. Crouch of Riverside, Cal., and their hand-picked crews. Col. Crouch was the pilot of the big Douglas C-47 which was the lead plane of the parachute troop carriers.

They all trained together with secret equipment which permitted pin-point precision landings so they could direct other parachute troops and gliders to the "D-Z"—dropping zone. The parachute troop carriers went in by the light of the moon before the assault on the French coast from the sea.

[A dispatch from the combat transport U. S. S. Barnett said that Capt. Leonard T. Schroeder, 25, of Baltimore, Md., may have been the first man to reach the French beach from the sea. Capt. Schoeder was the commander of the infantry company in the first assault boat which arrived on the beach within fewer than 60 seconds of H hour Tuesday morning. This boat was commanded by Lieut. (j. g.) Abe Condiotti of Brooklyn, N. Y.]

The Men Who Jumped.

Lean-faced Capt. Lillyman, who weighs 140 pounds, was accompanied by ten soldiers, all of them specialists in scouting, demolition, first aid and gunnery. They made their parachute jumps after him in this order:

Private John McFarlen of Abilene, Tex.; Private Tony Rocca, Pittsfield, Mass.; Private Frederic Wilhelm, Williamsport, Pa.; Private Bluford Williams, Cartersville, Ga.; Corp. Thomas Walton, Camden, N. J.; Corp. Owen Council, Crawfordsville, Fla.; Private Raymond C. Smith, Thornton, Ky.; Private Delbert Jones, West Grove, Pa.; Private John Zamanakes, Lowell, Mass.; Private August Mangoni, Chicago, Ill.

Members of Col. Crouch's crew are: Capt. Vitto Pedone of Mount Vernon, N. Y., co-pilot; Capt. Bill Culp of Denver, Col., navigator, and Corp. Harold E. Conrad, radio operator.

It was Capt. Lillyman's forty-eighth jump, but his first into battle. As on the preceding forty-seven leaps he clenched a lighted cigar between his teeth.

Father a Cavalryman.

"It's just a pet superstition," he told me shortly after he and the crew were isolated in preparation for the big event. "I never got burned but once. I swallowed the end of one once. When I don't get enough stogies from my ration (twelve weekly) I have spares from home. My wife sends 'em."

"Dad didn't like it much when I went in the paratroops—that was back in April of '42 at Fort Benning. He was an old horse cavalryman in the regular Army."

His father, the late Major Frank G. Lillyman, died March, 1943, in an Army hospital at Leavenworth, Kan. He lived at Crocker, Mo.

"Dad was an honest-to-goodness soldier of fortune," Lillyman said. "He served in the Argentine Navy, the Brazilian Cavalry and the United States Navy and Army."

Capt. Lillyman served for a time as a cub reporter o ntwo Binghamton, N. Y., newspapers, the Press and Sun, and he said his work consisted of "writing sports and the high school news and helping out election nights."

"But before I go any further," he suddenly interrupted himself, "I want to tell you not to go blowing me all up for this. It was those boys with me who got the job done.

"That Rocca—we call him 'the Rock'—knee-high to a jug of cider and hard as a keg of nails. He can hold that tommy-gun at his hip weaving like a hula dancer and splinter silhouette targets.

"McFarlen—he's a fighting sonfo-a-gun. He likes to fight for the fun of it. It is all I can do to keep him out of the guard house. Wilhelm and Williams—our scouts—can't lose those guys. Mangoni and Zamankes—the Greeks—what they can't do with dynamite.

"Give those guys credit—not me." The last I saw of the nerveless Lillyman his brow was knit in furrows as if he was worried. Then I noticed what it was—an obstinate wrapper on a slim cigar.

Reporter Jumps With 'Chutists

By Leonard Mosely

[Representing the Combined British Press]

Distributed by the Associated Press

Behind the Atlantic Wall, June 6 (Delayed)—I parachuted into Europe at 1 A. M. today, a half hour after the first paratroopers had landed and six and one-half hours before our sea-borne forces had stormed the beaches.

The group which went in ahead of the unit with which I jumped was under orders to capture vital bridges before they could be blown up by the Nazis. It was our job to bring them aid and infest that whole area for 100 square miles around to prevent the Nazis from counterattacking.

Flame Spouting Below

I knew the men in my plane well enough to know they realized how grim and tense their task was going to be, but except for a pulsing nerve in a face you got little indication of it as our plane, third in the formation, pointed for France.

"Hook up your chutes," was the signal from the pilot. It was 5 minutes to 1 when the light snapped off and a hole in the plane was opened. Under it we could see the coast of France below—and a garish sight it was. For flak from the coast defenses was spouting flame everywhere.

In great globes of red and purple it burst all around our plane as we coasted in and down to the dropping zone. Then we are all madly shuffling down the hole and jumping into space.

As I twisted down I looked for a church I had been told to spy for a landmark. But I came down in an orchard outside a farmhouse and I knew I was hopelessly lost.

Machine Guns Rattled

I crawled forward through trees. Suddenly there was a rip and tear in my jumping frock and I flung myself to the ground. Machine guns rattled and there were the smashing explosions of hand grenades. I decided to try and get away. I began to run at a crouch. Suddenly, there were two more figures coming for me, carrying guns. There was a crash of Sten-gunfire and both men crumpled up not 15 yards from me.

Into the farm field stealthily came five men to challenge me. And I was with our own paratroopers again.

We made our rendezvous at 3 A. M. after two long weary hours of wandering about the Nazi-infested country. I made my way to the bridges. Here the battle had ceased and both the river and canal spans were in our hands and firmly held by paratroop machine gunners.

Tanks Expected

We had taken the Nazis by surprise, but they knew what was happening now and we could expect their tanks at any moment.

Then at 3.20 A. M. every Allied paratrooper behind the Atlantic Wall breathed a sigh of relief as he heard the roar of bombers. Bombers coming in slow. Bombers towing gliders toward the dropping ground. We watched them in the pale moonlight and glare of flak, unhooking and then diving steeply for the earth.

We saw one hit by ack-ack catch fire and fly around for three or four minutes, a great ball of flame. We heard the crunch of breaking wood as gliders bounced on rocks. But it was hard to restrain the impulse to cheer, for out of every glider men were pouring, with jeeps and anti-tank guns and field guns, and we knew that even if Nazi tanks did come we could hold them now.

Pilot Dead, Aide Glides Bomber To French Coast

London, June 8 (AP)—Its pilot dead and all four engines knocked out by flak, a Liberator of the Eighth Air Force was glided back to the French coast today after a bombing mission by the 26-year-old copilot, and finally ditched in the Channel by a wounded command pilot after the rest of the crew had bailed out.

The only fatality was the pilot. The others, either wounded, bruised or stunned, were rescued by one of the 83-foot Coast Guard cutters credited with saving at least 444 Allied fighting men as they darted among the assault craft 1,000 yards off the French shore in the initial invasion wave.

The command pilot was thrown clear as the Liberator landed in the Channel. The copilot was Lieut. Earl Carper, of Chicago. Lieut. Milton Segar, of Brooklyn, N. Y., was the bombardier, and Lieut. Bernard Bail, of Philadelphia, the navigator. Uninjured crew members were Sergts. Harry Secrist, of Newark, Ohio; David Evans, Jr., of Massillon, Ohio, and Wiley Sallis, of Smithville, Miss. The names of the pilot and command pilot were not disclosed.

Colonel Relates How 'Chutists 'Raised Hell'

Says His Men Landed With 'Uncanny Precision' and 'Unbelievable' Light Loss

A U. S. NINTH AIR FORCE TROOP CARRIER BASE, England, June 8 (AP).—Colonel Ralph Bagby, of Evanston, Ill., the first parachute invader to return to England from France, told official interrogators today his group had carried out its mission successfully and "raised hell in general."

Dropped from troop-carrying planes four hours before the landing barges touched the French coast on invasion day, Colonel Bagby and his men moved immediately to their assigned tasks of blowing up bridges, putting enemy gun positions out of action and blocking roads.

"The men assembled in combat teams and moved out to take their objectives, which they did with very little opposition," he said.

Colonel Bagby was exhausted after being without sleep since Monday. He said the U. S. 9th Air Force's glider and parachute troopers, flown in by the 9th's transports, landed in their designated areas with "uncanny precision."

"Cloud formations completely masked our operations from the enemy until we were right over our drop zones," he said. "Directly over the drop areas holes in the clouds gave up an opportunity to land safely and the moon illuminated the entire target area. I looked at my watch while descending and saw it was exactly 3 a. m.

"Casualties among our boys were so light it was almost unbelievable. The whole thing was done with lots less confusion than training exercises."

After capturing their initial objectives "with very little opposition," the parachute and glider-borne units established contact with ground troops which had made landings from the sea several hours later.

Grain Fields Mined By Germans

By Ross Munro

[Canadian Press War Correspondent; Distributed by the Associated Press]

With Canadian Forces in France, June 7 (Delayed)—The Canadian sector of the invasion front is heavily mined and many 10-acre fields with lush green crops are death traps for unwary soldiers.

In some of the inland towns the Germans, before withdrawing, did a thorough job of booby-trapping houses and buildings and it is taking sappers hours of work to clear them up.

During the first night in France there was little action in this sector.

Shivered Until Dawn

It was a cold night and the troops huddled in slit trenches in fields and along roads wrapped up in gas capes or in the blanket they were ableto bring in with them. They shivered until dawn and then moved on again.

As we slogged south to reach a new headquarters camp, we watched several hundred planes throb over the coast and bomb a target far to the south from a great height.

The Canadians are using hundreds of ampibious ducks—trucks which can operate in the water or on land—to take stores and ammunition from big ships offshore right up to the line. Jeeps also are being used more extensively than ever.

Snipers An Early Worry

A few German snipers still held out in coast towns in this region after the assault had swept through the defenses and passed on inland. They were a worry for a while, but now the situation is under control.

Canadian casualties from the first day's fighting have all been evacuated by ship to Canadian general hospitals in England.

"There," he said, "is a bit of France."

A few hours later the film was on its way to headquarters.

But the captain wasn't satisfied. There were a few other messages. Would Aprile see that they got through?

"Please tell them I'm sorry I let them down, but the Germans got my leg," he said.

Wound Cleaned Out

He recommended that the first lieutenant of his outfit be put in command of his company. Then he added:

"Doc, you had better hurry up and get me out of here so I can go back."

Get Messages Through, Wounded Officer Pleads

By Ruth Cowan

At an Advanced United States Army Field Hospital on the Southern English Coast, June 8 (AP)—The young Signal Corps officer, his light-brown hair dirty with sand, looked up from his cot in the preoperative tent and appealed to Capt. Joseph Aprile, of New York.

"Please, doc, I've got some film. It's in my camera. It's important. Please—call headquarters in the European theater of operations. Tell them I did get some pictures before they got me."

"Yes, yes, captain," comforted the medical officer as he felt the man's faint pulse. This patient, one of a number back from the Allied assault on Europe, was to the trained medical eye "in shock."

Foot Blown Off

"These numbers — please call them," insisted the young officer. He gave several telephone numbers clearly and coherently. Aprile was busy trying to save the man's life. His left foot had been blown off and he had a gunshot wound in his left forearm and a bit of high-explosive fragment had gone through his right thigh. So the medical officer called in Adjutant Lieutenant James Enger, Philadelphia, Pa.

Enger placed those telephone calls. Headquarters said it would send a plane to pick up that film.

The Signal Corps captain asked that his camera, picked up with him, be brought to his cot.

Sergt. Maj. John Cook, Lexington, Ky., took it to him. With the hand of his uninjured arm and with Cook holding the camera, he got the precious film. As he did some sand fell out.

Later I saw him on the operating table. His leg had been reamputated to make a clear cut. The wound in his thigh had been cleaned out. Capt. Theodore Barnett, Brooklyn, N. Y., was mending his arm.

Lieut. Dorothy Fost, Hancock, Md., got ready to give the captain another blood transfusion, aided by Sergt. Arthur Craig, Westwood, California.

Nazi Prisoners' Dispositions Differ

London, June 8 (AP)—Displaying every emotion from arrogance to bewilderment, the first large group of German prisoners from the Allied beachheads in northern France were landed last night at an invasion port in England.

A handful of high-ranking Allied officials, several correspondents and the ship's crew witnessed the debarkation.

The prisoners, both officers and men, were marched to waiting trucks and moved to an undisclosed destination under an armed guard. Among the captives were four Poles, one of whom said he had been captured and drafted by the Nazis.

Nazis Print Ally Communique

STOCKHOLM, June 8 (AP).—For the first time in this war the German press has published the text of an enemy communique. Newspapers printed on their front pages the Allied headquarters announcement of the invasion under the heading "Eisenhower's communique."

CHURCHILL WARNS PEOPLE AGAINST OVER-OPTIMISM

LONDON, June 8.—(AP) Prime Minister Churchill cautioned the House of Commons today against "over-optimism" regarding the invasion, warning members to keep in mind that "although great dangers lie behind us, enormous exertions lie before us."

The Prime Minister, an old warhorse who gave up plans to watch the invasion itself only at the insistence of the military, sidestepped an attempt to secure a promise that he would stay away from the battlefront himself, although he advised Commons to be patient regarding the invasion news.

Churchill told Commons not to think "that these things are going to be settled in a rush." He said he had nothing to tell the House about the progress of the invasion because everything that occurred to him had been "fully met in the excellent reports furnished by our able and upright press."

"If this is the last time I speak to the House before the weekend," Churchill said, "I earnestly hope that when the members go to their constituencies they will not only maintain morale so far as that is necessary but will give strong warnings against over-optimism."

Then Churchill declined to reply to a request by Sir Joseph Lamb, conservative, for assurance "that the reason he is not going to make a statement in the near future is not that he is going to make a visit to the coast of France."

CHURCHILL WARNS OF OVER-OPTIMISM

London, June 8 (A. P.).—Prime Minister Churchill warned the House of Commons today to guard against over optimism in the battle of Europe and against "the idea that these things are going to be settled in a rush."

30.24 — 16047

30.24 — 16047

"Although great dangers lie behind," he declared, "enormous exertions lie before us."

The stream of news from invasion reporters temporarily deprived the Premier, once a journalist himself, of one of the roles he likes best, that of being able to give a first hand account of major developments, and he said he did not plan to make any statement on the invasion battles during the day unless something exceptional turns up.

The Prime Minister added that all points which occurred to him in connection with the campaign had been fully covered "in the excellent reports by our able and upright press.'

"If this is the last time I speak to the House before the week end," he said, "I earnestly hope that when the members go to their constituencies they will not only maintain morale so far as that is necessary but will also give strong warnings against over optimism."

Mr. Churchill was asked by Sir Joseph Lamb, Conservative, for an assurance "that the reason he is not going to make a statement in the near future is not that he is going to make a visit to the coast of France." There was no reply.

SIMPSON HAILS FRENCH LANDING AS GREAT WORK

WASHINGTON, June 8—(AP) The Allies' seizure of a foothold in France was hailed as a "great accomplishment" by Secretary of War Stimson today, but he tempered his assessment of gratifying progress with a warning that "only the first hurdle has been taken."

Germany's real strength in France is in the mobile armies concentrated inland, Stimson said, and until the Nazi High command reaches a decision on the power and main direction of the Allied attack, this defense force will not be committed.

Stimson reported to a news conference that some of the various beachheads on the coast of Normandy have been widened and united, and the coastal forces and the airborne units which attacked well inland have made contact in some places. But, he said, it "would be bad indeed if we permitted super optimism to run away with us."

"German troops are established in northern France in great numbers," he said.

"Their air force has certainly not yet been driven from the skies. Their military command has plans of action which are undoubtedly beginning to move. We must look for the full fury of savage counter-attacks in force at an early moment."

Nevertheless, his report contained these statements of solid accomplishment:

1. The coastal defenses are pierced; troops and equipment are pouring ashore continually.
2. The Allies dominate the sea and the air in the battle zone.
3. The greatest airborn operation ever undertaken, with 1,000 planes participating, put ground troops on Norman soil well behind the coastal zone to cut communications, destroy supply dumps and seize centers from which to aid the beachhead forces.

COUNTERBLOWS BY FULL FORCES OF NAZIS LIKELY

Stimson Predicts Germany's Massed Attacks Will Come Soon Now.

SOME BEACHHEADS UNITED

Secretary Says Tactical Surprise Was Achieved by Allies in First Operation.

Washington, June 8 (A. P.).—The full weight of German counter-attack in Normandy is to come, Secretary of War Stimson said today, but invading Allied troops have established beachheads at various points between the mouth of the Seine and the Cotentin peninsula, and some of these beachheads have been united. Local counter-attacks have developed, particularly in the vicinity of Caen, the Secretary told a news conference, but the Nazi High Command undoubtedly is just beginning to move its mobile reserves, and "we must look for the full fury of savage counter-attacks in force at an early moment."

"It would be folly," said Secretary Stimson, "to believe that the period of counter-attacks will be short. Conditions will be changing from day to day, and it will be to our own good to avoid excesses of optimism or pessimism."

The Secretary asserted that apparently a tactical surprise had been achieved by the landings, despite the obvious preparations being made by the Allies and the continuing speculation on the date and place of the invasion. The enemy's opposition with surface craft was small, he said, and the losses at sea were unexpectedly low. The airborne operation developed into the greatest of its kind ever conceived, the Secretary added.

Domination of Sea and Air.

These airborne forces, he explained, have supported the beachhead troops by cutting German communication and supply and some fought their way through to the beachheads. Except to mention the local counter-attack in the vicinity of Caen and the capture of Bayeux, Secretary Stimson gave no further indication of the specific locations of the landings.

"We have a foothold in France," he said. "We have pierced the coastal defenses and landed troops successfully upon the German-controlled territory on the Continent. We are continuing to land troops, equipment and supplies. We have shown our domination of the sea and of the air in the battle zone.

"All this is a great accomplishment. We have gone in against the enemy on the soil which he had stolen. We have come to grips at the beginning of the final test. At the end, there can be but one decision, but before discussing this matter any further, it should be emphasized that only the first hurdle has been taken, it would be bad indeed if we permitted super-optimism to run away with us.

"There will be hard days ahead. Let us not make them worse because of a previous, cheerful distortion of the facts."

Secretary Stimson, noting the absence of important enemy air opposition in the invasion area, attributed it in large part to the year-long offensive carried out by British and American air forces, which he said really was the beginning of the invasion.

Reich's Diplomatic Front Seen Cracking

Washington, June 8 (AP)—Allied invasion forces are cracking the diplomatic as well as the military defenses of Hitler Europe.

Officials said today that major changes in the positions of neutral nations may be expected as soon as several skeptical bystanders are convinced the Allies are going to win the war.

Neutrals Shaken

The fact that the battle on the beaches was won Tuesday without terrific losses is understood to have shaken severely the position of those neutral leaders who have not yet been convinced of the certainty of Allied victory.

Notable among these are reported to be Generalissimo Francisco Franco of Spain and ranking military men in Finland. Franco, despite the record of restrained conduct which won him Prime Minister Churchill's "kindly words," has doubted all along that Germany could be forced to unconditional surrender.

Finland's refusal to make peace with Russia and England is compounded of many elements, including Finland's traditional fear of Russia, but one important factor is said to have been the belief in Helsinki that a complete Allied triumph is no means assured.

Swedes Fear Reprisals

Sweden's position is somewhat different. The Stockholm Government has not worried so much over the certainty of Allied victory as over the possibility of Nazi reprisals if all ball-bearing shipments and eventually other exports to Germany were shut off.

With the grand assault on embattled Germany, however, Allied representatives can argue that the possibility of a German attack on Sweden is negligible, and can force the argument to a decision.

Dutch Underground 'Ready'

HOLLAND, Mich., June 8 (AP).—Anxious for the fray to get going in his own country, Sergeant E. C. Zondervan, of the Netherlands marine corps, said here today that well organized members of the Dutch underground "are all ready to go—they wait just the right hint from the Allies."

Churchill Expects No Repetition, Anyway

London, June 8 (AP)—A statement in the House of Commons today that the British shipbuilding industry suffered after the last war because German merchant vessels were acquired by English shippers for less than building costs elicited a quick quip from Prime Minister Churchill.

"I am sure the mistakes of that time will not be repeated," he declared. "We shall probably make another set of mistakes."

TITO REPORTS LOSS OF TOWN TO NAZIS

London, June 8 (A. P.).—Marshal Tito announced today that the Germans had captured Ribnik-Gornji, thirty miles southwest of Banja Luka, but said his Yugoslav Partisans had hurled the enemy back near Mliniste in the same general sector.

His broadcast communique said fierce battles still were raging in western Bosnia. The Partisans were declared still on the offensive in eastern Bosnia.

In northern Montenegro a German column has been forced to retreat into Plevlje, seventy miles east of Mostar, the war bulletin said.

The broadcast added that Partisans had repulsed a German attack in the vicinity of Gracac, near the Adriatic coast, and "beat off 700 Germans" in a battle at Cerknica, near the Italian frontier.

Washington, June 8 (AP)—In a move which would curtail publicity privileges of Yugoslav Gen. Draja Mihailovic in this country, the Justice Department has asked that the Yugoslav public-relations agent in New York be removed from the United Nations preferred list.

Attorney General Biddle recommended the action in a letter to Secretary Hull, it was learned today. The Alien Registration Act requires State Department approval before agents are transferred to or from the list.

The agent involved is Miloye N. Sokitch, registered with the Justice Department as the official publicity agent for the Yugoslav Government. He distributes Mihailovic bulletins and communiques in this country.

Accorded Special Privileges

The United Nations preferred list is a group of registered agents of Allied governments who have certain privileges not accorded other agents, including the right to have their registration kept confidential.

Sokitch already has been ordered to remove from his bulletins reference to the United Nations Information Office, to which he is the Yugoslav delegate.

Basis Of Complaints

One official explained that this move was taken because other United Nations representatives have complained that the reference might carry the impression that they approved the Mihailovic bulletins distributed by Sokitch. These bulletins frequently attack the Yugoslav Partisans under Marshal Tito, who receives aid from Britain and the United States.

The Justice Department refused to explain the reasons behind Biddle's request, but diplomats took it as another indication of the swing away from Mihailovic toward Tito.

ASKS FOR GAG ON MIHAILOVIC

Biddle Would Drop Yugoslav Agent From Preferred List

London, June 8 (AP)—Marshal Tito's Partisans have inflicted "heavy losses" on German SS divisions in violent fighting in western Bosnia, the Free Yugoslav communique broadcast today said.

DELAY DECISION ON FRENCH POLITICS

London, June 8 (A. P.).—Although the French and Allied high commands have reached agreement on strictly military matters in connection with the liberation of France, it was learned today that the question of political diplomatic relations is still hanging.

It was understood that the military accord reached in conversations between Gen. Dwight D. Eisenhower and Gen. Charles de Gaulle covered only such subjects as the use of French troops and the co-ordination of French underground resistance with the Allied Expeditionary Force.

De Gaulle likely will press shortly before high civilian authorities for clarification of the status of the French National Committee in the administration of civil affairs in the liberated areas.

There will also be questions in the twilight zone partly military and partly civilian in nature. De Gaulle has already taken up some of these questions with Prime Minister Churchill.

An agreement between Britain and Belgium's exiled government on the administration of liberated territory in Belgium is similar to those concluded recently with the Netherlands and Norway, Prime Minister Churchill reported to Commons today.

RED TANK FORCES OPEN OFFENSIVE

Nazis Say Russians Have Advanced Several Miles in Romania.

LONDON, June 8 (AP) A top ranking German radio commentator declared today that powerful Russian armored forces had launched an offensive on a wide front north of Iasi in Romania and had advanced several miles in the center and on the left flank.

There was no immediate Russian confirmation of the push, and the Nazi commentator, Ernst Von Hammer, did not say flatly that it was the beginning of the expected Soviet thrust through the Galati gap toward the Ploesti oil fields and the wealth of the Danube valley, generally expected to be timed with the Allied invasion of Hitler's Europe from the west.

Tonight's broadcast Soviet communique, containing only three sentences, said that "during the day there were no essential changes at the front." It was the first bulletin since May 29 which contained no mention of a battle in the Iasi vicinity.

The terse Moscow communique said 15 Nazi tanks had been knocked out and 22 enemy planes destroyed Wednesday.

Earlier Russian dispatches had said that "soon Russian infantry will march across German land."

If the attack actually was more than a relatively local operation among a series of fierce grapples north of Iasi in the past two weeks, it was likely to be followed immediately by a lunge of Soviet armies toward Warsaw in Poland.

Moscow announced yesterday that 10,000 Germans had been killed in eight days of futile attacks north of Iasi, while the Nazis reported at least 10 Soviet rifle divisions had been "wiped out or decisively mauled" in the same fighting.

In today's broadcast Von Hammer said German and Romanian troops were throwing counterattacks against the Russian advance and had regained some ground. He said no fighting of importance had been reported from other sectors of the eastern front.

The German high command said on Wednesday that mopping up operations were being concluded in the Iasi area, and in its communique today said only that "renewed Soviet counterattacks" were foiled.

The Iasi region has been most frequently cited by the Germans as the logical jumping-off point for the expected Soviet Summer offensive, and even Moscow commentators have spoken of the military and political advances of striking into the Balkans before dealing the death blow to Germany itself.

MOSCOW REMAINS SILENT

Bucharest Communique Agrees Nazi Assault Has Petered Out, However.

London, June 8 (A. P.).—DNB, the German official news agency, declared in a dispatch broadcast on the Berlin radio today that the Russians had launched an offensive on a broad front in the sector north of Iasi, in Romania.

A broadcast Romanian communique said that heavy fighting is in progress.

A top-ranking German radio commentator declared that powerful Russian armored forces opened the offensive and advanced several miles at the center and on the left flank.

There was no confirmation immediately from Moscow, but a new offensive on the Russian front had been expected to put new pressure on the Germans' eastern front while the American and British forces are attacking in France and Italy.

JUN 9 1944

Last night's Moscow communique said that German attacks north of Iasi have diminished considerably, indicating that the Germans may have been stopped or otherwise forced to halt the push in that sector which they had announced earlier.

Red troops counter-attacking in the Moldavian province succeeded in capturing two heights from the Nazis, a broadcast communique said.

From May 30 to June 6 the Germans lost more than 10,000 dead in the savage fighting near Iasi, and suffered heavily through destruction of equipment, Moscow asserted. A Berlin broadcast agreed the battle had ended, but asserted at least ten Soviet rifle divisions had been wiped out or decisively mauled.

The Russian communique said minor actions had been fought northwest of Tiraspol on the lower Dnestr and near Vitebsk in White Russia.

OPEN SPANISH BORDER

JUN 9 1944

Irun, Spain, June 8 (A. P.).—The Germans reopened the Hendaye frontier today for traffic from Bayonne to the border, but announced that henchforth it would be closed to usual border-zone trade between France and Spain.

Previously truck farmers and others living on the Spanish side of the frontier were allowed to cross into Hendaye and other border towns to sell produce. New orders specifically banned this.

The orders were relaxed, the Germans said, to permit certain diplomats and others with special passes to cross the border along with some freight.

AMERICANS GAIN 26 MILES, SEIZE ITALIAN SEAPORT

KENNEDY

Armored Units Take Civitavecchia, 38 Miles Northwest of Rome.

CAPTURE JUNCTION

JUN 9 1944

Troops Pursuing Battered Remnants of German 14th Army.

ROME, June 8 — (AP) In lightning drives of as much as 26 miles in 24 hours, the Allied Fifth army today captured Civita Castellana, 32 miles north of Rome, after other swift armored units had pounded through Civitavecchia, important seaport 38 miles northwest of the Italian capital.

Only the slightest resistance was being encountered by Lt. Gen. Mark W. Clark's troops as they pressed after the reeling German 14th army, which an Allied spokesman declared had been reduced to "battered remnants". There yet was no indication where the disorganized enemy would attempt to halt the Allied steamroller.

Units Enter City

Civita Castellana is the junction of three main highways and two electric railways. Light reconnaissance units entered the town early in the evening. Civitavecchia is a city of 36,000 population, with docks that will be of value to the pursuing Allied forces.

A third Fifth army column drove into Bracciano, ancient iron smelting center 19 miles northwest of Rome near Lake Bracciano, and also threw an arm around the eastern side of the lake.

(Secretary of War Stimson reported that American forces suffered 2,379 casualties in the fierce three-day battle preceding the capture of Rome. Total U. S. casualties from the landing at Salerno last September to May 30 were placed at 57,529.)

Captured in the swift thrust northward was the former headquarters of the Nazi commander, Field Marshal Albert Kesselring. The "elaborate, tunnelled underground stronghold" was situated about three miles southeast of Civita Castellana.

An Allied spokesman declared that "the battered remnants of the German 14th army are in a considerable state of disorganization" and disclosed that upwards of 40 enemy units were represented among prisoners captured since Rome fell.

Both the enemy 10th and 14th armies now have been so slashed up that there is no possibility of either group sending reinforcements to any other fighting front in Europe. That was one of the principal aims of the Italian offensive.

Nazis Destroy Bridges

General Clark's speedy drives west and north of Rome are being accomplished despite large-scale Nazi demolitions. Every bridge over the Tiber for a distance of 37 miles north of Rome has been destroyed, and the main highway north to Civita Castellana is struck with deep craters.

Lt. Gen. Sir Oliver Leese's Eighth army, punching northward east of the Tiber, captured the important town of Monterotondo, 12 miles northeast of Rome, and the nearby villages of Sant' Angelo, Romano, Guidonia and Mentana.

Leese's forces—meeting considerably stiffer opposition than the Fifth army—also completed seizure of the town of Subiaco on one of the enemy's main escape highways north of Frosinone, as well as the adjacent towns of Venne and Vallepietra.

(The German high command, while telling of "heavy fighting" west and north of Rome, said that to the northeast and east of the capital "the enemy is following our detaching moves hesitatingly only.")

Gain Several Miles

Near the Adriatic flank Eighth Army units gained several miles and reached the outskirts of Barrea, Pescocostanzo and Rivisondoli, all in the direction of Sulmona, birthplace of Ovid.

Fighter-bombers continued to exact their deadly toll of the fleeing enemy, destroying or damaging at least 384 more vehicles yesterday. Some 1,800 sorties were flown during the day, including an attack by 250 to 500 heavy bombers on the port of Livorno, shipyards west of Genoa and the Savona rail yards. Three Allied planes were lost from all operations.

Main Port For Rome, Key Rail, Road Hub Taken By Allies

Rome, June 8 (AP)—Allied armored forces driving steadily against fleeing enemy troops west of the Tiber today captured Civita Castellana, strategic highway and rail junction 32 miles north of Rome, after other Fifth Army units had seized Civitavecchia, Rome's principal seaport 38 miles northwest of the Eternal City.

Civita Casellana is a junction of three highways, and also of electric railways to Rome and Viterbo.

Other Fifth Army units, speeding in a more northly direction, captured the town of Bracciano, 20 miles north of Rome, on the west shore of the large lake of the same name. Still another column was last reported passing the lake on the east side, 15 miles north of Rome.

Still Disorganized

The Germans still appeared to be withdrawing in disorder, without any indication as to when they might turn and attempt a determined stand.

An official spokesman declared "the battered remnants of the German 14th Army are in a considerable state of disorganization. Upward of 40 Wehrmacht formations are represented in the collection of prisoners taken in the exodus from Rome and beyond. Apparently even battalions are attaching themselves to whatever higher echelon is available."

Allied forces captured Field Marshal Albert Kesselring's former headquarters, about three miles southeast of Civita Castellana.

Under Strong Guard

The headquarters, described as an "elaborate, tunneled underground stronghold," was put under a strong guard.

The Eighth Army, meanwhile, punched into the Tiber Valley above Rome and forged northward along the east banks of the river.

Gen. Sir Oliver Leese's men captured the important town of Monterotondo, 12 miles northeast of Rome and the same distance northwest of Tivoli, and the nearby towns of Sant' Angelo, Romano, Guidonia and Mentana. Guidonia

Subiaco Captured

Farther to the east, the Eighth Army captured Subiaco, about eight miles south of the main highway running across the Italian peninsula from Rome to the Adriatic, and stabbed up on a lateral road which had been one of the main German lines of retreat.

Around Subiaco, the site of an ancient Benedictine monastery, enemy tanks and infantry put up a stiff scrap and the line of advance for armored units was held to the road. The villages of Venne and Vallepietra were occupied in this area.

Transport Shelled

Enemy transport withdrawing toward Avezanno in the Apennines from Balsorano was shelled heavily, and 11 German Mark 5 Panther tanks were found. Some of these had broken down.

Near the Adriatic flank, Eighth Army troops followed up the withdrawing Germans, gaining two to three miles to reach the outskirts of the towns of Barrea, Pescocostanzo and Rivisondoli in the direction of Sulmona, birthplace of Ovid.

The capture of Civitavecchia, whose population is approximately 36,000, gives the Allies a valuable port, which has been enlarged greatly in recent years.

Rail Lines Bombed

Between 250 and 500 Fortresses and Liberators yesterday pounded rail lines on the French Riviera, the port of Livorno, the Voltri shipyards west of Genoa, and the Savona rail yards.

Fighter-bombers continued to hammer the retreating enemy columns, destroying or damaging at least 384 vehicles. The advance to Civitavecchia brought the advance guard of the Fifth Army to within 115 miles of Florence and 120 miles of Livorno.

The Mediterranean Air Force flew over 1,800 sorties yesterday. Last night objectives were attacked near Orvieto, 60 miles northwest of Rome. Three aircraft were listed as missing.

1,800 Sorties Are Flown

ROME, June 8 (AP).—Allied fighter-bombers destroyed or damaged at least 384 more enemy vehicles yesterday. Some 1,800 sorties were flown during the day, including an attack by 250 to 500 heavy bombers on the port of Livorno (Leghorn) shipyards, west of Genoa, and the Savona railyards. Three Allied planes were lost from all operations.

GEN. CLARK TALKS WITH POPE FOR TEN MINUTES IN PRIVATE

JUN 9 1944

At First Press Conference Pius Urges Reporters to Back a Just Peace.

Rome, June 8 (A. P.).—Pope Pius XII and Lieut.-Gen. Mark W. Clark, commander of the Fifth Army, talked for ten minutes today in the Pope's private office in the Vatican library.

Afterward the Pope greeted Major-Gen. Alfred H. Gruenther, chief of staff for the Fifth Army; Major-Gen. H. H. Johnson, Rome area commander; Brig.-Gen. Edgar E. Hume, chief of the American Military Government, and

Col. Patrick Ryan, Fifth Army chaplain.

After the audience Gen. Clark visited St. Peter's Church with Mgr. Walter Carroll of Pittsburgh, Pa., American representative in the office of the papal secretary. Previously the Pope had urged war correspondents to let the ultimate general purpose of their writing be for peace.

In his first press conference since becoming Pope, held in the Throne Room of the Vatican, the Pontiff said yesterday:

"This war should be only a means to a peace. Write for a peace that can meet the approval of all well meaning peoples—that can assure one and all those conditions necessary so that they may live in a manner befitting the dignity of a human being."

Welcomes Correspondents.

The Pope, thin and pale but appearing surprisingly strong, told the correspondents "you are most welcome. You have a mission of tremendous importance.

"If it would be well to have a message for you, it would be those words spoken back in 1940 on the eve of Christmas:

"If a man is sincerely interested in securing spiritual and moral conditions for future collaboration between nations, he will direct his force toward duty, truth, justice and good will, and even more, toward the supernatural idea of brotherly love that Christ gave to the world."

He ended the conference with a "good-by and bless you all."

ITALIAN LEADERS CONFER ON NEW GOVERNMENT

ROME, June 8.—(AP) Premier Marshal Pietro Badoglio and several men who were members of his recently resigned cabinet conferred with the Rome Committee of Liberation today on formation of a new government which is to include political leaders in Rome and other newly liberated Italian territory.

Crown Prince Umberto also arrived in Rome in his capacity as the King's lieutenant general, exercising all royal powers.

Marshal Badoglio dissolved his government Tuesday and was charged by Prince Umberto with forming a new government. The crown prince received the "royal prerogatives" of King Vittorio Emanuele III Monday when the latter stepped aside as Italian sovereign.

His Caisson a Go-Cart, But It's Rolling Along

WITH THE 5TH ARMY, Italy, June 8 (AP).—"A vehicle is a vehicle," said Private First Class Felix Purzyck, of Camden, N. J., as he pushed his baby buggy loaded with a mortar and ammunition into Fondi, Italy.

The Germans had been in rapid retreat for several days, and Private Purzyck was getting tired lugging heavy stuff. So when he found in a little hillside town a four-wheeled carriage built for bambinos, he loaded it up and advanced with his company, keeping in route formation.

College Pals Meet In Italy

With the Fifth Army, Italy (AP—Delayed)—When Major James A. Stach, of Baltimore, heard Pfc. Earl Lippy, of Manchester, Md., singing in a show in Italy, he remembered a night a few years ago at Western Maryland College.

Major Stach, of a Fifth Army infantry division, had been a friend of Lippy's while at Western Maryland.

"We used to sing together in the washroom," Stach said. "One night Lippy told me he had been offered a scholarship to the Peabody Conservatory of Music. He didn't know if he should take it or not. I advised him to accept—and he did."

Major Stach's wife lives at 33 South Linwood avenue, Baltimore.

Liberators From India Bomb Bangkok Heavily

Southeast Asia Headquarters, Ceylon, June 8 (AP)—Bangkok, capital of Thailand, received its "heaviest blow of the war" three days ago in an attack by strong formations of heavy bombers which apparently caught the defenses by surprise, Allied headquarters announced today.

Converging on the target from a great height and from all angles, the Liberators hurled a record tonnage of demolition and incendiary bombs on the important Japanese-held port, and black smoke rose to great heights through the clouds as the bombers, despite bad weather, pressed home widespread attacks on railway shops and marshaling yards," the bulletin said. Anti-aircraft fire was ineffective and only a few planes rose to intercept, the report added, making no mention of Allied loss.

In the India fighting, the communique said "reports indicate the 31st Japanese Division in the Kohima sector is short of ammunition, food and medical supplies.'

Allied Bombers Deal Bangkok Heavy Blow

Southeast Asia Command Headquarters, Kandy, Ceylon, June 8 (AP)—Strong forces of heavy bombers dealt Bangkok, Thailand capital, "its heaviest blow of the war" three days ago, Allied Headquarters announced today.

"Black smoke rose to great heights through the clouds as the bombers, despite bad weather, pressed home widespread attacks on railway shops and marshaling yards," the communique said.

Japs Caught Napping

"The city's defenses apparently were caught by surprise as the formations converging on the target at a great height from all angles dropped a record tonnage of demolition and incendiary bombs on this important Japanese port."

In the ground fighting, the communique said, reports indicated the Japanese 31st Division in the Kohima sector was running short of ammunition, food and medical supplies as a result of poor communications.

Tank And Sniper Attacks

Japanese tank and sniper attacks were reported in the sector southwest of the Imphal plain, however.

The situation at Myitkyina in North Burma was not mentioned in today's war bulletin.

CHINESE ENTER LUNGLING BASE

Yunnan Drive About 100 Miles From Stilwell's Front

Chungking, June 8 (AP)—Chinese troops have occupied part of the Burma road stronghold of Lungling, second most important Japanese base in Yunnan province, and have made advances against the principal enemy base of Tengchung, the Chinese command announced tonight.

Lungling, about 130 miles northeast of Lashio on the Burma road, reopening of which is the common goal of the Chinese Salween river offensive and the Allied campaign in North Burma, is about 100 airline miles east of the present North Burma battle area.

Have Cut Tengchung Road

The Chinese also have cut the road linking Lungling and Tengchung, main enemy base and hub of his communications, 40 miles to the northwest, the communique announced.

Continuing their drive west of the Salween river, the Chinese recaptured important points in the area of Lungling, and pressed their attacks on Chenanchieh, 23 miles northeast of the base, and Siangta, nine and one half miles south of it. Both towns were surrounded, the bulletin said.

Cutting of the road link between Tengchung and Lungling was accomplished, the communique reported, by the capture of Tenglungchiao, about six miles northwest of Lungling.

Hunan Fight On 20-Mile Front

On the Hunan province front, heavy fighting raged along a 20-mile front in the area north of the Laotao river and northeast of Changsha. The enemy was reported last night to have driven within nine and one half miles of the city.

Casualties were heavy on both sides in the sector, but 30 miles north of Changsha, the enemy made little progress in an attack on Siangyin, on the western side of the railway, the bulletin said.

Another enemy column advancing southwest from Pingkiang reached a point about 12 miles east of Liuyang, which is about 30 miles due east of Changsha, while still another unit was 23 miles north of Liuyang yesterday. In those areas "the enemy's attacks have shown signs of weakening," the communique said.

Break Out Of Loyang

To the west, enemy attacks on Yiyang were thrown back, the report said. The town is about 15 miles below Tungting Lake.

In Honan province, 400 miles to the north of the Hunan battle area, the Chinese claimed that three badly battered defender divisions had broken out of fallen Loyang May 25 and now had joined Chinese forces east of Lushih and 18 miles from the Shensi province border.

Forty-three miles east of the Shensi city of Tungkwan, the high command said, the Japanese attacked southwestward from Taying on the Lunghai railway, in what was looked upon as an attempt to link with enemy forces farther south and encircle large bodies of Chinese. The high command said the attack was repulsed.

Chinese Occupy Portion Of Lungling

Chungking, June 8 (AP)—Chinese troops have occupied part of the Burma road town of Lungling, second most important Japanese base in the southwestern province of Yunnan, west of the Salween river, the Chinese high command announced tonight.

Chinese northeast of Tengchung, north of the Burma road and the main Japanese base in Yunnan, also took the offensive and made limited advances against that communications hub, the communique said.

"Our troops in Lungling hold the west gate of the town and are continuing attacks to extend their positions," the announcement stated. "Chinese headquarters reports the enemy suffered more than 3,000 casualties since the original crossing of the Salween."

Heavy fighting for Changsha with both sides suffering considerable casualties was reported earlier, indicating that the Japanese were driving a spearhead still closer to that Hunan province city.

Last night the Japanese were reported to have advanced from the north to a point 9½ miles from the city.

Japs Repulsed In Honan

In Honan province, the war bulletin said today, Japanese yesterday attacked and were repulsed southwestward from Taying, a railway town 43 miles east of Tungkwan, presumably in an attempt to join other Japanese forces farther south and encircle Chinese troops.

Three badly battered Chinese divisions were reported to have broken out of Loyang on May 25 and joined Chinese forces east of Lushih, 18 miles from the Shensi border and 55 miles southeast of Tungkwan. The war bulletin said the divisions had suffered heavy losses and their supplies were exhausted in a 21-day battle defending the city.

YANKS BOMB JAP CRUISER

Score Hits On Bow Of Craft Off North New Guinea

Advanced Headquarters, New Guinea, Friday, June 9 (AP)—In a sharp sea-air duel off northwestern New Guinea, an American Liberator bomber damaged a Japanese cruiser, sending two 500-pound bombs crashing off her bow, headquarters announced today.

Patrolling bombers attacked the warship Tuesday in Warparin Bay, the southern part of Waigo Island, off the northern New Guinea coast. The Liberators then repulsed 12 enemy fighters, probably destroying one.

Clean Up Enemy Pocekts

Ground troops on Biak island, in the Schouten group, concentrated on cleaning up enemy pockets in caves and cliffs east of American-held Mokmer airdrome under the triple barrage of artillery, tanks and destroyers. The Japanese resistance groups were left when American forces encircled them to take the airfield from the north.

These American troops were approximately two miles from Boroke airstrip, second main objective on Biak.

Planes On Widespread Raids

Didespread American raids included attacks on Faleu and Tonelik islands in the Truk group, Tuesday night, on the Wewak coast of British New Guinea, and Noemfoor Island in Geelvink Bay.

The attack on the cruiser marked another strike at Japanese warships in the recently upsurged Southwest Pacific air war. A few days ago, headquarters reported the sinking of a destroyer, first destruction of a Nipponese war vessel since March 21.

Mokmer Airfield Now Yanks' Assault Base

By Robert Eunson

New Guinea Headquarters, June 8 (AP)—Mokmer Airfield, wrested from the Japanese on Biak Island, was in American hands today, a prized base from which to launch air assaults against the Philippines.

The coastal coral strip, Allied goal since the May 27 invasion of the island off northern Dutch New G inea, fell into American hands yesterday at 11 A. M.

Jap Positions Stormed

A Yank column, battling its way westward down inland ridges from the invasion village of Bosnek, stormed Japanese positions from behind and took the field.

Then the force continued west toward Biak's two other landing strips, Borokoe, an inland drome two miles away and Sorido, a coastal field three and a half miles distant.

Points Within Reach

From Mokmer and other air fields which readily may be constructed Fifth Air Force fighters could control all western Dutch New Guinea and strike at Palau, 595 miles away, the Dutch East Indies and the Philippines, 880 miles distant.

On June 2 ground forces established themselves at the mouth of the Tekissi river, 18 miles southeast of Cape Torokina, the original beachhead. Today Gen. Douglas MacArthur's communique reported that the Tekissi river force had been expanded south along the coast to occupy Mawaraka village, commanding the Tekissi river mouth.

Another American column striking along the coast had been halted five miles east of Mokmer. Southwest Pacific headquarters announced that this Jap block was widely encircled by the inland column, which struck from the rear to take Mokmer.

"Surprise was thereby attained and the enemy's forces were routed with light losses to ourselves," the communique declared. "Our naval and air forces operated in full and close cooperation."

On Bougainville Island in the Solomons, the Empress Augusta Bay beachhead was expanded for the third time within a week.

Eleven Believed Killed By Collision Of Planes

Honolulu, June 9 (AP)—The death toll as the result of an airplane collision over the city today, first announced as 17, tentatively was placed at 11 after further investigation, with two other persons reported missing.

The two army medium bombers which collided normally carry crews of five men each. Police assumed that all ten men had been killed.

Army authorities said later that only two men had been assigned to fly aboard each plane. Unless hitchhikers were aboard, they said, the two planes contained no more than four men.

Police Chief W. A. Gabrielson said all 10 occupants of the bombers were killed. In addition to the seven civilian fatalities, several persons were injured when the burning and exploding planes struck some houses.

Gabrielson said at least four dwellings were destroyed. First reports that one of the bombers landed safely were erroneous.

217,131 Casualties Exclusive Of Invasion

JUN 9 1944

Washington, June 8 (AP)—The war, with no accounting yet of losses in the European coast landings, has cost the United States 217,131 casualties.

War and navy department reports today gave the army casualties as 171,358, and the navy's as 45,773. This is an increase of 10,245 in the last two weeks. The total includes 48,754 dead and 81,032 wounded.

On the basis of casualty reports in the past, it is not expected that losses in the battle of invasion will begin to be reflected in total reports for perhaps a fortnight. Up to now, casualty reports have usually covered periods ending from a week to two or three weeks before issuance of the total figures.

2,379 In 3 Days In Italy

Secretary of War Stimson emphasized in a news conference today the cost of major engagements.

American forces lost 2,379 casualties in three days of fighting—May 27 to 30, inclusive—in Italy, Stimson said. This was at a time when a break-through of the Nazi line south of Rome was being executed.

The campaign in Italy, from the landings on the mainland last September to May 30, has resulted in 57,529 casualties, including 9,964 killed and 38,554 wounded.

Army and Navy Name Committee on Merger

JUN 9 1944

Will Consider a Separate Department for Air

WASHINGTON, June 8 (AP).—Instructions from the high command for an Army-Navy committee to study proposals for merging the Army and the Navy were made public today by the House Committee on Post-War Military Policy.

The instructions, which also call for consideration of a suggestion for a separate department of air, were contained in a report by Chairman Clifton A. Woodrum, Democrat, of Virginia, on committee hearings.

The joint chiefs of staff told Chairman Woodrum they have set up a committee of two Navy and two Army officers, as a result of "widely divergent views" among the military on the subject of consolidation and because of demands in Congress for reorganizing the military establishment.

The Army-Navy group was directed specifically to study "the relative advantages, disadvantages and practicability of the following basic systems of organization: two departments—War and Navy; three departments—War, Navy, Air; one Department of War (or of Defense)."

Pope Sends Message To Bishops In U. S.

JUN 9 1944

Washington, June 8 (AP)—Pope Pius, in a message to Catholic bishops in the United States, has expressed gratitude to American Catholics for donations to aid war victims.

Dispatched the day Allied troops entered Rome, the message said the donations had helped greatly "to assuage in part the widespread misery and sufferings here."

The Pope also thanked the bishops for their recent message expressing confidence that the Allies would find a way to save Rome from war damage.

The message was made public by the National Catholic Welfare Conference.

Roosevelt Has Ten Days To Act on Courts Martial

JUN 9 1944

Legislation Extends Kimmel and Short Case to Dec. 7

WASHINGTON, June 8 (AP).—Attorney General Francis Biddle has advised President Roosevelt that he has ten days in which to act on legislation extending to Dec. 7, 1944, the time in which Pearl Harbor courts-martial may be held, despite the fact a previous extension expired at midnight.

Stephen Early, Presidential secretary, said today that in view of the Attorney General's ruling, no action has been taken on the legislation, which was hustled through Congress and hurried to the White House late yesterday.

Mr. Early recalled that the last Congressional bill extending the time for the trials of Rear Admiral Husband E. Kimmel and Major General Walter C. Short, Pearl Harbor commanders when the Japanese struck, did not reach the White House until Dec. 9, two days after a previous deadline. The President was not in Washington then and did not sign the legislation until Dec. 20.

While Kimmel and Short have waived the statute of limitations as to trial, an indefinite number of others could be affected. The bill directs that in the next six months the Secretaries of War and Navy make investigations and take such action as seems justified.

European Combat Ace Is Feted In Capital, Calls On President

JUN 9 1944

Washington, June 8 (AP)—From President Roosevelt to the Stage Door Canteen, Major Robert Johnson, combat ace of the European theater, took in the nation's Capital today, but he had time to put in a good word with the President for a fellow-Oklahoman and fighter pilot, Capt. Pervis Youree, who faces discharge from the air forces.

Youree was court-martialed for flying his plane in formation with a commercial airliner near Ardmore, Okla.

When Major Johnson was introduced to the President he mentioned to the Chief Executive, to whom Youree's case has been referred, that he and Youree attended Cameron College, in Oklahoma, together, and that Youree, decorated in combat over Europe, "has a fine record and is a good man."

Credited With 27 Planes

The President smiled and said he was glad to have that information.

Aside from that one serious interlude, the 24-year-old Lawton (Okla.) major, who is officially credited with 27 Nazi planes, toured the town as few celebrities or heroes have.

He was guest of honor at an Oklahoma delegation luncheon, and described his return from a mission over Germany last June 26 when his ship was so badly shot up that he couldn't bail out and he miraculously flew it back to England.

Senator Elmer Thomas (D., Okla.) introduced the major in the Senate galleries, and he stood while Senators accorded him a rising round of applause. Mrs. Johnson also was introduced.

After admiring statues of Will Rogers and Sequoyah in the Capitol's Statuary Hall, the Major and Mrs. Johnson were whisked to the White House by Representative and Mrs. Jed Johnson (D., Okla.), accompanied by Jed, Jr., (The two families are not re[illegible]

When the President ren[illegible] that Johnson was young [illegible] major, the Oklahoman's sm[illegible] wore off, news pictures were taken. and Johnson showed Mr. Roosevelt pictures of the plane, Half Pint, he flew on the June 26 mission from which he so narrowly escaped.

The President autographed a 5-shilling English bank note for him, and commented, that's worth some money, with the major adding, "it's worth more now."

Tea With Mrs. Roosevelt

Later, the Johnsons, both families, were back at the White House having tea with Mrs. Roosevelt. Included in the party were five Oklahoma Indians here to testify on an Indian affairs bill before the Senate. They are Robert Goombi, Mountain View; Andrew Dunlap, Anadarko; Lee Motah, Lawton; Howard Soonaty, Apache, and William Collins, Gracement.

The Stage Door Canteen was on their night program.

Johnson disclosed at the luncheon with fellow-Oklahomans that he may soon be credited with a 28th "kill," which would make him America's top ace in all war theaters.

Early in May on a mission near Hannover, Germany, Johnson sent a Messerschmitt smoking and spinning into the clouds, then lost sight of it. Just before he left England, "they were hot" about giving him credit for that enemy plane, and "the filming" will determine whether he receives it or not.

21 Brigadiers Nominated as Major Generals

JUN 9 1944

Roosevelt Also Proposes Elevation of 63 Colonels, Two in Their Twenties

WASHINGTON, June 8 (AP).—President Roosevelt sent to the Senate today the names of twenty-one brigadier generals nominated for temporary promotion to the rank of major general.

General Van Deusen, fifty-six years old, has been commanding general since 1941 of the Eastern Signal Corps Training Center in New Jersey, comprising Fort Monmouth and Cam Wood, at Eatontown, and Camp Edison at Seagirt. He previously was stationed at Hawaii and saw service in France as a Signal Corps officer in the last ar.

STUDY, LOANS PUT IN GI BILL

Conferees Okay 2 Provisions; Deadlock On Jobs

JUN 9 1944

Washington, June 8 (AP)—A Senate-House committee agreed today on educational provisions to be included in a compromise "GI Bill of Rights," a veterans' aid measure, and approved tentatively a plan for loans to buy homes, farms or businesses.

Senator Clark (D., Mo.), said the committee was "deadlocked," however, on provisions for veterans' placement in jobs and on unemployment compensation.

Subject to review and final ratification, the loan section provides for private loans at 4 per cent. interest, with the Government guaranteeing 40 per cent., up to $2,000 maximum.

House Provisions

The House had voted for 6 per cent. interest, private loans, and a 50 per cent. guarantee up to $2,500. The Senate had approved Government loans at 3 per cent. up to a maximum of $1,000.

The educational program, designed to let service men resume their schooling or take refresher courses, would be controlled by the Veterans' Administration. Veterans would be eligible if their education had been impeded by the war and they had served 90 days exclusive of any time spent in army and navy training courses.

Would Get Year's Schooling

If a person entered service before he was 25, a legal presumption would be established that his education was interrupted.

Veterans would get a year's schooling in an acceptable institution, with the Government paying tuition and other expenses up to $500 and subsistence allowances of $50 a month to men without dependents and $75 for those with dependents.

Additional Training Period

An additional period of training would be permitted not to exceed the time spent in service after September 15, 1940.

The veteran would have deducted from the period he might otherwise be eligible to spend in school at Government expense any time in army and navy training courses in which he pursued courses he had been taking previously as a private citizen. For instance, if an engineering student continued an engineering course after going into service, he would be eligible for less educational benefits.

F.D.R.'S HEALTH REPORTED GOOD

JUN 9 1944

WASHINGTON, June 8 — (AP) Vice Admiral Ross T. McIntire reported today President Roosevelt's health is "excellent in all respects."

Detailing to reporters the result of a recent physical checkup the President underwent at the naval medical center, the President's personal physician said Mr. Roosevelt's present weight is about 180 pounds.

"He is in better physical condition than the average man his age," said McIntire.

As a result of the President's spring vacation in the South, he added, Mr. Roosevelt is now in better health than he has been at any time for a year—"and you know that is very good shape."

The President's weight is "about four pounds under the weight we have always felt fine for him," McIntire said, "but he says it is the best weight he's had."

The physician said all traces of the President's series of Winter illnesses have been erased. During the Winter the President suffered an attack of influenza which developed an intestinal upset, colds, a sinus infection, and acute bronchitis.

The doctor said he will keep the President on a restricted schedule if the routine can be worked out, but the chief executive is not now on as strict a diet as he was in the early Spring.

He has resumed swimming occasionally, and his doctor said every effort will be made to get the President into the sunshine as much as possible, particularly for the weekends.

OFFICIAL ASSERTS

30.24-16051

ANOTHER WARD STRIKE IN MAKING

JUN 9 1944

WASHINGTON, June 8 — (AP) A union official accused th. government today of a "do nothing" attitude in the Montgomery Ward labor dispute, and declared that the threat of a new strike is in the air as a result.

Samuel Wolchok, president of the International Retail and Wholesale Workers (C.I.O.), testified at hearings of the House committee investigating the government's seizure last April of Ward's Chicago plant.

"When the government seized the plant, it did nothing to enforce the War Labor board directive for restoration of the provisions of the contract," he said.

"On top of that, it did nothing to stop the company from continuing unfair labor practices under the very nose of the government's occupancy. The company intensified its reign of terror during the period the government was nominally in control. Twenty two workers lost their jobs while an American flag was flying over Montgomery Wards."

Wolchok noted that the WLB again has ordered Wards to continue provisions of an expired union contract, pending negotiation of a new one, but asserted that there was no assurance it would be done.

The government seized the Chicago plant after the company refused to comply with an earlier WLB order. The management contended then that there was no assurance the union represented a majority of employes. When a collective bargaining election was held, the government returned the plant to management control. The union won the election.

"What do you think the workers ought to do?" Wolchok shouted. "What do you think they will do?"

"Let me tell you something. If President Roosevelt had not ordered the workers back to the job in that plant, we'd have a contract today."

Wolchok and James B. Carey, secretary-treasurer of the C.I.O., declared that the company and Board Chairman Sewell Avery have sought to "destroy" collective bargaining efforts.

"Sewell Avery created such a rumpus that he even frightened the government into dropping its attempt to enforce the law," Wolchok said. "The workers are contending that Mr. Avery is stronger and bigger than the government. Obviously, they are correct so far."

Carey said that the government should have retained control of the plant after the seizure until the WLB directive was obeyed.

Southerners Claim Bankhead Amendment Not Inflationary

JUN 9 1944

WASHINGTON, June 8. — (AP) Southern Democrats challenged in the Senate today assertions of President Roosevelt and other administration spokesmen that the Bankhead cotton amendment to the Price Control bill would prove inflationary.

Senator Eastland (D-Miss) declared officials within the Office of Price Administration are themselves divided on that point.

"The fuss," he said, "is between practical men who know the cotton business and some professors from Harvard university."

Eastland said the OPA textile branch "repudiates the charges the amendment is inflationary."

The amendment by Senator Bankhead (D-Ala) would require OPA to adjust cotton textile ceilings to reflect a parity price for raw cotton, manufacturing costs and a "reasonable profit" for millers. Price Administrator Chester Bowles has held it would mean raising textile ceilings generally, probably an average of five per cent, and would cost consumers about $350,000,000 annually.

But Eastland and Bankhead asserted that OPA has all the authority it needs to reduce some ceilings to offset raises in others.

They held that OPA also could prevent pyramiding of cotton processors and distributors' profits after the textiles leave the mills, saying that would eliminate most of the predicted rise in consumer costs.

Bankhead said his "primary object" was to raise the market price of cotton to the farmers. He said it had been about a cent a pound below parity for two years, a loss of $40,000,000 to producers.

"Everybody from the President on down talks about inflation," Bankhead shouted. "It's the same cry we hear every time some one proposes to do anything for the farmer."

He said it actually would cost only about $50,000,000 a year to give farmers a parity price for their cotton.

Far larger sums were involved, he said, in the wartime wage boosts granted to Federal employes, railroad workers and John L. Lewis' coal miners.

Bankhead said he had no criticism of Lewis—"in fact I commend him for his loyalty and fidelity to those he represents."

Senator Maloney (D-Conn), condemning the Bankhead proposal, said a better way to raise the cotton price would be to boost the government loan rate from 90 to 100 per cent of parity. Senator Murdock (D-Utah), another opponent of the Bankhead Plan, had earlier announced he would offer such a substitute proposal.

Meanwhile, Chairman Fulmer (D-SC) of the House Agriculture committee announced he would oppose the Bankhead amendment in House consideration of the bill, and instead also would sponsor an amendment putting a 100 per cent of parity floor under cotton.

The government now loans 90 per cent of parity on cotton.

Senator Murdock expressed the view that President Roosevelt would veto the bill, to extend the Stabilization act for 18 months beyond June 30, if the Bankhead amendment gets through Congress.

Men In Armed Services Want Candy, Soft Drinks

JUN 9 1944

New York, June 8 (AP)—Candy, soft drinks, cigarettes and toilet articles are the four top items in demand by men of the armed forces, Brig. Gen. Joseph W. Byron reported today.

Speaking at the annual dinner of the National Confectioners' Association, General Byron said, "Men overseas like to eat more candy than they do at home. The sight of the familiar wrappers seems like a contact with home."

General Byron, who directs the special services division of the army, has toured almost every theater of operations to inspect the army exchanges.

FREE LABOR UNIONS FOR RUSSIA URGED

JUN 9 1944

Boston, June 8 (A. P.).—The International Ladies' Garment Workers' Union expressed the hope today that when the global conflict is over, Russian workers will have "gained the right to organize themselves into genuine trade unions." In a resolution approved by all but six of the convention's 385 delegates, the garment workers pledged full support to the rebuilding of free trade unions everywhere, but reiterated their stand that Russian unions do not possess freedom of action and freedom from State domination.

The union voted unanimously to raise a minimum of $2,000,000 as a 1945 war victim fund through the donations of a minimum of a day's pay from each of its 305,000 members.

Munich Revolt Move Described

JUN 9 1944

Camden, N. J., June 8 (AP)—Bavarians attempted a revolt in Munich during the city's first bombing on March 9 and 10, 1942, an American citizen who was interned near there said last night.

The man, of Polish parentage, who returned on the Gripsholm last March, asked that his name be withheld because members of his family remain in Europe.

He said the revolt was described to him by a German medical major and a German soldier pharmacist in the internment camp hospital to which he was assigned. Three hundred conspirators, including 16 generals, were executed, he reported.

"The feeling of hatred in Bavarians was very marked against the north Germans, especially the Prussians," he said.

Gen. Miller Wants To Tell His Side

JUN 9 1944

Coral Gables, Fla., June 8 (AP)—A patient in an army hospital, Lieut. Col. Henry J. F. Miller was reported seeking an opportunity today to speak publicly about his demotion from the rank of major general as punishment, the War Department announced, for a cocktail party remark hinting at the date of the European invasion.

Through Col. Dan C. Ogle, commanding officer of the Army Air Forces Regional Hospital, Miller declared:

"I am an officer in the Army of the United States and therefore can make no statement of any kind at this time or until such time as the War Department authorizes me to issue a statement concerning my case."

Another statement was promised if the War Department gave approval.

Treated For Ailments

Colonel Ogle said that Miller, a peacetime resident of Miami, was being treated for "serious physical ailments that necessitate hospitalization," and added:

"They are not connected with his service overseas."

There were reverberations from the demotion at Washington, where Senator Chandler, Kentucky Democrat, said he would ask a Senatorial investigation.

Eisenhower Acts

A veteran of 33 years of military service, Miller was sent here after being relieved of his post as commanding general of the service command of the Ninth Air Force in England.

The account from supreme headquarters of the Allied Expeditionary Force said Gen. Dwight D. Eisenhower ordered Miller demoted after a personal investigation.

Lindbergh Is Teaching High Flying In Gilberts

JUN 9 1944

Detroit, June 8 (AP)—Charles A. Lindbergh, who reported recently to Admiral Chester W. Nimitz for special duty with the navy, is teaching American aviators in the Gilbert Islands phases of high altitude flying, according to a letter received here today by O. A. Johnson, chief of the Ford Motor Company marine fleet.

The letter came from Johnson's son, a recent arrival in the Gilberts.

Lindbergh, who has been a consultant in the Ford Motor Company's aircraft operation, has been on leave for several weeks. Much of his work here had to do with high altitude flying.

One of his close associates here said his high altitude instructions in the Pacific have been with a type of plane which many flyers believed could not be operated at unusual heights.

Lange Asserts Stalin Pledged A Free Poland

JUN 9 1944

Cites Equipment by Russia of Polish Army as Proof; Red Textbooks Revised

CHICAGO, June 8 (AP).—Professor Oscar Lange, University of Chicago economist who recently interviewed Premier Stalin, declared today Stalin "made it very clear that the independence and sovereignty of Poland will be fully recognized by Russia after the war.

"There will be no interference in internal affairs" of Poland, Professor Lange quoted Stalin as saying.

Professor Lange, Polish-born, arrived yesterday in Chicago from Moscow, where he conferred as a private citizen with Stalin on May 21. He made his first statement on his trip at a press conference today. On the trip, he accompanied the Rev. Stanislaus Orlemanski, Roman Catholic priest of Springfield, Mass., who said on his return several weeks ago that Stalin had given him a written statement that the church would not be persecuted.

Professor Lange offered as support of what he said Stalin told him these two observations:

1. The Soviet government is arming the Polish army which one Polish general said was expected to grow to 1,000,000 men before the end of the war.

2. Russians are permitting in schools for Polish refugee children new textbooks written by the Union of Polish Patriots, a Polish organization in Russia, and the committee for Polish children. These are replacing old textbooks because they contained Communist teachings.

"If Stalin wanted Poland to be part of the Soviet it would be most foolish to arm the Poles," Professor Lange asserted.

Regarding education, the professor said the committee for Polish children was created and financed by the Soviet government and operated by Poles under Soviety government supervision.

He declared "the statement of Mr. Stalin was that Poland is to be a strong and large state. He looks upon it as a future ally of the Soviet Union, just like Czechoslovakia.

The professor said he made his six-weeks trip to Russia at the invitation of the Union of Polish patriots "to visit the Polish Army in the U. S. S. R. and to inquire into the situation of Poles in that country."

He said in Moscow May 21 that he would gather information about the Poles in Russia and disseminate it in the United States when he returned. Today he said he would disseminate it "to any one interested," and added, "I don't think I will make any particular recommendation."

From an American point of view, he said, he would advise working first with the Soviet government and second, helping Polish patriots generally.

ADD: SHAEF - (GALLAGHER) 1ST LATER

A CONTINUING STREAM OF GERMAN BROADCASTS INCLUDED REPORTS OF HOUSE-TO-HOUSE FIGHTING IN THE VILLAGE OF STE.MERE-EGLISE, NEAR THE EASTERN SHORE OF THE CHERBOURG PENINSULA; THAT THE GERMANS HAD DRIVEN BRITISH PARACHUTE TROOPS FROM THE VILLAGE OF VARVILLE, EAST OF THE ORNE RIVER, AND THAT BRITISH TANK FORCES LAST NIGHT WERE DRIVING SOUTH ALONG BOTH BANKS OF THE SEULLES RIVER, WHICH STRIKES BETWEEN CAEN AND BAYEUX.

JUN 9 1944

ASIDE FROM BAYEUX AND CAEN, SUPREME HEADQUARTERS GAVE NO FURTHER NAMES TO LOCATE THE INVASION BATTLES, BUT A CONSTANT STREAM OF BERLIN BROADCASTS, NONE OF THEM CONFIRMED, REPORTED ALLIED ATTACKS ALL THE WAY FROM THE CALAIS AREA DIRECTLY ACROSS THE DOVER STRAIT TO THE LOWER WESTERN COAST OF THE BRITTANY PENINSULA FAR TO THE SOUTHWEST.

IT WAS ANNOUNCED OFFICIALLY HERE THAT AIRBORNE OPERATIONS "ON A VERY LARGE SCALE" THROUGHOUT WEDNESDAY FERRIED NEW CONTINGENTS OF TROOPS, SUPPLIES AND EQUIPMENT TO INVADED EUROPE.

JUN 9 1944

THE GERMANS SAID NEW ALLIED AIRBORNE OPERATIONS WERE DIRECTED AGAINST THREE POINTS ON THE BRITTANY PENINSULA--LORIENT, NANTES AND ST. BRIEUC--AND AGAINST FALAISE AND ARGENTAN, ADJOINING RAIL JUNCTIONS 30 MILES SOUTH OF CAEN.

SUPREME HEADQUARTERS INDICATED A FIRM GRIP HAD BEEN WON ON THE NORMANDY COAST. A COMMUNIQUE SAID THE ENEMY HAD BEEN DRIVEN BACK FROM ALL THE LANDING BEACHES AND THAT IN SOME CASES THE DEPLOYING ALLIED FORCES HAD LINKED SEPARATE BEACHHEADS.

A SPOKESMAN FOR THE GERMAN HIGH COMMAND WAS QUOTED IN STOCKHOLM BY THE SWEDISH TELEGRAPH BUREAU AS SAYING THAT "NO ONE IN (FIELD MARSHAL) VON RUNDSTEDT'S HEADQUARTERS EXPECTS THE INVASION TROOPS WILL BE THROWN BACK INTO THE SEA."

GEN. DWIGHT D. EISENHOWER, ALLIED SUPREME COMMANDER, TOURED THE BEACH AREAS FOR FOUR AND ONE HALF HOURS WEDNESDAY IN A BRITISH VESSEL. HE CONFERRED WITH GEN. SIR BERNARD L. MONTGOMERY AND OTHER ALLIED OPERATIONAL LEADERS LESS THAN FIVE MILES FROM GERMAN-HELD AREAS.

THE ALLIED FORCES THRUSTING INLAND IN THE BAYEUX REGION GOT THE HIGHWAY TO CAEN, IT WAS ANNOUNCED OFFICIALLY. CAPTURE OF BAYEUX ITSELF SEVERED THE CHERBOURG-CAEN-PARIS RAILWAY, CONTRIBUTING TO ISOLATION OF THE ENEMY IN THE CHERBOURG PENINSULA TO THE WEST.

THE GERMAN TRANSOCEAN AGENCY ASSERTED THE ALLIES APPEARED TO BE MAKING A SUPREME EFFORT TO OCCUPY ALL OF NORMANDY AND CAPTURE CHERBOURG WITH ITS VALUABLE HARBOR.

HEADQUARTERS ANNOUNCED THAT "ENEMY RESISTANCE IS STIFFENING AS HIS RESERVES COME INTO ACTION," BUT GENERAL EISENHOWER, TOO, KEPT BUILDING UP HIS FORCES WITH MASS LANDINGS BY SEA AND AIR.

VON RUNDSTEDT, THE GERMAN ANTI-INVASION COMMANDER-IN-CHIEF, HAS ORDERED HIS TROOPS TO DEFEND THE ATLANTIC WALL TO THE LAST MAN IN AN ORDER OF THE DAY, THE VICHY RADIO DECLARED.

"THE FIRST SHOCK OF BATTLE HAS BEEN BORNE BY THE ATLANTIC WALL FORTIFICATIONS," VICHY QUOTED VON RUNDSTEDT. "THERE CAN BE NO QUESTION OF GIVING WAY. THERE WILL BE NO WITHDRAWALS."

A NUMBER OF GERMAN PRISONERS HAVE BEEN TAKEN AND SOME ALREADY HAVE BEEN BROUGHT TO ENGLAND.

ALTHOUGH THE BEACHES NO LONGER ARE UNDER ENEMY SMALL-ARMS FIRE, THE INVASION ARMIES ADMITTEDLY STILL ARE TO MEET THE BULK OF THE GERMAN FORCES.

AXIS BROADCASTS ESTIMATED EISENHOWER ALREADY HAD PLACED 13 OF 80 [illegible]ABLE DIVISIONS IN FRANCE.

THROUGH THE BEACHHEAD GAPS IN THE ATLANTIC WALL STREAMS OF ALLIED TROOPS AND MILITARY SUPPLIES POURED THROUGHOUT WEDNESDAY--ON THEIR WAY TO BATTLE INLAND.

A NORTHWESTERLY WIND WHICH HAD BEEN KICKING UP WAVES AS MUCH AS FOUR FEET HIGH EVER SINCE TUESDAY'S ORIGINAL LANDINGS MODERATED THIS MORNING AND THE WEATHER GENERALLY WAS REPORTED FAVORABLE TO THE ALLIES.

TRANSOCEAN SAID AIRBORNE LANDINGS WERE MADE YESTERDAY BY A HUNDRED GLIDERS NEAR FALAISE AND ARGENTAN IN AN AREA SOME 40 MILES FROM THE SEA--A REPORT, WHICH IF TRUE, WOULD BE THE DEEPEST PENETRATION YET.

THIS SAME ENEMY BROADCAST SAID PARACHUTE TROOPS DROPPED FROM 300 PLANES NEAR COUTANCES AND LESSAY, HIGHWAY TOWNS JUST INLAND FROM THE CHERBOURG PENINSULA'S WEST COAST. THE GERMANS SPOKE REPEATEDLY OF THE "SURPRISING" STRENGTH OF ALLIED AIRBORNE OPERATIONS.

OTHER GERMAN REPORTS, POSSIBLY DESIGNED PURELY TO EVOKE INFORMATION, ASSERTED THE BRITISH SIXTH PARACHUTE DIVISION HAD BEEN "ANNIHILATED" AND THAT A BEACHHEAD ON THE EAST BANK OF THE ORNE RIVER NORTH OF CAEN HAD BEEN WIPED OUT.

ONE ALLIED FLIER SAID THE GERMANS HAD FLOODED THREE LARGE AREAS OF LOW-LYING LAND ALONG THE NORMANDY COAST "IN AN ATTEMPT TO HINDER THE ADVANCE OF ALLIED INVASION FORCES."

ALONG THE INVADED COAST ALLIED NAVAL FORCES SILENCED ALL GERMAN COASTAL BATTERIES THAT STILL WERE IN ACTION WEDNESDAY, BUT SUPREME HEADQUARTERS SAID "IT IS NOT YET KNOWN WHETHER ALL HAVE BEEN FINALLY REDUCED." GERMAN E-BOATS WERE DRIVEN OFF IN TWO ATTACKS.

GERMAN AIRCRAFT APPEARED IN SLIGHTLY INCREASED NUMBERS, BUT SWARMING ALLIED BOMBERS AND FIGHTERS STILL RULED THE SKIES. FIFTY ONE GERMAN PLANES WERE DOWNED YESTERDAY AGAINST 23 ALLIED AIRCRAFT LOST.

ADD: SHAEF - CHERCHER) 2ND GUNFIRE

THE TWIN-ENGINED MEDIUMS LEFT THE CITY ON THE MAIN RAILWAY BETWEEN CHERBOURG TO PARIS, BURNING WITH AT LEAST 20 FIRES FROM AN ATTACK AT 4,500 FEET.

JUN 9 1944

THESE BLOWS FOLLOWED RAF STRIKES LAST NIGHT IN WHICH A SERIES OF RAIL TARGETS NEAR PARIS AND GERMAN TRANSPORT 12 MILES BEHIND THE INVASION COAST, WERE RIDDLED WITH HEAVY CARGOES OF BOMBS. THE TRANSPORT TARGET WAS A CONCENTRATION IN THE FOREST OF CERISY WHERE THE ROAD RUNS FROM BAYEUX TO ST. LO.

BESIDES THE DAWN ATTACK ON CAEN, THE MARAUDERS WENT TO LESSAY, PONTAUBAULT, VALOGNES AND ST. LO ON THE CHERBOURG PENINSULA FOR OTHER ASSAULTS, WHILE HAVOCS POUNDTD PERIERS AND LAHAYE DU PUITS.

THE AIR MINISTRY SAID THE WELL-HIDDEN CERISY WOOD TARGETS WAS OF GREAT TACTICAL IMPORTANCE AND HAD TO BE ATTACKED AT LOW LEVEL BECAUSE OF 7,000-FOOT CLOUDS.

OTHER RAF FORMATIONS ATTACKED THE GERMAN CITY OF COLOGNE AT THE CROSSING OF THE RHINE AND LAID MINES.

30.24-16053

THE PATTERN OF ATTACK FOR RAF MEDIUM BOMBERS CHANGED LAST NIGHT TO OPERATIONS AGAINST SIX RAILROAD STATIONS SOUTH AND WEST OF CAEN WHERE THE ENEMY WAS OBSERVED DETRAINING DURING THE DAYLIGHT.

ELEVEN VICTORIES OVER ENEMY AIRCRAFT WERE REPORTED BY THE NIGHT RAIDERS. EIGHTY-TWO GERMAN PLANES WERE DESTROYED IN THE AIR AND 20 ON THE GROUND DURING DAYLIGHT YESTERDAY AS ALLIED PLANES FLYING MORE THAN 9,000 SORTIES BOMBED AND STRAFED THE GERMANS ON THE NORMANDY BEACHHEADS AND PENETRATED 100 MILES INLAND.

JUN 9 1944

THE WEATHER WAS BETTER FOR AERIAL OPERATIONS TODAY THAN IT HAD BEEN SINCE THE INVASION STARTED. VISIBILITY WAS LIMITED BY HAZE AND LIGHT MIST AS THE FIRST RAIDERS HEADED TOWARD THE PAS-DE-CALAIS AREA OF THE FRENCH COAST BUT THE SKIES CLEARED LATER.

THE PARIS AREA RAIL JUNCTIONS OF ACHERES, VERSAILLES, MASSY-PALAISEAU (CORRECT) AND JUVISY WERE HIT BY THE NIGHT RAIDERS IN OPERATIONS HAVING THE ANNOUNCED PURPOSE OF DELAYING GERMAN EAST-WEST MILITARY TRAFFIC.

A GERMAN TROOP AND TRANSPORT CONCENTRATION IN A WOODED AREA 12 MILES FROM THE FRENCH INVASION COAST ALSO WAS ATTACKED.

JUN 9 1944

MANY OF THE BIG BRITISH SKY GIANTS BOMBED THEIR TARGETS FROM THE ALMOST UNPRECEDENTED LOW LEVEL OF 1,000 FEET. ONE PLANE ATTACKING FROM 900 FEET WAS BOUNCED ABOUT IN THE AIR BY THE FORCE OF ITS EXPLODING BOMBS.

NO DETAILS WERE AVAILABLE ON THE GERMANS' AIR ACTIVITY OVER THE INVASION BEACHES, ALTHOUGH SUPREME HEADQUARTERS DESCRIBED THE ENEMY FORMATIONS AS SMALL.

THE ALLIED COMMUNIQUE DID NOT FURNISH A FIGURE ON THE TOTAL ALLIED LOSSES IN THE AIR, BUT AN UNOFFICIAL RECPITULATION INDICATED, THE GERMANS HAD LOST 122 PLANES IN THE LAST TWO DAYS WHILE THE ALLIES HAD LOST 119, INCLUDING 12 TROOP CARRIERS AND 12 GLIDERS.

THE GERMAN RADIO SAID TODAY MAJOR ALLIED AIR ATTACKS HAD BEEN MADE AGAINST LORIENT AND NANTES ON THE WEST COAST OF FRANCE IN THE EARLY MORNING HOURS TODAY.

STRAW DUMMIES ATTACHED TO PARACHUTES WERE DROPPED OVER THE AREA OF ST.BRIEUX AT THE SAME TIME, SAID THE BROADCAST BY INTERNATIONAL INFORMATION BUREAU, NAZI PROPAGANDA AGENCY.

GERMAN PLANES STRUCK A WEAK BLOW AT ENGLAND DURING THE NIGHT, APPEARING OVER EAST ANGLIA AND DROPPING SOME BOMBS IN AN AREA NEAR A COAST TOWN. AT LEAST THREE OF THE ENEMY PLANES WERE DESTROYED.

U.S. FLYING FORTRESSES AND LIBERATORS WERE OBSERVED RETURNING OVER LONDON TODAY FROM THE FIRST OF THE NEW DAYLIGHT ASSAULTS AS THE SHAEF FURNISHED A DESCRIPTION OF THE LATEST HEAVY BRITISH NIGHT ATTACK.

THE BRITISH HEAVY BOMBERS ATTACKED A LARGE GERMAN TROOP AND TRANSPORT CONCENTRATION BEHIND THE INVASION FRONT IN RESPONSE TO AN URGENT APPEAL FROM THE GROUND FORCES.

RECONNAISSANCE PLANES HAD SPOTTED THE TARGET CAREFULLY DURING THE DAYLIGHT AND THE BIG NIGHT BOMBERS WERE ABLE TO SATURATE IT WITH EXPLOSIVES. THE PLACE WAS BELIEVED TO HAVE BEEN A KEY REFUELING POINT FOR GERMAN TANK UNITS OPPOSING EXTENSION OF THE ALLIED BEACHHEADS.

NAVAL AIRCRAFT, BOTH AMERICAN AND BRITISH, FLEW 870 SORTIES YESTERD MOSTLY SPOTTING FOR NAVAL GUNFIRE.

ALLIED HEAVY BOMBERS WITH POWERFUL FIGHTER ESCORTS SOARED OUT TWICE YESTERDAY, AND IN THE SECOND ATTACK LATE IN THE AFTERNOON BLISTERED AN ENEMY AIRFIELD NORTHWEST OF LORIENT AS WELL AS RAILWAY BRIDGES AND STRONG POINTS IN THE AREA EXTENDING FROM THE BAY OF BISCAY TO THE SEINE.

THE ESCORTING FIGHTERS SHOT DOWN 64 ENEMY AIRCRAFT IN COMBAT AND NOT A SINGLE NAZI PILOT MANAGED TO GET AT THE BOMBER FORMATIONS.

AS THE GERMANS TENTATIVELY BEGAN TO ATTACK THE BEACHES, A FORMATION OF RAF SPITFIRES SAILED INTO A BUNCH OF JUNKERS 88'S AND KNOCKED DOWN EIGHT. AMERICAN MUSTANGS BAGGED 10 MESSERSCHMITT 109'S.

OF THE 9,000 SORTIES IN THE 24-HOUR PERIOD ENDING LAST NIGHT, NINTH FIGHTER-BOMBERS MADE 2,191, SHOOTING DOWN SIX ENEMY PLANES TO THE LOSS OF 21 OF THEIR OWN.

JUN 9 1944

DURING THE NIGHT THE RAF ASSAULTED COLOGNE AT THE CROSSING OF THE RHINE, AND LAID MINES. THE PATTERN OF ATTACK FOR BRITISH MEDIUM BOMBERS OVER THE FRONT SHIFTED TO OPERATIONS AGAINST SIX RAIL STATIONS SOUTH AND WEST OF CAEN.

NAZI NIGHT-FIGHTERS, SCORED THEIR BIGGEST KILL OF THE INVASION LAST NIGHT, KNOCKING DOWN 29 RAF BIG BOMBERS. TOTAL ALLIED LOSSES REPORTED TODAY, COVERING MOSTLY YESTERDAY'S OPERATIONS, WERE 104, INCLUDING THE 29 RAF HEAVIES, 27 EIGHTH, 21 NINTH AIR FORCE PLANES, TWO AMERICAN HEAVIES AND 25 OTHER BRITISH PLANES.

DURING THE NIGHT GERMAN PLANES STRUCK A WEAK BLOW AT ENGLAND, DROPPING SOME BOMBS IN AN AREA NEAR AN EAST ANGLIA COAST TOWN. AT LEAST THREE WERE SHOT DOWN.

BY HOWARD COWAN

A NINTH AIRFORCE TROOP-CARRIER BASE, JUNE 8-(AP)-THE TROOP-CARRIER COMMAND DID ITS JOB.

ITS MEN WENT INTO FRANCE AT LITTLE BETTER THAN 100 MILES AN HOUR UNARMED AND UNARMORED AND WITHIN BOW AND ARROW RANGE OF GERMAN MACHINE-GUN AND FLAK EMPLACEMENTS.

THEY DELIVERED AN ARMY WITH WEAPONS AND SUPPLIES BEHIND HITLER'S ATLANTIC WALL.

TAKE THE CASE OF LTS. THERON ANGLEMYAR OF DODGEVILLE? WIS., AND JEFFEY HARRISON OF CENTREVILLE, MISS. CLOUDS OBSCURED THE AREA WHERE THEY WERE SUPPOSED TO LET THE TROOPS DROP AND THEY MISSED IT.

JUN 9 1944

THEY CIRCLED AND HEADED BACK INTO WITHERING FIRE. THIS TIME THEY PLACED THE PARATROOPS RIGHT ON THE BUTTON.

THE JOES THEY FLY ARE AMAZING--HARD BITTEN, UNFEARING MEN WHOSE TRENCH IS IN THE SKY.

ONE PARATROOPER RIDING IN ~~ZEBX~~ A C-47 OF THE SQUADRON COMMANDED BY LT. COL. HENRY OSMER OF 40-35 HAMPTON ST., ELMHURST, LONG ISLAND? SHOUTED "LET ME AT THEM", TORE LOOSE FROM THE CREW WHO TRIED TO RESTRAIN HIM AND JUMPED WITH HIS MACHINE GUN.

THEY FOUND A JAGGED BULLET HOLE IN THE BUCKET WHERE HE HAD BEEN SITTING. NOBODY KNOWS HIS NAME. HE WASN'T MUCH FOR TALK.

A TOW ROPE BROKE WHILE ONE GROUP WAS FORMING UP OVER A BASE AND ONE GLIDER HAD TO LAND IN A PASTURE SEVERAL MILES AWAY WHILE THE REST OF THE OUTFIT WENT ON TO FRANCE.

"WHEN THEY WENT TO PICK THEM UP IN A JEEP, THE PROFANITY WAS SOMETHING TERRIBLE", SAID CAPT. FRANK COFFEY? 2606 X STREET, LINCOLN, NEB., TOW SHIP PILOT. " THE PARATROOPERS HAD FILED OUT AND WERE STOMPING AROUND GIVING US HELL. 'BLANKEDY BLANK BLANKS OF BLANKS, THEY CAN'T EVEN GET US WHERE WE ARE GOING'? ONE SAID."

THE PARATROOPER DOESN'T USE BLANKS IN CONCERSATION ANYMORE THAN HE DOES A TOMMYGUN.

COFFEY DELIVERED THEM SAFELY IN DAYLIGHT YESTERDAY TO THE AIRBORNE ARMY ON THE CHERBOURG PENINSULA.

SGT.JAMES LILLY, 26 COGSHALL ST., HOLLY, MICH., REPAIRED A C-47 LANDING GEAR IN THE AIR DURING THE SECOND MOVEMENT OF TROOPS AND SUPPLIES.

JUN 9 1944

"HE DIDN'T HAVE ANYTHING BUT A SCOUT KNIFE BUT HE PRACTICALLY TOOK THE SHIP APART IN THE AIR UNTIL HE HAD THOSE WHEELS FIXED," SAID MAJ.TOMMY NUNN, 1813 WEST 36TH ST., AUSTIN, TEXAS.

THE TENSION ABOARD NUNN'S PLANE WAS EASED SOMEWHAT BY THE PILOT OF THE GLIDER THEY WERE TOWING, LT.RALPH ELSTON, 3045 FOREST ST., KANSAS CITY, MO.

JUN 9 1944

"THE LAST THING I HEARD HIM SAY OVER THE INTERCOM," NUNN SAID, "WAS 'I WONDER IF I'LL EVER SEE THAT RED PONTIAC AGAIN.' I COULD HEAR EVERYONE LAUGHING. THEN THEY CUT OFF AND CIRCLED DOWN."

ANOTHER GLIDER CREW WAS HEARD WAILING A MOURNFUL DIRGE, "TOO LATE, TOO LATE, NOW TO BE SORRRR-EEEEEEE" AS THEY CUT LOOSE FROM TOWSHIPS.

JUN 9 1944

THE JINX PILOT IN THIS GROUP IS LT.CHARLES KEARNS JR., OF NEW ORLEANS. ONE OF THE PLANE'S ENGINES HAS BEEN KNOCKED OUT BY MACHINE GUN FIRE ON THE TWO MISSIONS HE HAS FLOWN.

A HAIL OF BULLETS CAME THROUGH THE COCKPIT TUESDAY NIGHT AND ONE SLUG CLIPPED THE WIRE ON THE HEADSET OF THE CO-PILOT, LT.GEORGE ZUKOWSKI, 123 EAST NORWICH ROAD, OYSTER BAY, LONG ISLAND. HIS FACE WAS LACERATED BY FLYING GLASS, BUT OTHERWISE HE WAS NOT HURT.

30.24-16057

"THAT PROVES," KEARNS SAID WITH A STRAIGHT FACE, "THEY'RE USING LIVE AMMUNITION."

JUN 9 1944

THERE WERE KSUAL PRANKS PLAYED BY FATE. LT.JOHN PARSONS, 103 MEMORIAL AVE., PALMYRA, N.J., WENT FORWARD TO SPEAK WITH UNRELATED PILOT LT.WILBUR PARSONS, 2106 WEST BEACH ST., BILOXI, MISS. THE CREW CHIEF TOOK HIS SEAT AND A STRAY BULLET STRUCK HIM THROUGH A GAP WHERE THE FLAKSUIT FITS TOGETHER. HE WAS DEAD WHEN THE PLANE LANDED.

CAIT.THOMAS STEWART OF 2535 LAKE ST., KALAMAZOO, MICH., COUNTED 159 FLAK AND MACHINE-GUN HOLES IN HIS SHIP. NONE OF THE CREW NOR "FLAK", A WIRE HAIRED TERRIER, WAS INJURED.

ANOTHER DOG AT THIS BASE WHICH HAS BEEN UNDER FIRE AND CAME THROUGH UNSCATHED IS "SCUD", A SCOTTIE WHICH RIDES WITH LIEUT. JOHN MACDONALD, 1702 HOUSTONIA AVE., ROYAL OAK, MICH.

LT.ZENO ROSE OF WILLIAMSTON, N.C. SAW ONE P-51 FIGHTER ATTACK A GERMAN GUN POSITION ALMOST HEADON.

"IT LOOKED LIKE ONE OF THOSE CHICAGO PIANOS--OR MORE LIKE A PIPE ORGAN," ROSE SAID. "IT WAS THROWING UP A DOZEN STREAMS OF TRACERS AT ONCE. THIS P-51 PEELED OFF AND CAME IN BLAZING AWAY. IT DIDN'T GIVE ANYBODY ANY TROUBLE ANYMORE."

OTHER MUSTANG PILOTS FINDING NO ENEMY OPPOSITION TEASED NAZI FLAK GUNS IN ORDER TO DRAW THEIR FIRE AWAY FROM MORE VULNERABLE P-47S AND GLIDER LOADS OF TROOPS AND SUPPLIES.

CAPT.D.C.MUELLER, WIOTA, IOWA, PILOT, SAID THAT WHEN BIG FLAK GUNS OPENED UP, ONE UNIDENTIFIED FIGHTER "TURNED ON EVERY LIGHT ON HIS SHIP AND ZIPPED OVER THERE TO DRAW FLAK AWAY FROM US."

"IT DID THE JOB - THEY THREW EVERYTHING BUT THE KITCHEN SINK AT HIM AND LEFT US ALONE." MUELLER SAID. "THAT GUY DESERVES A MEDAL."

A U.S. PARACHUTE CARRIER BASE, JUNE 8-(AP)-CAPT. FRANK LILLYMAN, THE FIRST ALLIED SOLDIER TO TOUCH FRANCE IN THE ASSAULT FROM THE WEST, DIDN'T KNOW WHEN THE INVASION WOULD COME BUT HE HAD BEEN INFORMED DAYS IN ADVANCE THAT WHENEVER IT CAME HE WOULD DRAW THE NO. 1 SPOT.

THE CIGAR-SMOKING 29-YEAR-OLD PARACHUTE TROOP OFFICER FROM SYRACUSE, N.Y., WAS TOLD OF HIS TRAIL BLAZING ASSIGNMENT ALONG WITH LT. COL. J. L. CROUCH OF 3296 LIME STREET, RIVERSIDE, CALIF., AND THEIR HAND-PICKED CREWS. CROUCH WAS THE PILOT OF THE BIG DOUGLAS C47 WHICH WAS THE LEAD PLANE OF THE PARACHUTE TROOP CARRIERS.

THEY ALL TRAINED TOGETHER WITH SECRET EQUIPMENT WHICH PERMITTED PIN POINT PRECISION LANDINGS SO THEY COULD DIRECT OTHER PARACHUTE TROOPS AND GLIDERS TO THE "DZ"--DROPPING ZONE. THE PARACHUTE TROOP CARRIERS WENT IN BY THE LIGHT OF THE MOON BEFORE THE ASSAULT ON THE FRENCH COAST FROM THE SEA.

(A DISPATCH FROM THE COMBAT TRANSPORT U.S.S. BARNETT SAID THAT CAPT. LEONARD T. SCHROEDER, 25, OF BALTIMORE, MD., MAY HAVE BEEN THE FIRST MAN TO REACH THE FRENCH BEACH FROM THE SEA.

JUN 9 1944

HIS PLANE WAS SHOT UP BADLY IN DIVE-BOMBING THE GERMANS NEAR THE BEACHHEAD SHORTLY AFTER H-HOUR.

A NAVY LAUNCH TOOK HIM TO THE WARSHIP AFTER HE HAD BAILED OUT IN THE CHANNEL. HE WAS "ABLE TO KEEP IN THE FIGHT" BY ASSISTING NAVAL OFFICERS IN COORDINATING THEIR GUNFIRE, COMMUNICATING ON THE RADIO IN THE SHIP CONTROLLER'S OFFICE WITH HIS FELLOW THUNDERBOLT PILOTS WHO WERE SPOTTING THE SHELLBURSTS.

JUN 9 1944

VANDEVENTER, WHO FLEW WITH THE RAF IN THE BATTLE OF BRITAIN, WAS LEADING A PATROL AT 24,000 FEET WHEN HE SPOTTED FOUR THUNDERBOLTS MIXING WITH THE GERMANS AT 5,000.

"OUR BOYS WERE GETTING THE WORST OF IT, TOO," HE SAID. "I CALLED OVER THE RADIO, 'TAKE IT EASY; OUR FLIGHT IS COMING', AND FLEW DOWN WITH MY BOYS AFTER ME."

JUN 9 1944

ONE OF THE EIGHT GERMANS BROKE OFF THE FIGHT AND HEADED INLAND. VANDEVENTER GAVE CHASE AND SHOT HIM DOWN AT A RANGE OF 50 YARDS. TEN MILES AWAY HE SPOTTED ANOTHER ME109 AT LOW ALTITUDE. BY FLYING 100 FEET ABOVE THE GROUND, VANDEVENTER GOT UNDER THE GERMAN AND GAVE HIM A FATAL BURST.

IT WAS THE SECOND DOUBLE KILL FOR VANDEVENTER, WHOSE HOME IS AT 6028 CLEMENS ST., ST.LOUIS. IN AFRICA LAST YEAR HE SHOT DOWN A FOCKE-WULF 190 AS IT WAS RISING FROM AN AIRPORT, AND GOT ANOTHER BY CLIPPING IT WITH HIS WING.

WE WERE HEADING FOR SHORE BUT WHEN ONLY 400 YARDS AWAY A SMALL U.S. CRAFT STRUCK A STRAY MINE AND EXPLODED IN A GREAT GEYSER OF WATER.

BIG NAVY LT. JOHN TRIPSON OF MISSION, TEX., FORMER DETROIT LIONS FOOTBALL PLAYER, ORDERED THE LANDING BOAT AROUND TO HELP PICK UP SURVIVORS. WHILE THE STRICKEN SHIP SMOKED AND THREE OTHER VESSELS MOVED IN TO AID, WE HAULED FROM THE WATER SIX SHIVERING, OIL-SMEARED SURVIVORS, TWO OF WHOM WERE CRYING PITEOUSLY FOR HELP. BIG JOHNNY SCOOPED ONE OUT OF A WAVE WITH ONE HAND.

30-24-16059

THEM WITH WARSHIPS SENDING GREAT FLASHING, BOOMING SHELL-BURSTS OVERHEAD, WE TURNED SHOREWARD TO AN EIGHTEENTH CENTURY MILITARY FORT.

FORCES OCCUPYING IT WERE BEING RELIEVED AND EVERY MAN AMONG THEM GINGERLY STEPPED ALONG CAREFULLY MARKED AREAS AROUND THE OLD STONE FORT, WHICH WAS SURROUNDED BY A DEEP MOAT.

"THIS IS THE MOST TREACHEROUS BIT OF GROUND THAT EVER EXISTED," SAID SGT. FREDERICK M. DAVIS, 5313 OLD HARFORD ROAD, BALTIMORE, MD. "THERE ARE MINES EVERY FIVE FEET."

HE POINTED TO STRIPS AROUND THE MOAT WHERE GERMAN SIGNS "ACHTUNG MINEN" WITH SKULL AND CROSSBONES STILL WERE IN PLACE.

WITH A U.S.COAST GUARD RESCUE FLOTILLA OFF THE FRENCH COAST, JUNE 6 DELAYED)-(AP)-FROM THIS 50-TON MATCH BOX OF A BOAT, LUCHING ABOUT ITHIN A FEW HUNDRED YARDS OF THE FRENCH COAST, I HAVE WATCHED OUR ROOPS DIG OUT A NARROW AND, AS YET, BITTERLY CONTESTED BEACHHEAD IN HE FIRST PHASE OF THE ALLIED INVASION ALONG THESE SHORES.

FOUR OF OUR COLUMNS ARE SLOWLY BEATING THEIR WAY INLAND UNDER EAVY GERMAN FIRE WHICH APPEARS TO BE COMING FROM WELL-CONCEALED BATTERIES, ALTHOUGH ALLIED BATTLESHIPS, CRUISERS AND DESTROYERS ARE IVING THE LANDING TROOPS MAGNIFICENT SUPPORT.

OUR TANKS ARE BEING LANDED NOW AND OUR NAVAL FIRE IS RIPPING UP THE INITIAL LANDING BEACH STRIP JUST IN FRONT OF OUR TROOPS IN AN AREA ABOUT A HALF A MILE WIDE.

OUR LITTLE VESSEL WAS ONE OF 50-ODD IN THIS FLOTILLA ASSIGNED TO ACCOMPANY THE INVADING TROOPS RIGHT TO THE SHORE'S EDGE AS A MOBILE RESCUE UNIT.

THE REA OFF WHICH WE NOW ARE STANDING IS JUST TO THE EAST OF THE CHERBOURG PENINSULA PROPER. A SERIES OF HILLS RISE RIGHT FROM THE WATER'S EDGE AND OUR COLUMNS HAVE JUST SURMOUNTED THESE AND ARE FIGHTING BEYOND THE CREST. OUR DESTROYERS ARE STANDING BROADSIDE TO THE BEACH AND ARE THROWING IN SHELLS POINT-BLANK AND ALSO LOBBING THEM OVER THE HILLS IN AN EFFORT TO GET THE GERMAN BATTERIES.

THE ENEMY IS AFTER ONE OF OUR DESTROYERS IN PARTICULAR AND JUST SPRAYED THESE WATERS WITH SHELL FIRE. OUR DESTROYERS ARE REPLYING THUNDEROUSLY AND, TO SEAWARD, CRUISERS AND BATTLESHIPS ARE JOINING IN.

THE BEACHHEAD SLOWLY IS BEING DEEPENED AND THE TROOP BUILDUP IS PROCEEDING FAST, BUT THE ENEMY ARTILLERY STILL HAS NOT BEEN SILENCED.

THREE OF OUR LANDING BOATS HAVE BEEN HIT UP TO NOW, WITHIN OUR SIGHT--TWO ARE BURNING AND ONE HAS BEEN CAPSIZED. WE JUST WENT IN NEAR SHORE TO FOLLOW A SINKING AMERICAN TROOP BARGE--HER ONLY TROUBLE WAS HER HEAVY LOAD AND SHE MADE IT AFTER ALL.

IT APPEARED ENEMY MORTARS STILL WERE OPERATING FROM CLOSE RANGE. WE WERE NEAR ENOUGH TO SEE EVERY DETAIL OF THE BEACH--IN FACT NEAR ENOUGH TO GET OCCASIONAL SMALL ARMS FIRE OVER OUR HEADS.

THE SKY PERIODICALLY IS FULL OF OUR PLANES BUT SO FAR--IT IS NOW 5 P.M.--WE HAVE YET TO SEE AN ENEMY PLANE.

OUR NAVAL FIRE--PARTICULARLY SALVOES FROM THE BATTLESHIPS--HAS LEVELED OFF ONE SECTION OF THE HILLS BEHIND WHICH THE ENEMY IS HOLDING ON. WAVE AFTER WAVE OF ALLIED LANDING CRAFT IS GOING IN.

OUR BOAT HAS YET TO PICK UP A CASUALTY, AND IN THIS AREA EVEN THE CASUALTIES ALONG THE BEACHHEAD ITSELF DO NOT APPEAR HEAVY. WE JUST TOOK OFF TWO SEABEES WHO LANDED ON THIS BEACH BY ERROR AND ARE HEADING FOR ANOTHER. THEY SAY IT IS GOING PRETTY WELL

(A COAST GUARD CORRESPONDENT WITH THE FLOTILLA REPORTED THAT THE MALL CUTTERS OPERATING WITH BOTH AMERICAN AND ENGLISH FORCES RESCUED AT AST 444 TROOPS AND SAILORS FROM DROWNING.

(THIS CORRESPONDENT SAID THAT A BOAT COMMANDED BY LT.(JG) R.V.MCMAIL GASTONIA, N.C., PICKED UP 126 SURVIVORS OF THREE SHIPS. ANOTHER NDER THE COMMAND OF LT.(JG) GORDON W.CRAFOS OF 523 EIGHTH ST., OAKLAND, ALIF., PULLED 32 ABOARD.)

ABOARD AMERICAN P-T BOATS, JUNE 7-(DELAYED)-(AP)-D-DAY IS NOW 24 HOURS OLD AND ON THIS SECTOR OF THE NEW FRONT EVERYTHING IS QUIET.

WE ARE PATROLLING ABOUT A MILE OFF THE FRENCH COAST, WHERE LANDINGS WERE MADE THROUGHOUT YESTERDAY, AND ALREADY THE FIGHTING HAS MOVED INLAND FOR A CONSIDERABLE DISTANCE.

THE EXPECTED GERMAN COUNTER-ATTACKS AGAINST OUR NAVAL FORCES IN THIS AREA FAILED TO DEVELOP IN ANY FORCE LAST NIGHT, ALTHOUGH BOMBING RAIDS WERE MADE AGAINST SHIPS FARTHER UP THE COAST.

A DOZEN LARGE FIRES WHICH STARTED ALONG THE WOODED COASTLINE DIED OUT THIS MORNING. THE MOST NOTICEABLE THING ABOUT THIS SECTION IS THE PREPONDERANCE OF ALLIED AIRCRAFT. NOT ONCE DURING THE DAYLIGHT HOURS HAVE WE SEEN AN UNFRIENDLY PLANE OVERHEAD, WHILE AMERICAN AND BRITISH PLANES ARE SO NUMEROUS THAT THE ROAR OF THEIR MOTORS IS CONTINUOUS.

FIGHTER-BOMBERS TOOK UP WHERE THE BATTLEHIPS LEFT OFF.

TWIN-ENGINED TRANSPORTS TOWED TROOP GLIDERS OVERHEAD ALL EVENING WHILE JUST SKIMMING THE WAVES WERE THE RETURNING TRANSPORTS, EMPTY AND UNARMED, SCURRYING BACK TO ENGLAND FOR ANOTHER LOAD.

THE GERMANS BLASTED AWAY WITH ANTI-AIRCRAFT FIRE AT THE RETURNING C-47S AS THEY SWEPT OVER UNATTACKED GERMAN POSITIONS, BUT WE FAILED TO SEE THEM SCORE A HIT ALL EVENING.

THE BRITISH BLACK PRINCE AND THE AMERICAN ARKANSAS OPENED THE ATTACK WITH A SERIES OF BROADSIDES WHICH SENT THOUSANDS OF TONS OF HIGH EXPLOSIVE WHISTLING THROUGH THE AIR TOWARD THE GERMAN-HELD COAST.

AN INVASION PORT, JUNE 7-(DELAYED)-IT WAS EASIER THAN EXPECTED, BUT NO PUSHOVER TODAY.

ONE PHASE OF THE STORY OF THE INVASION OF EUROPE WAS TOLD IN THE ARRIVAL OF BLOODY, MAIMED AND DEAD MEN AND IN THE STARK REPORTS OF THOSE WHO HAD BEEN BLASTED OFF THE BEACHES OR WHOSE SHIPS HAD BEEN BLOWN OUT FROM UNDER THEM AT THIS PORT.

I TALKED WITH DOZENS OF AMERICAN SOLDIERS AND SAILORS WHO TASTED THE BITTER WELCOME ON THE FRENCH COAST. SOME OF THEIR STORIES WERE HORROR-FILLED. OTHERS TREATED OF EPICAL HEROISM. BUT IN ALL THE STORIES WAS THE UNFORGETTABLE SPUNK OF AMERICAN FIGHTING MEN.

THOSE MEN ACTUALLY SANG AS THEY HEADED UP THE PERILOUS BEACHES. THEY LAUGHED AND JOKED AS THEY FACED THE MOST TERROR-FILLED TASK EVER TO CONFRONT AMERICAN FIGHTING MEN. EVEN AT THOSE BEACHES WHERE RESISTANCE WAS FIERCEST ALL AGREED THAT MORALE WAS AT TIP TOP PITCH.

A CAPTAIN TOLD OF A DEVASTATING ATTACK UPON HIS COMPANY OF SHERMAN TANKS AS IT WAS DISEMBARKING FROM FOUR LANDING SHIPS. HIS OWN TANK WAS HIT BY A GERMAN SHELL. HE AND HIS CREW CLAMBERED OUT INTO THE ROUGH WATER AND WERE CARRIED BY THE UNDERTOW A MILE OUT FROM SHORE. THEY INFLATED THEIR LIFE PRESERVERS AND THUS DRIFTED AN HOUR AND A HALF BEFORE BEING PICKED UP.

"WHILE I WAS FLOATING HELPLESSLY IN THE WATER I SAW 10 OF MY TANKS GET SAFELY ASHORE," RELATED THE CAPTAIN. "ONE HIT A LAND MINE AND THE DRIVER WAS KILLED. ONE OF MY LIEUTENANTS WAS KILLED ON A TANK WHICH WAS DEMOLISHED AND ANOTHER LIEUTENANT WAS WOUNDED BY SHRAPNEL ON THE BEACH. THIS LEFT MY ENTIRE COMPANY WITH BUT A SINGLE OFFICER TO COMMAND IT."

A VETERAN OF THE FIRST ASSAULT WAVES IN AFRICA AND SICILY, THE CAPTAIN SAID THE INVASION WAS THE MOST PERFECTLY TIMED AND CARRIED OUT OPERATION SO FAR IN THE WAR.

WOUNDED FROM A NAVAL PATROL CRAFT SUNK BY SHELLFIRE OF GERMAN SSS 6,000 YARDS OFFSHORE IN THE CHERBOURG AREA ALSO WERE EVACUATED TO THIS PORT. THIS CRAFT WAS THE LEAD SHIP OF THE ENTIRE INVASION FLEET.

A SHELL CRASHED AMIDSHIPS AND WITHIN THREE MINUTES THE VESSEL WENT UNDER. THE EXECUTIVE OFFICER STAYED ABOARD UNTIL ALL HANDS HAD ABANDONED SHIP. THEN HE DIVED FROM THE BRIDGE AS THE CRAFT PLUNGED AND HE LANDED HEADFIRST ON A LIFERAFT.

"IT WAS NOT A PLEASANT SENSATION, BUT I'M O.K.," HE SAID.

A JUNIOR OFFICER OF THIS PATROL CRAFT GAVE HIS LIFE RESCUING OTHER MEN, DRIVING ON HIS THIRD VENTURE INTO THE SEA.

SEAMAN FIRST CLASS CHARLES SPENCER, NIAGARA FALLS, N.Y., WAS IN THE CROW'S NEST WEN THE SHIP WAS HIT. HE WAS THROWN 90 FEET IN THE AIR A SENSATION HE DESCRIBED AS "LIKE A ROLLER COASTER," LANDED SAFELY IN THE WATER AMID THE WRECKAGE, AND WAS PICKED UP BY A RAFT.

JUN 9 1944

TWO FLYING FORTRESSES OVERHEAD WERE HIT BY FLAK, WITNESSES SAID, AND ONE DISINTEGRATED AND THE OTHER BURST INTO FLAMES.

GERMAN SSS FIRED AT THE BOW DOORS OF TANK LANDING SHIPS AS THEY PULLED UP TO THE BEACHES.

RADIOMAN CHARLES EDWARDS, MANHATTAN, KAS., TOLD OF OVERHEARING A CREWMAN ABOARD ONE LST SAY, AS A SHELL WHISTLED HIGH OVER HEAD:

"THOSE GUYS CAN'T SHOOT."

JUN 9 1944

JUST THEN ANOTHER SHELL BARELY MISSED THE SHIP.

"OH YES THEY CAN," THE SEAMAN HASTILY AMENDED.

SURVIVORS OF AN ANTI-AIRCRAFT BOAT SUNK BY A MINE SAID IT WENT DOWN WITHIN TWO MINUTES, 20 OF ITS CREW KILLED BY THE EXPLOSION.

SEAMAN FIRST CLASS JOSEPH POLCHLOPK, DETROIT, MICH., WAS MANNING A GUN WHEN, AS HE PUT IT, THE SHIP SEEMED TO FOLD IN HALF. HE WENT OVERBOARD ON A RAFT. A COAST GUARD BOAT PICKED HIM UP.

SEAMAN FIRST CLASS WALTER MATISTIC, DIXON, PA., WAS IN THE ENGINEROOM WHEN THE MINE WAS STRUCK. HE MADE HIS WAY TO DECK AND DIVED OVERBOARD JUST AS THE SHIP SANK.

"WHILE IN THE BOAT I LOOKED UP AND SAW TWO ME-109S CHASING A P-38," HE RELATED. "THE P-38 DIVED AND ZOOMED UP UNDER THEM WITH ALL GUNS BLAZING. ONE MESSERSCHMITT EXPLODED IMMEDIATELY AND THE OTHER WENT DOWN IN THE CHANNEL IN FLAMES."

AT ONE POINT ALONG THE INVASION COAST WHERE THE FIRST WAVE HIT YESTERDAY MORNING EIGHT LCVPS WERE SUNK IN SHALLOW WATER WHEN A PILL-BOX OPENED FIRE JUST AS THEY PULLED IN. BUT MOST VEHICLES AND PERSONNEL GOT ASHORE.

WHEN SIGNALMAN FIRST CLASS WALLACE WOODYARD, PULASKI, VA., WHO TOLD THE STORY, STARTED BACK TO ENGLAND ON ONE OF THE CRAFT, HE SAW A RIFLE SQUAD MOVING IN A WIDE ARC AROUND THE PILLBOX. WHETHER THE SOLDIERS EXTERMINATED IT HE DID NOT KNOW.

FIRST TO BE UNLOADED ON THE PIER WERE THE LITTER CASES, SERIOUSLY INJURED AND DYING. THEY WERE RUSHED AWAY IN AMBULANCES. NEXT CAME THE WALKING CASES. THEN THE SEA SURVIVORS AND THE UNINJURED DEBARKED AND FINALLY THE DEAD WERE CARRIED ASHORE.

WITH THE COAST GUARD RESCUE FLOTILLA IN ENGLAND, JUNE 8--THE TOTAL OF ALLIED SURVIVORS PULLED FROM THE ICY WATERS OF THE ENGLISH CHANNEL AND RESCUED FROM BURNING AND SINKING VESSELS HAS MOUNTED TO SEVERAL HUNDREDS.

ALL COASTGUARD VESSELS RETURNED SAFELY TO THE HOME PORT WITH NO LOSS OF LIFE, ALTHOUGH THE GREATER PART OF THE CRAFT WERE NARROWLY MISSED BY BOMBING, SHORE BATTERIES AND MINES DURING THE FIRST TWO DAYS OF OPERATIONS.

ENSIGN FRED OBERSHEIMER OF BUFFALO, N.Y., WAS REPEATEDLY STRAFED BY DIVING GERMAN PLANES AND BARELY MISSED BY A BOMB AS HIS RESCUE VESSEL WAS OPERATING IN AN AREA A SHORT DISTANCE OFF THE BEACH.

A U.S. NAVAL PATROL CRAFT WAS HIT BY SHORE BATTERIES AND A MINE, AND A VESSEL COMMANDED BY LT. (JG) RICHARD V. MC PHAIL RUSHED TO ITS ASSISTANCE. FROM THE PATROL CRAFT AND A HIGGINS BOAT WRECK A NUMBER OF MEN WERE SAVED.

AMONG THE SURVIVORS WAS LT.CLAYTON OBERSHEIMER, USNR., OF BUFFALO, N.Y., EXECUTIVE OFFICER OF THE PC AND BROTHER OF THE ENSIGN IN COMMAND OF THE RESCUE VESSEL A FEW HUNDRED YARDS AWAY. THE NAVAL OFFICER'S INJURIES WERE NOT SERIOUS.

ONE COAST GUARDSMAN WHO NEVER SWAM BEFORE JUMPED OVERBOARD AND FLOUNDERED HIS WAY TO A BURNING LANDING CRAFT LOADED WITH AMMUNITION, MOMENTARILY EXPECTED TO EXPLODE. HE PUT A LINE AROUND THE ONE REMAINING SURVIVOR WHOSE LEGS WERE BADLY INJURED, AND GOT HIM TO THE COAST GUARD VESSEL. THE COAST GUARDSMAN WAS ARTHUR E.BURKHARD OF 642 EAST ALLEN GROVE ST., PHILADELPHIA.

JUN 9 1944

A VESSEL COMMANDED BY ENSIGN MORRIS A.NEMER OF MINNEAPOLIS, MINN., FORMER MIDDLEWEIGHT WRESTLING CHAMPION OF THE BIG TEN AND FORMER HEAD OF THE KIU JITSU DEPARTMENT AT MANHATTAN BEACH STATION, HELPED A CRIPPLED LANDING CRAFT ASHORE TO BE UNLOADED, THEN WAS DAMAGED BY CRASHING AGAINST ANOTHER LANDING CRAFT UNDER HEAVY ENEMY FIRE. CAUSE OF THE MISHAP WAS A BROKEN HAWSER. DAMAGE WAS QUICKLY ESTIMATED AND THE COAST GUARD VESSEL PUT TO SEA AGAIN.

ABOARD U.S. ASSAULT TRANSPORT THOMAS JEFFERSON, JUNE 7-(DELAYED)-(AP)-THE COXSWAINS OF OUR SMALL LANDING BOATS CAN TAKE IT.

FOR TWO DAYS AND NIGHTS THEY FACED TERRIFIC FIRE FROM SHORE BATTERIES AND MACHINE-GUNS AND TOOK THEIR BOATS THROUGH MINEFIELDS AND UNDERWATER OBSTACLES, THROUGH BLINDING SMOKE AND GUNFIRE, TO LAND THE FIRST WAVES OF SOLDIERS ON THE NORMANDY BEACHES.

THIS SHIP IS MAKING ITS FOURTH SUCCESSFUL INVASION. IT WAS ALSO AT MOROCCO, SICILY AND SALERNO.

TWENTY-FOUR BOATS, LANDING CRAFT FOR VEHICLES AND PERSONNEL, MADE SECOND TRIPS TO TAKE SOLDIERS FROM TWO OTHER TRANSPORTS. AL RETURNED SAFELY AND NOT A SINGLE SAILOR LOST HIS LIFE, ALTHOUGH SOME SOLDIERS WERE KILLED WHILE IN THE BOATS AND ON LEAVING. SOME OF THE SAILORS SUFFERED MINOR SCRATCHES AND BRUISES FROM AN EXTREMELY ROUGH SEA.

THESE RUGGED YOUTHS RETURNED TO THE SHIP SOAKING WET, EXHAUSTED AND COLD. THEY RAISED THEIR BOATS AT OUR SHIP TO DRAIN THE WATER OUT OF THEM, REMOVE THE DEAD AND WOUNDED AND THEN GO ASHORE AGAIN. MANY HAD TO STAND REGULAR SEA WATCHES.

COMMANDER JOSEPH R.BARBARO, 44, OF WINCHESTER, MASS., OUR SKIPPER, GAVE GREAT CREDIT TO THE BOAT CREWS.

IN CHARGE OF THE BOATS WAS LT.WILLIAM D.STEEL, 24 OF 6 PHENIX ST., HEMPSTEAD, LONG ISLAND, N.Y., A VETERAN OF FOUR INVASIONS.

WITH THE ALLIED ARMIES IN FRANCE, JUNE 7--(DELAYED)--UP AT THE FRONT WHILE THE INFANTRY ENGAGES THE ENEMY ON A HALF DOZEN SECTORS IN A CONFUSED BUT PURPOSEFUL PATTERN, A GREAT ARMORED BATTLE GOES ON FOR THE LAST RIDGE BEFORE THIS TARGET TOWN AND FOR THE TOWN ITSELF.

I WAS UP THERE LATE YESTERDAY. OUR TANKS WERE CLEARLY VISIBLE ALONG THE NEAR SIDE OF THE RIDGE. OUR GUNS WERE HIDDEN IN COPSES. OUR INFANTRY, IN LITTLE SECTIONS IN INDIAN FILE, WAS MOVING UP IN SUPPORT.

ON THE OTHER SIDE OF THE RIDGE WERE PANZERS AND SOMEWHERE OUT OF SIGHT ANTI-TANK GUNS. SIX BRITISH TANKS THAT HAD BEEN PUT OUT OF ACTION WERE STREWN ABOUT ON THE NEARER SLOPES. A TANK BATTLE WAS IN FULLY FURY THEN.

ON THE WAY BACK HERE I PASSED A STEADY STREAM OF BRITISH ARMOR, ROLLING UP SO RAPIDLY THAT ROADS AND VILLAGES WERE WRAPPED IN A DUST STORM.

30.24 - 16063

VILLAGERS LINED THE ROADSIDE TO WATCH AND CHEER. THEY LEAPED AND DANCED AND CUT CAPERS. THEY SHOUTED IN JOY AND SANG AND EMBRACED EVERY KHAKI-CLAD FIGURE IN SIGHT.

THESE HUNGRY FRENCH FOLK HAD NOTHING TO GIVE THE PASSING TANKMEN EXCEPT GRATITUDE. GRINNING TANKMEN FLUNG OUT CHOCOLATE, CIGARETTES AND SWEETS. AND SOMEHOW WITHIN A FEW HOURS OF THE LANDING EVERY FRENCH BOY HAD A BRITISH BADGE ON HIS BERET AND EVERY GIRL ONE ON HER BLOUSE.

ON THE BEACH IN NORMANDY, JUNE 7-(DELAYED)-(AP)-SHOCKING EVIDENCE OF DEATH AND DESTRUCTION STILL DOMINATED THESE THREE MILES OF BEACH ACROSS WHICH ALLIED ARMIES DROVE INTO FRANCE YESTERDAY, BUT THE THREAT OF DISASTER WAS NBING WAY SWIFTLY BEFORE THE AMERICANS' HARD-WON ADVANCE INTO NORMANDY.

BEFORE NOON SOLDIERS WHO YESTERDAY WERE BARELY HANGING ONTO THIS WRECK-STREWN BIT OF SAND AND ROCK, WERE FIGHTING THEIR WAY FORWARD TO THE DEEPEST PENETRATION YET SCORED IN THIS SECTOR. ON THE RIGHT FLANK TWO COMBAT TEAMS WERE EDGING CAUTIOUSLY FORWARD AND WERE A MILE TO TWO MILES INLAND. I HEARD MACHINE-GUNS POPPING AND GRENADES AND MORTARS BOOMING WHILE AMERICANS MOPPED UP PATROLS WHO HAD CLUNG DESPERATELY TO THIS SECTOR, ALTHOUGH BY-PASSED ON EACH SIDE ALL ALONG.

A CONSIDERABLE AMOUNT OF MOPPING UP REMAINED TO BE DONE, AS I LEARNED QUICKLY WHEN I CLIMBED UP FROM THE CONFUSION OF THE BEACH TO THE GENTLY ROLLING UPLAND. PROMPTLY I HEARD A SNIPER'S BULLET SINGING PAST MY EAR, MISSING BY A FEW FEET THAT SEEMED MUCH MORE LIKE INCHES.

DESPITE THE STILL NASTY SURF WHICH SHOWED SIGNS OF SUBSIDING TOWARD MIDDAY, AND THE HAZARDS OF SCORES OF WRECKED OR FOUNDERED BOATS AND VEHICLES, SUPPLIES WERE POURING IN WITHOUT ENEMY INTERFERENCE BY BULLET, SHELL OR BOMB. TANKS WERE COMING; TRUCKS, BULL-DOZERS, MEDICAL SUPPLIES, AMMUNITION, COMMUNICATIONS EQUIPMENT AND ALL THE REST OF THE VITAL PARAPHERNALIA OF WAR -- FLOWING IN TO REPLACE TONS OF MATERIAL LOST IN THE INITIAL DRIVE TO THE ENEMY AND TO NATURE.

EVACUATION OF THE WOUNDED, WHICH WAS BEGINNING ONLY FITFULLY WHEN I REACHED THE BEACH, LAST NIGHT WAS BEING STEPPED UP, BUT STILL THERE WERE DOZENS HIT YESTERDAY AND TODAY WHO HAD TO WAIT THEIR TURN IN THE OUTGOING HOSPITAL SHIPS. THE DEAD STILL LAY MUCH AS THEY FELL, SINCE THERE WAS NO TIME YET FOR BURIAL PARTIES.

EVERYTHING FROM MEDICAL SYRINGES TO GIANT POWER CRANES AND TANKS WAS LOST IN YESTERDAY'S MELEE. WALKING ALONG THE NO MORE THAN THREE-QUARTERS OF A MILE OF SHORE LAST NIGHT I SAW THREE BURNING LCT'S (LANDING CRAFT, TANKS) AND A HALF DOZEN MORE SUNK OFF SHORE, AN LCI (LANDING CRAFT, INFANTRY) ALSO BURNING, AND ANOTHER LYING ON ITS SIDE. BULKY RHINO FERRIES AND THEIR STORES OF IMPORTANT HEAVY TOOLS WERE BOGGED DOWN IN THE SAND AND SOME HAD BEEN BLOWN UP TO FREE THE LANDING AREAS.

DEMOLITION OF UNDERWATER OBSTACLES REALLY BEGAN ON AN EFFECTIVE SCALE ON TODAY'S EARLY LOW TIDE AND IT WAS LOUD. I KNOW BECAUSE I WAS TRYING TO SLEEP IN A FOXHOLE JUST OFF THE BEACH AND I KNOW IT WAS EFFECTIVE BECAUSE TODAY I SAW MUCH MORE OF THE BEACH CLEARED.

OUR TROOPS LOOKED WORN AND HAGGARD BUT NOT FEARFUL, AS THEY SAW MORE REINFORCEMENTS PILING IN, AND PARTICULARLY AS THEY SAW NO WEAKENING OF THE AIR COVER. ANY LESSENING OF THAT COVER YESTERDAY WOULD HAVE BEEN THE START OF ANOTHER SALERNO OR WORSE.

30.24 - 16063

BAD WEATHER PROBABLY WAS THE CHIEF CAUSE OF THE AMERICAN'S RELATIVELY HEAVY LOSS OF MEN IN BREAKING INTO THE BEACHES.

IT IS PROBABLE THAT, IF THE WEATHER HAD PERMITTED MORE EXACT INTELLIGENCE DATA ON STRONG POINTS RECENTLY INSTALLED ALONG THIS STRETCH, THE PRELIMINARY BOMBARDMENT BY BOTH PLANES AND NAVAL GUNS COULD HAVE BEEN MADE MORE EFFECTIVE. BUT CERTAINLY WITHOUT THE INTELLIGENCE WE DID HAVE AND ITS APPLICATION BY THE NAVY AND AIR FORCE, LOSSES TO ENEMY FIRE POWER WOULD HAVE BEEN MULTIPLIED.

TWENTY-FIRST ARMY GROUP HEADQUARTERS, JUNE 8--NAVAL SHELLS AND AERIAL BOMBS MADE THE MOST NOISE ALONG THE FRENCH COAST INVASION DAY, BUT A YOUNG CANADIAN LIEUTENANT WHO WADED ASHORE DURING THE FIRST FEW HELLISH HOURS OF BATTLE SAID TODAY THAT IT WAS MAINLY A DOUGHBOYS' SHOW.

OUR NAVY AND AIRCRAFT HAD NEUTRALIZED THE ENEMY'S COASTAL BATTERIES, BUT THE FIRST THING OUR INFANTRY RAN INTO WAS A SERIES OF HUGE CAMOFLAUGED PILLBOXES WITH CONCRETE WALLS TEN TO A DOZEN FEET THICK, SAID FIRST LT. W.H. NAYLOR OF TORONTO.

THE PILLBOXES WERE SO WELL HIDDEN THEY LARGELY ESCAPED THE PRELIMINARY BOMBARDMENT ALTHOUGH IN THE FEW WHICH SUFFERED DIRECT HITS FROM NAVAL SHELLS THE INVADERS FOUND GERMAN SOLDIERS STILL AT THEIR GUNS--DEAD FROM CONCUSSION, NAYLOR SAID.

INFANTRYMEN WHO SNIPED AND BLASTED THEIR WAY INTO THESE CONCRETE FORTRESSES, KILLING OR CAPTURING THE NAZI DEFENDERS, FOUND THE PILLBOXES HEAVILY ARMED WITH MEDIUM CALIBRE ARTILLERY AND MACHINE-GUNS AND WELL STOCKED BOTH WITH FOOD AND AMMUNITION.

THE LIEUTENANT SAID THAT MINEFIELDS WERE CLEARLY MARKED BY THE GERMANS WITH YELLOW SKULL-AND-CROSSBONES INSIGNIA AND SUCH SIGNS AS "ACHTUNG."

THE LIEUTENANT EXPREESSED SURPRISE AT THE COURAGE AND HARDIHOOD OF THE FRENCH FAMILIES IN THE VICINITY. THE PEOPLE APPARENTLY HAD NOT BEEN EVACUATED AT ALL, HE SAID. THEY SIMPLY HAD DUG SLIT TRENCHES AND HID DURING THE PRELIMINARY BOMBARDMENT. THEIR LOSSES WERE SMALL. CITIZENS TOLD THE MEN LANDING THAT 13 OUT OF A TOWN OF 800 LOST THEIR LIVES. THEY WELCOMED THE ALLIES HAPPILY AND TRADESMEN SOON WERE BACK IN BUSINESS OFFERING CHAMPAGNE, CHICKENS AND EGGS TO ALL COMERS. HOWEVER, THE TROOPS WERE UNDER ORDERS NOT TO BUY ANY FOOD.

LONDON, JUNE 4-(AP)-ALLIED FORMATIONS WERE HEARD FLYING OUT ACROSS THE DOVER STRAIT TOWARD THE PAS DE CALAIS AREA OF FRANCE TODAY AFTER RAF BOMBERS LAST NIGHT ATTACKED LUDWIGSHAFEN, GERMANY, AND OBJECTIVES ON THE FRENCH COAST, AND LAID MINES IN ENEMY WATERS WITHOUT THE LOSS OF A SINGLE AIRCRAFT.

JUN 9 1944

THE SKY WAS OVERCAST IN THE STRAIT AS THE DAYLIGHT FORMATIONS ROARED OUT. THE PLANES WERE ABOVE THE CLOUDS AS THEY PASSED OVER FOLKESTONE FLYING IN A SOUTHEASTERLY DIRECTION.

THE ALLIED FORMATIONS CROSSING THE STRAIT CONSTITUTED A GOOD SIZE FORCE. FOR AN HOUR BETWEEN 1 AND 2 P.M. (7 AND 8 A.M. EWT) AIRCRAFT WERE RETURNING FROM THE PAS DE CALAIS AREA. THESE INCLUDED THUNDERBOLTS BUT MANY OTHER FORMATIONS WERE ABOVE THE CLOUDS. JUN 9 1944

FROM THE FOLKESTONE SIDE PEOPLE SAW A TRAIL OF GERMAN ROCKET SHELLES FIRED AT SOME OF THE ALLIED AIRCRAFT BETWEEN CALAIS AND BOULOGNE.

LT.COL.GEORGE SHACKLEY, GREENWOOD LAKE,N.J., WHO LED A LARGE FORTRESS FORMATION FLYING IN A PLANE PILOTED BY CAPT.GEORGE SANDMAN, STOCKTON, CALIF., SAID: "THERE WAS HAZE UP TO 20,000 FEET BUT WE HAD NO TROUBLE PICKING OUT OUR TARGET. WE SAW IT FROM MORE THAN 30 MILES AWAY. THERE WAS ONLY A LITTLE BIT OF FLAK. THE BEACHES WERE CROWDED WITH LANDING CRAFT AND THERE WERE MANY SHIPS CROSSING THE CHANNEL ON THE WAY TO FRANCE THIS MORNING. JUN 9 1944

"WE SAW A LOT OF FRIENDLY FIGHTER ACTIVITY BELOW US BUT THE LUFTWAFFE SIMPLY WAS NOT PRESENT WHEN WE WENT OVER."

LT.CHESTER STORY, GLOBE, ARIZ., NAVIGATOR OF A B-17 SAID THAT "COMING OVER THE CHANNEL WE SAW BATTLESHIPS AND TROOPSHIPS HEADING FOR THE SHORE."

"ABOUT 20 FW-190S PAINTED YELLOW AND GREEN HUNG ABOVE OUR FORMATION IN THE SUN," SAID SGT.PAUL SASS, WAIST GUNNER, 467 SO.22ND ST., COLUMBUS, OHIO. "THEY DIDN'T CLOSE IN ON US THEY JUST FOLLOWED THE FORMATION-WATCHING."

SGT.EDWARD DOUGHERTY, 1000 JEFFERSON ST., WILMINGTON, DEL., FORT COMBAT CAMERAMAN, SAID: "THE COAST WAS A MASS OF BOMB CRATERS."

CAPT.DELMER EVERLY, 128 EAST ROBARD AVE., BROOKFIELD, MO., PILOT OF THE FORTRESS "LITTLE BUTCH" SAID HE SAW NO ENEMY AIRCRAFT AND "ONLY A HANDFUL" OF FLAK.

"WE WERE KEYED UP TO INVASION SPIRIT BUT OVER FRANCE THE INCREASED OPPOSITION WE EXPECTED WAS CONSPICUOUSLY ABSENT," HE SAID.

LT.CHARLES WRIGHT, 743 DELREY CT., LONG BEACH, CALIF., A NAVIGATOR, SAID: "WE CROSSED THE FRENCH COAUT THROUGH CLOUD BANKS BUT WHEN WE DREW UP OUR TARGET THINGS CLEARED UP ENOUGH FOR US TO SEE THE OBJECTIVES CLEARLY."

LT.GEORGE JOYCE, 1090 AMSTERDAM AVE., NEW YORK CITY, A BOMBARDIER, HAD THIS TO SAY: "I SAW NO SIGNS OF LIFE IN ANY OF THE CITIES, VILLAGES OR ROADWAYS WE FLEW OVER."

SGT.HENRY L.KROGER, 207 RICE ST., ELMORE, OHIO, A NOSE TURRET GUNNER, SAID THAT THE FORTRESSES HAD TO CONTEND WITH SOME "MEAN WEATHER."

"THERE WERE PATCHY CLOUDS BLANKETING THE NORMANDY BATTLEFIELD, BUT THE SUN BROKE THROUGH OCCASIONALLY," HE ADDED.

London, Jun 8-(AP)-- A berlin DNB broadcast today said allied forces which landed on the english channel islands of gu and Jersey had been wiped out. JUN 9 1944

Allied headquarters has never mentioned any landings o the islands off the west coast of the cherbourg peninsula.

The broadcast, presenting a picture of heavy allied losses and strong german defenses, said Field Marshal karl gerd von r sted so far has sent into action only part of his forces.

LONDON, JUNE 8-(AP)-CALMER WEATHER PREVAILED IN DOVER STRAIT TODAY WITH A VERY LIGHT BUT VARIABLE SOUTHWESTERLY BREEZE RUFFLING THE SURFACE OF THE SEA. A LIGHT FILM OF CLOUD OBSCURED THE SUN DURING THE EARLY FORENOON AND SEA LEVEL VISIBILITY WAS RESTRICTED BY HAZE.

THE BAROMETER REMAINED STEADY AND THE TEMPERATURE HOVERED JUST ABOVE 50 DEGREES.

THE SKY CLEARED BY 10 A.M. AND THERE WERE CONTINUOUS SUNNY PERIODS. IT WAS A LITTLE WARMER, DESPITE A FRESHENING BREEZE FROM WEST-NORTHWEST THE SEA WAS MODERATE, WITH VISIBILITY FROM THREE TO FOUR MILES.

NEW YORK, JUNE 8-(AP)-THE FRENCH TOWN OF VIRE, ABOUT 35 MILES SOUTH OF THE NORMANDY COAST INVASION BEACHES, HAS BEEN "COMPLETELY DESTROYED," SAID CAPT.KALMAR MASTER, OF PORTLAND, ORE., IN A BROADCAST FROM ENGLAND CARRIED LAST NIGHT BY CBS.

MASTER, WHO FLEW AS AN OBSERVER IN A MARAUDER BOMBER OVER FRANCE, WAS INTERVIEWED SHORTLY AFTER HE RETURNED. HE DID NOT EXPLAIN HOW THE TOWN HAD BEEN DESTROYED.

NEW YORK, JUNE 8-(AP)-"WE ARE BACK INTO FRANCE."

THUS BBC CORRESPONDENT GUY BYAM SHARTED HIS BROADCAST FROM THE INVASION BEACHHEAD, SAID BQ TME BRITISH BRMADCASTING COMPANY TO BE THE FIRST RECORDING MADE ON FRENCH SOIL SINCE THE NAZIS TOOK OVER.

BYAM TOLD HOW HE FLEW FROM ENGLAND WITH BRITISH PARATROOPERS, BAILED OUT "INTO THE COOL AIR OVER FRANCE," AND LANDED IN A CORNFIELD.

FLAK, HUNDREDS OF PARACHUTES AND TRACER BULLETS FILLED THE SKY, HE SAID.

THE PARATROOPERS CAPTURED A BRIDGE AND A CANAL AND REPELLED AN ATTACK BY PANZER FORMATIONS, ACCORDING TO THE BBC CORRESPONDENT, WHO SAID:

"THE FRENCH PEOPLE ARE ABOUT THE STREETS. THEY ARE PLEASED TO SEE US AND WE APOLOGIZE FOR BRINGING WAR TO THEIR HOME. IN LITTLE WAYS THEY SAY THEY ARE VERY GLAD TO SEE US. A DEAD PARATROOPER IS LAID OUT ON A BED IN THE BEST ROOM, COVERED FROM HEAD TO FOOT WITH LOCAL FLOWERS. VERY TYPICAL OF THE SORT OF THING THEY DO. SMALL THINGS, SMALL GESTURES, BUT WE KNOW THEY ARE GLAD WE ARE HERE."

BYAM'S RECORDING WAS FLOWN TO LONDON FOR TRANSMISSION BY BBC, THEN RECORDED AND REBROADCAST BY BLUE NETWORK TODAY.

YORK, JUNE 8-(AP)-ROCK_. SHIPS USED IN THE INVASION OF FRANCE "DISCHARGE VAST QUANTITIES OF EXPLOSIVE ONTO BEACHES MUCH MORE QUICKLY THAN HAS EVER BEEN DONE BEFORE BY A WARSHIP," THE BRITISH INFORMATION SERVICES SAID TODAY. USE OF THE ROCKET SHIPS WAS DISCLOSED AT ALLIED EXPEDITIONARY HEADQUARTERS.

"THE ROCKET SHIPS WERE DEVELOPED AS A RESULT OF EXPERIENCES IN THE DIEPPE RAID," THE BRITISH AGENCY SAID. "THE ACTUAL DESTRUCTION THEY CAUSE IS NOT SO GREAT AS IN NORMAL BOMBARDMENT SINCE THERE IS NO SPLINTER, BUT A BLAST FROM THESE WEAPONS HAS A TERRIFIC EFFECT ON THE MORALE OF PERSONNEL ANYWHERE NEAR THE RECEIVING END. GREAT NAVIGATIONAL SKILL IS NEEDED TO BRING THESE SHIPS TO THE PLACE OF ACTION."

THE SHIPS WERE DESCRIBED AS A NEW SECRET BRITISH NAVAL WEAPON.

MW938AEW NE 8-(AP)-ADMIRAL HAR[illegible] RAYNSFORD STARK, COMMANDER OF U[illegible] ORCES IN EUROPEAN WATERS, TONIGHT PRAISED THE SUCCESSFUL LANDING OF [illegible]LIED TROOPS IN EUROPEAN WATERS BUT ADDED " I DO NOT WISH EVEN FOR A SINGLE MOMENT TO CONVEY THE IMPRESSION THAT WE HAVE ANYTHING LIKE EASY SAILING."

SPEAKING ON THE MARCH OF TIME PROGRAM OVER NBC NETWORK, HE DECLARED: "THE TOUGHNESS OF THE DAYS IMMEDIATELY AHEAD AND OF THE DAYS BEYOND MUST NOT BE MINIMIZED. OUR COMBINED NAVIES AND MERCHANT NAVIES ARE PROVIDING A BRIDGE TO FRANCE--A BRIDGE FROM A FREE WORLD TO A WORLD IN BONDAGE. ACROSS THIS BRIDGE AN ARMY OF LIBERATION IS STREAMING AT THIS MOMENT. WE HAVE GAINED A TOEHOLD. WE HAVE WON THE FIRST ROUND."

Americans Sever Cherbourg Road: Nazis Lose 2 Destroyers Marshall, Arnold, King Arrive in London

JUN 10 1944

Tanks Battle To Break Nazi Grip on Caen

JUN 10 1944

SUPREME HEADQUARTERS ALLIED EXPEDITIONARY FORCE, Saturday, June 10.—(AP) Allied air power roared back to the support of the French invasion during the night after bad weather that found the American, British and Canadian ground forces advancing against hard-fighting Germans on the Cherbourg peninsula and southwest of Bayeux without their accustomed aerial aid.

Shortly before dawn today it was announced that R.A.F. heavy bombers went out over France in strength during the darkness. Their targets were not disclosed immediately.

Even without the vital weapon of air support, Allied headquarters announced in a post-midnight communique that an American flying wedge of parachutists and infantrymen had cut the main German communications lines to the potentially great landing-port of Cherbourg by capturing the town of Ste. Mere Eglise and sweeping on across the broad-gauge Cherbourg peninsular railway and the parallel highway in heavy fighting, and that repeated German naval attempts to interfere with the beachhead operations had been nipped at their inception.

400,000 Reported Fighting

Axis broadcasts said 400,000 men were fighting in Normandy, about 200,000 on each side, and that Allied reinforcements had been pouring into the beaches all Friday night with many tanks.

A late front-line Allied dispatch from the Caen area, scene of the heaviest armored combat of the whole front, described Allied tank convoys coming through in endless columns.

Points In Communique

The communique gave these additional points in reporting the fourth day of the Allied invasion of Normandy:

Further Allied gains have been made west and southwest of captured Bayeux:

Heavy fighting continues in all areas;

Fighting is severe in the area of Caen, where the Germans are making a desperate effort to stop the British-Canadian advance;

The weight of armor on both sides is increasing;

Numerous enemy strong-points that originally were by-passed have now been eliminated;

The weather has deteriorated but the beachheads nevertheless are being developed steadily;

Poor visibility and stormy weather cut air activity to a minimum;

Eight British, Canadian and Polish destroyers blew up a German destroyer, ran another aground and damaged two off Ushant island near the Brittany peninsula before dawn Friday; and an American-led destroyer force intercepted a force of heavy armed German light craft and drove them off the beachhead area in the vicinity of the St. Marcouf isles in the Seine bay.

The previous communique, issued Friday shortly before noon, had announced continuing gains in all sectors.

Germans Admit Gains

The Germans said the Americans had advanced another mile beyond Ste. Mere Eglise, which is 18 miles southeast of Cherbourg, and intimated that the weak secondary roads left to the Nazis in the peninsula were already threatened if not broken by Allied parachutists who, the enemy said, were operating on the other side of the peninsula near Lessay, bottleneck of the westcoast road and a small spur railway.

The Americans, commanded by Lt. Gen. Omar Bradley, who himself was in the field, also made gains on the southeast flank of their 28-mile stretch of beachhead and capturing Formigny, midway east between St. Mere Eglise and Bayeux.

West and southwest of Bayeux the Allies held onto an important hill and poured their armor into a fight that may prove to be the key to the tank battleground between Bayeux and Caen.

The fiercest fighting of the whole invasion swirled around Caen, nine miles inland from the bay of the Seine, where at least two German panzer divisions were trying to hold that strong-point and win maneuverable control of the good tank- fighting zone to the west.

Heavy Armor In Action

The headquarters communique made clear that the Allies also were getting their heavy armor into action and that the Germans had not been able to out-match it.

It was disclosed that the Allies have taken 4,000 to 5,000 prisoners since the invasion began.

Near the Allied left flank in the Caen sector the British and Canadians withstood a furious German armored counterattack.

One German spearhead gouged into the Canadian lines, said a front dispatch, but was thrown back again.

The whole Bayeux-Caen front was described as ablaze.

Troops Make Progress

The Americans, personally commanded in the field by Lt. Gen. Omar Bradley, and the British and Canadians all are making "satisfactory progress," headquarters said, despite stiffening German resistance and ominously deteriorating weather that stopped virtually all air operations and hampered reinforcement of the beachheads.

The Germans acknowledged that the Americans had taken Ste. Mere Eglise, which is five and one-half miles inland on a main road, and advanced a mile farther northwest to positions about 17 miles southeast of the big port of Cherbourg.

It was announced by the Allies that American parachute troops who landed on D-Day near Ste. Mere Eglise had carried out the most successful airborne operation in history. Some French parachutists went along as guides.

The Americans, having linked up their airborne and ground troops, were fanning out in two directions from the center of their beachhead near Carentan at the neck of the peninsula, and had taken more than 800 prisoners.

Place names remained scarce in the news from the sprawling beachheads, which now extended over 60 miles, from just east of Caen to the vicinity of Ste. Mere Eglise in depths varying from a mile or so to more than ten.

Germans Admit Retreats

The Germans conceded that one beachhead was nine miles deep along the Orne river to Caen and that a wedge had been driven through Bayeux and five miles on southwest towards St. Lo—a depth of ten miles.

Supreme Allied headquarters said the main German counter-attack in the Caen area was held and ground was gained by the Allies. The Germans said a tank battle at Caen was raging towards a climax.

The weight of armor on both sides was increasing at numerous points, and field dispatches from Allied correspondents said the assembling of German tanks and infantry foretokened strong new attacks against the Allies in the early future.

Near the east flank of the Allied front, the Canadians fought off German tank attacks over open sights at 200 yards in an armored battle described as the largest yet fought since the invasion began Tuesday.

The British and Canadians were disclosed to have landed originally in the region of Berniers Sur Mer, 10 miles west of the Orne river mouth, and to have quickly captured Berniers. Field dispatches today said the British and Canadians had joined in the drive on Caen. The Canadian third division was one of those in action.

Canadians Take Villages

It was announced that besides Berniers, coastal villages taken by the Canadians and British the first day included Courseulles, St. Aubin, Lion, Luc, Ouistreham and Hangrune.

As the Allied beachheads slowly merged and took shape as a continuous front, the weather grew worse and was described as almost as great an enemy as the German troops.

Winds, waves, clouds and rain have interfered with the operations since the first troops stepped onto the beaches Tuesday. On Wednesday the channel was so rough that unloading had to be halted for a time. It improved somewhat Thursday, and the convoys began to make up for lost time, but by Friday conditions had become worse, with gusty wind, fog and mist that at times cut visibility to a half-mile.

D-Day itself was described by one naval officer as "one of the greatest cases of mass seasickness in the history of the world."

In spite of the weather, the Allies made it clear they had been able to put ashore at least enough men, tanks and guns to balance anything the Germans thus far have moved up, but conditions were such that there was not a single report of air activity Friday in direct support of the invasion.

The Allies thus were weakened in the two departments in which they have overwhelming superiority—sea and air—but nevertheless were declared officially to be progressing steadily.

Assault Wave Ashore

The Germans contended that despite the weather the Allies already have put their third assault wave ashore and had other airborne divisions in northeast England and Scotland to support an amphibious attack which the Nazis said they expected to come between Dunkerque and Ostende in the next few days.

The Allied bag of prisoners amounted to 4,000 to 5,000 with one Allied division having captured more than 1,000, the Americans more than 800, and the Canadians 600. Some Russians and Poles pressed into German uniform were among the prisoners taken by the Americans.

Numerous villages, most of them not disclosed by name, have been taken in the Allied drives, and Allied correspondents at the front generally agreed that the position in Normandy was being strengthened steadily.

The German radio in another of its frequent propaganda broadcasts, contended the Allies had "only nibbled a small piece out of the Atlantic wall" and had "not managed to synchronize the fighting from Bayeux inland with that of the Americans on the Cherbourg peninsula."

Mighty Tank Battle Rages Around Caen—Both Sides Build Up for Huge Engagements Expected Soon.

JUN 10 1944

Supreme Headquarters, Allied Expeditionary Force, June 9 (A. P.).—American troops pressing toward the strategic port of Cherbourg have seized Ste. Mere Eglise and cut the highway and the railroad to Cherbourg, leaving the Germans only a secondary and perhaps already threatened road on the west.

The German radio placed the Americans within eighteen miles of Cherbourg itself and headquarters of the Twenty-first Army Group disclosed tonight that American troops have cut the Cherbourg-Carentan broad-gauge railway in a steady buildup of the beachhead, and that they also crossed the Carentan-Cherbourg road.

American parachute troopers seized Ste. Mere Eglise, hanging on until seaborne infantry joined them.

The Germans have already reported Allied parachute landings on the west coast of the Cherbourg peninsula near Lessay—bottleneck of the west coast road to Cherbourg and a spur railroad.

British and Canadian forces at the other end of the sixty-mile-long, steadily expanding beachhead meanwhile joined for an assault on pivotal Caen, fighting a fierce armored battle for the large city where the Germans apparently planned a major stand.

DAY

American parachute and infantry troops, linking up, gained at both ends of their twenty-eight-mile salient in the Ste. Mere Eglise sector—at the narrowest neck of the Cherbourg peninsula—and headquarters announced "satisfactory progress" on all fronts with battles agaist Nazi armored thrusts reaching new intensity.

[Berlin radio has reported Allied parachute landings on the west coast of the peninsula and a threat to choke off the tip. Today a German broadcast heard by NBC said Allied forces that had landed Thursday near Granville, fifteen miles south southwest of Coutance, had been "wiped out." There was no confirmation.]

JUN 10 1944

2400 Prisoners Taken.

At least 2,400 prisoners have been taken, 600 of them by Americans.

Gen. Eisenhower in a proclamation called on the French underground to continue in present duties "unless otherwise instructed," and pledged that "we shall destroy the Nazi tyranny root and branch so that the peoples of Europe may have a new birth of freedom.

Headquarters said the main Nazi counter-attack had been repulsed in the Caen sector and ground had been gained there.

Field dispatches told of Canadian tanks firing at point-blank range into massed German formations. These dispatches described the tank battle as the biggest yet, and the Germans said hand-to-hand fighting was taking place in Caen.

Central spearheads captured Formigny, between Bayeux and St. Mere-Eglise and astride the main communications linking Cherbourg with the rest of France.

With Lieut.-Gen. Omar N. Bradley ashore and personally leading his American forces, headquarters disclosed that the Allied beachhead strength included the Canadian Third Division. This was the fourth Allied division officially disclosed as on the beachhead. The others are the Sixth British Airborne, the First American and the Fiftieth (Northumbrian) British divisions.

JUN 10 1944

British and Canadian Beachhead.

Field dispatches disclosed that the British and Canadian landings on D day were in the region of Berniers sur Mer, at the mouth of the Orne River and north of Caen. Berniers is in Allied hands.

Brig.-Gen. Paul L. Williams of Detroit was disclosed as the commander of the Ninth Air Force Troop Carrier Command who helped plan and direct D day airborne operations to the beachhead, which German reports pictured as more than ten miles deep at places.

While guns roared along the front, Allied warships roamed up and down the coast as roving artillery spotting German pockets and strongpoints.

Deterioriating weather again fell upon the channel, but headquarters said the wind was in a more favorable direction for unloading streams of supplies and reinforcements.

The German communique conceded the loss of Ste. Mere-Eglise, declaring that the Americans were pushing north and south from the landing head there.

Then a later Berlin broadcast said United States troops had advanced a mile beyond the town toward Valognes, twelve miles southeast of the port that would form a great funnel for Allied reinforcements and supplies into the battle for France.

American Rear Admiral John Leslie Hall, Jr., on a tour of the beachhead, told correspondents that operations were going well, but stressed the necessity of quickly building up our forces.

JUN 10 1944

At least 1,600 Nazi prisoners have been taken. A field dispatch today said Americans had captured 600, including some Russians and Poles.

JUN 1

Other dispatches from the front said the battle was developing into a race for supplies, and "it looks as if the Allies are winning." The Germans moved up more tanks, dropped parachute troops and even sent some supplies up to the front in horse-drawn vehicles.

Beachhead Five Miles Deep Over Broad Stretch

Ten German divisions are now engaged, Supreme Allied Headquarters said, while the Germans said that up to 20 Allied divisions had been thrown in.

One front dispatch said Americans now hold a beachhead five miles deep on a broad scale, with smaller penetrations several miles farther inland. United States parachute troops captured one town, it said, and infantrymen another. Much of the fighting was waged on a tree-to-tree and ditch-to-ditch basis, it added.

Other reports from the front said "it is becoming the most involved battle, with local retreats and advances having a very definite effect on the general plans both of our commanders and of the enemy. Both are seizing every chance to drive in a wedge when there is the slightest faltering.

RAF Pounds Nazi Supply Railways

RAF night bombers hammered German supply railways behind the Normandy peninsula.

JUN 10 194

"Landings have continued on all beaches and by-passed strong points of enemy resistance are being steadily reduced," said Allied invasion communique No. 7.

The weather, unstable since before the first landings at dawn Tuesday, took another unfavorable dip late yesterday. Rain fell steadily throughout the night, and for the first time since the dawn of D-day there was no official mention of air-borne operations.

The rain had ceased by 9 A. M. today, but a low blanket of misty clouds still lay over Dover Strait and visibility was no more than three to four miles. Then by early afternoon the breeze had so freshened as to make the sea choppy, with a nasty swell, and a light drizzle was falling. Visibility at times was not more than a mile.

On Defensive, Nazis Admit

The Transocean News Agency said in a Berlin broadcast that Allied forces have made their deepest penetration in the area of captured Bayeux. It declared "grim" fighting between German and British tanks was in progress five miles southwest of Bayeux.

The Germans conceded that they had been hurled back on the defensive in fighting near Carentan, a third of the way across the Cherbourg peninsula, as the Allies brought in reinforcements. Berlin has previously identified American troops in action there.

It was apparent that vital roads in this area, leading to the prize port of Cherbourg, had been denied the Germans. Half of the main highways of the entire peninsula run through Carentan.

Definite reports of progress were meager at supreme headquarters. It appeared that the Allies had reached an interim stage where tired troops were pushing forward more slowly in order to get their second wind and let supplies catch up with them.

The Germans declared they had identified the American First, Fourth and 29th Infantry Divisions and the 101st Airborne Division in action in that area. Supreme headquarters announced that the American First was in the forefront of the original landing.

The over-all battle now has become a race between the Allies and the Germans in building up their forces. The Germans have the advantage of internal communications, close supply depots all over France, and land mobility.

The Allies hold sea and air superiority—although the low-hanging clouds today were giving the Germans some protection from Allied airmen.

Nazi Air Attacks Repelled

In yesterday's air operations Allied flyers destroyed 72 German planes for a loss of 40. The Germans made four fighter-bomber attacks upon the invasion beaches between early morning and late last night, using about 60 planes, but each time they were driven off. They made an unconfirmed assertion that Nazi planes set fire to an Allied cruiser yesterday.

Rocket-firing Allied planes went into the fray yesterday to attack Nazi armor between Caen and Bayeux, a region described in front-line dispatches as excellent for armored warfare.

In a report direct from the front last night, Ross Munro, Canadian Press war correspondent, said Canadian infantry and tanks had advanced swiftly through wooded farmlands and forced the Germans from a dozen Normandy towns, sometimes after stiff house-to-house fighting.

Major German Effort Foreseen

A front-line dispatch last night said "much depends on the speed of the build-up of the bridgehead" in supplies and troops because substantial enemy forces apparently are probing for a spot to launch a major counterattack.

Canadians plunging southward east of Bayeux could see the Germans ahead assembling for new efforts. A dispatch said the Canadians there late yesterday were bracing themselves for an expected counterattack after having fought off one fierce probing thrust. In that attack, Germans sent 30 to 35 tanks at a time into action, but Canadian infantry, strongly supported by Canadian tanks and massed artillery, drove them off.

30. 24 - 16071

German Tiger tanks were reported to be moving up from the Falaise sector—the area some 30 miles in from the sea where the Germans have been reporting Allied air-borne units. Axis broadcasts said "super-heavy" British tanks had landed.

A Berlin spokesman was quoted by the Paris radio as saying the battle in the Bayeux-Caen area "has reached a climax of fury, but the last word will be left to tank engagements."

It is strongly held by determined troops with plenty of reserves. Some of the troops are tired, however, and not capable of a sustained offensive. They probably will slow down now and they lack some heavy equipment which can be landed only at ports.

Navy Supports Allied Troops

On the other hand, they can be supported by naval gunfire at almost any point and the comparatively slow and light German reaction so far has allowed them firmly to establish the perimeters of their landing attempt anywhere they wish. Von Rundstedt does not dare commit his entire force lest General Eisenhower pop up somewhere else and bowl him over with another landing.

German communications are creaky even with the Allied air letup. The Allies cut nearly half of the enemy's means of communications on the Cherbourg peninsula when American troops took the highway and railroad leading to the port near Ste. Mere Eglise.

Von Rundstedt knows the weather cannot favor him for long and if it changes suddenly may leave roads jammed with his transport at the mercy of the Allied air forces.

Risk All Is German Problem

The Germans could throw a couple thousand planes against the Allies and may do so to give all-out support of Marshal Rommel's ground attack.

But here, too, the German high command faces a problem.

If the German air force is committed in full, there can be only one answer. It would be wiped out by the Allied air might which has won every battle in the air since November, 1942. If it is wiped out, not only the German army is at the mercy of our air power but the homeland as well.

It is a nice problem for Hitler to try and figure out. Do they throw everything into a battle to drive the Allies into the sea or do they hold back, prolong the war and try some other plan?

Whatever they do, it must be done fast because a few days of good weather will improve the Allied position tremendously.

Then the Germans may find themselves in the once familiar Allied position of "too little and too late."

Next 10 Days Held Critical For Allied Invasion Forces

JUN 10 1944

By J. W. GALLAGHER

Supreme Headquarters, Allied Expeditionary Force, June 9 (AP)—The Allied beachhead along the Cherbourg peninsula entered its most critical phase tonight with little prospect that the danger would pass for at least ten days more.

This is the situation on the opening of the western front as seen from military information available here:

The initial phase of the great operation has passed with landings made and a beachhead established.

Nazis Bank On Counterattacks

It now remains to be seen whether the Germans can throw the Allies back into the sea or break them up. While the Germans' greatly publicized Atlantic Wall proved to be something of a myth, it always has been the strategy of their leaders to make the best showing against beachheads by counterattack.

They did this at Gela in Sicily and at Salerno and Anzio in Italy. It took only four days for the Salerno counterthrust to develop and it was defeated three days later. It took two weeks to develop at Anzio and a week to defeat it.

This is by far the biggest amphibious landing yet, and it is going to take longer to develop an all-out counterattack—and perhaps longer to defeat it.

German Strength, Weakness

What are the Germans' chances of success? What are the strength and weaknesses of the Allied landings?

NIGHT

The beachhead itself extends from the Orne river about 60 miles to some point beyond Ste. Mere Eglise. Both Supreme Allied Headquarters and German reports reveal that the beachhead is somewhat shallow, varying in width from ten miles or more down to three or four, thus being susceptible to a break-through.

foothold.

The biggest immediate danger to the Allies is the weather—and it is the largest German asset. It hampered the unloading of vital supplies and the beachhead battle now is largely one of supplies. The Allies must land enough equipment and troops to match, or outmatch, what the Germans can bring up from near-by depots and over inland lines of communications.

The Allied chances of doing this even without a port were somewhat better than good until today when the weather shut down on flying.

Air Punch Dazed Foe

The Allies depend on their tremendous striking power in the air to cut German ability to throw reserves into the battle, and the clouds cut down air activity to sea level.

This tremendous Allied air power has been one of the biggest surprises up General Eisenhower's sleeve. At the height of the Mediterranean campaign the Allied air forces flew about 2,600 sorties daily. Overnight the Allied air forces in Britain went from a daily average of less than 5,000 sorties to 13,000 plus on the peak day.

This air punch dazed the Germans.

With this striking force idle, the Germans are at a definite advantage. They could not hope to cope with it in the air but under a cloud cover they can move up a division's supplies by day.

Von Rundstedt Must Guess

From this it might appear the situation is gloomy for the Allies, but the Allies have definite advantages. They have the initiative and know what they are going to do whereas the Germans don't and this is a tremendous advantage.

Marshal von Rundstedt cannot be certain this landing is the big Allied effort. The Allies have control of the sea and can make a ward Valognes.

In a dispatch broadcast over the Berlin radio, Transocean, the German news agency, said that the latter gain was of about one mile, and that from Bayeux the Allies had driven a wedge five miles deep in the direction of St. Lo. St. Lo, Ste. Mere Eglise and Valognes are all on the central line of communications of the Cherbourg Peninsula. St. Lo is about twenty miles southwest of Bayeux.

This afternoon the Berlin radio declared that the third wave of the invasion had begun with fresh Allied airborne landings near Carentan, Caen and Bayeux and additional naval landings at previously established beachheads.

The High Command also said that the German armored forces counter-attacking from Caen were engaged in heavy fighting southeast of Bayeux, and that one Allied cruiser and one destroyer were sunk by German E boats.

Later today the German radio quoted a military spokesman as saying that American air-borne troops landed between Valognes and Ste. Mere Eglise had fought their way through and linked up with the beachhead forces on the east coast of the peninsula.

close to reaching that ideal.

They left their planes while the air was full of German tracers and most of them hit ground far away from their comrades. After forming into small groups they fought throughout the night against far superior forces and drove them helterskelter away from the beachhead area where our infantry was due to land.

Cowboy-Indian Fight

It was a cowboy and Indian fight at night in a strange country which was all the stranger because lots of the men didn't land where they had expected.

Some paratroops killed or captured many Germans. Others engaged the Germans without doing much damage, while others who landed alone spent the night trying to find their friends. We met a bunch of them, blackfaced and tired in a farmyard near the German lines on Monday afternoon. First there was James A. Dodson of Forest City, Ark., a long, lanky drawling country boy who had obviously grown up with guns.

The Germans fired at him from the second he jumped until he hit the ground and he had to cut his chute off quickly in order to get away. Later, with his buddy, he was approaching a house when his friend was killed. Dobson filled the German with a whole clip from his carbine, then went on to stalk ing until your groups are organized.

Ernesto G. Burciaga of Roswell, N. Mex., a bright, pleasant Indian boy, was with his colonel when they surprised a convoy of Russian conscripts with some horsedrawn wagons. They finished two or three and captured the rest. Today you could see paratroopers riding nags of all sizes and descriptions.

Sgt. Laurence J. Welsh, Quincy, Mass., son of Mrs. Stanley Goudreau, was still busily hunting this afternoon when we met him. Born of American parents in France and speaking the language like a native, he was in his element.

A patch on his face was fresh souvenir of a knockdown, dragout fight, when a German had thrown a grenade right at him.

All these men testified that most Germans took to hedgerows as if by prearrangement when paratroopers landed and preferred to snipe from cover and run rather than fight. Paratroops themselves quickly adapted themselves to the hedges, but didn't run.

American paracnute troops were transporting themselves on captured German equipment. One glider landed on top of a house on the Valognes-Carentan road, and the troopers clambered down to capture sleeping Germans in their beds.

Drops were made on a far larger scale than contemplated even by the Germans, and many times the numbers used by the Nazis at Crete were employed.

Both the Americans and British used gliders in daylight on D day with small losses. The Germans had to give up using gliders in Crete because of severe losses.

The Americans alone used fifteen airdromes on D day.

Pathfinders used by the RAF and United States Air Forces aided in the landings, and some parachute troops were on the ground five hours before H hour.

The Americans spent two years in planning the operation, and United States troops trained with the British for many months.

Paratroopers Are First Heroes Of Allied Invasion of France

Daniel Chute of Amsterdam, N. Y., was greeted by a German as he landed, shouted "Scram" and then got out of his chute and started looking for his company. You aren't allowed to start firing after land-

German High Command Also Acknowledges Further Strengthening of Beachhead.

London, June 9 (A. P.).—The German High Command declared today that Allied tanks from the beachhead west of the Orne made encircling attacks west and southwest of Bayeux yesterday and were not checked until they had reached a point about six miles west of the town.

Heavy losses were inflicted on the landing forces, the communique insisted, but it went on to admit that the Allies had strengthened their beachhead. The Allies were also said to have gained ground in a drive northwest from Ste. Mere Eglise to-

Canadians Restore Broken Line

By ROSS MUNRO

[Canadian War Correspondent]

[Distributed by the Associated Press]

JUN 10 1944

With the Canadian Troops in France, June 9—Several sharp actions developed on this front today as the Germans increased their pressure along the whole Bayeux-Caen line.

NIGHT

At one point a German battle group with strong armor broke into the Canadian lines but were thrown out by counterstrokes. Gunners of anti-tank and field gun batteries hammerd the Panzers and Canadian tanks joined the fight.

Two Panzer Divisions Engaged

Elements of at least two Panzer divisions are being engaged by British and Canadian forces along this Bayeux-Caen highway, and even fiercer fighting is expected when the main forces clash.

During the night German infantry crept up on Canadian positions at one point and until dawn close fighting went on over fields and slopes, with white flares lighting the battleground. The Germans withdrew, after a hammering, in the direction of Caen.

A high British commander told me British and Canadian forces held the initiative on the beachhead front and they were doing what was intended — engaging German forces and battering them as the next phase of the invasion operation builds up.

Nazi Withdrawal Seen As Disorderly

By Richard D. McMillan

[Representing the Combined Allied Press]

JUN 10 1944

Distributed by the Associated Press

With the Allied Invasion Army in France, June 8 (Delayed)—The Germans got out of here so fast they didn't even stop to bury their dead.

Forty-eight hours after the invasion assault the biggest phenomenon of the battle of western Europe still is the amazing lack of Nazi resistance in this large slice of French soil around Bayeux which the Allies have liberated.

By letting us grab off Bayeux, a vital point on the Bayeux-Caen highway, the enemy's troops farther out on the Normandy peninsula have been placed in grave danger.

Massing Units

Why didn't the enemy try to hold out? One theory expressed by officers here is that we succeeded in landing so much materiel—tanks anti-tank guns and other armor—that the Germans are withdrawing their isolated Panzer units to mass them for a resounding counterattack.

They may be. But meanwhile the Allies are consolidating their grip on the very considerable chunk of territory we've already sliced off, and it seems unlikely that the Nazis would be able to resist the steel jaws that we are closing upon them.

This does not look like an orderly withdrawal. The bodies of Germans litter the countryside around deliriously joyful Bayeux. The men who manned their coastal defenses gave up the fight in the first round and our deep penetration inland followed. Coastal defenses which I examined lacked method in construction as well as continuity. They also sorely needed guns of adequate caliber.

Took To Their Heels

Those Germans who could get away simply took to their heels.

Someone remarked: "Who would ever believe that the second front would be like maneuvers on Salisbury Plain in peacetime?"

Everyone was asking: "Where is the Luftwaffe?" Back on the beaches thousands of supply vessels are disgorging infantry divisions, stores, munitions, gasoline and food with the regularity of an English port in peacetime. It all seems very mysterious.

FRENCH NOTE NAZI LACK OF ARMOR

JUN 10 1944

DAY

With Allied Forces in Normandy, June 7 (A. P.) (Delayed).—Standing this afternoon beside a group of citizens in Bayeux as Allied tanks, guns, tank busters, armored cars and Bren carriers rolled through the town, I found this general comment most gratifyingly expressed in a single sentence:

"The Germans have nothing like this."

They were quite clear that Germans had never mustered and could never muster the strength in armed vehicles which they saw before them. The Germans, they told us, seemed desperate for vehicles of one sort or another.

They long since have confiscated all stocks of gasoline held for civilian uses and recently rounded up all civilians' cars in Bayeux and its neighborhood.

'Atlantic Wall' Seen Hastily Prepared

By Lewis Hawkins

[Associated Press Correspondent Representing the Combined Allied Press.]

On the Normandy Beachhead, June 8 (AP Delayed)—Much of the Germans' Atlantic Wall defenses which I have seen were evidently 11th-hour preparations made months after the Nazis started boasting about their impregnability.

For example, the whiteness of concrete in one thick-walled field gun casemete which I examined indicated it was built only two or three months ago at the most. Aeconnaissance photos showed beaches were not given their real obstacle quota until after April 9.

Obstacles Described

This was partly because this was a low-priority area compared with port zones and partly beacuse the winter was so bad in the English Channel that obstacles would not stay in place.

These obstacles are the first thing to impress you when the tide goes out, baring that fateful belt of nearly a half mile of flat sand which our men had to cross under merciless fire.

DAY

They are not elaborate, but the sturdy steel contraptions called "Element C" placed just above low water, or steel or wooden stakes with logs propped against them, are devilishly effective, particularly with the surf hiding them and tossing boats about, and from 10 to 20 per cent. of them are topped with mines similar to the teller type which tears up tanks.

One "Duck" Unlucky

I roused myself from a foxhole about 10 yards above highwater last night to watch a string of "Ducks" come in close to high tide. They moved silently in the moonlight until suddenly there was a muffled boom and a tower of water rose fast and fell slowly. Then there was just a gap in the evenly spaced line of amphibians. As nearly as I could tell in moonlight at a hundred yards, there were no survivors.

Leaving the beach this morning took one into a shallow valley, then up a steep hill to reach a plateau of gently rolling land.

Atop the bluff one gets a dramatic reminder of one of the last war's famous poems when one sees wild poppies glowing bright red across peaceful looking meadows. This isn't Flanders but one is much too close to those silent fellows down on the beach stones to let such a technicality invalidate a few seconds of prayerful wonder.

tem for correspondents accompanying American troops broke down completely and for more than 28 hours we were unable to get news out. The public relations officer brought a radio ashore early among the assault waves, but it was put aboard a jeep which he was unable to find until the next day.

There was supposed to be a system of couriers to take correspondents' dispatches from the beach to ships, but there were no couriers.

DAY

My first story was handed to a litter bearer who said he would try to get it to a control ship which has a courier service.

British System Works

We were even more bitterly disappointed when we turned on the radio and heard a BBC report from British correspondents accompanying British troops. Their communications apparently functioned well.

One unforeseen difficulty here was that three fresh regiments of German infantry moved onto the beach area just before the landing for anti-invasion maneuvers. They were sitting in their positions when the armada arrived offshore.

Along the beaches were underwater barriers, barbed wire, emplacements, concrete houses with 88MM. guns covering the beach approaches. The walls of the houses were of reinforced concrete four to six feet thick.

Two hundred yards from the beach on the side of a steep bank the Germans had built one strong point and had another under construction. This blockhouse was about 15 feet square with one opening through which was poked the snout of an 88 gun.

Behind the thick walls were cases of ammunition. Behind the blockhouse the gun crew had tunnelled into the side of the hill and installed living quarters.

Two young Germans were supposed to man the weapon but they were in quarters when the naval bombardment began and a shell ripped squarely through the gun port.

They ran out of their tunnel and hid under a bridge where Lt. Carl W. Oelze, Cleveland, Ohio, found them and took them prisoner. One was 17 and the other 18 and both said they were glad the invasion had come and that they were prisoners as they did not want to fight anyway.

On the other side of the draw was a similar position and further inland above the exit from the beach was another concrete blockhouse with its 88 gun pointing down the approach.

Prisoners Are Awed

The prisoners coming back to the rear look rather small and scrawny. They look with wonder at the bigger and stronger American boys and their fine equipment.

During the night German snipers infiltrated our lines and made life uncomfortable. The troops were wet from wading through the surf and the bedding of most troops was lost in vehicles swamped on the beach.

Big guns of our warships are standing offshore and belching flame and smoke. Small craft are shuttling troops and guns to the strip of beach. Big bulldozers are gouging out a road.

Along the beach are still the khaki-clad bodies of boys who gave their lives in the United Nations bid to crush Germany's armed might. But there were not so many as I had expected to see, and I patrolled this strip from end to end.

Canadians reported that German parachute troops were being dropped on a small scale behind Allied lines.

American parachutists took one village.

In my books much credit goes to the tall lean brigadier general who showed absolute disregard for his own safety in organizing his troops and getting them moving inland.

I cannot name him. But I can name the cool calm lieutenant who stayed by his side during the whole trying time. He was Robert J. Riekse of Battle Creek, Mich.

Eight hours after landing, not a single enemy plane made an appearance.

Toppled Into Water

A soldier riding on the rear of a "duck" at the water edge behind me suddenly gave a startled cry and toppled into the water. Medic Peter Kuffner, of New York city, dragged him on to the beach and treated a wound in his thigh.

Wounded men, drenched by cold water, lay in gravel, some with water washing over their legs, shivering and waiting for stretcher bearers.

"Oh, God, let me aboard a boat," whimpered one youth in semi-delirium. Near him a shivering youth dug with bare fingers into gravel.

Shells burst on all sides of us. They smacked into water around the boats but in all the shelling I saw only one boat hit.

Message Gets Through

An AEF sergeant, William McFadden, Olean, N. Y., said, "I was glad to get on to the beach, and I'll be glad to get off."

A runner came from an advance unit bearing a message for the general. He was John P. Foley, of Trenton, N. J.

Although nicked by a bullet over one eye, Foley brought an important message which resulted in the general sending reinforcements to a certain sector.

"You've done a fine job, lieutenant," said the general. "And shown great initiative and good judgment."

Moves Troops Out

Then the general began working to get troops off the beach. He sent a group to the right flank to help clean out the enemy firing directly on the beach. Quietly he talked to the men, suggesting next moves.

Before the enemy's firing ceased, I saw one of the finest demonstrations of courage I have ever seen. Private Vincent Love, of Washington, climbed into a bulldozer, and while the enemy was firing at him he helped make a road for armor, guns and vehicles.

"This is what I like," he said. "I was a driver of a bulldozer for 15 years before I went into the army."

Dug into one well-protected foxhole was 47-year-old Chief Signalman Joseph W. Smith, of Spring Lake, N. J., one of the first navy beach battalions to land in our sector. Smith felt he was pretty lucky, for the man in front of him and the man behind him were killed in the boat coming in.

Soft-Spoken Brigadier General Ignores Safety to Launch Advance

JUN 10 1944

BY DON WHITEHEAD

WITH AMERICAN TROOPS IN FRANCE, June 8.—(Delayed)—(AP) Fighting as American troops did in Tunisia, Sicily and Italy, doughboys have smashed through the outer crust of Hitler's fortress in a gallant display of courage and skill.

The battle of the beachhead has developed now into a race to get enough doughboys, guns and supplies ashore to beat back the enemy attack and it looks as if we are winning.

Never before has an army attempted to land such vast numbers of men and materials in such a short time, but the job is being done after a shaky start.

Pinned Behind Bank

When we landed behind the assault troops the enemy still was pouring a heavy machine-gun, mortar and artillery fire into the boats as they drove ashore and had our troops pinned behind a gravel bank just above the water edge.

Troops, supplies and vehicles began to pile up on the beach at an alarming rate. The enemy controlled the exits with accurate fire and the time schedule was being disrupted.

But under the urging of a soft-spoken brigadier general the organized enemy positions were silenced and the great surge inland began.

In a matter of a few hours the engineers had roads built from the beach and the heavy stuff was pouring across.

Returning Glider Pilots Tell Of Action At Ste. Mere Eglise

By HOWARD COWAN

A United States Ninth Air Force Troop Carrier Base, June 9 (AP)—Glider pilots returning to this base today reported that Lieut. Robert

Campbell, of Seattle, Wash., and two parachute troopers wiped out 58 Germans with hand grenades and a machine gun and captured a Nazi command post a mile and a half south of Ste. Mere Eglise, which now is in American hands.

Intelligence officers were piecing together the details and seeking to identify the two troopers.

The glider pilots, 27 of them, landed behind enemy lines in the first 48 hours of the invasion of Normandy. Technically they were supposed to return immediately to base for more troops and supply-carrying assignments, but they got caught up in the swirl of battle and fought alongside the troops they had landed.

JUN 10 1944

High Price Exacted

Fatigued and with bloodshot eyes and bearded faces, looking half comical in an assortment of captured Nazi regalia, they were full of stories of the awful price exacted from the Germans in the fields south of Ste. Mere Eglise and those dropped from the skies in a small-scale German parachute troop landing.

NIGHT

Of 200 Nazi parachutists, 13 were taken prisoner. The others died at the hands of American parachutists who stood in the open firing and shouting into the skies.

Flight Officer Robert (Red) David, of Indianapolis, Ind., and five parachutists commandeered a tank and roamed the woods, knocking out five pillboxes.

Another Robert Campbell, this one of Sigourney, Iowa, was knocked flat by six .30-caliber machine gun bullets as his glider landed, but he was unhurt. His flak suit saved him.

Wounded Carried In Jeep

Flight Officer Leo J. Cordier, of East Hartford, Conn., and his crew untangled their jeep from the wreckage of a glider and used it to carry the wounded to a first-aid post a half mile away. They spent the night lying awake in foxholes as German snipers prowled about. The next day, Cordier said, he was with Flight Officer Charles Dobeneck, of Jeannette, Pa., when they saw four Germans coming up the road.

"We got down behind a fence and drew a bead on them," he said. "Then we saw a couple of GIs behind them. One was tired and had an unloaded Garand, and he was making a German carry it."

Leiut. Lambert Wilder, of Bogota, N. J., who landed behind the beachhead about 7 A. M. Wednesday, found a Nazi mortar 15 feet from his landing craft. He and 13 air-borne troops scrambled to cover, set up their own guns and swapped fire with the Germans, while the crews of two crashed gliders reached safety.

Battle Debris Jams French Beach

JUN 10 1944

By LEW HAWKINS.

On a Normandy Beach, June 8 (Delayed) (A. P.).—This is a picture of a Normandy beach:

The water is a welter of wreckage.

There are derelicts from shore to many hundreds of yards off. If you land at high tide, there's considerable congestion, accentuated by the fact that only a narrow strip of beach from twenty to fifty feet wide lies between high water mark and the grass marking the beach's end.

Along this sharply rising aisle of stones is stacked all of the vast store of invasion paraphernalia which managed to escape enemy fire during the landings.

Footroom is decreased further by the extensive foxholes which must be dug in the sandy grassy strip on the beach on the side of a little rise which saved thousands of lives.

Yesterday there were long litters bearing those who did not escape the fire but busy soldiers stepped carefully around the bodies while the wounded awaited treatment.

Weather Caused Losses.

Bad weather probably was the chief cause of the Allied losses in breaking into the beaches.

It is probable that, if the weather had permitted more exact intelligence data on strong points recently installed along this stretch, the preliminary bombardment by both planes and naval guns could have been made more effective. But certainly without the intelligence we did have and its application by the Navy and Air Force, losses to enemy fire power would have been multiplied.

Much of the Germais' Atlantic Wall defenses which I have seen were evidently eleventh-hour preparations made months after the Nazis started boasting about their impregnability.

Mines Top Obstacles.

For example, the whitness of concrete in one thick-walled field gun casemate which I examined indicated it was built only two or three months ago at the most. Crumbling Old Orchard Wall Called 'Thickest Barrier'

JUN 10 1944

By Roger Greene

With the Allies in France, June 6 (AP—Delayed) — As far as we could see after advancing five miles inland, Hitler's vaunted "Atlantic Wall" is a myth. The thickest barrier I have seen is a crumbling old brick wall, two feet thick, along an apple orchard where I am sitting deep in the grass writing this story.

The crackle of rifle fire some 500 yards away is intense, and every few minutes we throw ourselves flat and try to squeeze our whole bodies under our battle helmets as German shells burst in the orchard near by.

DAY

No 12-Foot Wall

Aside from scattered pillboxes, barbed wire and slit trenches, the German static defenses so far have been practically nil, and in this sector at least we have seen nothing of the great concrete fortifications 12 feet thick which the Germans had boasted they had erected along this coast.

Their mobile artillery appears their most formidable defense, and while their planes are fairly much in evidence they are only specks in the sky compared with the great clouds of Allied bombers and fighters which sweep over our heads in endless waves.

Soldiers Take Care

German death's head signs, warning of "Minen" (mines) are frequent along the roads, but there is no evidence of the 'millions" of mines which the Germans said they planted.

We walk with extreme care, however, along the center of the road or alo[illegible] where the way has been cleared.

This has been a tremendous day. I crossed the Channel in a small, heavily-rolling LCI (landing craft, infantry) with 100 men. It was a rough crossing, but without attack by German U-boats, E-boats or planes.

Not until we were about a half mile from shore did the German shells begin dropping around us. Then they came thick and fast. They were bursting like mushrooms in the water all around us, black and ugly, as we slithered down the gangplank under packs weighing more than 60 pounds and started a 50-yard wade ashore in water up to our waists.

Fell Into Water

I fell on the slippery gangplank as it swayed, and went under the water, dousing my wrist watch, but the fall may have saved my life. When I scrambled to my feet seconds later I saw a receding spout of water left by a shellburst less than ten yards away.

Although I believe I was the first correspondent ashore, I had to wait more than five hours before I could send my first story back by boat.

The press field radio which was scheduled to arrive early on D-day still hasn't shown up.

The first Frenchman I met after landing said the Allied naval and air assault preceding the landings shook the whole countryside like an earthquake.

"Alas," he said, "we had wine saved to greet the Allies, but now it is gone. Pouf—bombs and wine do not mix. Veree sad."

NAZI WARSHIPS ARE ROUTED IN CHANNEL BATTLE

NORDNESS

Allies Blow up Destroyer, Damage 3 Others off Brittany.

OTHERS SPEED AWAY

Enemy Defeated in First Naval Thrust at Invasion Sea Line.

SUPREME HEADQUARTERS ALLIED EXPEDITIONARY FORCE, Saturday, June 10—(AP) Eight British, Canadian and Polish destroyers intercepted four German destroyers apparently bent on a sneak smash at the Allied Nor[illegible] before dawn yesterday, blowing up one of them, chasing another aground in flames and scoring hits on the other two which escaped, a communique announced early today.

The grounded enemy vessel was believed to have been finished off later by a bombing attack.

Point Blank Engagement

This point-blank engagement—which cost the Allies damage and a few casualties on only one ship, the British Destroyer Tartar—was the most dramatic of three surface actions announced, and was fought off the tip of Brittany near Ushant island.

NIGHT

In addition, Allied naval units continued their battering of the invasion coast, plastering 46 shore targets during the 24 hours ending at 8 a. m. yesterday.

Spotted by a patrol plane before midnight Thursday the quartet of German destroyers was intercepted by the British Destroyers Tartar, Ashanti, Eskimo, and Javelin, the Canadian destroyers Haida and Huron, and the Polish destroyers Blyskawica and Piorun.

The Germans, apparently coming up from the Bay of Biscay around the tip of Brittany, joined battle on parallel northward courses, loosing a tropedo barrage which the Allied craft dodged.

Scored Repeated Hits

The Tartar "passed through the enemy's line" and at point blank range scored repeated hits on the Nazi leader. Soon there was a general melee. A torpedo fired by the Ashanti blew up one Nazi ship. Another enemy vessel turned tail for the coast, and the Canadian Destroyers Haida and Huron ran this one down, beaching it in flames on the Isle De Bas.

The other two German craft fled westward with four Allied craft in pursuit. They escaped after being hit several times.

During Thursday night an Allied destroyer force under Rear Admiral Don Pardee Moon of the U. S. Navy intercepted a force of heavily-armed German light craft, which might have been either E-boats or rocket gun ships and "drove them off," the bulletin said. Casualties, if any, were not disclosed. The action occurred between the mainland and the Isles De St. Marcouf, just off the American landing zone on the east side of the Cherbourg peninsula.

Germans Driven Off

After dawn yesterday the Germans again made attempts to enter the invasion coast area both from the east and west sides, sending in a force of E-boats. These were intercepted and also driven off by Allied light coastal forces and in a short gun action off Pointe De Barfleur "hits were observed on two of the enemy before they escaped."

The British Cruisers Belfast and Frobisher were declared to have "done considerable execution on enemy concentrations" Friday morning, aided by both aerial spotting and forward military observers which landed with the assault troops on the beachheads.

The Frobisher neutralized two enemy batteries and destroyed an ammunition dump, the bulletin said.

Meanwhile, some details were disclosed of the loss of one American destroyer in the early part of the invasion. (President Roosevelt said on Tuesday that two American destroyers and one landing craft had been lost up to noon of that day.)

U. S. Destroyer Hit

A German inland battery in repeated fire hit the U. S. destroyer while its guns were engaged in clearing a beach for the landing of ground forces. It sank only a few thousand yards off the coast.

It is not permitted to identify at this time either the Destroyer nor its commander, who was among the survivors.

The ship had gone into action before dawn Tuesday, blasting the beaches from a position 4,000 yards offshore. The firing opened 20 minutes ahead of schedule when a German battery spotted the ship The German battery was silenced and the Destroyer then swung back to its assigned targets "when something hit us," the commander recalled.

He said he tried to head the ship out to sea, but she went into a tight circle. Finally she stopped with her engine rooms flooded and orders were given to abandon ship. When all were overboard the commander said he "just stepped off the bridge into water" which already was neck-high. He was picked up by other Destroyers which raced in to lower boats on one side while their guns still were firing shoreward on the other side.

NAZI BOMBERS STRIVE TO SINK

YANK FLAGSHIP

ABOARD ASSAULT HEADQUARTERS FLAGSHIP IN THE BAY OF SEINE, June 7.—(Delayed) Besieged Germans are making determined and repeated efforts to sink our flagship.

"Get that ship" had been their instruction at Salerno, and it must have been last night, too, when three bombs straddled us dropping a few hundred yards off both port and starboard.

These bombs were from the first enemy planes we had seen since setting out from somewhere in England Monday afternoon. At first we couldn't believe the planes were not ours, which had been over in thousands.

As darkness descended and before a bright moon came up to spotlight us, a daring run on our ship was made by a Junkers-88 which flew low over the water and barely scraped past our topside rigging. It came so close that a signal bridge lookout said he could glimpse the pilot's face.

To prove this was no friendly plane it fired a shell which screeched past the heads of us standing on the flag bridge. The lone plane may have reported we were easy pickings, for it was followed soon by a series of planes that dropped bombs and perhaps mines also.

Three planes were brought down by our own ack-ack and that of the cruisers and destroyers around us. They plummeted into the water and burned fiercely.

All in all it was a close call for our flagship, one of the most valuable ships in the armada. Ours has been a luck ship, but how long the luck will last is a subject of lively speculation in wardroom discussions.

Hall, Moon, Edgar Lead Invasion Fleet

London, June 9 (A. P.).—The United States Navy announced today that Rear Admiral John L. Hall, Rear Admiral Don P. Moon and Commodore Campbell D. Edgar are commanding units under Rear Admiral Alan G. Kirk commander of United States naval forces in the invasion of western Europe.

WEATHER HALTS AERIAL ACTIVITY

HERCHER

SUPREME HEADQUARTERS ALLIED EXPEDITIONARY FORCE, June 9—(AP) The weather, which has been almost as much an enemy as the Germans in the first four days of invasion, became so bad today that for the first time there was no daylight aerial activity in support of the Normandy beachheads reported here.

There was a brisk south wind in the channel tonight, making the sea choppy and giving it a nasty swell. A light drizzle fell during the afternoon and clouds in some places descended to sea level with visibility ilmited to one mile.

It was believed that the weather was not yet interfering with armored operations ashore, but it placed great obstacles in the way of aerial and sea forces—military departments in which the Allies enjoy overwhelming superiority if it can be employed.

Winds, clouds and rain have interfered with the Allied operations since the first soldiers stepped on the Normandy beaches Tuesday morning, and Wednesday the channel weather was so bad that unloading had to be halted for a time.

500 U.S. Heavies Raid Munich

Supreme Headquarters Allied Expeditonary Force, June 9 (AP)—American heavy bombers striking from the south 500 to 750 strong battered prime targets in the Munich area of southern Germany today, in a new pincers attack on the Nazi war machine coordinated with disruptive blows on German positions in France from the west.

The bombers, flying into the Munich area for the first time from Italy, and their escorting Lightnings, Mustangs and Thunderbolts fought through clouds of German fighters to reach their targets.

Swiss dispatches reported explosives in the Munich and Augsburg areas.

Seine Bridges Destroyed

(A BBC broadcast said the Allied whiplash from Britain had destroyed all railway bridges on the Seine river between Paris and the sea.)

Other American heavy bombers attacked Porto Marghera near Venice, and fighter-bombers harried the German retreat above Rome.

Allied planes of all types struck from Britain against Nazi positions in France.

For the first time since D-day official reports however, made no mention of Allied airborne operations last night.

Nazi Loss In 24 Hours

During the past 24 hours, 52 German planes were destroyed in the air and 20 others were accounted for on the ground, as against an Allied loss of 35 fighters and five bombers.

By noon yesterday, Allied aircraft had flown more than 27,000 sorties (individual plane flights) since the invasion began.

Reconnaissance revealed that in a previous attack a six-ton "factory buster" bomb fell directly across a railroad cut near the important rail junction of Saumur, 100 miles southeast of the battle area, forming an obstacle to movement of German reinforcements from Col. Gen. Johannes Blaskowitz's army group in southern France.

Allied Loss Barely 1 P. C.

From H-hour on Tuesday until noon yesterday 289 Allied planes had been shot down—barely one per cent. of the number of sorties flown. In the same period 176 German planes were destroyed.

The lower toll of the Germans was due chiefly to the fact that they had few planes up to shoot down. It is likely that a large part of the Allied losses resulted from anti-aircraft fire rather than from enemy fighters.

An important factor in the appraisal is that the Allied forces were engaged in a great offensive operation using a large number of necessarily unarmed transport planes. The tally does not include glider ships either in the number of sorties flown or in craft lost.

AIRBORNE TROOPS ACHIEVED AIMS DURING LANDING

SUPREME HEADQUARTERS, ALLIED EXPEDITIONARY FORCE, June 9 — (AP) The high command in its first detailed story disclosed today that U.S. parachute troops descending on the Ste. Mere Eglise sector below Cherbourg Tuesday brilliantly carried out a vital part of history's most successful airborne operation — a vertical attack far excelling the German sky assault on Crete.

The official report said losses approximated about two per cent of the more than 1,000 U. S. and R.A.F. planes used, and a high staff officer who accompanied the Americans, in ridiculing German claims of inflicting heavy casualties on the parachutists, said:

Troops Are Tough

"You need not worry about American paratroopers. They can take care of themselves and they are tough as hell."

New secret devices enabled the Americans to land in designated spots despite layers of clouds, and two hours after the landing some parachutists were utilizing captured German transport equipment.

Glider drops were made on a much bigger scale than even contemplated by the Germans in the Crete operation of three years ago. Both the Americans and British used gliders in daylight on D-Day with small losses, whereas the Germans gave up the use of gliders in Crete after suffering severe losses.

Some of the highlights of the operation were:

One glider landed on top of a house on the Valognes-Carentan road, and the troops clambered downstairs to capture Germans in their beds.

The Americans alone used 15 airdromes on D-Day.

Pathfinders used by the R.A.F. and U. S. air forces aided in the landings, and some parachute troops hit the ground five hours before H-hour.

U. S. troops trained with the British for many months, and had spent two years in planning the operation.

Brig. Gen. Paul L. Williams, of Detroit, was disclosed as commander of the Ninth Air Force troop-carrier command and one of the men who planned and directed the operation. He also planned operations in Sicily and Italy.

The Americans used Waco CG4A gliders. British Horsa gliders with twice their capacity also were used by day, but the Waco craft was picked for the night thrusts because it had to land in small areas.

The tow planes flew low on a complicated course to outwit German defenses, and parachute troops preceded them by an hour.

FLYERS SEE NAZI REINFORCEMENTS

By JOHN E. LEE.
Representing the Combined American Press Distributed by the Associated Press.

Headquarters Twenty-first Army Group, June 9.—German reinforcements, including armored vehicles, supply trucks and even horse-drawn transports are moving toward the battle area in France, according to British pilots flying air support missions.

I talked today to some of these pilots who fly rocket projectile typhoons. They have been making two and sometimes three flights daily behind the enemy lines, attacking enemy columns, vehicles, troop concentrations and other targets. They said the Germans are using horse-drawn vehicles to bring up supplies to save petrol. Occasionally they meet German air opposition, but so far German pilots have avoided genuine dogfights.

The pilots I have not seen many German tanks, but have shot up some enemy reconnaissance cars. During these attacks they often encounter considerable flak, but all are surprised at the relative weakness of enemy air opposition.

Eighth Air Force Busy On D-Day

London, June 9 (AP)—The Eighth Air Force reports that on the first day of the Allied invasion of northern France it did the following:

Destroyed 128 railways cars, shot up 372 military vehicles, wrecked 25 locomotives, bombed 14 bridges, attacked 35 railroad yards and damaged 1 tunnel, 2 warehouses, 3 factories, 2 oil tanks, 7 military encampments, 1 overpass and 10 flak cars.

Tow-Plane Pilot's View Of Cherbourg Peninsula

Coast Dotted With Pillboxes, Flooded Areas Drying Up

A 9TH AIR FORCE TROOP CARRIER BASE, June 9 (AP). — Here's how the Cherbourg Peninsula looks from a plane flying at 500 feet with a glider tow:

The coast is dotted with pillboxes.

Farther inland, a huge area had been flooded but it is drying up now and islands are beginning to appear, along with hedgerows and trees.

Green fields in cultivation and which might have been suited for airfields are checkerboarded with wooden staves twenty-five feet apart. At least one glider pilot landed on these fields without banging up his load of paratroops and supplies. Experts are still wondering how he did it.

The Germans must have placed a lot of faith in their Atlantic defenses, for little or no scorched-earth operations are visible. A few houses and barns are damaged but they are largely close to the coast.

Machine-gun nests and 88-millimeter guns have given the airborne troops the most trouble. Machine guns can be seen concentrated in small villages and in occasional pillboxes through the countryside.

FRENCH READY TO AID ALLIES

R-CARLSON

Civilians Obey Instructions And Stay Quietly At Work

London, June 9 (AP) — Violence already has broken out against Collaborationists in liberated Bayeux, where a manhunt was under way for suspected traitors, reports from the invasion battlefront said today, but for the most part French patriots were biding their time and exercising considerable control.

Except for incidents in Bayeux, where French citizens were reported to have marched one Collaborationist through the streets lashing him with whips and sticks and to have beaten a Vichyite policeman, the French appeared to be carrying on blandly with their everyday affairs in the midst of the fighting.

Farmers Stay At Work

Flyers reported seeing farmers working in their fields in the battle zone, and one front report told of a calm old lady strolling down a street where fighting was raging, placidly calling out, "Vive les Anglais."

This reaction is precisely what the Allied leaders had worked and hoped for. What had been feared was an unguided popular uprising which would only deliver Allied sympathizers into the hands of the Gestapo. Supreme headquarters has been hammering away for weeks by leaflet and radio, telling the people to stay their hands until they get specific instructions, coordinated with the advance of the Army of Liberation. Until that time the underground is asked to help with information about the terrain and about German movements.

Instruction Sent Loyal Police

Members of police forces in France who still remain loyal to the underground movement received instructions today from an official French representative in London, who told them by radio to continue to assure the Germans of their truthworthiness, so they could "carry out a more and more general and complete sabotage against the forces of the enemy."

The gendarmerie were told if they faced the dilemma of obeying German orders and betraying the patriots, to join the armed patriot groups immediately. At the moment of evacuation by the Germans or liberation of an area by Allied troops, they were told to seize "those who have betrayed, beginning with members of the police force."

Until then the policemen were instructed to pretend to obey the Germans, but to take action to guarantee the failure of repressive acts by Vichy in agreement with the Germans.

Nazis Ban Motor Vehicles

Orders from the German-controlled Vichy radio banned the use of motor vehicles and motorcycles of all kinds in the four departments of south-central France, Allier, Puy-de-Dome, Haute-Loire and Cantal. Any unauthorized vehicle there would be fired upon without warning, the broadcast said.

If the reception of Allied troops in liberated Bayeux is any criterion, there are few in France who have not reserved all their pent-up bitterness for the Germans.

Not 5 Per Cent Against Allies

When a correspondent asked one Frenchman if any hatred was created because of Allied bombings, the reply was:

"I honestly think that not five per cent. of the people of France are against you. As you saw, monsieur, you were welcomed by people who have lost relatives at your hands. There may be some Frenchmen who are so sick of war that they do not care who wins, so long as it ends. At least 90 per cent. of France is weeping tears of joy this day."

Another correspondent reported that of 300 people in a little cluster of houses in a village on the northern coast, 299 were intense anti-Vichyites. Before the bombardment preceding the invasion, this village had 600 inhabitants. The French patriots numbered 599. The other was a woman who didn't know what she was.

Many young men in the village have hidden weapons and ammunition, and the underground movement is strong.

Local Doctors Give Aid

A dispatch from a news correspondent with the Allied armies in France, dated yesterday, said the French had been pressing forward to help their liberators with local doctors offering their hospitals and medicines.

This correspondent said the French were "very highly organized into groups, where each man knows only his immediate superior and subordinates. They had accurately timed their effort for any day between June 5 and 15."

REBELLION RISING IN CENTRAL FRANCE

Situation Borders On Chaos, Reports To Spain Say

Barcelona, Spain, Saturday, June 10 (AP)—Border reports reaching here early today said central France was well on the way toward chaos as a result of the Allied invasion of Normandy, German fears of a new Allied invasion of the French Mediterranean coast, and the threat of a general uprising in the Vichy region.

Barricades have been flung hurriedly across roads by Vichy and German forces. All civilian motor traffic has been banned in four departments in the Vichy area. Vichy police issued warnings that they would shoot on sight at any non-official car in motion.

Bloody Clashes Near Vichy

Open fighting was reported yesterday between Vichy forces and French patriots at Gannat, within 10 miles of Vichy, with a score of persons reported slain.

Two battalions of German police entered Vichy during the day. It was reported they were sent to help defend Petain's capital against possible direct attack from gathering guerrilla forces.

The Allier, Cantal, Haute Loire and Puy de Dome departments were reported under such heavy rule by the pro-German Vichy militia and other collaborationists and German forces with nervous trigger fingers that it amounted to martial law.

Towns Cast Off Vichy Rule

Elsewhere, hundreds of towns in central France were declared by these border reports to have cast off the last vestiges of Vichy rule.

Telegraph and telephone communications in central France either were cut off completely or suffering repeated breakdowns due to sabotage. Mail has gone undelivered since Tuesday, when the invasion began.

FRENCHMEN TOLD DAY OF LIBERATION HAS ARRIVED

SUPREME HEADQUARTERS ALLIED EXPEDITIONARY FORCE, June 9—(AP) A proclamation by Gen. Eisenhower dropped on enemy-held areas in France, and posted in areas liberated by the Allied forces:

Citizens of France:

The day of liberation has dawned. Your comrades in arms are on French soil.

I am proud to have under my command the gallant forces of France who have so long trained and waited for this day when they can take part in the liberation of their home country.

United we come to settle on the battlefield the war you have continued heroically through years of stubborn resistance. We shall destroy the Nazi tyranny root and branch so that the peoples of Europe may have a new birth of freedom.

As supreme commander of the Allied Expeditionary force, there is imposed on me the duty and responsibility of taking all measures essential to the prosecution of the war. Prompt obedience to such orders as I may issue is necessary.

All persons must continue in the performance of their present duties unless otherwise instructed. Those who have made common cause with the enemy and so betrayed their country will be removed. It will be for the French people to provide their own civil administration and to safeguard my troops by the effective maintenance of law and order. Members of the French military mission attached to me will furnish assistance to this end.

The valour and extreme sacrifice of the millions who have fought under the banner of resistance have helped and will continue to help the success of our arms. The presence of the enemy among you has made tragically necessary the aerial bombardment and military and naval operations which have caused you loss and suffering. This you have accepted courageously in the heroic tradition of France as part of the inevitable price we all must pay to attain our goal which is our freedom.

Every resource will be required for the expulsion of the enemy from your country. Battle may inflict on you further deprivation. You will realize that munitions of war must come first but every endeavor will be made to bring to you assistance that you need so sorely.

I rely on your assistance in the final crushing of Hitlerite Germany and the re-establishment of the historic French liberties. When victory is won and France is liberated from her oppressors the French people will be free to choose at the earliest possible moment under democratic methods and conditions the government under which they wish to live.

The enemy will fight with the courage of despair. He will neglect no measure, however ruthless, which he thinks may delay our progress. But our cause is just, our armies are strong. With our valiant Russian allies from the east, we shall march to certain victory.

Invasion between Dunkerque, Ostende Predicted —Report Troops Ready.

LONDON, June 9 — (AP) German broadcasts predicted today that the Allies would invade Belgium soon "between Dunkerque and Ostende," and said that airborne reinforcements on the invasion front were helping to pack an Allied punch in an increasingly bitter battle of Normandy.

Predicting the new invasion, the German radio said:

"Divisions ready in northeast England and Scotland have not yet been thrown into the fight. It can be assumed a big part of these forces will be thrown into some invasion attempt which should start within the next few days.

New Landing Expected

"Combined action is being expected somewhere between Dunkerque and Ostende. For this, special Canadian troops are in readiness as well as several airborne and very strong tank divisions. Apart from Montgomery's army, Eisenhower has at his disposal more than 50 divisions, half of which are allocated for the French-Belgian expedition."

(Atlantic, purportedly a secret anti-Nazi radio station, said tonight the Germans have abandoned the Island of Alderney, about 10 miles off Cherbourgh in the English channel. The broadcast was monitored in New York by NBC.)

The German transcontinent agency said in a wireless dispatch for Turkish press consumption that the Allies had captured Fort Marcouf, where the German garrison surrendered after two and one-half days of resistance. The fort is on the island of St. Marcouf, three miles off shore and northeast of Ste. Mere Eglise.

Another German broadcast declared that exceptionally heavy losses had forced Gen. Montgomery into using a total of 17 divisions in the bridgeheads between the Orne and Vire estuaries. The commentator said the British general up to now employed three British infantry, one tank grenadier, two tank, a British airborne and two Canadian infantry divisions, as well as the U. S. 82nd and 101st airborne, the first, fourth, ninth 29th and 90th divisions.

After claiming yesterday that the Allied beachheads were being narrowed by Field Marshal Gen. Erwin Rommel's counter blows, Nazi broadcasters today conceded the main bridgehead had been widened.

Three Advances Acknowledged

They acknowledged three Allied advances inland—a five-mile wedge driven southwest of Bayeux toward St. Lo; a six-mile advance west of Bayeux "where spearheads of German counter-attackers now stand," and an advance of over a mile by Americans from fallen Ste. Mere Eglise toward Valognes on the road to Cherbourg.

Tonight the Paris radio said that Coutances, on the west coast of the Cherbourg peninsula, had been "violently shelled" by British naval units.

The German News agency, DNB, said all three beachheads which the Geramns admit the Allies hold were reinforced from the sea last night. These are the main one west of the Orne mouth and two smaller ones near Fort En Bessin and Quineville, farther west on the coast The DNB commentator also said more airborne troops were dropped in key inland sectors of Caen, Bayeux and Carentan, and one broadcaster said "Carentan is securely in German hands."

Other enemy reports said a great tank battle was raging to a climax in Caen, "which is still in German hands," while on the other side of Bayeux, the Allied advance continued across the neck of the Cherbourg peninsula.

Nazis Give Aims

A spokesman emphasized it was the aim of the Nazis to compel the Allies to put forward their whole strength and then defeat them, and "development of the fighting should be regarded from this angle."

Ludwig Sertorius, commentator for Transocean, propaganda agency, claimed reinforced Allies "only nibbled a small piece out of the Atlantic wall," and that the Allies have "not managed to synchronize the fighting from Bayeux inland with that of Americans on the Cherbourg peninsula."

Still another Berlin commentator reported "all enemy troops landed or parachuted from the air outside the beachheads have been annihilated and the French hinterland is consequently free of Allied soldiers." The same broadcast, however, admitted that "American parachutists who were landed between Valognes and Ste. Mere Eglise have meanwhile fought their way through to the beachhead on the east coast of the Norman peninsula."

Vichy Regime Fall Foreseen

New York, June 9 (AP)—NBC said today that Berlin radio is "apparently getting ready for a possible fall of the Vichy Government which is meeting today."

It recorded a Berlin broadcast saying "the People's National Government is ready to take over if the French Government does not do its duty."

PARIS UNRUFFLED, SAYS BERLIN REPORT

BY THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

A Berlin broadcast today described Paris as so calm over the invasion that the city's curfew, long fixed at midnight, had been relaxed to 1 a. m.

In a hint that the food situation was serious, Berlin went to the trouble of relating that the French capital was supplied on Thursday with 642 tons of vegetables, 415,000 quarts of milk, 203 tons of fruits. It said "bread for all consumers" was assured the population.

News from the invasion front was described as taking up most of the space in the two-page newspapers which the broadcast said were "eaten up like hot cakes."

BELGIUM DRIVE FEARED BY NAZIS

U. S. CASUALTIES REACH ENGLAND

1,300 Prisoners, Many Not Germans, Also Arrive

By DUELEY ANN HARMON

[American War Correspondent]

[Distributed by the Associated Press]

At a British Port, June 9—One of the largest groups of American casualties and German prisoners of war to arrive at this port reached here early today.

Many of the injured were airborne troops with limbs broken in crashes.

There were 1,300 prisoners, many of them Russians, Poles and Czechs forced by the Germans to fight with the Nazis.

Best Troops Not Used

Flying Officer Robert Kyle, of Los Angeles, Cal., reported:

"I went over on the first day and it was quite a mess. The Germans were ready for us, I can tell you that. The Germans aren't using their best troops on that front area. They are either very young or very old and many of them are foreigners."

The most seriously wounded were removed first and rushed in ambulances to field hospitals which had been alerted six hours before and had instruments and operating tables ready. The first litter cases which came off the ships were pale, many with their eyes closed.

"Bon Jour, Yank," French Cry

Returning glider pilots described the French as sticking their heads out of windows and crying "bon jour, Yank!"

Parachutists were fighting in their backyards, on their lawns, around chicken coops and in and out of farmhouses.

AP Correspondent Hurt While On Invasion Boat

London, June 9 (AP)—Henry B. Jameson, Associated Press correspondent, was injured slightly while aboard a flat-bottomed rhino ferry which spent 14 hours, frequently under heavy German fire attempting to land on the French coast D-day.

He wrote a brief dispatch of how the boat nosed onto shore after being forced back three times and to his account appended this note:

"These two takes are all I had time to write before I transferred to another ship bringing me to port. My injuries are not serious, but have incapacitated me for further carrying out my assignment at the present time." No further word has yet been received from him.

Jameson said he suffered minor shoulder and leg injuries.

AP Writer Hit, Relays Dispatch

London, June 9 (AP)—The London bureau of the Associated Press learned today from Henry B. Jameson, AP war correspondent with the Allied forces, that he had been slightly wounded during the landing operations.

Jameson was the first war correspondent reported injured in the French invasion.

(Editor's Note—An earlier London dispatch said David Woodward, of the Manchester Guardian, was the first casualty reported among the correspondents. Woodward returned with wounds in the face and arm after having landed in France with glider troops.)

Spent 14 Hours In A Ferry

Jameson's dispatch, written aboard Admiral Hall's flagship yesterday, follows:

"I watched the first 14 hours of the Allied invasion of France from close range aboard a flat-bottomed Rhino ferry that had to make four runs for it before being able to land on the most bitterly contested beach.

"Because of shoulder and slight leg injuries I was forced to leave the craft after the third attempt, which brought us under blistering fire from the enemy's camouflaged coastal batteries before they were knocked out by the terrific naval bombardment.

"Throughout the initial storming of the beaches we floated and maneuvered in a water 'no-man's land' between the Allied battleships firing steadily over our heads and the coast.

Repulsed Three Times

"Three times during the first eight hours of the invasion we pulled toward the beach, but each time were forced to pull back.

"On the third try we actually hit the beach under German fire and lost some equipment necessary for unloading the barge, so we again pulled out to safer territory.

"There were four casualties—one fatal—on the third trip.

"This time we were close enough to get a clear picture of the battered beach and the German cement defense installations buried in the hillsides.

"The barge finally was beached with most of its equipment the next day."

German Prisoners Are Bedraggled Lot

London, June 9 (AP)—Men whom Hitler counted on to make his Atlantic defenses impregnable are reaching Britain—a dazed, bedraggled and an unimpressive lot.

They never thought, they said, the Allies would land so much armor and so many cannon so quickly.

Many are in their teens. Many wear ill-fitting uniforms. Many aren't Germans.

13-Year-Old Russian Among Them

One was a 13-year-old Russian, who was in the 21st Panzer Division. Wearing a uniform several sizes too big for him, he said he had been pressed into the German army last year and sent to France after training.

There were Belgians, Italians, Russians, Poles, French and even Mongolians who were captured on the Russian front. Many had been in labor battalions working on the Atlantic defenses.

Some foreigners had seized Nazi offers to get better treatment and pay as soldiers.

Italians Shun Germans

In one prisoner-of-war camp the Italians refused to have anything to do with the Germans and kept to themselves in a corner of the inclosure.

Some youthful Nazis and some of their officers displayed arrogance. They turned their backs on lunch of tea and crackers with a remark that "if you want us to eat, you'll have to bring us something better than that."

Army guards said some prisoners appeared to be pessimistic about German chances of winning the war, one remarking "for us the war is over. For the German army it will be over in two months."

Of one bunch of prisoners, none more than 5 feet 5 inches tall, a 6-foot American said:

"Supermen, ain't they."

Nazi Captives See Defeat

London, June 9 (AP)—German prisoners were reported by army guards today to be pessimistic about German chances of winning the war.

Sergt. Orie Yorkers, of Midland Park, N. J., who talked with many through an interpreter, quoted one soldier as saying: "For us the war is over. For the German army it will be over in two months."

Most of the prisoners were from labor battalions which had been working on the Atlantic defenses.

Eight German officers were stern and arrogant.

When lunch of tea and crackers came, they turned their backs, walked away and said: "If you want us to eat, you'll have to bring us something better than that."

Yanks In France Get Letters From Home

London, June 9 (AP)—United States troops on the Normandy battlefield now are receiving letters from home, and by June 12 will be receiving parcel post packages, headquarters of the European theater of operations announced today.

As the fighting men marched to boats on D-day there was a box for last-minute letters, in which they were permitted to say they were going into action.

Capt. Dennis Magnelli, Union City, N. J., United States Army postal-control officer, said nearly every boat leaving the beachhead was carrying mail back, and that it would be given "considerable priority."

AUTO TRAVEL BANNED

LONDON, June 9.—(AP) The Vichy radio announced a ban on motor traffic beginning at 3 p. m. today in the departments of Haute-Loire, Cantal, Allier and Puy-de-Dome and said anyone caught in a motor vehicle in that area of southern France would be shot on sight.

These departments, all west of the Rhone river, stretch generally northwestward from Marseille toward the Normandy battle area.

Berlin Says U. S. Troops Have Gangster Weapons

London, June 9 (AP)—Berlin radio said today that "knuckle dusters such as are used by American gangsters were found in the full fighting kits of captured British and United States air-borne troops."

The kits contained "everything from a grenade thrower to a long invasion knife," the broadcast added.

INVASION CALLED 'CLIMAX OF WAR'

LONDON, June 9.—(AP) Admiral Sir Bertram H. Ramsay in an order of the day to the Allied naval expeditionary force on the eve of D-Day called the invasion "the climax of the European war."

Ramsay is naval commander-in-chief of the invasion forces.

The text of his order, made public today:

"It is to be our privilege to take part in the greatest amphibious operation in history—a necessary preliminary to opening of the Western front in Europe, which, in conjunction with a great Russian advance, will crush the fighting power of Germany.

"Our task, in conjunction with the merchant navies of the United Nations and supported by the Allied air forces, is to carry the Allied expeditionary force to the continent, to establish them in a secure bridgehead, and build it up and maintain it at a rate which will outmatch that of the enemy.

"Let no one underestimate the magnitude of this task.

"The Germans are desperate and will resist fiercely until we outmaneuver and outfight them, which we can and we will do.

"I count on every man to do his utmost to ensure the success of this great enterprise which is the climax of the European war."

ESCAPES NAZI CAPTORS

London, June 9 (A. P.).—Capt. John C. H. Lee Jr., son of Lieut.-Gen. Lee, a deputy commander to Gen. Eisenhower, was captured by the Germans on an invasion beach, but escaped, Louis Azrael of the Baltimore News-Post said today.

Capt. Lee, who was with one of the first companies of engineers to land on D day, was surprised by the Germans and taken prisoner as he was heading away from the beach, Azrael said.

When the guard nearest him began piling up earth to make an enclosure, Capt. Lee knocked him unconscious with his shovel, then picked up the German's rifle and ran to a roadside embankment.

He lay in a foxhole until he saw an opportunity to rejoin his unit.

Says Americans Use Nazi Cars

London, June 9 (AP)—A Berlin broadcast said tonight that American troops in Normandy were using German cars captured in Tunisia. The report said the cars had been transported by gliders and were in use near Carentan.

Rommel, Tired, Says Nazis Face Hard Task

LONDON, June 10 (Saturday) (AP).—The Berlin radio tonight described Nazi Field Marshal Erwin Rommel, upon whom Adolf Hitler is depending to stem the Allied tide in the west, as looking as if he had had little sleep for two days.

A German war front reporter quoted the marshal as saying: "I know my boys will do their utmost to drive the Anglo-American invaders back into the sea. The task is hard."

Finns Ban 'Pro-Ally' Paper

STOCKHOLM, June 9 (AP).—The Finnish government has indefinitely banned the oppositional afternoon newspaper "Svenska Presen" on the ground that it is too pro-Ally, a Helsinki dispatch said today. The action was taken under a 1939 law for supression of newspapers likely to harm the interests of the state.

Nazi Generals Confer At Oslo

Stockholm, June 9 (AP)—The Free Norwegian legation reported tonight that Gen. Nikolaus von Falkenhorst, commander of the German army of occupation in Norway, had held a two-day conference with 21 Nazi generals at Oslo last week.

Wallace Gets Invasion News While In Russia

Moscow, June 9 (AP)—The Russian news agency Tass, in a dispatch June 8, from Irkutsk, south central Siberia, said that Vice-President Henry A. Wallace, "while on the way to other places," received the invasion news June 6 from the chairman of the Khabarovsk provincial executive committee.

"Wallace received the news with emotion," the dispatch said, "considering the offensive of the Allies as having tremendous significance not only for the conduct of the war but for future humanity. He saw it as a bright proof of the solidarity and determination of the Allies."

ALLIES HALT SHIPPING

MADRID, June 9—(AP) German concern over the possibility of new Allied invasion landings on the Mediterranean coast of France from Corsica, Sardinia and Africa increased today when it became known the Allies had refused a week ago to give navicerts to a Swiss chartered ship seeking to go to Marseille.

Allies still are withholding permits.

The Germans, for military reasons, on June 7 halted freight traffic bound for Switzerland at the French-Spanish frontier. The ban still holds with all northbound freight traffic blocked at the Pyrenees, regardless of how urgent it may be, while jittery German commanders on the French southern coast have taken over all railroad lines for defense purposes.

Third Division Participating

OTTAWA, June 9 (AP).—The Canadian 3d Division is participating in the invasion of France, the government announced today.

CHURCHILL'S NEPHEW REPORTED CAPTURED

BY THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

The German high command, in its communique broadcast today, said that British Lt. Col. Tom Churchill, described as commandant of the island of Lussino in the Adriatic, had been taken prisoner. Berlin identified Churchill as a nephew of the British prime minister.

Major Randolph Churchill, son of the prime minister, is in Yugoslavia, but he was last reported on the mainland. London dispatches said nothing was known about a Tom Churchill.

Last March the German radio reported British commandos had landed on Lussino—or Lissa island—and were fighting under "a British general by the name of Churchill."

3 COMMANDERS ARRIVE IN LONDON FOR CONFERENCE

WASHINGTON, June 9—(AP) At a critical stage of the invasion of Europe, America's three top commanders arrived in London today for a close-up review and possible major decisions on the strategy of the grand offensive.

President Roosevelt, through his secretary, Stephen Early, announced the arrival in Britain's invasion capital of General George C. Marshall, United States army chief of staff; Admiral Ernest J. King, commander-in-chief of the American fleet, and General Henry H. Arnold, chief of the air forces.

Meeting Planned

The four-star officers went to Britain, Early said, to attend a meeting of the combined chiefs of staff which had been planned to be held "as soon as possible after D-day," which was Tuesday.

The President, Early said, is "happy to announce" that the officers have "arrived safely in London."

The trio had conferred with President Roosevelt on Tuesday a few hours after the invasion began. Like other military officials here, they are understood to have been extremely well pleased with the progress to date.

Nonetheless it was possible to figure out weeks before the invasion that critical decisions affecting the success of the whole operation would have to be made immediately after the first limited beachheads were established.

Questions Face Leaders

While the Allied strategy remains one of the great secrets of the war, the map of developments to date suggests that one possible question facing the leaders is this:

Whether to concentrate on exploiting the areas already attacked or to make an equally heavy assault at some other position.

This is the question which undoubtedly has the Nazi High command most seriously worried at the moment. Whether Allied plans are already fixed or not, the Germans cannot commit their forces until they know where the weight of the attack is directed. On the other hand, a display of enemy weakness would open opportunities to General Eisenhower for further attack or for exploitation of positions already assaulted. Such major decisions might preferably be passed upon by the chiefs of staff rather than by the invasion commander alone.

Beyond these, moreover, are questions of supply both from England across the channel and from the United States to England and eventually to the liberated coast of France itself. These questions, directly linking the home production front with the battlefronts of Europe fall exclusively within the jurisdiction of the combined chiefs of staff. The two generals and the admiral undoubtedly felt they might be more readily solved in London where full reports of invasion progress are constantly at hand.

The combined chiefs of staff, which is made up of British and American officers, is a sort of dual organization with parallel existence in Washington and London. The top commanders in each nation, however, are represented.

RUSSIAN TROOPS CAPTURE HEIGHT NORTH OF IASI

Progress in Romania Drive Continues as Clashes Grow Along Front

London, June 9 (A. P.).—Moscow announced today that Soviet troops, seeking to improve their positions, have captured a height of great importance north of Iasi in Romania, where a German radio commentator declared yesterday that Russian armored forces had launched an offensive on a wide front.

DAY

The broadcast Soviet communique, however, made no mention of a large-scale offensive, but said about 200 Germans were killed and several enemy tanks destroyed as Nazi counter-attacks to restore the captured position were frustrated.

Ernst Von Hammer, the Nazi commentator, declared Red Army troops advanced several miles in the center and on the left flank in the Iasi sector.

Only other action on the eastern land front mentioned by the Russians was skirmishing south of Tiraspol on the lower Dnestr and small clashes southeast of Vitebsk in White Russia.

The Nazi radio commentator Ernst von Hammer, who said Thursday that powerful Russian forces had launched an offensive on a wide front north of Iasi in Romania, backed down yesterday, declaring that "yesterday's fighting north of Iasi petered out somewhat."

In contrast to his earlier description of action on a grand scale, von Hammer said today that "at a few places the Soviets Thursday repeated their thrusts against our lines, but used only minor forces without tank support."

The German high command's communique said simply that the Russians "made several unsuccessful counterattacks northwest of Iasi" Thursday, and that "local fighting is reported from northwest of Tarnopol," a sector about 200 miles above Iasi.

Signs Of Early Red Offensive

Indications were plain, however,

Big Blow

JUN 10 1944

By Eddy Gilmore

Moscow, June 9 (AP)—All signs point to an early opening of an offensive by the Red army on the eastern front to match the blows against Hitler on the western front.

The Russian people are avidly following the progress of the Allies in France and Italy.

DAY

Things seen on this correspondent's three recent trips to the Russian front tend to back the predictions of a new Red offensive. Preparations are being made for an attack which should shake Hitler from Russian soil and drive the Nazis back to Berlin.

Full of confidence, Red army soldiers are anxious to get into the battle, and join the mighty struggle of the United Nations to finish Germany and bring a conclusion of the European war.

A Colonel

JUN 10 1944

A United States Liberator Station in England, June 9 (AP)—Jimmy Stewart, the former movie star, has been promoted from major to lieutenant colonel, Brig. Gen. James Hodges, commanding general of a heavy bombardment division, announced today.

DAY

Stewart, now serving as a group operations officer, has flown 14 combat missions. He holds the Distinguished Flying Cross and Air Medal with Oakleaf Cluster. He was promoted to major last January.

In Britain since last November, he has taken part in attacks on Berlin, Brunswick and Frankfurt.

Hints Of New Russ Offensive From East Fan Axis Anxiety

JUN 10 1944

LANDSTROM

London, Saturday, June 10 (AP)—A spurt of fighting northwest of Tarnapol in old Poland was announced early today in the broadcast supplement to the Russian communique.

The announcement came after earlier Moscow dispatches had indicated the Red army is ready to open its expected offensive from the east in coordination with the Allied invasion of Europe from the west.

NIGHT

In the Tarnapol sector, German infantry broke into a populated place yesterday but was driven out by fierce Soviet counterattacks which inflicted heavy losses on the Nazis, Moscow said.

Another Romanian Hill Taken

The supplement said ten German tanks and two self-propelled guns were destroyed and a number of the enemy captured.

Soviet units also have taken another height north of Iasi in Romania, wiping out more than a company of the enemy, the supplement stated.

Elsewhere the front remained quiet, although Moscow said German aerial stabs over the region northeast of Stanislawow increased. The supplement said the losses of the German air force were high, while the broadcast Romanian communique stated that 20 Soviet aircraft were shot down.

There were new indications of uneasiness in Germany and among the Axis' Balkan satellites as the Russian drive was awaited.

Von Hammer Changes Tune

that the big Red Army offensive was about ready to roll. Eddy Gilmore, Associated Press correspondent, cabled from Moscow that "all signs pointed to an early opening" of the offensive.

"From three recent trips to the front areas recently," he wrote, "I am able to back up the prediction. There are preparations for an attack which should shake Hitler from Russian soil to Berlin."

Balkan Anxiety Spreads

Official Moscow accounts intimated in typically guarded phraseology that the Soviet forces in the Iasi area had seized the intitiative there and were steadily improving their positions despite the stubborn strength of the enemy and the disadvantages of terrain.

British dispatches from Switzerland reported a spreading uneasiness in Romania resulting from the Germans' apparent inability to recoup in the Iasi sector, and reports from Axis sources said Premier Antonescu might be forced out of office.

Hungarian authorities scraped the bottom of the military manpower barrel by ordering mobilization of their last potential effec-

Tito's Forces Gaining In Drive On Brac

JUN 10 1944

London, June 9 (AP) — Marshal Tito's Partisan forces are gaining in their drive to occupy the German anti-invasion island of Brac, largest and most populous of the Dalmatian Islands off the Adriatic coast of Yugolsavia, the Free Yugoslav communique broadcast today said.

NIGHT

The broadcast recorded by the Ministry of Information, said the island's fortified town of Sveti Petar was captured with 200 German casualties and much material taken.

Doubt Germans Will Attempt to Make Serious Stand Short of Florence.

ROME, June 9 — (AP) Pursuing the shattered German 14th army at continued breakneck pace northwest of Rome, Lt. Gen. Mark W. Clark's Fifth army forces swept through the communication centers of Viterbo, Vetralla and Tarquinia today as Nazi troops in the Adriatic sector joined the general enemy flight up the Italian peninsula.

Viterbo, a vital highway and rail junction 40 miles from Rome, fell before a swift seven-mile thrust from the area of Lake Di Vico. Tarquinia, on the main coastal highway 55 miles northwest of the capital, was seized in a 10-mile stab by Allied troops driving on from the captured port of Civitavecchia. Vetralla is on a lateral highway connecting Viterbo and Tarquinia.

NIGHT

Unable to Catch Nazis

There yet was no sign that Field Marshal Albert Kesselring had been able to rally his fleeing remnants, and it was doubted here that he would attempt to make another serious stand short of a line beyond Florence, some 150 miles from Rome. Although Clark's forces were averaging roughly 15 miles a day in their grim chase they found it difficult to keep within shooting distance of the Nazis.

Clark's vanguards were more than 130 airline miles from the starting points of the big offensive launched less than a month ago.

A five-month deadlock was broken in the Adriatic sector when the Nazis, after carrying out heavy demolitions, began withdrawing along a five-mile front between the coast and Crecchio. Eighth Army forces pressed after them two miles and occupied Tolla, only seven miles from the provincial capital of Chieti. The Germans thus were retreating along virtually the entire width of the peninsula.

Lt. Gen. Sir Oliver Leese's main Eighth army continued to meet stiff resistance from German rearguards east of the Tiber, but drove some 10 miles beyond Tivoli and seized the towns of Agosta and Palombara-Sabina. Further east Leese's spearheads approached the village of Civitella Roveto, only seven and a half miles south of Avezzano.

JUN 10 1944

Destroy 19 Vehicles

Allied fighters and bombers destroyed another 195 enemy vehicles and 28 rail cars and damaged at least 170 more vehicles in their ceaseless attacks on German transport. The Mediterranean air forces flew 1,500 sorties during the day, losing six planes and destroying four enemy craft.

Twenty Nazi anti-tank and self-propelled guns were knocked out in the vicinity of Monte Orotondo, just east of the Tiber.

Civitavecchia, Italy's seventh port in tonnage handled before the war, was found to have escaped serious damage by the Germans, who apparently were too hard-pressed to make extensive demolitions. Its deep-water unloading facilities—first to fall to the Allies above Rome — should greatly assist the Fifth army push up the west coast.

An Allied spokesman said there was evidence that the Germans rushed some reinforcements from outside Italy into the final struggle for Rome. Among prisoners captured in recent days, he said, were some who declared they left Denmark only a week ago.

In view of the Allied invasion of France and the threatened Russian offensive from the east, however, it was doubted here that Hitler would spare any more divisions to try to bolster Kesselring's depleted forces.

De Valera Re-elected

DUBLIN, June 9 (AP).—Eamon de Valera was re-elected Prime Minister of Eire by the Dail Eireann (Parliament) today. The formality followed the general election on May 31 in which his Fianna Fail party won seventy-six seats, fourteen more than the total of all opposition.

Racing Yanks 55 Miles Past Rome In Dash After Foe

JUN 10 1944

NORGAARD

Rome, June 9 (AP)—Fifth Army troops racing after the retreating Germans captured Viterbo, important road and rail junction 40 miles northwest of Rome, in a swift seven-mile dash today, and also seized Tarquinia, near the coast 55 miles above Rome.

JUN 10 1944

There were no signs the Nazi command had been able to reorganize the fleeing remnants of the Fourteenth and Tenth armies sufficiently to attempt a determined stand.

The Allied advance also enveloped Vetralla, on a lateral road from Tarquinia and about six miles southwest of Viterbo.

The German high command earlier announced the evacuation of Tarquinia, and said its rear guards were withdrawn north of the town.

Nazis Retreat To Escape Trap

So rapid was the drive above Rome that German forces guarding the Adriatic sector also began to retreat to avoid encirclement, and Allied troops were rolling forward along the entire Italian front.

Fabrica Di Roma Claimed

Earlier, Lieut. Gen. Mark W. Clark's columns, driving north from the capital, occupied the entire Lake Bracciano area and moved on to capture Caprarola, 34 miles north of Rome on the east side of Lake di Vico, and about ten miles southeast of the highway junction town of Viterbo.

(Reuter news agency reported that Karl Praegner, Berlin military commentator, said the Germans have withdrawn from Fabrica di Roma, northwest of Civita Castellana, and that American troops had occupied the town.

(Fabrica di Roma lies three miles northeast of Caprarola and is about ten miles to the southeast of Viterbo.)

DAY

An Allied spokesman said that among prisoners taken in the Lake Bracciano area were Nazis from the 20th German Luftwaffe field division.

"This division came to Italy from Denmark, which, according to the prisoners, it left only a week ago," said the spokesman. "The division differs from the normal infantry division only in the fact that its personnel is drawn from the Luftwaffe ground staff, as in the case of the Herman Goering Panzer division."

Tollo Is Occupied

The five-month standstill on the lines in the Adriatic sector ended with the Germans starting a withdrawal between the coast and Crecchio, five miles inland. Eighth Army forces moved up two miles and occupied Tollo, which is only 7½ miles from the provincial capital of Chieti.

North of Rome, the Fifth Army moved seven miles north to win the Bracciano area. Another element seized the town of Sutri, six miles north of Lake Bracciano.

The Eighth Army conformed with this drive by a continued thrust northward along the east side of the Tiber, but progress there was slower due to demolitions and mines.

Guns Knocked Out

Just east of the Tiber 20 enemy anti-tank and self-propelled guns were knocked out in the vicinity of Monterotondo, whose capture was announced yesterday. Lieut. Gen. Sir Oliver Leese's forces have gone several miles beyond Monterotondo.

The towns of Agosta and Palombara-Sabina were occupied during a ten-mile thrust north of Tivoli. Farther east, Eighth Army units approached the village of Civitella Roveto, only seven and a half miles south of Avezanno on Highway 82.

Vehicles Smashed

Civitavecchia, Italy's seventh port in tonnage handled, was found to have escaped serious damage.

Destruction of 195 vehicles and 28 rail cars and damage to at least 170 more vehicles, was credited to Allied fighters and bombers in the steady bombing and strafing of enemy communications yesterday.

Italy's New Premier, Bonomi, Forms Anti-Fascist Cabinet

JUN 10 1944

KENNEDY

Rome, June 9 (AP)—Seventy-one-year-old Ivanoe Bonomi, new Premier of Italy, filled 17 seats in his Government today with men who had no Fascist past to live down.

The places in the new Government were about equally divided between underground liberation leaders who had operated in Rome during German occupation and the anti-Fascist leaders of southern Italy who two months ago joined the Cabinet of Marshal Pietro Badoglio to give it a broader base.

Sforza Retains Seat

All six of Italy's liberation parties are represented and Count Carlo Sforza, Benedetto Croce and Palmiro Togliatti, who were in the Badoglio Government, continue in the Cabinet without portfolio.

Bonomi himself has taken the Foreign and Interior Ministries.

The white-bearded Premier Bonomi succeeded Marshal Pietro Badoglio, who retired when liberation leaders of Rome refused to serve under him because of his past association with Fascism.

The marshal returned to private life after an audience with the Pope and after helping his successor organize the new Cabinet. Friends said he felt he had done his best to serve Italy by heading the stop-gap government and was glad to get out of politics.

Casati Heads War Ministry

In the new Cabinet Alexandro Casati took over the combined War and Air Ministries and Fausto Gullo, Communist, was named Minister of Agriculture charged with the important task of getting in the wheat crop at official prices.

Unless some new crisis should cause it to resign, the Cabinet will serve until the war is over, when a constituent assembly will be elected.

Bonomi, a veteran anti-Fascist who was Premier for a short period in the spring of 1922, was a hunted man up to only five days ago, slipping from house to house, sometimes in disguise.

A member of the old Italian Socialist party, Bonomi lived in obscurity for the 20 years of the Fascist regime. He was not molested, but was prevented from taking part in politics by his refusal to join the Fascist party.

Headed Anti-Fascist Coalition

Late in 1942 six underground political parties, feeling the defeat of Italy and collapse of Fascism near, formed an anti-Fascist coalition in Rome. They were the Democratic-Labor, Liberal, Christian Democrats, Communist, Socialist and Actionist groups.

Bonomi by this time had broken with the Socialists and was in the Democratic-Labor party. On being chosen president of the coalition committee he severed ties with the party.

On Mussolini's downfall last summer the committee came into the open to the extent of asking Badoglio to make peace with the Allies and declare war on Germany. In September, when the Germans took control of Rome, the committee was compelled to go deeper underground than ever and its 19 members spent nine months eluding the Gestapo and Italian secret police.

Replaces Badoglio as Premier in Move to Exclude ex-Fascists From Regime.

Rome, June 9 (A. P.).—Ivanoe Bonomi assumed today the task of forming a new Italian Cabinet, which, it is said, will be wholly anti-Fascist in character and exclude any men who ever collaborated with Benito Mussolini's Fascist regime.

Marshal Pietro Badoglio, who stepped down as Premier Tuesday, will not be included in the new Government. The Marshal was said to feel he had performed his duty in heading a government during the interim between Mussolini's fall and the Allied liberation of Rome.

[BBC European broadcast received here by NBC reported that some politicians in Italy have refused to serve under Bonomi.]

Bonomi, who is 71, was Premier for a short period in the spring of 1922 before the Fascist era. He lived in obscurity under Fascism and recently became head of the Rome Committee of Liberation. Formerly associated with the Socialists, Bonomi now is an independent, though he is close to the Liberal party.

Crown Prince Umberto, acting in his new capacity as Lieutenant-General of the Realm, yesterday asked Bonomi to form a new government to succeed that of Badoglio. The Prince took this step after a series of conferences here with various Italian political leaders.

Umberto originally had asked Badoglio to attempt to form a new Cabinet after the Marshal dissolved his government, but apparently Badoglio's efforts were unsuccessful. The Crown Prince had received the royal prerogatives of King Victor Emanuel III Monday when the latter stepped down as Italian sovereign.

Among leaders who took part in the conferences here were Count Carlo Sforza, Benedetti Croce, and Palimro Togliatti ministers without portfolio in Badoglio's recently-dissolved Cabinet, and Victor Emanuel Orlando, who was premier during world war 1.

Members of the Rome committee suggested that Bonomi form the new government in place of Badoglio.

Crown Prince Humbert today called upon all Italian soldiers, sailors and airmen to redouble their efforts at prosecuting the war at the side of Allied troops.

Only through Allied victory will the Italian people have opportunity to justify themselves and reassume their rightful position among the peoples of the world, he said.

"Our people have already given the highest example of moral force, the strength of renewal after a war that was not desired but nevertheless always heroically borne," the Prince declared.

It was Humbert's first public statement since returning to Rome as Lieutenant-General of the Realm.

His Anxiety Allayed, Pope Tells Gen. Clark

JUN 10 1944

Rome, June 9 (AP) — Lieut. Gen. Mark W. Clark, Fifth Army commander, said today that Pope Pius expressed to him great satisfaction with Allied authorities' handling of the feeding problem since the occupation of Rome.

DAY

Clark said the Pontiff, with whom he talked for 10 minutes yesterday, had been greatly concerned that chaotic conditions might arise with the city's fall. Pope Pius said that his concern had been removed.

The Pope requested Clark to convey his warmest regards and best wishes to President Roosevelt, and Clark said he had done so.

New Greek Cabinet Leaves Out Reds

JUN 10 1944

Cairo, June 9 (A. P.).—After waiting seventeen days for the communists and the organizations they control inside Greece to nominate representatives for his proposed National Unity Government, Premier George Papandreou announced today the formation of a Cabinet without them.

DAY

The Cabinet includes thirteen Ministers and two under-secretaries.

Allies Gain On India-Burma Front

JUN 10 1944

GRUMICH

Southeast Asia Command Headquarters, Ceylon, June 9 (AP)—Allied forces have punched suddenly forward on all major sectors of the India-Burma front. In the east they seized the northern end of the north Myitkyina airfield; near Kamaing, occupied several villages and routed enemy troops in disorder, and on the India side, pursued Japanese south from Kohima, headquarters announced today.

As Lieut. Gen. Joseph W. Stilwell's Chinese-American forces penetrated the northern airstrip of the besieged north Burma stronghold, Chinese inside the town fought to new positions from the south and repelled enemy night attacks, and two miles north of the city, Maj. Gen. W. D. A. Lentaigne's air-borne Chindits caputred the village of Hola, near Maingana.

Chinese Further Hem In Kamaing

At the same time, Chinese troops further hemmed in the enemy base of Kamaing, 40 miles northwest of Myitkyina, driving down the Mogaung Valley and closing the gap between an established roadblock west of Lachi Ga, six miles northwest of Kamaing, and Sakan.

More than 200 Japanese were killed in the fighting there, and the Chinese seized three 15-mm. guns, two 75-mm. guns and other equipment.

Near Nanyaseik, 10 miles north of Kamaing, where the enemy was reported withdrawing in disorder, the Chinese also inflicted heavy casualties and seized vehicles and supplies.

Other Gains Made By Chinese

The village of Chakrao, six miles to the west of Kamaing, has been occupied by Chinese.

Twelve miles southeast of Kamaing other Chinese elements captured the village of Badon, east of Tumbongkha, and found 100 enemy dead in the sector.

South of Mogaung, about 25 miles southeast of Kamaing and just southwest of Myitkyina, Allied troops occupied the village of Inhmi, capturing supply dumps and inflicted severe casualties.

The communique said Chindit troops now control most of the hill features east of Mogaung.

Japs Retreat In India

In the India fighting, Japanese were retreating southward from the Kohima sector on the road to Imphal, and it was not clear where they would make a stand, the bulletin said. Tank-supported Allied troops reached Milestone 60, 14 miles from Kohima, after enemy demolitions had been cleared, and drove the enemy from Kigwema, five miles southeast of Kohima, and Kezoma, seven miles southeast.

In the Imphal sector, the Allies progressed steadily north from the Kanglatongbi area, after repulsing a counterattack, and now have consolidated their positions, the communique said, adding that mopping up continued of Japanese who had infiltrated into the Potsangbam neighborhood. Enemy counterattacks were driven off in the Imphal-Ukruhl sector.

Southeast Asia Command Headquarters, Kandy, Ceylon, June 9 (AP)—Lieut. Gen. Joseph W. Stilwell's troops have captured the northern end of the north Myitkyina airfield in Burma, and British troops, trying to chase the Japanese out of India, have driven 14 miles southward down the Kohima road toward Imphal, Allied headquarters announced today.

Maj. Gen. W. D. A. Lentaigne's air-borne Chindits captured the village of Hola two miles northeast of Myitkyina, while Chinese troops captured new positions inside the town itself and drove off a Japanese night attack.

Chinese Close Gap

To the west in the Mogaung Valley, Chinese closed a gap between a roadblock they had established west of Lachi Ga, six miles northwest of Kamaing, and Sakan.

In the Kohima fighting, the communique said, the British captured positions five and seven miles southeast of Kohima, as well as 14 miles south of the Allied communications hub.

British units also were moving northward from Imphal toward a junction with the Kohima force, repulsing counterattacks and consolidating positions en route.

Japs Closing In On Changsha

JUN 10 1944

Chungking, Saturday, June 10 (AP)—Fighting is raging in the "outer defenses" of Changsha and the Japanese are tightening a menacing arc against this Hunan province city which Generalissimo Chiang Kai-shek has ordered defended to the utmost, the Chinese high command said today, while in two other Chinese provinces sudden flareups were expected as the enemy massed troops for new thrusts.

Driving down from the southern shore of Tungting Lake in an apparent effort to protect his flank from a possible Chinese rescue attempt, the enemy seized the Chinese stronghold of Siangyin, 30 miles north-northwest of Changsha and west of the Canton-Hankow railway.

Last Line Of Defense Crossed

At the same time, a Chinese communique admitted, a column driving due south along the other side of the railway was within seven and one half miles of the provincial capital astride the route, a Chinese spokesman said. From the east, the communique continued, the invader had crossed the Laotao river, described as the last line of defense before Changsha, and was within 12 miles of the city.

Total strength of the various columns attempting to converge on the major objective was estimated at between 70,000 and 80,000 men.

volved in the Yiyang area, while to the east of the capital a bitter combat was raging only 12 miles away, the communique said.

Japs Pour Into Shansi

To the north and northwest the Japs were reported preparing new drives. Many divisions were reported pouring into Shansi province from Manchuria for a potential invasion of Shensi province, west of Honan. In Honan itself signs were detected that the enemy was preparing to reconquer the 70-mile stretch of the Peiping-Hankow railway now held by the Chinese. This stretch extends southward from Yencheng, 90 miles south of Chenghsien.

In central Honan, Japanese at Yehsien, 35 miles west of Yengcheng, have pushed southward, reaching the vicinity of Tushuchen, 20 miles to the southwest, and serious fighting is in progress there, the communique said.

Chinese Gain In Yunnan

On the Yunnan province front west of the Salween river, the Chinese after fighting their way into the Burma road city of Lungling, second most important Japanese base in that theater, captured two strongly fortified Japanese points, the bulletin said.

Six of eight enemy-built blockhouses northeast of Lungling were captured, and the enemy highway supply line leading from Lungling westward to Mangshih was cut, the communique said.

Japanese Only Eight Miles From Changsha

Chungking, June 9 (AP)—Japanese columns driving from the north are within seven and a half miles of Changsha, whose defenders have been instructed by Generalissimo Chiang Kai-shek to remain at their posts and do their utmost to achieve victory, a Chinese army spokesman anounced today.

The Japanese are reported to have poured reinforcements, including many divisions from Manchuria, into southwestern Shansi for a potential invasion of Shensi province.

Japanese movements south of the Yellow river indicated possibility that the invaders will drive into southwestern Honan province in efforts to destroy Chinese field forces.

A big flareup of fighting in Honan was predicted as signs were detected that the Japanese are preparing for a try at reconquering the 70-mile stretch of the Peiping-Hankow railway held by the Chinese, extending south from Yencheng.

Allies Hit Rail Line In China

Chungking, June 9 (AP)—Stabbing into Japanese-held North China, fighter planes of Maj. Gen. Claire L. Chennault's Chinese-American composite wing yesterday struck the Peiping-Hankow Railroad at two points, wrecking locomotives and strafing many freight and passenger cars.

A communique said six locomotives were wrecked and three damaged at Singtai and at Chengting, a town 150 miles south of the old Chinese capital of Peiping.

4 JAP DESTROYERS SUNK BY BOMBERS

Yank Planes Block Enemy Attempt to Reinforce Biak Garrison.

ADVANCED ALLIED HEADQUARTERS, New Guinea, Saturday, June 10.—(AP) General Douglas MacArthur's Mitchell bombers sank four Japanese destroyers off Manokwari, Dutch New Guinea, it was announced today.

Headquarters reported a fifth destroyer was damaged. A cruiser and a sixth destroyer fled.

Mitchells Attack Ships

Ten Mitchells were credited with blocking the enemy attempt to reinforce its Biak garrison Thursday.

The attack upon the cruiser and six destroyers took place in Geelvink bay, the entrance to which is guarded by Biak and the other Schouten islands.

Ten enemy fighters attempted to prevent the bomber attack, and shot down three American planes. Lightnings escorting the Mitchells destroyed five Japanese aircraft.

On Biak itself American ground forces were mopping up remaining enemy pockets in the Mokmer area and were preparing an attack upon Borokoe and Sorido dromes west of Mokmer strip.

The attack upon enemy warships followed up the bombing by Liberators of a Japanese heavy cruiser to the northwest, near Waigeo island on June 6, and the probable sinkings of two destroyers in waters between Dutch New Guinea and Halmahera island a few days earlier.

Truk Group Hit

MacArthur's Liberators meanwhile again attacked islands in the Truk group, dropping 30 tons upon enemy positions June 7. Three intercepting Zeros were shot down.

Interception at Truk was unusually strong, 25 planes rising to meet the B-24s. One Liberator is missing.

The enemy naval task was heading eastward off New Guinea, MacArthur's spokesman said, and probably was designed to reinforce beleaguered garrisons on Biak.

Ten Mitchells roared in at mast-height to lay their thousand pound bombs right on the decks of four destroyers—the four that sank—and dangerously near a fifth, which was damaged. The undamaged cruiser and sixth destroyer retreated to the northwest while P-38 Lightnings fought off the Japanese aerial interception.

It was the first daring venture by an enemy task force into waters near New Guinea in many months. The amount of damage inflicted was perhaps the greatest ever accomplished by such a small bombing formation in the history of the Fifth Air Force.

Halsey Made Knight Of The British Empire

Guadalcanal, June 9 (AP)—Admiral William F. Halsey, commander of South Pacific naval forces, has been made a knight of the British Empire, members of his forces learned here today when a congratulatory message arrived.

The message came from Sir Philip Mitchell, governor of the Fiji Islands and high commissioner for the western Pacific.

NEW YORK GUNNERS DOWN JAP FIGHTERS

An Advanced United States South Pacific Air Base, June 6—(Delayed)—(A. P.).—Both victory and death rode with a small formation of badly battered American Liberator bombers as they returned from a raid on the Japanese Truk base June 2.

Sieved with bullet holes and carrying three dead and four wounded airmen, the damaged Liberators returned to their base safely over 900 miles of ocean after leaving Dublon Town, in the Truk atoll, in flames and destroynng at least ten Japanese planes.

Staff Sergt. William Zelanka, 326 East 65th street, New York city, was credited with a probable kill over the target.

Staff Sergt. James A. Conlon, 533 18th street, Brooklyn, N. Y., nailed a Zero which went into a flat spin and was seen to hit the water.

Another Zero crashed in flames after Staff Sergt. Roscoe R. Loter, Port Jefferson, L. I., caught it with his top turrent guns.

Six Islands Bombed

PEARL HARBOR, June 9 (AP).—American bombers, hitting at Japanese positions in the central Pacific, blasted airfields, runways and gun positions on a half dozen islands Wednesday and Thursday, the Navy reported today.

Truk, Ponape, Pakin, Nauru and unidentified enemy positions in the Marshalls all felt the blast of American bombs.

Canadian Urges Break With Britain

Quebec, June 9 (AP)—Roger Vezina, editor of the weekly newspaper Le Bloc—Official Bloc Populaire newspaper—said at a near-by Charny rally that "we should hope for the day when Canada would have become the 22d republic in the Americas."

He added that Canada "then would be a free country without any (British) Empire tie and would assert itself as the third economic power in the Americas."

De Gaulle And Roosevelt May Confer This Summer

Washington, June 9 (AP)—The possibility arose today that President Roosevelt and Gen. Charles de Gaulle, who do not see eye to eye on the administration of French affairs, may have a man-to-man talk in Washington this summer.

President Roosevelt said at a press conference that Vice-Admiral Raymond Fenard, head of the French naval mission, had visited him to ask if the President would be willing to receive de Gaulle, who is leader of the French Committee of Liberation.

The President said he informed Fenard that he would be happy to see General de Gaulle late this month or during the second week in July. Fenard is now on his way to see de Gaulle in London, where the French leader is visiting at the invitation of Prime Minister Churchill.

Pending final word from de Gaulle, diplomats here were uncertain as to whether the meeting with the President actually would take place.

Replying to questions, Mr. Roosevelt said he had no idea what would be discussed at the prospective meeting, and that there was no indication that representatives of other nations would attend.

Presumably, however, de Gaulle's primary purpose in coming here would be to discuss the American Government's policy toward the French Committee.

This policy does not recognize the committee as a French Government but does recognize it as an administrative body in any French area where its authority is recognized by the population.

The British Government has gone along with the United States in this policy, but is reported to hold no strong objections to recognizing the committee as the provisional government for France upon its liberation. On the other hand, President Roosevelt has made clear in past statements that he does not believe anybody can speak for the French people at this time on what government they desire.

Mr. Roosevelt said Admiral Fenard discussed with him last Monday the question of de Gaulle's coming here, and that he suggested the periods of June 22-30 or July 6-14 for a visit. Asked why those dates, Mr. Roosevelt said they were the only times available.

It was observed that there is a convention coming along in there. (The Repubican National Convention starts June 26 and the Democratic July 19.)

"Oh, yes," Mr. Roosevelt replied, "and there is an election in the fall and Christmas is coming, too."

SHIP LOSSES HIT NEW LOW

Ango-American Statement Calls May Best Month In War

Washington, June 9 (AP)—Allied shipping losses from U-boat action in the pre-invasion month of May were "by far the lowest for any month of the war," an Anglo-American statement reported today. At the same time it was noted that a lull in German undersea activity might indicate a possible sign of "preparations for a renewed offensive."

The joint statement, issued by the Office of War Information under authority of President Roosevelt and Prime Minister Churchill, said cargo-ship losses in May were but a fraction of the destruction inflicted on Axis shipping.

Two U-Boats For Every Loss

Several U-boats are being sent to the bottom for every merchant ship destroyed, the statement noted, whereas "formerly each U-boat accounted for a considerable number of merchant ships before being destroyed."

A hint that new electronic detection devices are contributing to the anti-submarine campaign was given in the statement. Allied successes were attributed not only to the vigorous efforts of the armed forces, but to "the scientists who support them in a brilliant manner."

Text Of Statement

Text of the statement:

"During May our shipping losses have been by far the lowest for any month of the war, and they have, in fact, been a fraction of the losses inflicted on enemy shipping by our warships and aircraft, although their merchant shipping is petty compared to that of the Allies.

"There has been a lull in the operations of the U-boats which perhaps indicates preparations for a renewed offensive. The change which has come over the scene is illustrated by the fact that in spite of the few U-boats at sea, several are now sent to the bottom for each merchant ship sunk whereas formerly each U-boat accounted for a considerable number of merchant ships before being destroyed.

"This is to be ascribed to the vigilance and to the relentless attacks of our Anglo-American Canadian and other anti-U-boat forces, including the scientists who support them in a brilliant manner."

'Spray' Japanese Gardens

U. S. Flyers Drop Fuel Oil and Bombs on Foe's Bougainville Food

WASHINGTON, June 9 (AP).—American fighter pilots flying over Bougainville are spraying Japanese victory gardens.

Spraying them, that is, with fuel oil, light bombs and incendiaries, reports Lieutenant James A. Kelly, of the marines from the Southwest Pacific.

Kelly wrote that the sprayings, which the pilots call "potato runs," are designed to keep the Japanese from making up on a shortage of the food they need to keep on fighting.

Half Dozen Jap Isles Raided

Washington, June 9 (AP)—American bombers, hitting hard at Japanese positions in the Central Pacific, blasted airfields, runways and gun positions on a half dozen islands Wednesday and Thursday, the navy reported today.

Truk, once strong enemy base in the Caroline Islands; Ponape and adjoining Pakin, guarding the eastern approaches to Truk; Nauru, far [illegible] and unidentified enemy positions in the Marshalls all felt the blast of American bombs.

To the east, other Liberator bombers attacked Ponape, pouring their bombs down on airfields, plantation areas and the settlement on the island. There, too, anti-aircraft opposition was meager.

Navy bombers made the attacks on Pakin northwest of Truk and Nauru on Tuesday. On Pakin Island anti-aircraft batteries were hit.

SOUTH AMERICA TO GET U. S. SHIPS

Washington, June 9 (A. P.).—President Roosevelt said today that the plan to transfer small United States naval vessels to South American countries is part of an over-all program to build up the defenses of the Americas.

Navy Secretary James V. Forrestal, in a letter to House Speaker Rayburn said yesterday "the situation has now arisen where it is considered desirable to transfer certain patrol craft, mine craft and other small vessels and boats to certain of the American republics to be used in hemisphere defense."

A reporter at Mr. Roosevelt's news conference asked if the naval aid were intended principally for Brazil.

You can't say yes and you can't say no, the President replied, adding that we are doing all we can to build up the defenses of the Americas. Plans are further along for the building up of Brazilian defenses, he said, but that does not exclude other countries.

A reporter asked if any vessels would go to Argentina. The President said he did not know.

UP TO ITALIANS, SAYS PRESIDENT

Washington, June 9 A. P.).—President Roosevelt reiterated today that the Allies will not be completely satisfied with political conditions inside Italy until the people have had an opportunity to choose their own government.

At his news conference the President declined to comment for the record on the action of King Victor Emmanuel in turning over his powers to Crown Prince Humbert.

"Am I right that the Allies will not be completely satisfied until the people themselves make their choice?" a reporter asked.

That is right, the President replied, adding that we want the people to choose.

Another reporter asked Mr Roosevelt whether he could comment now on the terms of the Italian armistice which, the reporter said, have been kept secret.

There is no reason why they should be kept secret, the President replied with a smile. He said he thought the boys over there can get the Italian armistice terms.

DEMOTED GENERAL WILL NOT BE TRIED BY COURT-MARTIAL

JUN 10 1944

WASHINGTON, June 9—(AP) The War department made known today Gen. Dwight D. Eisenhower had reported that evidence against Maj. Gen. Henry J. F. Miller, charged with violating security regulations, did not warrant a court-martial.

Miller was reduced to his permanent rank of lieutenant colonel in the air forces and sent home after he was reported to have said at a cocktail party in London that the invasion would come not later than June 15.

The department statement was made to Senator Chandler (D-Ky.) in a memorandum from Maj. Gen. M. G. White, assistant chief of staff, which said:

"General Eisenhower stated that he had investigated the incident carefully and that, while the evidence was clear, it was not such as to warrant punishment by court martial more severe than could be given administratively."

Miller, whose home is in Miami, is now hospitalized at Coral Gables, Fla.

Chandler, who has asked an investigation of the case, said he did not regard the War department's report as sufficient and had requested that a full report on the incident be given to the Senate Military committee.

It developed that on May 29, without knowing of the incident in which Miller was involved, the Senate had confirmed his promotion to the permanent rank of colonel. News of the disciplinary action against Miller was held up by London and not released until after the invasion.

President Roosevelt sent Miller's promotion to the Senate on March 16, apparently before the incident occurred. No subsequent attempt was made to withdraw it.

EX-GENERAL IN COMEBACK

Demoted By Clark At Salerno, Wins Brigadier Rank

JUN 1

Washington, June 9 (AP)—The field demotion of a major general at Salerno last September was disclosed today when an army promotion list showed him heading toward a quick comeback. Now a colonel, he was nominated to be a brigadier general.

He is Col. Ernest J. Dawley, who was a major general in command of the corps which established the beachhead at Salerno last September 9.

Action Believed Hasty

In the midst of that battle, when a German armored column smashed through to the beach in a sharp counterattack, Lieut. Gen. Mark Clark "busted" Dawley to his permanent rank of colonel. Officials here said Clark felt Dawley had lost control of the situation.

The belief that this action may have been hasty was said in high quarters to be one reason why Dawley is being given general officer rank again only nine months later.

"Took It On Chin"

Another reason said to have motivated Lieut. Gen. Lesley J. McNair, army ground forces chief, to urge the new promotion is that Dawley "took it on the chin" without a murmur, and since then has demonstrated again outstanding qualities as a commander.

Dawley, a field artillery officer, was born at Antigo, Wis., February 17, 1886. A colonel on the permanent regular army promotion list, he became a temporary major general September 29, 1941.

After he was demoted at Salerno, Dawley was assigned to Camp Roberts, California, as assistant to the commanding general of the field artillery replacement training center there. More recently he has been on duty at the tank destroyer center, Camp Hood, Texas.

Neville Miller in Balkan Post

WASHINGTON, June 9 (AP).—Neville Miller, former president of the National Association of Broadcasters, today was named senior deputy chief of the Balkan Mission of the United Nations Relief and Rehabilitation Administration, with headquarters in Cairo.

D-DAY PREPARATIONS SHOWN IN NEWSREEL

JUN 10 1944

WASHINGTON, June 9—(AP) The War department said today that a meeting of newsreel companies had agreed to distribute a film showing preparations for invasion as a substitute for another newsreel depicting actual landing operations.

The department issued its statement after publication of reports concerning the substitution of a film called "The Eve of Battle" for an action reel which just arrived in this country.

The statement said the news reel editors, meeting in New York agreed to the substitution as "The only method by which the public could be assured a prompt showing of a most timely and informative report on the present military operation."

JUN 10 1944

Protocol on Whales

WASHINGTON, June 9 (AP).—The diplomats of seven large nations have solemnly agreed that one blue whale equals two and one-half humpback whales. Likewise, one blue whale is the agreed equivalent of two fin whales or six sei whales. The table of whale values is set down in a protocol signed by the governments of the United States, Great Britain, South Africa, Australia, Canada, New Zealand and Norway, regulating the taking of whales as soon as the war ends.

Roosevelt Says Increase In Refugee Centers Needed

JUN 10 1944

WASHINGTON, June 9. (AP) Refugees are streaming out of Europe in such numbers that shelter centers will have to be doubled in capacity, President Roosevelt said today in announcing that 1,000 will be brought to this country and housed at Fort Ontario, near Oswego, N. Y.

Mr. Roosevelt told a news conference that 1,800 refugees reached southern Italy last week from Yugoslavia alone. He said havens already established at Casablanca and elsewhere in the Mediterranean area have facilities to care for 20,000 and that these will be expanded and new ones established to make room for 40,000.

The 1,000 to be brought to Fort Ontario, Mr. Roosevelt said, are all that he anticipates will come to this country. It was indicated, in fact, that bringing them here is primarily intended as a token of the United States' willingness to do its part in meeting the problem.

Mr. Roosevelt made public instructions he has sent to Ambassador Robert Murphy at Algiers which said, "I feel it is important that the United States indicate that it is ready to share the burden of caring for refugees during the war."

Discussing the refugee question a week ago, Mr. Roosevelt said it was only common sense to place refugees in havens near their homelands since they would go home after the war. It would mean two long sea voyages for those brought here, he said.

The President directed that the Army and Navy cooperate with Murphy in arranging transportation for the 1,000. He placed the war relocation authority in charge of administration of the camp, but instructed that the Army "take the necessary security precautions so that these refugees will remain in the camp."

He told Murphy to choose refugees "for whom other havens of refuge are not immediately available" but that he would "like the group to include a reasonable proportion of various categories of persecuted peoples who have fled to Italy."

The refugees will be brought to the United States outside the regular immigration procedure but Mr. Roosevelt instructed Murphy to be sure "that the necessary health checks are made."

On the point of finances, the President issued these instructions: "Until UNRRA (United Nations Relief and [illegible] tration) is in [illegible] the financial respo[illegible]ed, the bureau of the [illegible] make arrangements for financing the project; using to the extent possible any available funds of the War department, the War Relocation Authority, and the War Refugee board, and from the Foreign War Relief appropriation, and if necessary drawing upon the President's Emergency fund."

USAAF In Britain Sets New Bomb Mark

Washington, June 9 (AP)—American air forces in Britain reached new peaks in May during the pre-invasion assault by flying 60,000 sorties and dropping more than 56,000 tons of explosives and incendiaries on 200 targets.

American gunners shot down 993 German aircraft while losing 588, which includes 310 heavy bombers, 234 fighters and 44 medium bombers. The Ninth Air Force destroyed 140 German planes on the ground and the Eighth accounted for many more.

These figures were announced by the War Department today in a summary of activity which it said "broke all records for bomber and fighter operations."

Final Agreement Nears On GI 'Bill Of Rights'

Washington, June 9 (AP)—Senate and House conferees approached final agreement on a compromise GI "Bill of Rights" tonight by settling differences over unemployment compensation provisions.

Senator Clark (D., Mo.), said the compromise will provide a maximum of 52 weeks of unemployment compensation at $20 a week for jobless veterans of the present war for two years after their discharge.

The Senate originally voted 52 weeks at a graduated scale allowing $15 for single men and women, $20 for husbands and $25 for fathers.

Mexican Workers Not Available

WASHINGTON, June 9 (AP).—The War Production Board announced today abandonment of a proposal to import Mexican workers to relieve the acute labor shortage in foundries and forge shops. The plan was dropped because the Mexican government is "not currently in a position" to increase the number of nationals sent to this country, W. P. B. officials reported to a new inter-agency committee set up by W. P. B. to help break the labor-supply bottleneck in the foundry and forge industry.

Navy Takes Care Of The Wounded

JUN 10 1944

Washington, June 9 (AP)—Tough fighting men of the navy are cast in a "mercy" role in the European invasion—they are responsible for movement of wounded men back cross the English Channel to hospitals in Great Britain.

The story of many months of planning for orderly and efficient removal of casualties was told tonight by the navy, which observed that "amphibious warriors need amphibious doctors."

Only 20 minutes after troops splashed through the last few yards of their dash onto beaches in northern France, landing teams of medical officers and enlisted men went ashore to set up first-aid positions. Next came the navy's medical shore parties to establish evacuation centers.

"Perhaps the most difficult" step in evacuating the wounded, the navy says, is when helpless men must be taken from the beach, by way of small boats, to the larger ships which will carry them back to England. This must be done in the heat of battle, and often in rough weather. And it must be done against a heavy and urgent flow of traffic.

Any type of boat used in landing operations may carry men back to base. But it is the roomy, seagoing LST's—landing ships, tanks —that are most efficient. They are equipped with all medical supplies and surgical equipment so that they may be used on return trips as floating hospitals.

To Get Medal For Son Who Died In Action

Washington, June 9 (AP)—The father of Lieut. Robert Craig of Toledo, will be given the Congressional Medal of Honor awarded posthumously to the officer who gave his life so that his men could withdraw safely in Sicily.

The War Department announced today that Maj. Gen. Allen W. Jones, commanding general of the 106th Infantry Division, will present the medal to William F. Craig, the father, at Camp Atterbury, Indiana, in exercises in connection with celebration of Infantry Day, June 15.

'Civilian D-Day' to Open Fifth War Loan Drive

President Will Lead Nation in Ceremonies on Monday

WASHINGTON, June 9 (AP).—President Roosevelt will lead the nation in "Civilian D Day" ceremonies inaugurating the $16,000,000 Fifth War Loan drive Monday.

He will speak during a one-hour radio program to be broadcast over the combined four major networks starting at 10 a. m.

Most of the program will originate at Texarkana, on the border of Texas and Arkansas, where Treasury Secretary Henry Morgenthau jr., Governors of five Gulf Southwest states and stars of stage, screen and radio will join in day-long activities.

The broadcast, written and produced by Orson Welles, the Treasury's latest dollar-a-year man, will keep abreast of developments in the invasion of western Europe, the Treasury announced.

Senators Vote To Increase Pay Of Infantrymen

Committee Approves Rise for Combat Troops and Bonus for Glider Units

WASHINGTON, June 9 (AP).—Legislation adding $5 and $10 a month to the pay of fighting infantrymen and boosting the wages of glider units to conform generally with those of parachutists was approved today by the Senate Military Affairs Committee.

Acting on Secretary of War Henry L. Stimson's assertion that current operations have demonstrated "the importance of highly trained, tough and aggressive infantry," the committee unanimously reported out one measure that would:

Increase by $5 the monthly pay of infantrymen who attain a standard of proficiency or perform satisfactorily in action, and provide a $10 monthly boost as recognition of exemplary conduct in action or satisfactory duty in a "major" operation.

Then it approved another measure which would add up to 50 per cent to the pay of members of glider units, with the limitation that officers, warrant officers and nurses be held to increases of $100 a month and enlisted men to $50 a month.

Senator Charles W. Tobey, Republican, of New Hampshire, who had sought a 50 per cent pay increase for invasion troops, as well as for those in combat, and covering all the armed services, said he would seek to liberalize the infantry bill when it reaches the floor.

How World Trade Fund May Operate

By GEORGE ZIELKE

WASHINGTON, — (AP) Let's walk into the office of the International Stabilization Fund and see what goes on there.

It's sometime in the future.

(It's not certain there ever will be such a fund, you understand. For our visit, we're assuming that the International Monetary Conference and governments of the United Nations will approve such a fund along the lines proposed by international money experts.)

We don't find stacks of money around the place. It's an office dealing in bookkeeping transactions. The eight billion dollars of the fund are scattered about the globe in the central banks of the member countries.

Designed To Help Trade

The fund is designed to maintain international trade in such a way that businessmen can do business in other countries on a fair competitive basis and get payment in their own currency or in gold at stable rates of exchange.

In the past, fortunes have been made and lost on the fluctuations in exchange values.

An American company selling commodity "A" in Country "X" couldn't tell for sure how it was coming out. Let's say Co "X's" money was in penguin — worth, at the time of the deal, $1 each. By the time delivery was made and the payment came through in the stipulated number of penguin wings, they might be worth only 75 cents each.

Germany did all kinds of shenanigans with its money.

For instance an American could sell goods to Germany but could get payment only in German money which he couldn't take out of Germany. So he had to use the money to buy German goods which he could import to this country and then sell.

But Germany wanted to sell certain things, didn't want to sell others. So it set up a lot of different exchange rates. The American selling a $50 item could get 200 reichsmarks worth of one kind of goods in exchange but if he took something else he might get 400 reichsmarks' worth!

The International Stabilization Fund is designed to stop such dealings.

Currency Value Set

Every country coming into it must set a value in gold on its currency.

Then the fund buys and sells foreign money — the United States uses its dollars in the fund to get currency of Country "X" so we can spend it for goods in that country; Country "X" uses its money to get dollars to buy American goods.

The problem is to keep trade going on an even keel.

The fund, therefore, is set up with certain quotas. The United States is down for about two and a half billion dollars.

Country "Y" may put up 200,000 units of its money, which we'll say is dodo bones. This money is useful to some other country only to buy with in country "Y". And "Y's" quota of 200,000 dodo bones is based in part on how much foreign trade it has.

So if the fund gets more than 200,000 dodo bones in its transactions, it wants to do something about them.

Gold Vs Currency

If the fund's holdings of dodo bones get up to 250,000 some year, the fund calls a halt. The next time Country "Y" tries to give the fund some more dodo bones in exchange for currency of another country, the fund says "No — but you can get some for gold."

Otherwise country "Y" could keep on turning its currency into foreign money with which it could keep on buying goods in other countries. If that went on and on, the fund finally would have nothing but country "Y's" currency — tied up because there wouldn't be enough goods for sale in Country "Y" to use it up.

On the other band, the fund's holdings of the money of a country — call it "Q" — may drop way down. The demand is so great that it threatens to exhaust the fund's holdings of this currency — in which case nobody could buy anything more from Country "Q".

The fund can offer Country "Q" gold in exchange for more of its currency, or perhaps "Q" will lend some — which it can use later to buy other foreign exchange.

Senate Extends Price Bill Passes Bankhead Measure

WASHINGTON, June 9 — (AP) The Senate passed and sent to the House tonight the bill extending the Price and Wage Stabilization act to Dec. 31, 1945, after approving 39 to 35 the controversial Bankhead Amendment directing OPA to adjust cotton textile ceilings with a view to raising the market price of raw cotton.

Several other last-minute changes were written into the bill. One, by Senator Stewart (D.-Tenn.), would direct OPA to adjust ceilings on fresh fruits and vegetables to take into account producers' losses due to the "hazards of production and marketing" such perishables.

Other amendments would lift the government loan rate on six major farm commodities, including cotton, corn and wheat, from 90 to 95 per cent of parity, and remove the authority of the War Labor board to veto increases in wages up to $37.50 a week, when the increases were mutually agreeable to employer and employe.

Major Setback

Passage of the Bankhead amendment was a major setback for the administration in its battle to keep present price control machinery unchanged.

President Roosevelt and Price Administrator Chester Bowles contended the proposal is inflationary.

Bowles estimated it would increase consumers' bills for textile between $250,000,000 and $350,000,000 annually, but Bankhead denied this.

Nineteen Republicans voted with 20 Democrats for the Bankhead plan while 22 Democrats, 12 Republicans and one Progressive opposed it.

Earlier the Senate had written into the extension bill two other amendments which OPA Chief Bowles had declared would hamper price law enforcement.

One, by Senator Wherry (R.-Neb.), would authorize Federa courts to stay penalty judgment in civil as well as criminal case to permit defendants to contest th validity of OPA regulations befor the Emergency Court of Appeals.

Another, by Senators Chandle (D.-Ky.) and Weeks (R.-Mass.) would free merchants of damag liability in consumer civil suits i they could show that overcharge were unintentional.

Otherwise the bill would con tinue in substantially the presen form the Price-Wage Stabilizatio act which expires June 30.

Some members of Congress hav predicted that President Roosevel would veto the extension bill i both Houses accepted the Bank head amendment.

Maloney Move Beaten

A majority of New England senators opposed the Bankhead amendment but declined to go so far as to support the substitute offered by Senator Maloney (D-Conn), which would require the OPA and other government agencies involved to get together to improve the general cotton situation, particularly as to low priced goods.

Even Senator Danaher, Maloney's Republican colleague from Connecticut, would not go along with the proposal, which Senator Taft (R-Ohio) contended would be giving approval to the OPA's past policies "which have failed," he argued.

Danaher signed the minority report of the Senate Banking and Currency committee, in opposition to the amendment of Senator Bankhead.

Senators Aiken and Austin of Vermont, Weeks of Massachusetts, and White of Maine, all Republicans, voted for the amendment.

The lone support Maloney received from the New England delegation came from Senator Walsh (D-Mass), veteran lawmaker who sits next to him.

Roosevelt Pledges Elections

WASHINGTON, June 9 (AP).—President Roosevelt reiterated at his news conference today that the Allies will not be completely satisfied with political conditions inside Italy until the people have had an opportunity to choose their own government.

BRICKER ASSAILS NEW DEALERS ON INSURANCE RULING

NEW YORK, June 9—(AP) Gov. John W. Bricker of Ohio tonight criticized a Supreme court decision holding that insurance companies were subject to Federal anti-trust laws and declared New Deal "bureaucrats" were "casting covetous glances at the huge pool of assets" of the companies.

Declaring there was an ever-growing centralization of powers in Washington, the Republican presidential aspirant said in an address broadcast by NBC:

"This continued encroachment upon state sovereignty was again brought to our attention last Monday. The United States Supreme court by a vote of four to three—two justices not participating—held that the business of insurance is subject to Federal anti-trust statutes.

"In that decision, a minority of the court's membership overturned a doctrine which that tribunal had consistently applied for over 75 years."

"It has been evident for some time that the New Deal bureaucrats were casting covetous glances at the huge pool of assets accumulated by the insurance companies of this country through the premium dollars received from their policyholders and held for them and their families.

"Control centralized in Washington over the combined resources of the American insurance companies would mean tremendous power."

Bricker said that "in contrast to the New Deal philosophy of individual regimentation and centralization of power, the Republican party today proposes an atmosphere of opportunity and real incentive to achievements."

Expressing hope that the nation's fighting men overseas would win a speedy victory over governments seeking to dominate peoples, he said:

"It would be a cruel tragedy if, having spilled their blood in this great cause, they were to return to a nation in which the fountainhead of individual freedom and opportunity had run dry.

"And yet that danger is ever present in our country. For 11 years our national leaders have tried to change our system of free enterprise and representative government."

U. S. Ace Visits Plant That Made His Plane

Farmingdale, N. Y., June 9 (AP)—A post-war job as a test pilot, a case of scotch and a wristwatch were presented today to Major Robert Johnson, America's ace combat pilot of the European theater of operations, when he visited the Republic Aviation Corporation, makers of the Thunderbolt planes he flew while shooting down 27 German aircraft.

The whisky was presented by the engineering department; the watch, inscribed to "Thunderbolt Johnson," by final-assembly-line employes.

Capt. Gentile, Air Ace, To Wed Ohio Girl

Columbus, Ohio, June 9 (AP)—Pretty, petite Isabella Masdea, 20, of Columbus, announced today that she and Capt. Don Gentile, one of America's leading European aces, are engaged to be married and will set a date for the wedding "as soon as Don receives his orders."

"He's just a dream boy," Miss Masdea sighed, "and Wednesday night he gave me the most beautiful ring in the world, with a large diamond in the middle and three others on each side."

She said Captain Gentile gave her the ring Wednesday night in the presence of their parents and some close friends.

Isabella and Don have been friends for about 15 years, during which time the two families exchanged visits at Columbus and Piqua, Gentile's home town.

Latin-American Blundering by U. S. Is Charged

Dr. Tavares, of Brazil, Says Trade Policy Fails,

Good Will Has Backfired

FREDERICK, Md., June 9 (AP).—Dr. Hernane Tavares de Sa, Brazilian educator who is special adviser to the Co-ordinator of Inter-American Affairs in Washington, asserted today that relations between the United States and Latin-American countries had been deteriorating for months and had "been very carefully kept out of the press in this country."

Dr. Tavares's statement was made as he spoke before the International Education Assembly, a meeting of representatives of thirty-two united and associated nations, during a discussion whether representatives from Argentina would attend the next assembly meeting.

The Brazilian representative, professor on leave from the University of Sao Paulo, attributed the "deterioration of inter-American relations" to three main reasons: political, economic and personal conduct.

Politically, Dr. Tavares said, Latin-Americans "do not know and they fear" what will be done with Brazilian bases (now being used by the United States) after the war. He said they were afraid the United States would attempt to retain them.

Making it clear that he was presenting the viewpoint of Brazilians, the educator said that other countries of South America shared similar concern.

Dr. Tavares said that there was "economic disruption" leading to actual hardships in some parts of his country. He said this resulted in part from the policy the United States government had pursued with regard to Brazil, industrially and in business.

"Many United States efforts to build good will have backfired," he asserted, "especially United States propaganda (short-wave radio programs)—which is addressed to twelve-year-old morons, whereas a matter of fact, short-wave sets are owned only by people of some means who rely more on the British Broadcasting Company because of higher standards."

He declared that United States Latin-American agencies have been "pouring officials by the thousands into Latin-American countries with the most disastrous effect" and that "the conduct of these officials" has worked adversely in feelings of Brazilians toward the United States.

Dr. Tavares criticized them for "unorthodox conduct."

Haupt Is Convicted Of Treason Second Time

Chicago, June 9 (AP) — Hans Max Haupt, German-born paperhanger and father of an executed Nazi saboteur, was convicted a second time today of treason against his adopted country.

A Federal district court jury of six men and six women reached a verdict this afternoon after deliberating since yesterday. Haupt first was convicted of treason in November, 1942, and was sentenced to death, but the United States Circuit Court of Appeals granted him a new trial.

The Government contended Haupt harbored his son Herbert, one of eight Nazi saboteurs who were brought to the United States in German submarines in June, 1942, with instructions to paralyze American war industries. Haupt and his conspirators were captured promptly by the FBI and he and five of them were put to death in Washington after a trial by a military tribunal in August, 1942.

DOUGHBOYS HAVE OCCUPIED FORMIGNY ON THE ROAD FROM CAEN TO CARENTAN, A FIELD DISPATCH SAID. FORMIGNY, ONE OF THE FEW TOWNS IDENTIFIED OF MANY REPORTED TAKEN, IS NINE MILES NORTHWEST OF BAYEUX, AND THREE MILES INLAND.

SUPREME HEADQUARTERS GAVE NO CONFIRMATION OF THESE OR OTHER DETAILS, BUT DECLARED THE STEADILY-AUGMENTED ALLIES WERE HOLDING FIRM UNDER COUNTERBLOWS OF INCREASING WEIGHT AND "MAKING PROGRESS" ON ALL SECTORS.

FRONT DISPATCHES SAID THE BATTLE WAS DEVELOPING INTO A RACE FOR SUPPLIES, AND "IT LOOKS AS IF THE ALLIES ARE WINNING." THERE WAS A FRESHENING BREEZE TODAY OVER THE MISTY ENGLISH CHANNEL AFTER A HAMPERING OVERNIGHT RAIN.

THE GERMANS ROLLED UP MORE TANKS, DROPPED PARACHUTE TROOPS, AND SENT SOME SUPPLIES CHARGING TO THE FRONT BEHIND HORSES.

DESPITE THE BAD WEATHER, ALLIED HEAVY BOMBERS MAINTAINED A STEADY SUCCESSION OF ATTACKS, AND ROCKET-FIRING ALLIED FIGHTER-BOMBERS LEFT A GERMAN E-BOAT IN A SINKING CONDITION IN THE ENGLISH CHANNEL AND DAMAGED SEVERAL OTHERS.

BRITISH AND AMERICAN AIR FORCES CONTINUED DROPPING SUPPLIES BY AIR YESTERDAY--INCLUDING ETHER PARACHUTED TO ADVANCE HOSPITALS.

WEATHER CUT DOWN THE SCOPE OF THE AERIAL OPERATIONS SUPPORTING THE INVASION TROOPS.

GERMANS MADE FOUR FIGHTER-BOMBER ATTACKS AGAINST THE INVASION BEACHES BETWEEN EARLY YESTERDAY MORNING AND LATE LAST NIGHT, EMPLOYING SOME 60 PLANES, BUT WERE DRIVEN OFF EACH TIME.

THE FIRST THREE ATTACKS WERE HANDLED BY RAF SPITFIRES, WHICH SHOT DOWN THREE GERMAN PLANES AND DAMAGED MORE WITHOUT LOSS. THE LAST ATTACK COST THE GERMANS SEVEN PLANES, AGAIN WITH NO LOSS TO THE ALLIES.

SEVERAL HUNDRED RAF HEAVY BOMBERS, FLYING THROUGH RAIN AND THICK CLOUDS, HIT THE SWITCHING YARDS AND RAIL JUNCTIONS AT RENNES, FOUGERES, ALENCON, MAYENNE AND PONTAUBAULT LAST NIGHT. THESE LIE SOUTH AND WEST OF THE NORMANDY FIGHTING FRONT. TWO OF THE HEAVY BOMBERS ARE MISSING FROM THESE OPERATIONS.

AN AIR MINISTRY ANNOUNCEMENT SAID POOR FLYING WEATHER APPEARED ALSO TO BE HAMPERING THE GERMANS, SINCE THE BIG BRITISH LANCASTERS AND HALIFAXES MET FEWER NAZI FIGHTERS THAN ON THE PREVIOUS NIGHT.

THESE BRITISH AIRMEN HAD GLIMPSES OF THE GROUND FIGHTING AND SAW BRIGHT FLASHES FROM THE SEA WEST OF THE CHERBOURG PENINSULA, WHERE ALLIED WARSHIPS APPEARED TO BE BOMBARDING THE COAST. THEY SAID THE ATTACK ON THE FOUGERES YARDS LEFT A COLUMN OF SMOKE TOWERING 2,000 FEET

ALLIED LIGHT BOMBERS ALSO STRUCK AT RAIL TARGETS BEHIND THE BATTLE AREA DURING THE NIGHT.

BUCKING THE BAD WEATHER, ENGLISH, AUSTRALIAN AND NEW ZEALAND MOSQUIT SQUADRONS SHOT UP TRAINS AND BOMBED RAILROAD STATIONS, ROADS, BRIDGES AND GERMAN ENCAMPMENTS.

THESE FLIERS REPORTED LISIEUX AND ARGENTAN WERE "WELL ALIGHT" AND THAT FLASHES OF A BIG ARTILLERY BATTLE WERE VISIBLE AROUND CAEN ALL NIGHT.

Mr. Allen spent twenty months in German prison camps after being captured at Tobruk.

CAN LAY THEIR HANDS ON. ALLIED PILOTS SAID THEY OBSERVED ARMORED EQUIP-MENT, SUPPLY TRUCKS AND EVEN HORSE-DRAWN VEHICLES MOVING TOWARD THE FRONT.

A GERMAN BROADCAST DECLARED "IT SEEMS THAT A BITTER TANK BATTLE" NORTH OF CAEN "HAS NOT YET REACHED ITS PEAK."

AXIS REPORTS SAID ALLIED FORCES WERE AS MUCH AS FIVE MILES BEYOND BAYEUX, CAPTURED TWO DAYS AGO BY THE BRITISH, IN A DRIVE TO SEVER THE CHERBOURG PENINSULA TO THE WEST AND GAIN POSSESSION OF CHERBOURG'S DOCK FACILITIES--DESCRIBED BY THE PARIS RADIO AS EISENHOWER'S FIRST OBJECTIVE.

MUNRO'S DISPATCH SAID CAEN, NINE MILES INLAND AND 18 MILES SOUTHEAST OF BAYEUX, STILL WAS "STRONGLY HELD BY THE GERMANS."

THE GERMANS APPARENTLY HAD BUILT UP SOME OF THEIR STRONGEST RESISTANCE AT CAEN. A FIELD DISPATCH DATED WEDNESDAY NOON DECLARED THAT "WE ARE WITHIN HOURS, PERHAPS MINUTES OF TAKING OUR FIRST MAIN OBJECTIVE, THE TOWN OF CAEN." THE PICTURE OBVIOUSLY CHANGED AS GERMAN RESERVES MOVED IN, ALTHOUGH BERLIN ACKNOWLEDGED ALLIED TROOPS HAD PENETRATED THE BURNING, SHELL-WRECKED CITY.

JUN 10 1944

THE WEATHER, WHICH THREATENED TO THROW THE INVASION PLANS AWRY IN THE EARLY CRITICAL PERIOD, REMAINED POOR TODAY. ALL-NIGHT RAIN CONTINUED WELL INTO DAYLIGHT AND CLOUDS HUNG LOW OVER DOVER STRAITS. THERE WAS ONLY A LIGHT BREEZE, HOWEVER, AND THE SEA WAS SMOOTH.

FAVORED YESTERDAY BY CLEAR SKIES, THE POWERFUL ALLIED AIR ARM GAVE THE ENEMY A SMASHING BLOW. HEAVY BOMOTRS RANGED DEEP INTO FRANCE, HITTING RAILWAY FOCAL POINTS AND AIRFIELDS. FIGHTER-BOMBERS SWEPT A DEEP BELT SOUTH AND SOUTHEAST OF THE BATTLE AREA, ATTACKING GERMAN REINFORCEMENTS. THE ALLIED COMMAND SAID THAT DURING THE INVASION PERIOD UP TO NOON YESTERDAY ALLIED PLANES FLEW 27,000 INDIVIDUAL MISSIONS.

A VICHY BROADCAST SAID ALLIED TROOPS WHO OCCUPIED BAYEUX WERE ADVANCING AGAINST STRONG GERMAN RESISTANCE TOWARD CARENTAN, SOME 24 MILES WESTWARD AND 30 MILES SOUTHEAST OF CHERBOURG.

JUN 10 1944

SUPREME HEADQUARTERS DISCLOSED THAT AMERICAN DOUBOYS, POSSIBLY THOSE IN THE WESTERN AREA OF THE BRIDGEHEAD, WERE FIGHTING FOR A LATERAL ROAD, BUT ITS LOCATION WAS NOT GIVEN.

BOTH ALLIED AND GERMAN REPORTS INDICATED PROSPECTS OF TANK CLASHES STILL MORE FIERCE THAN THOSE IN PROGRESS.

ALLIED FORCES ALREADY HAVE ENGAGED AT LEAST TWO GERMAN MOTORIZED DIVISIONS--ONE OF THEM FIELD MARSHAL ERWIN ROMMEL'S 21ST DIVISION, BEATEN BY GEN. SIR BERNARD L. MONTGOMERY IN NORTH AFRICA AND LATER REFORMED.

TEN GERMAN DIVISIONS HAVE BEEN IDENTIFIED THUS FAR. ONE SINGLE ALLIED DIVISION, NOT IDENTIFIED, WAS CREDITED YESTERDAY WITH MORE THAN 1,000 GERMAN PRISONERS. CANADIAN INFANTRY SEIZED ANOTHER 600 OR MORE.

FIRST INTO FRANCE IN THE LAST WAR, THE AMERICAN FIRST DIVISION AGAIN WAS FIRST THIS TIME. U.S. FIRST AND THE BRITISH 50TH NORTHUMBRIAN INFANTRY DIVISIONS SPEARHEADED TUESDAY'S DAWN ATTACK. BOTH FOUGHT IN NORTH AFRICA AND SICILY.

A DELAYED DISPATCH RECEIVED LAST NIGHT FROM LEWIS HAWKINS, ASSOCIATED PRESS WAR CORRESPONDENT WHO ACCOMPANIED THE AMERICANS ASHORE, REPORTED "SHOCKING EVIDENCE OF DEATH AND DESTRUCTION" ON ONE THREE-MILE SECTOR OF BEACH WHERE THE YANKS STORMED FROM THE SEA.

HAWKINS SAID BAD WEATHER "PROBABLY WAS THE CHIEF CAUSE OF THE AMERICANS' RELATIVELY HEAVY LOSS OF MEN" IN ESTABLISHING THIS BEACH-HEAD.

SUPREME HEADQUARTERS ANNOUNCEC OMPLETION OF THE FIRST PHASE OF THE INVASION--"SECURING OF A FOOTHOLD AND THE DEFEATING OF LOCAL GERMAN RESERVES"--AND SAID THE SECOND PHASE HAD BEGUN. THE LATTER CALLS FOR DEFEATING THE GERMAN TACTICAL RESERVES. THOSE IMMEDIATELY AT HAND.

30.24— 16083

THEN THE TASK WILL BE TO CRUSH STRATEGIC RESERVES, REINFORCEMENTS BROUGHT UP FROM A DISTANCE.

SUPREME HEADQUARTERS STILL GAVE NO WORD OF AIRBORNE FORCES THAT THE GERMANS HAVE SAID WERE LANDED AT MANY POINTS BEHIND THE BATTLE AREA. THE GERMAN TRANSOCEAN AGENCY SAID THESE ALLIED PARATROOPS WERE WEARING WHITE OR YELLOW SCARVES AS A RECOGNITION EMBLEM.

SUPREME HEADQUARTERS ALLIED EXPEDITIONARY FORCE, SATURDAY, JUNE 10-(AP)-RAF HEAVY BOMBERS ROARED OUT IN STRENGTH LAST NIGHT, HEADING TOWARDS FRANCE TO RESUME THE AIR SUPPORT OF THE INVASION AFTER AN ALL-DAY LULL IMPOSED BY BAD WEATHER.

DURING FRIDAY BETWEEN 500 AND 750 AMERICAN HEAVY BOMBERS CROSSED THE ALPS FROM ITALY AND HAMMERED TARGETS IN THE MUNICH AREA OF SOUTHERN GERMANY, BUT THE WEATHER OVER THE ENGLISH CHANNEL WAS SO BAD THAT FOR THE FIRST TIME SINCE D-DAY THERE WERE NO DAYLIGHT OPERATIONS FROM BRITAIN IN SUPPORT OF THE INVASION.

OFFICIAL REPORTS ALSO FAILED TO MENTION ANY ALLIED AIRBORNE OPERATIONS DURING THURSDAY NIGHT.

THE WEATHER, A SOURCE OF CONSTANT ANXIETY, CRIPPLED THE AERIAL OFFENSIVE WITH RAIN AND LOW CLOUDS CUTTING VISIBILITY. LATE TODAY THERE HAD BEEN NO REPORTED IMPROVEMENT IN THE SITUATION.

THE ITALIAN-BASED BOMBERS FLEW INTO THE MUNICH AREA FOR THE FIRST TIME, AND THEIR ESCORTING LIGHTNINGS, MUSTANGS AND THUNDERBOLTS FOUGHT THROUGH SWARMS OF GERMAN FIGHTERS. SWISS DISPATCHES SAID EXPLOSIVES WERE DROPPED IN THE MUNICH AND AUGSBURG SECTORS.

JUN 10 1944

OTHER U.S.HEAVY BOMBER FORMATIONS ATTACKED PORTO MARGHERA NEAR VENICE, AND FIGHTER-BOMBERS POUNDED GERMAN COLUMNS RETREATING ABOVE ROME.

LAST NIGHT SEVERAL HUNDRED RAF HEAVY BOMBERS FLEW THROUGH THICK CLOUDS AND RAIN AND LAID EXPLOSIVES ACROSS THE SWITCHING YARDS AND JUNCTIONS AT RENNES, FOUGERES, ALENCON, MAYENNE AND PONTAUBAULT, AT A COST OF TWO AIRCRAFT.

ALL THESE TARGETS, INCLUDING RENNES, 105 MILES SOUTH OF CHERBOURG, ARE BELOW THE NORMANDY INVASION COAST, AND THE ATTACKS WERE AIMED AT SEVERING THE MAIN COMMUNICATION AND REINFORCEMENT LANES BETWEEN FIELD MARSHAL GEN.ERWIN ROMMEL'S SEVENTH AND 1TH ARMIES IN NORMANDY AND THOSE UNDER FIELD MARSHAL GEN.JOHANNES BLASKOWITZ IN SOUTHERN FRANCE.

30.24- 16085

RECONNAISSANCE REVEALED THAT IN A PREVIOUS ATTACK ONE GREAT SIX-TON "FACTORY BUSTER" BOMB FELL RIGHT ACROSS A RAILROAD CUT NEAR THE IMPORTANT JUNCTION OF SAUMUR, 100 MILES SOUTHEAST OF THE BATTLE AREA -- AN OBSTACLE TO GERMAN REINFORCEMENT FROM THE SOUTH.

THE ASSAULT IN THE AREA OF MUNICH, A TRANSPORT CENTER FOR SHUTTLING TROOPS BOTH FROM GERMANY TOWARD ITALY AND ALSO FROM THE EASTERN FRONT TO THE WEST, SUGGESTED METHODICAL ALLIED AIMS OF SEALING OFF THE NORMANDY FRONT FROM GERMANY'S "STRATEGIC RESERVE" AREAS ELSEWHERE.

ALLIED LIGHT BOMBERS ALSO STRUCK AT RAIL TARGETS BEHIND THE NORMANDY BATTLE LINES DURING THE NIGHT AFTER HEAVY BOMBERS AND PLANES OF ALL TYPES HAD MADE SIMILAR SUPPORTING RAIDS DURING THURSDAY. IN THE 24 HOURS ENDING AT 11 A.M. AT LEAST 52 GERMAN PLANES HAD BEEN DESTROYED IN THE AIR AND 20 OTHERS ON THE GROUND. ALLIED LOSSES WERE 35 FIGHTERS AND FIVE BOMBERS.

JUN 10 1944

BRITISH AIRMEN WHO ATTACKED FOUGERES SAID THEY LEFT A COLUMN OF SMOKE PLUMING 2,000 FEET OVER THE CITY, WHILE OTHERS WHO FLEW OVER THE BATTLE LINES IN NORMANDY REPORTED LISIEUX AND ARGENTAN WERE "WELL ALIGHT" AND THE FLICKERING OF A BIG ARTILLERY BATTLE WAS VISIBLE NEAR CAEN. FLASHES FROM THE SEA WEST OF CHERBOURG PENINSULA INDICATED ALLIED WARSHIPS WERE BOMBARDING THE COAST.

ROCKET-FIRING TYPHOONS SANK AT LEAST ONE GERMAN E-BOAT IN THE CHANNEL YESTERDAY, AND DAMAGED SEVERAL OTHERS, WHILE A CONTINUOUS FIGHTER UMBRELLA WAS MAINTAINED OVER THE BEACHES, AND FIGHTER-BOMBERS PACKING BOTH ROCKETS AND BOMBS SWEPT FAR INLAND AND POUNDED GERMAN TROOP CONCENTRATIONS.

NEARY ISIGNY, AT LEAST THREE HEAVY TANKS WERE DESTROYED AND ONE ENEMY GROUP OF BLOCKHOUSES AND GUNSITES WERE WRECKED.

UP UNTIL NOON YESTERDAY THE ALLIES HAD LOST 289 PLANES --BARELY ONE PER CENT OF THE 27,000 SORTIES FLOWN--AND 176 GERMAN PLANES HAD BEEN DESTROYED.

THE LOW TOLL OF GERMAN AIRCRAFT IS DUE CHIEFLY TO THE FACT THEY HAD FEW PLANES UP TO SHOOT DOWN. IT IS LIKELY THAT A LARGE PART OF THE ALLIED LOSSES WERE DUE TO ANTI-AIRCRAFT FIRE RATHER THAN TO ENEMY FIGHTERS. AN IMPORTANT FACTOR IN THE APPRAISAL IS THAT THE ALLIED FORCES ARE ENGAGED IN A GREAT OFFENSIVE OPERATION, USING MANY NECESSARILY UNARMED TRANSPORTS. THE LOSS TALLY DOES NOT INCLUDE GLIDER SHIPS, EITHER IN SORTIES FLOWN OR IN CRAFT LOST.

MEANWHILE IT WAS DISCLOSED BY THE U.S.NINTH AIR FORCE THAT AMERICAN PARACHUTE TROOPS DROPPING IN THE STE.MERE EGLISE SECTOR BELOW CHERBOURG EARLY TUESDAY HAD CARRIED OUT THE MOST SUCCESSFUL AIRBORNE OPERATION IN HISTORY.

JUN 10 1944

OF MORE THAN 1,000 ALLIED PLANES TAKING PART LOSSES WERE KEPT TO ABOUT TWO PER CENT. THE U.S.TROOPS, USING CAPTURED GERMAN MATERIAL IN MANY CASES CUT THE CARENTAN-VALOGNES ROAD AND TOOK ALL THEIR OBJECTIVES.

THE U.S.EIGHTH AIR FORCE REPORTED THAT ITS FIGHTERS AND FIGHTER-BOMBERS ALONE IN THE THREE DAYS FROM TUESDAY THROUGH YESTERDAY HAD DESTROYED OR DAMAGED 638 TRUCKS, 599 RAILROAD CARS, 122 LOCOMOTIVES, 25 TANKS, 54 STAFF CARS AND OTHER VEHICLES, 27 ARMORED VEHICLES, 22 BRIDGES, AND 13 AIRFIELD HANGARS.

TEN RAILYARDS ALSO WERE BOMBED, 54 TRAINS STRAFED, AND 14 OIL TANK CARS AND TWO CARLOADS OF AMMUNITION BOMBED OR SHOT UP. OTHER GERMAN EQUIPMENT DESTROYED OR DAMAGED INCLUDED NINE BARGES, TWO TUGBOATS, TWO WAREHOUSES AND FIVE RADIO INSTALLATIONS.

THE EIGHTH AIR FORCE FIGHTERS ALSO DESTROYED 78 ENEMY AIRCRAFT IN COMBAT AND MANY MORE ON THE GROUND. A TOTAL OF 4,727 SORTIES WAS FLOWN, AND 77 PLANES LOST.
